ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

CHARLES BARTLING TAKES POISON TO END HIS LIFE.

He Bought a Small Vial of Laudanum Yesterday, and After Locking Himself in the Bath Room Takes a Dose.

Charles Bartling, eighteen years old, attempted suicide yesterday by taking laudanum.

He lives with his brother, Mr. Henry Bartling of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, a New York broker.

The young man went down town yesterday and purchased a small vial of laudanum at one of the drug stores. On his way home about half-past eleven he stopped at a hardware store, on Somerset street. While in there he was talking to a friend to whom he showed the bottle containing the drug, remarking at the same time "that it was poison and he was going to take it to kill himself." The friend thought he was joking and passed the matter with a laugh. This was the first and only person that Bartling had made known his purpose to.

He went home, coolly told a member of his father's family what he intended to do, locked himself in the bath room and took the poison.

They finally thought he was merely joking at first, but when he was seen to lock himself in the room, the family physician, Dr. Jenkins, was hastily summoned. He took with him Dr. Probasco.

The doctors went to the door, but finding it locked could not gain admission. They called to the young man, who was still conscious, to let them in. He refused. After coaxing him for awhile Dr. Jenkins remained there, while Dr. Probasco went for Marshal Pangborn to break the door in. When they arrived the young man opened the door and let the physician in.

Dr. Jenkins hastily administered an antidote and the young man is recovering from the effects of the poison. He gave no reason for the deed.

BREVITIES.

—North Plainfield primaries to-night.

—The Borough Council will hold a regular meeting Friday night.

—The State Association of Exempt Firemen will meet at Morristown in May next.

—The Gold Dust Band held a dolls reception in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon.

—The Republicans of North Plainfield will hold their primary meeting to-night to nominate borough and township officers.

—The special train to Trenton, which left here at 10:5 this morning, contained 10 cars, only partially filled. Only eight Plainfielders went.

—The sidewalks early this morning were covered with a smooth coating of ice. Several pedestrians received falls. Many preferred walking in the middle of the street, where it was rougher.

—What is fire? Can fire be measured? How measured? These and many other questions will be answered by Mr. Franklin S. Smith, to-morrow evening, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. The admission will be free to all young men whether members of the Association or not.

—The City Common Council held a special meeting last evening to take action on the license applications of Messrs. John Beerbower and Wallace V. Miller, which were returned for correction at the last meeting of the Council. They were again referred back for correction.

—The electric cars of Minneapolis run upon 130 miles of track and the electric service in St. Paul is 100 miles in track extent. In the outskirts the cars run at the rate of a mile in two minutes and the system is the same as it is proposed to use on the projected road between this city and Elizabeth. Also on the proposed route between this city, Bound Brook and New Brunswick.

—The interior of Mr. Mulford Estil's handsome house on Grove street has been decorated and papered throughout in an elegant and artistic manner by skilled workmen under the supervision of Marsh, Ayers & Co. The halls are beautifully finished in "Lion Crusta Walton," with a three feet dado and nine inch frieze, wiped out in two colors. The parlors look very pretty, finished in white and gold, and the remainder of the house is in keeping. Altogether it is a striking illustration of the high degree of excellency to which this firm's work is fast rising.

Those Invincible Park Club Bowlers.

The second game of a series between the Park and Cranford Clubs was bowled on the former's alleys last evening, and as usual the Park Club came off victorious.

A number of ladies accompanied the visitors from Cranford.

After the game refreshments were served in the club rooms.

The next game will be bowled at Cranford on March 15. The score:

A CLOSE CALL.

BRAKEMAN TULLIS BARELY ESCAPES DEATH.

The Cross Beams on the Pilot of the Blue Line Flyer's Engine Strikes Him in the Back—He Escaped Serious Injury.

R. W. Tullis, a brakeman on an East bound freight train, had a narrow escape from death, at the North avenue depot to day. His train had come to a standstill, and he was standing alongside the engine, when the Blue Line flyer, which passes through this city at 11.09 went whizzing through.

Tullis stood with his back turned toward the express, and did not know of its approach until he heard the shrill whistle of the engine which was close upon him, before he could move the cross beams of the pilot struck him in the back, knocking him down.

The railroad men helped him to the freight house, where he remained until twelve o'clock, when he took the train for home in New York. He escaped with a few bad bruises and was able to walk to the train without assistance.

A Plainfielder's Reminiscence of the Late "Unpleasantness."

A veteran of the late war who is now a prominent citizen of Plainfield tells an interesting anecdote, which shows how intense was the feeling during the "late unpleasantness." He says:

"In the Fall of 1862, the rebels were advancing toward Pennsylvania. At Aldie, Va., a short, fierce, battle, took place. I was an officer in a regiment of Pennsylvania cavalry and took part in the fight. The confederates were repulsed and driven back to the mountains.

"Two or three months later, I, with a dozen or so men again passed through the neighborhood. We were doing scouting duty, and, being tired and thirsty, we stopped at a farm house and asked the lady of the house for some milk. While she was getting it I endeavored to make friends with her two little boys who stood near by. They were bright faced lads, neither over five years of age. One of the little fellows came forward smiling, and after shaking hands, seated himself on my lap and chatted merrily. The other boy held aloof in a surly manner and would have nothing to do with us.

"Upon receiving the milk from the lady, I remarked that she had two fine sons, and complimented their sturdy appearance. She replied by saying if I remembered the battle which had been fought in the neighborhood recently, I said I did, and she continued by saying that her boys had witnessed it from the house. The one who would not make friends with me had always been a rebel, and the one who sat on my knee favored the Union forces.

"After the fight the two brothers went to the battlefield and gathered many of the swords, pistols and carbines which were left lying about, and brought them home. They then selected a sword each and went to the back yard to decide the important fate, by a most bitter and fierce battle. They did succeed in slashing each other before they were seen by the mother, who took a fine pulling at the end to the fracas. She was considerably frightened and in speaking of it said that had their weapons been pistols instead of swords, she might not now have her two little boys."

The facts relating to the liquor traffic in Kansas have recently been investigated by a representative of the New York Times. He gives as his belief resulting from this investigation—first, that prohibition is a fixture in Kansas; second, it is reasonably enforced for there is not an open saloon in the State outside of four of the large cities. In Topeka the law is absolutely enforced.

Kansas, with prohibition and one hundred thousand more people than Texas, has one penitentiary and nine hundred and ninety-six prisoners. Texas with saloons and one hundred thousand less people than Kansas, has two penitentiaries and three thousand convicts.

Kansas has four cities in which the vote of the women is larger than that of the men. One entire set of councilmen are women.

There are 269,385 public school teachers and 204,913 liquor dealers in the United States.

The Future of Reading.

Ex-Senator Platt says he forced the Reading Company into the hands of receivers only with the hope of once more restoring that great corporation to a condition of solvency. If he succeeds in doing that he will deserve and receive the thanks of all Pennsylvania. If he can also devise means for keeping it solvent additional gratitude will be his reward.—Scranton Republican.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Michael Newman of West Third street started to-day for Denver, Col., where her daughter, Mrs. Charles Keller is lying dangerously ill at her home there.

Adam C. Blair, one of Plainfield's officient letter-carriers, has resigned his position. It is rumored that Mr. Blair will go into partnership with a well-known horse dealer of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Biglow of Rockview avenue will move to Brooklyn about April 1st. Their loss will be greatly felt by the members of the First Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. Biglow have taught the infant class for a number of years.

In spite of the inclement weather last evening the large auditorium of the First Baptist church was filled to hear the organ recital given by the organist, Mr. W. E. MacClymont, assisted by Miss Florence A. Underwood and the "Dresden Trio." All of Mr. MacClymont's recitals have been excellent, and that of last evening equalled, if not exceeded, all his former ones. Each number of the programme was received with delight by the audience, judging from the applause evoked. Miss Underwood deserves special mention for the rendering of several soprano solos, the "Cradle Song" being exceptionally well done. She had to respond to an encore.

Last evening a telegram announcing the sudden death, from apoplexy, at Belmont, N. Y., of Dr. C. B. Potter of Cincinnati, was received in this city by his brother, Mr. Charles Potter of this city. He visited here several days, about two weeks ago. Dr. Potter was a retired physician, who has been associated with Rev. Dr. Lewis of this city in editorial work, for the last few years. Given to original literary research, he had written a history of "Oriental Christianity," which his friends hoped would soon be published, in permanent form. Dr. Potter had not quite completed his sixty-sixth year. Owing to this bereavement the Y. P. S. C. E. sociable of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, which was to be held at Mr. Chas. Potter's, this evening, will be postponed.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Crescent League, will be held to-night. A new constitution and by-laws will be presented.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A WAVE OF INDIGNATION.

Trenton Filled with Ministers and Prominent Citizens of the State.

TRENTON, N. J., March 1, (Special.)—The city is filled with ministers and prominent citizens from all over the State, who came to Trenton on the morning trains to attend the big mass meeting to protest against the Parker race track laws.

The most imposing delegation came on a special train from Union county, headed by the Rev. Dr. E. Kempshall of Elizabeth.

Many members of the Legislature after the adjournment got out of town on the late trains last night or early trains this morning. They evidently did not want to meet the wave of indignation which was sweeping down on Trenton and which arrived here this forenoon with the protesting delegations.

Five Persons Bitten by Mad Dogs.

CHICAGO, March 1. (Special.)—Two mad dogs were the cause of much excitement in the northwestern portion of the city yesterday afternoon and evening, and before the police had succeeded in killing the brutes they had bitten five persons, inflicting severe injuries in each case.

PROVIDENCE, March 1.—(Special.)—The midnight train from New York on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad collided with the Stonington boat train at Norwood at 5:25 o'clock this morning, killing one child and injuring half a dozen passengers.

The Amendment of the School Law to be "Killed."

TRENTON, March 1. (Special.)—The committee here, after hearing arguments, yesterday, on the proposed amendment to the school law, it is reported decided not to recommend its adoption, which means that the amendment will be "killed."

THE RACE TRACK LEGISLATION.

And Those who Voted for the Bills.

The following taken from an editorial in to-day's Tribune shows how outsiders look at us:

THE SHAME OF NEW JERSEY.

New Jersey has become the swindlers' own. Thereat many good citizens are rising up in wrath. Legislation shutting the stable-door after the horse is stolen. But how many of them can say with Eleventh Henry, "Once a day, old Hal"? How many of them have done what they could to prevent this victory of vice? Those who have remained at home for years see that the open alliance between the Democratic party and the known, avowed, brazen enemy and the saloons, would put the State government into the hands of the dangerous classes. Nevertheless, some of them went straight on, voting the Democratic ticket as if it were not against their oaths of citizenship to uphold any party in an alliance so infamous. Others who thought they could hold power and more by their duty to put down the shameless conspiracy of Democratic politicians and saloon-keepers to elect the party that they refused. Verily, they have their reward.

Some Jerseymen now say that their State has become a blot upon the face of the Nation. It has been the gem of the Middle States of the North, and has been kept Democratic by frauds laid by open alliance with that is more and most dangerous. Do these Jerseymen now Canada thistles and expect to gather grapes?

Paper Pillows a New Fad.

Our English cousins are said just now to be "going wild over paper pillows." This is the way they are made: "You tear the paper into very small pieces, not larger than your finger nail, and then put them into a pillow sack of drilling or light ticking. They are very cool for hot climates, and much superior to feather pillows. The newspapers are printing directions for these ill-smelling, flimsy pillows. Newspapers are not nice for use, as there is a disagreeable odor from printer's ink; but brown or white paper and old envelopes are the best. As you tear them stuff them into an old pillow case, and your head will soon smooth the coarsest way is to tear or cut the paper in strips about half an inch wide, and then tear across. The finer it is, the lighter it makes the pillows."—Home Queen.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Good Neighborhood.

There are localities in this country in which the population increases little from census to census. They are in the older states, too, in spots where the soil is fertile enough for all needs and the climate good. Yet no modern improvements march that way; no rich city people make country homes in those neighborhoods; railroads come no nearer, though they are built all around these hoodooed spots.

The inhabitants mourn and want enterprising immigrants, capitalists, factories, railroads and telegraphs. Well, it is not hard to make the population and wealth of a locality increase if its leading citizens take the matter in hand the right way. There are a few points to be observed, that is all, and they can be put in a few words. Those neighborhoods that secure the capital and intelligent people to come their way and stop there must observe certain conditions.

First, they must make their locality entirely safe for life and property. They must have no lynchings or deeds of lawlessness and violence. Lynchers, hangers, shooters, masked whippers and mobs must be absolutely rooted out. There are whole counties in this Union in which the price of farming lands has sunk so low they can scarcely be given away, for the sole reason that mobs and lynchers have terrorized them till law abiding citizens have moved out and left them forever. A neighborhood in which the law is not permitted both to protect citizens and punish crime in the regular way will be shunned as a plague spot by all people having either money or brains. You can see that down, and it is the main point. Neither will they go to a place where gangs of unwhipped young hoodlums roam at large, breaking down fences, setting fires to trees and destroying private property.

Then you must have first class public schools. No intelligent people will settle in a place where they cannot educate their children in those schools that are the crown of America's glory. Set that down too. One other little point is that you must have good roads. Will public spirited, stirring citizens go to a neighborhood where they are shut off from market and all the world six months in the year, and where they cannot go to the postoffice even for a whole week?

About Burning Witches.

There is a widespread belief that witches were burned at the stake in Salem, Mass., and elsewhere in the American colonies 200 years ago. A popular stage play represents a stern Puritan on the point of applying a torch to the pile of wood which is to consume a witch, when suddenly a reprieve arrives and everybody is happy but the Puritan. More than this, a newspaper correspondent assures us that he has seen in Washington a collection of spirit portraits, painted or photographed by the spirits themselves, one of which is the picture of Mary Salisbury, with the flames curling about her breast. Mary informs us in her own handwriting that she was burned at the stake in Salem in 1693 for being a spiritualistic medium, miscalled a witch, and that, moreover, she never felt calmer in her life than when she was sizzling in those cruel flames in the manner aforesaid.

We are sorry to spoil a powerful scene in a play. We are sorrier yet to contradict a departed spirit, but when Mary Salisbury says she was burned at the stake in this country she is, so to speak, "talking through her hat." The most careful and scholarly research on the part of Moncure D. Conway, J. H. Beadle and others fails to find evidence that a single person in America was ever burned for being a witch. Numbers of persons were hanged for witchcraft in New England and some few in the southern states. Quakers were also hanged in New England. That is bad enough. But burned at the stake? No. Even the bloodthirsty malice of superstition was not cruel enough for that 200 years ago.

A writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat criticises the new army tactics severely. He says they are too elaborate and complicated for the American volunteer, and the American volunteer is the soldier who must fight the battles of the next war, if we ever have another war. He would have drillbooks reduced to a minimum and contain only the movements absolutely necessary on the march and in the field. He thinks the military authorities have made the mistake of copying the drill of the large companies of European standing armies, when they are not suited to our smaller American companies. For the American volunteer a few simple essential movements that may be learned in a few weeks should be all that is attempted. As these essentials the writer mentions: Knowledge of the use and care of arms; discipline, use of cover, squad, company, battalion and regimental drills; guard duty; the procuring of ammunition, food and clothing; the duties of the outpost, patrols and advanced guards; reconnoissance and method of marching and camping. In case of the outbreak of actual war those are the things that would have to be learned in a hurry.

A man who has been hunting around to find Jay Gould's virtues discovered that he was never known to utter a profane word, and that he wrote and spoke "capital English."

THE MINORITY RULED.

Such Was the Condition In the National Senate.

STEVENSON THE GUEST OF MORTON.

Turpin Is Given the Seat Which He Occupies—Cherokee Boomers to Be Watched. Acceptances to Attend Our Naval Parade Are Withheld by Foreign Powers.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The greater part of the day was consumed in the consideration of an election case in which there was no interest manifested. After three hours' debate Mr. Turpin, from the Fourth district of Alabama, was declared entitled to retain the seat which he has occupied since the opening of the present congress, and his contestant, McDuffie, was declared to have been not duly elected. The most important action was the passage without a roll call and amid continuing pig tin and ore on the free list.

Senate Republicans Beaten.

The Republican side of the senate was subjected to great mortification in its defeat by the minority side of the chamber on a motion which divided the two parties into opposition. It was on a motion to proceed to executive business. Mr. Sherman made it and said that a brief executive session was important, but that he could not then give the reason. The motion was defeated. When the result was announced, and when it was ascertained that no Republican senator had voted in the negative, but that several of them who were not paired had not voted, there was a private cachinnation of disappointment among those Republicans who voted. The agricultural appropriation bill was then taken up and its consideration proceeded with. The bill was passed, with a few unimportant amendments. Mr. Teller gave notice that he would move to take up the Nicaraguan canal bill today, and Mr. Hill gave it like notice as to the Hudson river bridge bill.

The Vice President Arrives.

Vice President-elect Stevenson and party reached the national capital last night, the journey from their Bloomington home having occupied 36 hours to the minute. After leaving Cumberland the special train made no stops until Martinsburg was reached. Here the largest crowd of the trip had gathered. It blocked up the platform and the parapet above, while the verandas and windows of the hotel were black with people. The general contented himself with bowing his thanks for the reception from the rear platform of the car instead of going through the usual handshaking programme.

Tonight Vice President Morton will give a formal reception to his successor. The Democratic members of the Illinois congressional delegation will give a reception Thursday night to the 110 members of the Illinois Democratic club who served as an escort to the vice president-elect.

Foreign Acceptances Delayed.

The controversy in congress over the appropriation of $300,000 for the Columbus naval display in Hampton Roads and in New York harbor next April and the consequent uncertainty regarding the affair have caused several of the great naval powers of the world to delay acceptance of the invitation to take part extended them by this country. A number of inquiries, official and otherwise, have been addressed to the navy department since the $100,000 status of the matter in congress, and it is understood that the representation from many countries in the review will be dependent on the amount of money placed at the disposal of the navy department for conducting the ceremonies.

On Saturday last the state department made inquiries by cable of the governments of France, Russia, Austria, Germany, Greece and Turkey as to their decision with regard to the invitation of the United States, and only one reply has been received, and that from Russia, which was accepted.

Will Look After the Cherokee Strip.

Secretary Noble, upon receipt of reliable information that a large number of people are gathered on the borders of the Cherokee strip with the avowed intention of invading that territory unless it is speedily opened to settlement, has sent a communication to the president recommending that a sufficient military force be sent to prevent the threatened invasion. The secretary has also ordered Inspector Cisney to proceed at once to the strip and report upon the situation in detail.

Will Not Be Adopted This Session.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—"No events of the future can be more certain than that the treaty with Hawaii will not be ratified by this congress and that Mr. Hanchett's nomination to the place made vacant by the promotion of Justice Jackson will not be confirmed." So spoke a prominent Democratic member of the senate judiciary committee this morning. This condition of affairs is admitted by the other side, a leading Republican member of the judiciary committee saying that the Republicans had no hope of the confirmation of Mr. Hanchett's nomination and that they had some time ago abandoned any idea of getting final action on the treaty. One man can defeat both propositions at this stage of the proceedings of the senate, and all efforts to prevent it would be futile.

Sufficient Funds For Grant's Monument.

NEW YORK, March 1.—At the annual meeting of the Grant Monument association the report of President Horace Porter was read. It shows that a sufficient amount has been raised for the completion of the monument. It is believed that the work will be finished in the autumn of 1893.

The Pope Expected the Americans.

ROME, March 1.—The pope has been greatly displeased by the abandonment of the American pilgrimage. He attributes the abandonment of the undertaking to the disputes between Archbishop Satolli and the American bishops and has ordered an inquiry.

Sidney Sold For $27,000.

CLEVELAND, March 1.—At the Tattersall blue ribbon sale this morning the great stallion Sidney was sold to C. H. Hammond of Detroit for $27,000. The bidding was started at $20,000. The price is considered very low.

Carter Harrison Nominated For Mayor.

CHICAGO, March 1.—Carter H. Harrison was nominated by the Democrats for mayor of Chicago, scoring an easy victory over his opponent, Washington Hesing.

Sullivan in His Element Again.

ST. LOUIS, March 1.—Since ex-Champion John L. Sullivan arrived here Sunday morning he has indulged in one continual round of hilarity.

THE POPULISTS STILL THERE.

They Pass Now on Obstructionists to Legislation.

TOPEKA, March 1.—The Populists expect to adjourn the legislature and go home within the next 10 days, to return no more until they hear from the people in 1894. The Republicans think they ought to have a short special session to pass legislation promised by both parties on the stump last fall, but the majority of the Populists are opposed to this. They want to give the Republicans no advantage. They say that while the Dunsmore house lasted it passed all the important measures promised in the campaign, while the Douglass house did nothing looking to the relief of the people. The Populists claim that by passing these bills they showed their good intentions, and on that showing they are willing to go to the people.

The railroads especially have cause for congratulation, for if the Dunsmore house had been declared to have been a de facto organization a railroad law more stringent than the Iowa statute would have been put into force.

GENERAL BEAUREGARD'S WILL.

He Decrees That His Body Shall Be Cremated—Nothing to Charity.

NEW ORLEANS, March 1.—By the will of the late General Beauregard his estate, with the exception of a few small bequests, is left to his children. To the soldiers he gives only $300. To the city of New Orleans the general gives a sword which was presented to him by some ladies of New Orleans in 1861 as a token of honor for his services in capturing Fort Sumter, and the state of Louisiana he bequeaths a life-size portrait of himself painted by Mr. Gentin, the New Orleans artist, and by him presented to General Beauregard. After disposing of the property the testator instructs his executors to have his body cremated. The general's estate in New Orleans is valued at about $2,000,000, to which be added property in St. Louis and elsewhere.

The Indebtedness of Massachusetts Homes.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—The leading results of the investigation of farm and home proprietorship in Massachusetts are given in a bulletin issued by the census bureau. On the owned farms of that state there are liens amounting to $11,881,541, which is over 41 per cent of their value, and that debt has been increased at the average rate of over 5½ per cent. The debt on owned homes aggregates $103,948,196, or 45 per cent of their value, and bears interest at the average rate of 5.87 per cent. In Boston over 51 per cent of the home families hire and the rest own their homes. Homes are incumbered for over 45 per cent of their value.

McKinley Cannot Accept Aid.

CLEVELAND, March 1.—Governor McKinley has written the following letter: "I cannot express the depth of my gratitude to the people who have sent money for my use; but, grateful as I am, and always will be for their noble generosity, I cannot accept their contributions. Nothing has touched me more in my misfortune than the letters of sympathy and offers of help received from those of my countrymen who have little but what they earn. Please convey to such friends my heart's best thanks."

A Great Sale of Paintings.

NEW YORK, March 1.—The sale of modern masters collected by Henry M. Johnson of Brooklyn was the largest since the powers of the world to delay acceptance of the invitation to take part extended them by this country. A number of inquiries, official and otherwise, have been addressed to the navy department since the $100,000 status of the matter in congress, and it is understood that the representation from many countries in the review will be dependent on the amount of money placed at the disposal of the navy department for conducting the ceremonies.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRAIN

Will Leave Lakewood Thursday at Noon.

THE REPORTERS WILL BE BARRED.

Mr. Cleveland Announces His Programme, Which Will Not Be of the Handshaking Order—The Passenger List—Mr. Villard and Father Doney Visit the Place.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 1.—Mr. Cleveland announced last evening the details of his journey to Washington. He will make the trip on Thursday, leaving Lakewood shortly after noon and arriving in Washington about 6:30 in the evening. The train will consist of three special cars and a baggage car. The train will be made up at the Jersey City station of the Central Railway of New Jersey and will start on the arrival of the 10 a. m. ferryboat from New York. The party from New York will consist of Hon. Daniel S. Lamont, Mrs. Lamont, Don M. Dickinson, Mrs. Dickinson, E. C. Benedict and the ladies of his family, Richard Watson Gilder, Mrs. Gilder, Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, Mrs. Bryant, Miss Bryant, S. M. Williams, second vice president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey; Mrs. Williams, Miss Williams and Private Secretary Robert Lincoln O'Brien. The train will arrive at Lakewood about 11:30 a. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, Baby Ruth and Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Freeman of this place will complete the party on the train. All of the party will take tea on the train, and the baggage and personal effects which Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland have at their cottage will be taken to the White House. The train will start shortly after 12 o'clock.

Will Give Philadelphia the Go By.

No stop will be made until Philadelphia is reached. A change of engines will be made there, and the fast express train will pass through Chestnut and Arch streets at 2:45 p. m. The run from Philadelphia will be over the Baltimore and Ohio tracks to Washington, and no stops will be made unless it is found necessary to change engines at Baltimore.

Orders have been issued to have all the tracks clear, and every precaution will be taken to avoid all delays. Mr. Cleveland has arranged especially to make no stops and to make the trip to Washington as quickly and unostentatiously as possible. The party has been limited to personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. No newspaper men will be permitted on the train, and unless the present plans are changed luncheon will be served in one of the special cars after the start, and the entire party will dine at the Arlington in the evening. Rooms have been taken at the Arlington for the party.

Villard Sees the Prince.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland expect to remain at the White House after the inauguration. Mr. Cleveland had a number of callers yesterday, among them ex-Editor Henry Villard, who made his first trip to Lakewood, and when asked the object of his visit he said that he came out to see the ducks.

Private Secretary O'Brien came out from New York with Mr. Villard. Father Doney of St. Jean Baptiste Catholic church of New York and the Rev. Wilton M. Smith, pastor of the Fifty-seventh Street Presbyterian church, which Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland attended in New York, also called.

The approaching departure of the Clevelands from Lakewood has increased the interest of the townspeople and the hotel guests. The latter have doubled the population of the town will be at the station on Thursday to see the distinguished party off, and the following day will probably witness a large exodus of people who have delayed their departure in order to be present on that occasion.

Mr. Cleveland and New York Politics.

NEW YORK, March 1.—The Herald says: When Mr. Cleveland announces the names of successful appointees, it will fill plain that he is endeavoring to hold aloof from factional fig ts in New York. His determination now is to recognize neither faction in his first appointments, but to parcel out gifts to whom he considers competent men, irrespective of their affiliation with either Democratic mug or anti-supper. Both Cleveland and his advisers really expect that this plan will lead to complications.

Still it is not in Mr. Cleveland's designs to build up a machine of subservients in New York state, as many of them have recently seemed to imagine. It is only in case the factions refuse to nominate men indicate their purpose to offer opposition to national administration plans that Mr. Cleveland will take steps to eliminate from the situation any chances of Senator Hill and Murphy and their friends may now have for doing harm.

A Riot Among Colored Miners.

MONONGAHELA CITY, Pa., March 1.—There was a riot and disturbance at the Richland mines, where about 100 colored miners are working at reduced rates, and one man was probably fatally injured. The trouble was started by the colored miners indulging freely in drink. Revolvers were fired, hatchets used and bricks thrown.

Seven Killed by Falling Walls.

CHICAGO, March 1.—Seven people were instantly killed, one fatally injured and two badly hurt by the blowing down of the walls of the recently burned dry goods establishments of John York at Halsted and Nineteenth streets. The walls fell upon a 3-story frame house adjoining and crushed it like an eggshell.

The New Jersey Legislature Fixes.

TRENTON, March 1.—Both houses of the New Jersey legislature adjourned from Trenton to escape from the indignant citizens who are there to denounce the passage of the race track bills and the policy of cutting off all popular hearings that the legislature followed in rushing them through.

Painter Makowsky Is Here.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Constantine Egorovitch Makowsky, the distinguished Russian painter, who is best known in this country by his large and excellent works, "Russian Wedding Feast" and "Choosing the Bride," is here.

Mackay and His Assailant Improve.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 1.—John W. Mackay continues to make rapid strides toward recovery. He will probably be out in a week or 10 days. Rippey, his assailant, is still alive and in a somewhat improved condition.

Five Burners For Connecticut Hotels.

HARTFORD, March 1.—The house passed an act requiring hotels to keep a rope as a fire escape in each room, to take effect Jan. 1, 1894.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, of Piqua, O., says the Physicians are Astonished, and look at her like one

Raised from the Dead

Long and Terrible Illness from Blood Poisoning

Completely Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned quite astonishing physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and gave no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case was a wonderful one, and my physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

HOOD'S PILLS should be in every family medicine chest. Once used, always preferred.

CIVIL SERVICE A FARCE.

So Says the Deposed New York Chief Examiner.

THE GOVERNOR ORDERS CHANGES.

Ex-Governor Hill's Appointee Defends Himself and Incidentally Gives Some Inside Views of the Workings of Civil Service In Empire State Departments.

ALBANY, March 1.—John B. Riley, an appointee of ex Governor Hill, who was replaced by another Democrat in his position as chief examiner of the state civil service commission, has made the following statement: "Commissioner Bailey says that I was relieved at the suggestion of the governor; that he had given reasons and that were not factional. I do not know what they may have been. I can only say that he is at liberty to publish them if he wishes, so far as I am concerned. I have nothing to conceal regarding my official or political relations with the governor. I never had any business relations with him. I know that some of the machine managers have on various occasions during the past year threatened the removal of the civil service commission and myself because of attempts made to enforce the civil service law.

"Recently the reports from several of the state departments showed that appointments had been made in direct violation of the statute. I notified the appointing officers on Jan. 8 last and laid my communications on the subject before the civil service commission. At a subsequent meeting Commissioner McKinstry was appointed to wait upon the governor and arrange for a conference for the purpose of learning his wishes. Commissioner Eustace was removed soon afterward. My communications are still the pending business before the commission.

Civil Service Practically Nullified.

"Except as to the state hospitals and a few more state institutions, the civil service law has been practically nullified during the past year.

"In this section it may not be unintesting to note that on several occasions when the civil service commission failed to change the classification of employes so as to enable heads of departments to make selections without reference to the merit system the governor has promptly ordered the change. In April last he ordered the suspension of the civil-service boards of employes at the state asylum for the insane at Middletown. In July last employes of the dairy commissioner were exempt from examination by his order. In December the position of corporation tax keeper in the office of the secretary of state was transferred from the competitive to the noncompetitive schedule, and a gentleman from Troy was promptly appointed.

"The law says that noncompetitive examinations may only be held when competition is impracticable. I think there will be no doubt as to the feasibility of filling the position of bookkeeper by competition. I believe that the method of filling the minor positions in the state service by competition is a good one, and if honestly carried out it is worth more than the $18,000 it costs, but the open defiance of the law which has been permitted is not only demoralizing in its effect, but the whole system, so far as this state is concerned, is fast becoming a farce."

What The Herald Says.

NEW YORK, March 1.—The Herald this morning says: "It is intimated that fully 50 appointments have been made by the state officials for the machine within a year in direct violation of the civil service law. Those appointed were principally relatives of Lieutenant Governor Sheehan and Mr. Murphy. It is intimated that a Cleveland senator will soon ask for an investigation of these damaging charges.

The Author of "Dixie" In West.

THE WARSHIP INDIANA.

She Will Prove the Most Formidable of the American Navy.

PHILADELPHIA, March 1.—In the midst of a driving storm of sleet and rain and with the applause of the president of the United States, three members of his cabinet and 10,000 others following in her wake, the battle-ship Indiana was launched yesterday from the shipyard of the Cramp Shipbuilding company. Miss Jessie Miller, daughter of Attorney General Miller, baptized the bow of the vessel in champagne as the battleship started down the ways and christened it the Indiana.

The Indiana is the most formidable of the vessels built or building for the new American navy and is a warship of which any nation might be proud. She is a triumph for American ship designers and shipbuilders.

The armor of the Indiana, which was made at the works of the Bethlehem Iron company, is the heaviest that was ever placed on an American warship.

CHILDREN'S FASHIONS.

A Few Hints For the Summer Outfit of Little Girls.

Strange as it may seem, the little dames of fashion have to be early seen to, for they, too, must have not one or half dozen dresses for their summer outing, but often dozens, according to the bank account of the pater.

MISS EMPIRE AND LITTLE MOTHER HUBBARD.

The little gowns shown in cut are for the cool days of summer and can be made of any pretty soft wool material, combined with velvet and lace. In illustration the colorings are canary colored cashmere, with royal blue velvet, the lapels of velvet being edged with deep cream colored lace.

The attractive Mother Hubbard frock is made of wool crepon with point de gene lace forming a ruffle over the shoulders. The skirt is trimmed with narrower width of lace, a full width of material being used to form the large sleeves, which are gathered in at the wrist, with ruffle of lace falling over the hand and finished with bows of ribbon. The great beauty of this little costume is in the quantity of material used, and above all else avoid a look of scantiness in the skirt and sleeves.

WOMAN AND HOME.

OH, FOR LESS OF THE DOLEFUL AND MORE OF THE SUNBEAM KIND.

The Modern Girl and Her Hair—The Fashioning of Children—Moderate Exercise For Delicate Girls—The Strain of Entertaining—Household Hints.

Do you know the doleful person? She for the doleful person is always a woman is always a good neighbor in good health and tries to be neighborly in sickness. But she makes a miserable failure at the latter. You know how she acts.

Don't you remember the last time the baby was sick? After you had watched by the little one's bed day after day and night after night; had watched the roses fade from the loved one's cheeks and saw the little form waste away? And don't you remember that just at the time when you had about given up hope the doleful neighbor came in? And don't you remember how she tried to cheer you up with a one sided conversation something like this:

"Why, Mrs. B——, how much worse the baby looks this morning! She looks just like Sarah Jones' baby did the night before it died. Gracious', I never saw a child so wasted away as Sarah's was, except yours. We just done everything for that child, but it wa'n't no use. I never will forget how Sarah took on at the funeral."

And then the doleful neighbor suddenly remembered that she had to run back home to "set a sponge," and when she goes you hope she will never return. You look again at the suffering babe and feel that your heart must surely break. But suddenly there is a knock at the door, and in comes the—well, sunbeam neighbor is as good a name as any. She was over the evening before and quietly and unobtrusively helped to do so many needful things, and when she left she left a word of cheer, and when she comes this time she says something like this:

"Why, how much better the baby looks this morning!"

And don't you remember what a bright gleam of hope crossed your mind?

"I never saw a child improve so much in so short a time before. I am sure the baby will soon be well."

And then the sunbeam neighbor rearranges the bed, adjusts the blinds, tells you she will call again in a few hours and hurries home. Honest, now, didn't she leave a confident feeling behind her?

You felt better and more hopeful. Baby even seemed to rally under the words, and when at last the little one was playing around your knee again didn't you think of the words of the sunbeam neighbor?

The doleful neighbor has frightened more mothers to death, buried more babies and caused more tears than all the plagues combined. She should be suppressed.—Omaha World-Herald.

The Modern Girl and Her Hair.

There are beautiful descriptions in novels about the girls who just tie their hair in a loose knot and let it fall in waves that a single rare old dagger through their coils and are all right, or whose locks sweep unconfined, and it all sounds lovely, but such a girl as the one pictured has to expend lots of hairpins and a good deal of time. Her effects are brought about not by wholesale simplicity, but by devious details and curly ones and little ends—a feather here, a pin there or a little bit of lace cocked up somewhere quite unexpectedly. She simply must have her hair in varying lengths, such girls become new creatures through judicious exercise.

The delicate girl, because she is so tired after a walk, or has such a backache after doing a few domestic duties, says, when urged to take physical culture: "Oh, I can't; exercise almost kills me. I couldn't stand it. Miss So-and-so tried it, and it made her really ill."

Upon questioning, you find Miss So-and-so purchased a chest weight, started in with heavy weights and many movements, and of course it was too much for her.

So, on account of ignorance concerning the subject and injudicious use of most helpful agents, and, alas, sometimes because of ignorant teaching, there's a strong prejudice against all forms of physical training for delicate women. I said is, but I think I can better say, has been, for surely this prejudice is fast disappearing before the new light of knowledge which is spreading through the country.—A. H. Mayhew in Evangel.

The Strain of Entertaining.

"I feel as though I had been without sleep for two weeks," said a little hostess as she waved a last farewell to a parting guest on the evening before the Monday until Friday. "I'll may do for some women to be society leaders, but it would positively kill me," she yawned, "for after five days of very mild dissipation in comparison with what women of the gay world are accustomed to I feel as though I would like to retire to a convent and never again take part in the festive whirl. The fatiguing doings that are part and parcel of entertaining a friend as she should be."

Thinking over this matter, it appears perfectly marvelous what society women endure during a season that entails endless luncheons, dinners and dances. Day in and day out they come out fresh from the ordeal of brute force through which they are put in their earliest youth.

The great difficulty is that little ones are permitted to do all sorts of absurd and injudicious things simply because it seems so cunning. They are taught to slap some one. Then every one laughs. They are encouraged to kiss, and it is so very, very cute to see them try. Everybody is delighted, and the child knows it. Some of these days it becomes necessary to unlearn all of these things, and then there is a struggle. The little one does what it has been taught to do, and when it persists in this course it is punished. Then its sense of justice, which is one of the earliest traits developed in many children, is outraged, and it grows more angry and unmanageable. Then the exasperated parent whips it and indulges in all sorts of exhibitions of rage.

It would be an excellent idea if some means could be devised whereby parents could be punished instead of children, for this would be of much greater benefit to the community than the cruelty to which the little ones are frequently subjected.—New York Ledger.

Moderate Exercise For Delicate Girls.

There are delicate girls and delicate girls. Those I wish to talk about have no organic disease, but are simply not strong. They may have come into the world with a weak constitution, and although they are not sick are always giving out, or they may by overwork and disregard for the laws of health have so weakened their constitution that their strength is gone, and all efforts to regain it have so far been in vain. In either case there would probably be functional disorders.

Can such girls receive help through physical training?

I answer emphatically, yes; not because the books say so, but because I have seen mean, women every man wonders why some other fellow does not marry. One trouble with the old maid in establishing herself as a friend of the family is that it is hard for her to realize and acknowledge that she is an old maid. The transition from girlhood to womanhood is brought about so unconsciously in her case that she does not understand just when it takes place.—New York Evening Sun.

Teach Girls How to Use Money.

Would it not be wise if Home economics in the mysteries of money were added to the curriculum of every girl's studies? A boy finds it all out by actual contact with the public as soon as he is out and a part of it, but a girl may become a mature woman, shrinking then through the habit of long protection, and be thrown on the mercies of the world with her money to fall a prey to the first sheet and comer. She is taught at school the spectra of the stars and the map of Mars. What girl that size should not be instructed in the workings of life on the planet where she lives! That a knowledge of the nature and mending and care of money should be made a part of every girl's education is growing more and more evident in this age of enlargement and progress, and the time is coming into the minds of so many women. And in the coming century, the woman's century, as it is already called, in which so many women will be free and self supporting, it is all the more important, in order that they may be neither handicapped nor too far outstripped, that they should be well instructed as to financial movements and investments, that they may be directed in the right way before they set out to earn.—Harper's Bazar.

Homemade Recipe Books.

The collection of autograph recipes is quite a fad at present among housekeepers with a taste for cooking. Dainty little booklets with ornamental covers are passed around among one's friends, and duly returned exchanged. Many of these are homemade, the covers being of cardboard, ornamented with suitable designs. A pretty set of leaves mounted for cooking dishes are really much a utensil in hold outline of cover, set in an oval of cleverly interlaced knives, forks and spoons. An "oyster" look was tinted oyster white, and a pile of shells, open and shut, sketched on its covers. So on indefinitely.

A particularly dainty one which is intended for a bridal present, the gift has the cover cut in a pansy shape, with a bunch of tiny johnny jump ups at one side, and, a miniature tray with tea service set out occupying the heart of the big pansy. The leaflets are of similar shape, tied together with violet and gold ribbons, and on their pages is written by loving friends of the sick woman all sorts of tempting sick dishes, delicate, wholesome and nutritious, whose very reading makes one hungry.—Brooklyn Standard-Union.

Beauties of Washington's Time.

The portraits of beauties of the time of Washington's administration show the highest feminine charms of wit, feeling, heart and mind in faces which wore their bloom staunchly up to 50.

Mrs. Ary, daughter of Rufus King, with her black hair and brilliant blue eyes; Mrs. Bayard, whose pictured face it is impossible to see and not to love; the faithful, frank wife of Alexander Hamilton, who could have kept her gallant husband from his erring ways had she been more of a woman and less of a child.

Many will recall Mme. Rudersdorff, the singer, when over 40, beautiful as an image of rose and white marian, and Rose Eytinge, whenever among the ingenues or her many picturesque rooms or in full sunlight, who defied time more successfully than any beauty who has ever trod the stage.

Fortune was none too kind to either of these two women; but they were seen as if those best faded years who were constantly stirred up to effort. It depends upon a woman herself more than upon her advantages whether she can retain her charms and her youth up to threescore.—Philadelphia Times.

Shellfish For Invalids.

Some of the different varieties of shellfish are considered choice articles of food. They have a nutritive value a little less and somewhat similar to fish, but are not so easily digested.

Oysters are the most easily digested of this class of food. Next come lobsters and crabs, and lastly mussels.

For invalids and dyspeptics this class of food should be excluded from the diet, with the exception of oysters, and these for a person of weak digestion should be eaten raw or merely warmed through, as cooking renders the oyster tough and more difficult of digestion.

The raw oyster agrees with almost every one, although a few find themselves obliged to discard the habit part, eating only the soft portion. The hard part is muscle, which binds the two half shells together, and the soft is the liver.—New York Mail and Express.

A Brave Young Wife.

Among the side-de-camps of Napoleon was Marie Chemans Lavalette. Wishing to reward his bravery the emperor gave him in marriage Emilie Beauharnais, a favorite niece of the Empress Josephine. The young wife and husband were devotedly attached to each other. After Napoleon's downfall and the Bourbons were restored to their throne Count Lavalette was arrested and sentenced to death. The young wife vainly interceded in his pardon. Finally she obtained permission to visit him the night before his execution and persuaded him to put on her dress, conceal his face, and so escape. The stratagem was successful. But to be proved by staining the faded spots with good black ink and after they are thoroughly dried rubbing in a little olive oil. If very gray, rub over several times with the ink.

A gargle of salt water as hot as can be used is one of the best, as it is one of the simplest, home remedies for sore throat. That persisted in, with a cathartic medicine to clear the system, will cure almost any sore throat that is not diphtheritic.

Keep your shoes well oiled in damp weather, and if by any chance they become wet through let them dry slowly, or they will warp and shrink. Treat your shoes carefully, because they are really important items in a woman's makeup.

A sturdy temperance woman of New Orleans recently refused $50,000 offered her by a syndicate for a small piece of land because she learned that the purchasers contemplated building several saloons upon the ground.

Walk, dance, run, play tennis, swing dumbbells if you will, row or ride, but do each and every one in a sensible way, instead of carrying to extreme your methods of beautifying yourself.

A clever woman can think of any number of little accessories that will help the appearance and attractions of her table, without adding in any way to the expense of her housekeeping.

Mother—What! Children been naughty again? Now, who am I to whip first—you, Karl, or Selma?

Karl—Please! Always ladies first.—Lustige Blatter.

A Fatal Overnight.

She had many new dresses
For cooncting coiling hose;
All the secrets of the ages she had learned.
She showed a thousand means
And could guard against the losses
That befall us when the angel food is burned.

She was up to all the notions
Of the latest fashion journals
That they give us as a substitute for books;
She had forty ways of boiling
And a dozen ways of frying,
And she said she never wanted any cooks.

She was quite expert at baking,
And was always undertaking
Some exceptional delicious dishes never
She made biscuits quite delightful,
And her bread was far from frightful;
She could make an invitation that would equal oyster stew.

She had theories on canning,
And was equal to the planning
Of a dinner that would please us—we would leave;
She had been to cooking college
And had mastered all the knowledge,
But of "dressing" she was ignorant as Eve.

—The train bearing President-elect Cleveland rushed through this city at great speed at 1.55 this afternoon. The event was celebrated at the North avenue depot, by two of Plainfield's enthusiastic Democrats—Councilman Vincent A. Frazee and Baggagemaster Garretson. The former fired off a cannon, and the latter stood on a baggage truck and waved an immense flag, while the large crowd present gave a hearty cheer. The train lingered about the depot for fifteen minutes before they would believe that it was the President's train and then dispersed grumblingly. They had evidently expected that Grover would thrust his head out of a window and make them a speech, to be followed probably by a few remarks by Mrs. Cleveland and Baby Ruth.

WANT THE CHAPEL MADE A CHURCH.

Park Place Chapel's Members So Decide Last Evening.

Last evening, after the regular weekly meeting in the Park place chapel, a conference was held by the members to consider the question of organizing a church. It was the unanimous choice of the meeting that the proper time had come to make the chapel society a church organization. Messrs. A. C. Taft, J. S. Lunger and L. A. Hummer were appointed a committee to inform the official board of the M. E. Church of the sentiment expressed at the meeting.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel met yesterday and decided that in case the matter met with favorable results, they would agree to pay the interest on the debt of the chapel.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARY.

CANDIDATES NOMINATED IN NORTH PLAINFIELD LAST EVENING.

Mr. A. V. D. Honeyman for Mayor, Messrs. George F. Edwards and Robert Fountain for Councilmen, —A Well Selected Ticket Throughout.

The Republican primary for the nomination of candidates for the approaching township election in North Plainfield was held last evening in the school building, on Somerset street.

Dr. Justus H. Cooley was elected chairman and Horace J. Martin, clerk. The following nominations were made:

Clerk—H. J. Martin.
Committee—Elias Allen.
Overseer of Poor—J. W. A. Bauerschs.
Justice of Peace—T. R. Crossley.
Justice of Peace—D. L. Acker.
Committee of Highways—M. Powers and J. F. Rumble.
Committee of Appeal—J. S. Lunger, D. Weaver and J. Clawson.
Constables—Joh Coddington, J. Van Horn and Thos. McDonald.
Pound Keepers—Godfrey Reick, John Stein, Samuel Taynor and Patrick Eagany.

Roads outside of Borough $1,000. $400 to be placed in the hands of the committee. Support of Poor, $1,500. $200 to be placed in the hands of the committee. Salary of committee $50.

There was no other business to be transacted and the meeting adjourned.

After the township meeting adjourned Dr. Cooley called the meeting to order for the nomination of Borough officers. Dr. Cooley was continued in the chair, and Mr. Martin as clerk, and the following was the ticket named:

For Mayor—A. V. D. Honeyman.
For Councilmen—George F. Edwards. Robert Fountain.

Money to be raised for roads	$3,500
$500 to be used on Somerset street.
For Borough purposes	500
For Board of Health	500
Total	$4,500

On motion the chair was empowered to appoint a committee of three to fill vacancies, and named ex-Councilman P. A. Emmons, Councilman Needham, and Collector H. N. Spencer.

Mr. Honeyman was unavoidably absent from the meeting last evening, and when the committee later waited upon him he was taken by surprise, and said he would like time to consider the matter of acceptance. He agreed to give his answer Friday evening. His chief objection is that he is not well enough known, and feared that it would place him at too great a disadvantage running against a gentleman so well known as Mayor Saunders. He thought Mayor Saunders had made a good mayor, and that it would have been good policy to have made no opposition against him, unless there was good reason for it. The reason was explained to him that the Democrats have only to gain one member of Council to change the complexion of the Board from Republican to Democratic. And once in control they would remain so for probably the next three years. Experience with Democrats in control had hitherto not been satisfactory to the people, and it was thought that the best interests of all would be served by a Republican being permitted to remain in control.

Leading Republicans met in Spencer's Hall later and heard the committee's report, and it was the unanimous opinion that Mr. Honeyman was the man wanted for the place, and assurances were given that he would receive the hearty support of the party, and that being the case, he can undoubtedly be elected, even over so popular an opponent as Mr. Saunders.

The gentleman named for Mayor is a new comer in the borough, though a resident of Somerset county for the past twenty years. For nearly seventeen years he was the chief owner and editor of the Elizabeth Journal, and made an ideal Republican weekly. He is a native Jerseyman, having been born in 1849 in Hunterdon County, where his father was for fifty years a physician. He studied law with Hon. H. D. Maxwell of Easton, Pa., and after admission to the bar there in 1870, he removed to Somerville and was also admitted to the bar there in 1871, and as Counsellor in 1874. He is ownership of the Dulouth Gazette began in 1876, and continued until 1891, when he sold it, and purchased the Trenton Daily Times, which, after a little over a year, he sold. He located in North Plainfield in 1883, and is the President of the New Jersey Law Journal Publishing Company (which he established in 1890), and member of the law firm of Honeyman & Co., both companies being publishers of law books, with offices at 51 North avenue.

He has never held public office, but was for four years reading secretary of the New Jersey Senate.

The two retiring Councilmen, Messrs. Hegeman and Sebring, were offered honors. At the opening of the meeting Councilman Hegeman was named for Mayor, and the nomination was most cordially received. Mr. Hegeman was not present, but his father stated that his son had requested him to attend the meeting and say that he positively declined.

Councilman Sebring was named for renomination for Council, and he, too, declined. He has never missed a meeting but once during the three years he has been in office, and that one was on account of sickness, which made him unable him to leave his bed. He thought it was time now, for some one else to take a hand. Both he and Mr. Hegeman have been faithful servants of the borough.

CRESCENT LEAGUE MEETING.

Base Ball Not Discussed—A Board of Governors Elected.

The Crescent League held a well-attended and enthusiastic meeting in their club house on East Second street last evening. The League has now enough money subscribed to satisfy its creditors, and it will no doubt soon be in a flourishing condition again.

The question of base ball was not discussed, but it will, no doubt, be brought up at the next meeting.

The bride was attired in a pretty gown of tan colored silk, trimmed with lace. Mr. John Carberry acted as best man, and a sister of the bride, Miss Deborah Fawcett, was the bridesmaid. A large number of guests witnessed the event, and afterwards partook of supper. The newly married couple left in the evening for Philadelphia. They will spend their honeymoon in a tour through the South. Their home will be in Ireland.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

The Mayor Asked to Have the Bill Amended so as to be Submitted to Popular Vote.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Lest an erroneous impression may remain in the minds of the public, permit me to say that the legislation which the Mayor, and other citizens advocated before the House Committee on Municipal Corporations was bill No. 54 as it would read after being amended so as to require the law to be submitted to a vote of the people before taking effect in any city. I was the first speaker and handed the proposed amendment to Judge Ulrich and then to the Chairman of the House Committee. Our whole argument was in favor of the Committee reporting the original bill with the recommendation that it be amended so as to let the question go to the people of Plainfield. Judge Ulrich afterwards left the room, and asked for a copy of the proposed amendment. I told the printers to give him a copy of the bill with the proposed amendment incorporated and Judge Ulrich received it before he made his argument. I also gave a printed copy to Judge Stillman, and other printed copies were given to each member of the House Committee. Every body who appeared on either side before the Committee understood perfectly well that the Mayor and all the other gentlemen who spoke in favor of the bill desired the committee to report in favor of the proposed amendment. Not only is that true, but it is also true that when the copies of the bill, a week later, presented their arguments, one of their own number, viz., the President of the Board of Education of New Brunswick, held in his hand a printed copy of the bill as it would read after being amended, and expressed no objection to the phraseology of the proposed amendment, and humorously suggested a change.

If anyone has the impression that the Mayor or anyone else spoke before the committee in favor of passing the bill without the proposed amendment requiring the law to be approved by the people, he is greatly mistaken.

The discussion before the committee was carried on in a high plane, and I am sure that however much the members of the Board of Education and their friends may differ in judgment from the Mayor and Common Council, all concerned would scorn any advantage to be derived from an impression contrary to the truth.

CRAIG A. MARSH.

SUED BY THE CITY.

For Not Placing a Bridge Across the Excavation.

The City of Plainfield brought suit against Charles P. Sebring in the City Court yesterday, for not having an overhead bridge erected in front of his new store building on North avenue, during the construction of three coal vaults under the sidewalk. The masons were there doing the building the vaults. In order to build the overhead bridge it would have been necessary to support it upon a neighbor's property, on which Mr. Sebring had no right to trespass, according to the State laws. During the construction, Mr. Sebring had a plank walk placed around the obstruction in a manner satisfactory to his neighbors and of no interference to general traffic.

The matter brings to mind that there are several buildings being erected within the city limits where the sidewalk in front has been impassable all Winter, yet no steps have been taken whatever.

Mr. Sebring has probably done more than any other single property owner to build up North avenue, and it hardly seems fair that a progressive man should be made a scapegoat and thus put to expense and annoyance in a matter that was not at all unreasonable.

Mr. George H. Babcock, who has hesitated considerably in the matter, that the city offers very little, if any, inducement for investors in improvements, and in almost every case some one intends to make an improvement of benefit to the city, must fight against unreasonable obstacles before he can do his own case as an illustration. In the preliminary plans toward the opening up of Madison avenue his damages were placed at $10,300 and his benefits at $10,000, allowing him only $300.

Although the amount is more than all the assessments of the other property owners, he has made no complaint. Mr. Babcock further says, that in other cities he has been in, they would only too gladly have thrown the burden on general taxation for such an improvement as he will make, and cites instances where it has been done.

Mr. Sebring's case will be heard before City Judge Coddington on next Wednesday.

F. Marion Crawford a Loyal Citizen of the United States.

Marion Crawford, the novelist, claims his American citizenship, although so large a part of his life has been spent in Europe. The mayoralty of the town in Italy, where he has resided for some years, Sorrento, was offered to him, but he refused it, saying that he was a citizen of the United States of America, and could not, therefore, accept office under any foreign government. The beautiful home of Sorrento overlooks the Mediterranean sea, where Mr. Crawford lives, when he is on the other side of the ocean, is surrounded by orange groves, and commands a magnificent view. Here he has done a large part of his literary work, taking occasional relaxation in swimming in his pool, with which he cruises along the beautiful and romantic shores of the Italian peninsula. It has been especially gratifying to Mr. Crawford to see

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Gladstone and I, although the oldest leaders, have the youngest ideas," says Pope Leo.

The South Dakota legislature has taken final action on the divorce question. You cannot now get a divorce in South Dakota until you have lived in the state six months. We publish this information for the benefit of those whom it may concern.

Poor congressmen! What do they not have to endure? Lately one of them introduced into the house a bill of 82 pages, prepared by one of his constituents, who wants to abolish our army and navy, wipe out the pension list and laws and change the name of the country to the United States of the Earth.

Since they began operations 30 years ago the co-operative stores of England have made for their investors a total profit of $200,000,000 on a trade that amounted to $2,500,000. The Scotch co-operative wholesale societies save to members at their various branches 10 to 15 per cent on the purchase money as compared with the price they would have to pay at the regular stores. Besides this they receive annually 5 per cent on their share capital, which dividend is always sure. In addition they generally make besides 4 per cent on the loaned capital. The members of these British co-operative societies are nearly all poor working people—clerks and mechanics—though they must be of more than average intelligence. But what intelligent clerks and mechanics have done in England the same class of individuals can do in America.

Proportional Representation.

Briefly, it is that kind of political representation that enables all political parties to be represented in legislative bodies in exact proportion to their numerical strength. If there are 30,000 voters in a given district, 16,000 Democrats, 10,000 Republicans and 4,000 Populists, proportional representation would give them all a following in the legislature in proportion to their numbers, instead of allowing the majority party to represent or misrepresent the other two.

Proportional representation is the rule of all the people instead of the rule of the majority. Garfield was in favor of proportional representation as opposed to mere majority rule. He said in a speech in congress: "Sometimes my majority has exceeded 12,000. There are about 10,000 Democrats in my district, and they have been voting there for the last 40 years without any more hope of having a representative on this floor than of having one in the commons of Great Britain."

Mr. W. D. McCrackan calls attention to this matter in The Arena. He says John Stuart Mill put the whole difficulty into a nutshell when he wrote: "The pure idea of democracy, according to its definition, is the government of the whole people by the whole people, equally represented. Democracy, as commonly conceived and hitherto practiced, is the government of the whole people by a mere majority of the people exclusively represented." As it is in our country at present a majority of even one constitutes the greater party the absolute arbiter of the legislative destinies of only a fraction less than half of all the population. That such a system does not represent the people is frequently shown in the Swiss referendum. Where a question has been referred to the people there, they have often reversed the decision of their representatives in the parliament. Gracchi said further, "In my judgment, it is the weak point in the theory of representative government, as now organized and administered, that a large portion of the voting people are permanently disfranchised."

Mr. McCrackan justly calls attention to how the dead level of our legislative assemblies would be shaken, the rule of ring politicians broken, reforms introduced and things generally made lively and profitable by having all the political parties represented according to their numerical strength. Our present geographical political boundaries, as illustrated in the district system, would of course vanish under proportional representation, and there would be no chance at all for gerrymandering.

Proportional representation presents difficulties in the practical working, which have been met in the five following proposed ways, as set forth by Mr. McCrackan:

The simplest and ideally most perfect is that known as the electoral quotient. Every elector at the polls receives a list of candidates, and marks as many names as there are persons to be elected, in the order of his preference—first, second, third, etc. Suppose the number of persons to be elected is 10 and the vote polled is 10,000; this number, subdivided by 10, or 5,001, is the electoral quotient, and in counting the ballots the first 10 candidates who obtain 5,001 votes each are declared elected.

The cumulative vote differs from the foregoing in that the elector may distribute his votes as he chooses, or cumulate them all upon one candidate.

The limited vote gives the elector a less number of votes than there are candidates to elect, and the minority is allowed to be represented by the remaining candidates.

In the free list the elector does not vote for any candidate by name, but for a list—e. g., if a certain list receives, say, five, three or two electoral quotients, then the first five, three or two candidates named thereon are declared elected.

Personal representation is in substance to allow votes to be received in every locality for other than local candidates. Suppose a legislature to contain one member for every 5,000 actual voters, then every candidate who receives 5,000 votes would be returned in whatever part of the country his votes might happen to be. There are several minor details in each of the foregoing systems and provisions for special cases.

THE PRINCESS IS HERE.

She Wants the Sandwich Islands Restored to Her.

A BEAUTIFUL GIRL OF EIGHTEEN.

Mr. Davies, Her English Guardian, Makes a Long Argument In Her Behalf—Will Visit Mr. Cleveland After the Inauguration—Confidence In Her Cause.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Princess Kaiulani, niece of the deposed Queen Lilluokalani of Hawaii, is here. She arrived on the steamer Teutonic, which sailed from Liverpool on Feb. 22. With her were Theophilus Davies and Mrs. Davies, who are the English guardians of the princess; Miss Davies and Miss Wharstoff, companion to the princess.

R. C. McFarlane, the ex-minister of finance to the dethroned queen, and Dr. Mott Smith, the present Hawaiian minister to this country, went down the bay on the revenue cutter Chandler to meet the young princess. They boarded the ship immediately after she left the health officer's boarding station. There was quite an army of curiosity seekers on the pier to get a glimpse at the princess. A suite of rooms had been engaged for the party at the Brevoort House, and they were driven there immediately after coming off the steamship.

She Is an Hawaiian Beauty.

The princess is 18 years old. She is a tall, beautiful young woman of sweet face and slender figure. She has the soft brown eyes and dark complexion that mark Hawaiian beauty.

She had come to the United States, she said, more for the purpose of learning and observing for herself the nature of the people who had been asked to take control of her country than to make formal petition for her crown.

"That," she said, "is rightfully mine, and if the Americans are the noble minded people I have learned to regard them as being they will not be a party to the outrage by which I have lost my birthright."

In regard to her views on the various aspects which the Hawaiian government is likely to assume, Princess Kaiulani referred to her guardian, Mr. Davies, who had prepared a statement both on his own and her behalf.

Mr. Davies was delighted to learn that the question of the annexation of Hawaii had taken a new turn in the senate and that practically it was laid over for the consideration of the next administration.

"We do not mean to get a hearing with President Cleveland in any official capacity," Mr. Davies said. "but simply as private individuals. What his decision is will scarcely be affected by our visit. The princess felt that in the face of the threatened annexation of Hawaii by the United States she ought to come here, where she could learn directly what was the true sentiment of the people. We will remain in New York until Friday. Then we go to Boston, where we will remain until after March 4. From there we proceed to Washington, where we expect to see Mr. Cleveland."

The Princess' Statement.

The statement of Princess Kaiulani is as follows:

To the American People:

Unbidden I stand upon your shores today, where I thought so soon to receive from you a royal welcome on my way to my own kingdom. I come unattended except by the loving hearts that have come with me over the whitby seas. I hear that commissioners from my land have been for many days asking this great nation to take away my little vineyard. They speed onward to me and leave me to find out as I can from the rumors of the air that they would leave me without a home, or a name, or a nation.

Seventy years ago Christian America sent over Christian men and women to give religion and civilization to Hawaii. They gave us the gospel and made us a nation, and we learned to love and trust America. Today three of the sons of those missionaries are at your capital asking you to undo their fathers' work. Why am I sent thus? Who gave them authority to break the constitution which they swore they would uphold?

Today I, a poor, weak girl, with not one of my people near me and all these Hawaiian statesmen against me, have strength to stand up for the rights of my people. Even now I can hear their wail in my heart, and it gives me strength and encouragement. I am strong—strong in the faith of God, strong in the knowledge that I am rightful queen of my people, strong in the people who in this free land will hear my cry and will refuse to let their flag cover dishonor to mine.

What Guardian Davies Says.

Mr. Davies, in conversation, made the following statement:

"After the revolution of 1887 Mr. Thurston came into power and enjoyed very generally the confidence of natives and foreigners. At that time the Princess Kaiulani, heiress presumptive to the throne, was 11 years of age, and it was felt to be very important that she should be sent entirely away from the surroundings and influences of Hawaiian court life in order that she might be trained in the quiet home atmosphere which would enable her more fitly to take up her future position as sovereign. Mr. Taurston repeatedly urged that the young princess should be sent to England with this object in view, and in 1889, when she was 13 years of age, the plan was carried out, and Princess Kaiulani was sent to England in charge of a lady who was about to spend a year in Europe and who undertook to place her at a suitable school which had already been selected.

"At the end of the first year the result was deemed so satisfactory that Kalakaua was persuaded to consent to a continuance of the young princess' stay in England, and as the lady who had been her chaperon had to return to Honolulu a request was made by the father of the princess, with the written concurrence of the king and the then Princess Lilluokalani, that Mrs. Davies and myself should act as guardians during the princess' stay in England. Princess Kaiulani has thus been entirely as one of our own children, and our one idea has been to prepare her for the return to her own land during the present year when she attains her majority.

Annexationists Prepared For Her Return.

"One of the last acts of the Hawaiian legislature, of which four of the five commissioners now at Washington, remember, was to vote a sum of $4,000 for the expenses of the return tour of the heiress apparent. Arrangements were in progress for her reception by the queen of England during the coming spring, and then she was to make a prolonged visit to Washington, New York, Chicago, Boston and other great American cities, finally reaching Honolulu in October or November for her coming of age. When news reached me by cable of the revolution in Hawaii, I wrote to the minister, pointing out what appeared to me to be the grave difficulties in the way of the carrying out by the commissioners of the proposal for annexation. I stated that in my opinion no amount of reasoning and no amount of bribery would ever gain the pure Hawaiian vote, and that without that vote sanction could be neither completed nor carried out hereafter.

"I then urged that a convention of all classes of voters should be called and a carefully framed constitution be presented to them; that the queen should be requested to abdicate, and that the Princess Kaiulani should be proclaimed queen with a council of regency, of which I suggested that Mr. Dole, now head of the provisional government, should be president.

"Feb. 14 I received this cablegram from Washington. 'Islands transferred; princess provided for.'

"Whether this cablegram was to be considered official communication I do not know, but it is the only communication that has reached me, and absolutely none has reached the princess. The most striking fact of this cablegram, next to arrogant heartlessness, is the fact that its accuracy is not confirmed by any telegrams that have been published in England.

"Why it was sent or who sent it I do not know, but as loyal guardians and faithful friends there was only one thing for us to do—to stand beside the princess in the presence of these representatives of Hawaii who would transfer her birthright without the civility or the humanity of one word in her of explanation or even of sympathy.

Will Appeal In the Name of Justice.

"We come here with no official status and with no official information, but with the conviction that the government and people of the United States will not lend their countenance to the disinheritance for no fault alleged against her or her nation or a royal line which has with singular tact and courage endeavored to fit herself for her high station and has shrunk from neither duty nor sacrifice in the effort.

"I feel a good deal of sympathy for the commissioners, who must find themselves in a position of much embarrassment. Several of them were concerned in the proposal for the Hawaiian constitution of 1887, which they compelled the king to accept and since to maintain. At least four of the commissioners have taken the oath to the same constitution, and it has been adopted by the nation. When Lilluokalani ascended the throne she took the usual oath, and by that constitution the Princess Kaiulani was proclaimed heiress to the throne. The queen appears to have violated her constitutional oath and to have laid herself open to deposition, but that cannot affect the constitution itself nor the oath which the commissioners took.

"I am sure that the people of the Hawaiian electorate ever knew of the revolution at the date of the commissioners' departure on their present mission, and it is difficult to see how they can sufficiently divest their present position as to enable them to write to the heiress apparent and announce to her the circumstances of their appointment.

"I do not for a moment believe that any of them would be guilty of intentional unfairness, even and discourtesy to a princess, and the inconceivable treatment which their silence toward her has betrayed them into must arise from the difficulty they find in reconciling the present attitude with the knowledge that their oath to sustain the Hawaiian constitution binds them to the succession of the princess, unless the nation itself releases them from that oath."

Chicago Carriage Makers Strike.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Nine hundred union carriage and wagon makers of Chicago went on strike this morning. They demanded 9 hours for a day's work instead of 10, with the same pay, and that piece workers be given an increase of 10 per cent. One hundred firms have agreed to the demands, and of the 1,500 makers in the city 600 returned to work. Four of the largest manufacturers—Studebaker, Kimball, Sherman and Smith—will hold out against the strikers.

A New Over Apportionment.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 2.—The Democratic legislature apportionment bill was passed by the house under very existing circumstances. Two Democrats—Bond and Williamson (Grant county)—voted against the bill. The Republicans were prevented from objecting to the bill as a gerrymander, and one of them (Stilzer) was forced into his seat by Doorkeeper White while attempting to characterize the bill as unjust.

The Sewing Machine Trust.

NEWARK, N. J., March 2.—A proposed combination of sewing machine manufacturers, in which the Domestic Sewing Machine company is interested, has long been the subject for discussion. Among the other companies concerned in the scheme are the Standard of Cleveland, the Davis of Dayton, the New Home of Orange, Mass., and the White.

Commander Weissert's Aids.

MILWAUKEE, March 2.—Commander in Chief Weissert of the G. A. R. appointed the following aids de camp on his staff: Massachusetts—George H. Rich, Lynn; Asa M. Stickney, Hartford. Pennsylvania—John Shields, Flemington, vice H. L. Hartshorn, elected department commander. Pennsylvania—Henry B. Devitt, Philadelphia.

Dumpsey and Beatty Will Be Sentenced.

PITTSBURG, March 2.—Judge Stowe, in the criminal court, overruled the motion for a new trial in the case of Hugh Dempsey and Robert J. Beatty, charged with poisoning Homestead nonunion workmen. They were remanded until Saturday, when they will be sentenced.

Colonel Hayes and His Devoted Wife.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Colonel W. B. Hayes, convicted of perjury, sent a request to the district attorney asking that he be allowed to see his wife. She has been declared insane, he said, by Dr. McLane, and will shortly be removed to some private institution.

JEFFERSON LECTURES.

The Great Actor, Author and Artist In a New Role.

BENEFIT FOR THE NEW YORK POOR.

The Hero of the Catskills Suffers From Stage Fright, but Entertains an Audience Which Fills the Great Carnegie Music Hall of the Metropolis.

NEW YORK, March 2.—It is for Joseph Jefferson somewhat of a new role—that of lecturer—yet it would be hard to find any one of the large audience that greeted him last night at Carnegie Music hall who would say that he did not fill it acceptably. It was fitting that the well known actor, full of experience and rich in all that makes life worth the living, should give his valuable services in behalf of the New York Kindergarten association, of which Mrs. Grover Cleveland is the vice president. The object of the society is to give some slight training to the poor little tots of this crowded city that they may not for want of it miss from their lives all that goes to make them pleasant.

Mr. Jefferson Has Stage Fright.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Jefferson said: "I addressed a small party the other evening at a social club, and on that occasion I was asked whether I had ever experienced stage fright. I replied that I had never been troubled with it. Mr. Schurz, in his introduction, said that it would be as superfluous to introduce me to you as to tell you that the sun was to rise in the morning. I thought to myself, 'If he only knew what he was saying that how happy I would be if he would only go right on speaking till the sun did rise, and that would save me the embarrassment of attempting to entertain you.

He Is Modest Always.

"It is possible that many of you associate me with the character of Rob Acres, or Golightly, or perhaps with Caleb Plummer, or our mutual and impecunious friend, Mip Van Winkle. However, I beg you to bear in mind, if you have derived any amusement from my delineation of those characters, that I was assisted by a company of talented actors and actresses. Moreover I was supplied with the brilliant words of such men as Dickens, Bouicicault, Sheridan and our own Irving. Now mark the difference, to-night I am here alone, thrown entirely on my own resources, and in that unproverished condition I stand before you in an original character—a simple, unassuming, nervous individual, who in his present novel position does not know for sure whether he will sink or swim.

Acting Is a Genius, Not Art.

"Acting has been, as I think erroneously, called the mimic art. Imitation is a gift and not an art. Acting is of course a gift, but without art it can produce but little respect. Genius produces, but art reproduces. The painter will seldom paint a picture twice, a novelist never writes the same story twice, but the actor must play his part over and over again."

Speaking of the difference between tragedy and comedy, Mr. Jefferson said some one had asked Garrick how he liked best, tragedy or comedy, and the great actor replied, "Whether I am ill or well, whether in health or low spirits, I am always equal to tragedy, but comedy is a serious business." The speaker continued:

In the Days of Thespius.

"Thespius acted in Athens upon a cart. There were three actors in the troupe. He must have been a star, as he was the only member of his company. There were no high salaries for supporting companies; no matinees; no 'farewell tours;' no 'wonderful' his age. He received all the receipts. There was no criticism in the morning papers. I think I can see him there standing up in his cart, with his splendid figure outlined against the clear sky of Athens, depicting despair, revenge, hatred, and rejoicing. I think I can see him as one told that they have excavated Athens for hundreds of feet and have never found any vestige of an advance agent."

Mrs. Bierstadt's Death.

NEW YORK, March 2.—A cablegram was received here announcing the death at Nassau of Mrs. Rosalie Osborn Bierstadt, wife of the well known artist. Mrs. Bierstadt's summers have been spent with her husband in New York and at her birthplace and the home of her father, Amos O. Osborn of Waterville, N. Y. Since her marriage in 1876 she has been well known in social circles in this city. Funeral arrangements to Longfellow and others in Paris and London are well remembered. Her body will be brought home for interment at Waterville.

The Carlisle Indian School.

CARLISLE, Pa., March 2.—The 14th annual commencement exercises of the Indian Industrial school were largely attended. Captain R. H. Pratt, superintendent, made the opening speech. He was followed by the graduating class, consisting of Arthur Johnson (Wyandotte), Indian Territory; Malcolm Clark (Pieger), Nebraska; Frederick Horse (Sioux), Dakota; John Baptiste (Winnebago), Nebraska; John Morrison (Chippewa), Minnesota.

A House Builders' Strike Imminent.

BELLAIRE, O., March 2.—April 1 will, it is believed, witness one of the largest strikes that has ever occurred in the Ohio valley. The carpenters, it is asserted, will ask for 20 cents advance over their present wages, which will not be granted. All other trades will, according to the present understanding, also strike.

They Don't Like Our Dollars.

OTTAWA, March 1.—In the house of commons M. Guillet complained that Canada was being flooded with American silver worth less than 50 per cent of its face value. The minister of finance promised an investigation and said that Canadian and British money could be the only legal tender.

A Wisconsin Editor Dead.

RACINE, Wis., March 2.—John H. Willis, a well known newspaper man, died from a paralytic stroke. Deceased married Rev. Olympia Brown, who is prominent in national woman suffrage affairs. He leaves a comfortable estate to his widow.

The New York In Dry Dock.

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—The United States cruiser New York was placed in the dry dock at the League Island navy yard for the purpose of having her twin screw propellers placed in position.

Redwine's Defalcation $80,000.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The comptroller of the currency is advised that the defalcation of Assistant Cashier Redwine, of the Gate City National bank of Atlanta will foot up $80,000.

Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed to close up entirely. The doctors said it was caused by heart failure, and gave me up. I was confined to my bed for some time. It did not seem to do me any good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I resolved to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken one bottle I felt much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling great. I thank God, and

At Death's Door

and my wife for my restoration to perfect health." HARVEY REED, Laceyville, O.

DR. TALMAGE AND HIS CHURCH.

The Tabernacle Heavily In Debt and the Pastor Discouraged.

BROOKLYN, March 2.—The Eagle says that Dr. T. De Witt Talmage, during an interview with a reporter of that paper, intimated plainly that the continuation of his labors at the Brooklyn tabernacle would be dependent upon the power of the trustees and congregation to extricate the church from the swamp of debt in which it is engulfed. Dr. Talmage also admitted, the reporter says, that recently he had received calls from other churches of an exceedingly tempting nature. On last Sunday Dr. Talmage prefaced his sermon thus:

"As I told you last Sunday, because of the fact that we have been building three churches, two having been destroyed, we are in an exigency and must raise $20,000 by April 1. To show you that I have been doing my share toward the lifting of the church debt, I will say that during the last three years and four months I have received from the church over and above what I have paid out in its benefit $628. I know not how long God will call me to make these sacrifices, but I am willing to do as he may indicate."

To the direct question, "Doctor, is it not true that you contemplate resigning your pastorate?" he said:

"I prefer not to talk on the subject. I have done nothing definite—that is to say, I have no very definite idea in regard to the matter. These money troubles of ours oppress us. They interfere with my work. If outside cares are intended upon me, those same cares will certainly interfere with my spiritual efficacy."

It was learned that the indebtedness of the tabernacle is $267,215.89. On April 1 notes fall due, which must be met, to the amount of $20,000.

The annual income of the church, derived from pew rents, collections, bequests and spontaneous gifts, is about $90,000. Its note to run the church for a year $24,000, of which $12,000 goes to the pastor as his salary.

READING'S MONTHLY DEFICITS.

The Reports of the Railroad and Coal Companies For January.

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—The statement of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company for January shows gross traffic receipts of $1,305,780.80; traffic expenses, $1,188,050.80, profit in operating, $222,750.70; receipts from other sources, $37,567.82, leaving a profit for the month of $260,297.52. Against this is charged $20,063.11 for permanent improvements and $650,000 as one-twelfth of the current year's fixed charges, thus showing a deficit for the month of $389,794.59.

The statement of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company for the month of January shows gross receipts of $1,813,113.10; gross expenses, $1,967,907.94, thus showing a loss for the month from mining of $108,577.84. From this is deducted $20,000 as one-twelfth of the current year's fixed charges, leaving a total deficit for the month of $176,577.84.

The result of the operation of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company, lessee of the Lehigh Valley railroad, for the month of December, 1892, shows: Receipts, $1,700,554.61; expenses, $1,171,981.89, leaving earnings for the month of $528,572.72, an increase of $188,541.15 as compared with December, 1891.

AGAINST WINTER RACING.

A Mammoth Meeting of Opponents Assembles at Trenton.

TRENTON, March 2.—New Jersey's capital has seldom witnessed a demonstration of any kind like that which the law and order people made against the race track ills and the legislature which enacted them.

The railroads ran special trains and made a special rate of fare, which resulted in bringing a large throng to the city. The delegates found that no effort was to be made to keep them out of the assembly chamber, and when the house was packed it was decided to adjourn to the Taylor Opera House. Those present formed in procession and marched through the streets. When Dr. Kempshall called the meeting to order there, the house, which is one of the largest in the state, was crowded from gallery to orchestra. Many vigorous speeches were made and suitable resolutions adopted. The chairman appointed a committee of 30, representing the different counties, to present the resolutions to the legislature next week and work for the passage of the repeal.

Emperor William's Speech.

BERLIN, March 2.—Emperor William failed to make the sensational speech expected from him at the banquet of the Brandenburg diet. Part of his speech was as follows: "The living generation is fond of combining the monarchical traditions of the past with the present regime to the disadvantage of the latter. This is a fruitless task. Let us look back upon the splendid past with admiring regret. Let us endeavor to become worthy of our ancestors' deeds. I myself hope to establish a state of things with which all Germans who desire to be content will be content. I hope that the good will of my people will strengthen my resolution, although I know that it will be impossible to satisfy everybody." The emperor made no direct reference to the army bill, but spoke emphatically of the hearty accord in which he found himself with his chancellor, Count von Caprivi.

The Wheeling Car Strike Remains.

WHEELING, March 2.—The electric street car strike is as far from settlement as ever, and scenes of violence are just as frequent. Last night a fire, supposed to be in endsey, burned out the car barns of the company in South Wheeling. The public is losing patience with the strikers; but, owing to the fact that every labor organization in the city has taken up their cause and declared boycotts on all who patronize the street cars, it seems almost impossible for matters to be settled in any other way than by arbitration. The cause of the strike was the discharge of two men for discourtesy to passengers. No wage question is involved.

Jack Dempsey Wins a Fight.

PORTLAND, Or., March 2.—Jack Dempsey, middleweight, defeated Billy Keogh, a heavyweight, at the Pastime club in four rounds. It was Dempsey's first fight since his defeat by Fitzsimmons two years ago. Keogh tipped the scales at 190 and Dempsey at 148.

Coal Lands Cave In.

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 2.—The Loyalhanna Coal company, near Latrobe, sustained a big loss, caused by the caving in of about 100 acres of their coal lands. It is feared that a number of the miners may be entombed, but there is no certainty of this.

The Governor Will Probably Appoint.

HELENA, Mon., March 2.—Yesterday's ballot for senator resulted as follows: Maroe, 39; Clark, 34; Dixon, 12. The legislature adjourns today.

THE CLANS GATHERING.

Mr. Stevenson Is Given a Reception by Mr. Morton.

ANTIOPTION FAILS IN THE HOUSE.

All the Members of the Cabinet Will Greet Mr. Cleveland on His Arrival Except Judge Gresham—Noble Stops a Sunday Concert In the Pension Building.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The postoffice appropriation bill came before the house and was discussed to some extent on the question as to the route of the southern fast mail. That question was not disposed of when the conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill was presented. The report led to a long financial discussion on the Sherman bond amendment, the result being, however, that the amendment was recedes from by the senate. Outside of these two appropriation bills the senate had before it the McGarrahan bill, which went over without action, and the Hudson river bridge bill, which was taken up by a vote of 36 to 24, but disappeared immediately when the conference report was taken up—a result which rankled in the mind of Mr. Hill and led that senator to upbraid Mr. Allison for his share in the legislative struggle.

The House Defeats Antioption.

The time of the house was consumed principally in considering a motion made by Mr. Hatch to suspend the rules and pass the antioption bill. The debate was limited to half an hour, and as the time was doled out in 2 or 3-minute portions there was no opportunity to discuss the measure as it deserved to be discussed. Mr. Hatch made the longest speech, and that did not exceed eight minutes.

He then, stating that he had done his best to promote the interests of the farmer, left the subject to the house, and the house decided by a vote of 172 to 124 not to agree to Mr. Hatch's motion, a two-thirds vote being necessary under a suspension of the rules. Some unimportant business was transacted, and the house adjourned.

The Morton Reception an Innovation.

The reception tendered last night by Vice President and Mrs. Morton to Vice President-elect and Mrs. Stevenson at their residence on Scott circle marked another deviation by Mr. Morton from the traditions surrounding his position. It was an unprecedented thing for the outgoing vice president to bestow any recognition, official or social, upon his successor, the exchange of such compliments having heretofore been confined to the occupants of the presidential chair, but when the cards were issued giving notification of the vice president's intention thus to honor his successor it was felt to be a gracious and proper courtesy. Six hundred guests were present.

The Cabinet Present Save Gresham.

The members of President-elect Cleveland's cabinet are all expected to be in the city when their chief arrives except Judge Gresham, secretary of state, who, it is understood, will not resign his position on the bench before next week and will remain in Chicago until then. Messrs. Carlisle, secretary of the treasury, and Herbert, secretary of the navy, are already domiciled in the city. The others—Secretary of War Lamont, Attorney General Olney, Postmaster General Bissell, Secretary of the Interior Smith and Secretary of Agriculture Morton—will stop at the Arlington, where the Cleveland party will be entertained until after inauguration.

The People Arriving.

A considerable number of inauguration visitors have already arrived in the city, and the railroad and station in the streets and the hotel lobbies present a bustling and animated appearance. Those now here, however, constitute but the vanguard of the crowds that will come during the remaining days of this week. New York city and other portions of the Empire state show up well in the lists of those now here, and the signatures of a number of her prominent citizens are seen on the hotel registers. The Tammany leaders continue to arrive in small squads of three or four, but the rank and file of that society are expected to swoop down upon the city today, when 3,000 are scheduled to reach this city. Arrivals include Messrs. Richard Croker, Senator-elect Murphy and Lieutenant Governor William F. Sheehan.

The Pneumatic Tube Continues a Success.

Postmaster General Wanamaker received a dispatch from Postmaster Field indicating that the mail pneumatic tube services just established in Philadelphia between the main office and a substation had thus far proved highly successful.

Postmaster Field, in his telegram, says: "Today a package of 80 letters dispatched from East Chestnut station were stamped and in the hands of casers in the general office in 2 minutes. The special delivery mail made one dispatch earlier to New York than it would have done under the old system."

The Bancroft Wins $48,000 For Speed.

The practice vessel Bancroft, built by Moore & Sons of Brooklyn, was accepted by the navy department, subject to compliance with the usual conditions. The Bancroft won a premium for speed of $48,000, but all the money appropriated for building the vessel has been consumed in the construction, and the contractors will have to seek the payment of the premium from congress.

Mexico Will Refund Her Sizes.

Senor Don Matias Romero, Mexican minister to the United States, returned to Washington after an absence of some months, accompanied by a son of President Diaz. Senor Romero said there was no truth in the report that he had come to the United States to negotiate a loan for Mexico. "This is not the time," he said, "to do that, even if it were desired. The conditions in the money market are not satisfactory. If they were, Mexico might undertake to refund some of her 6 per cent bonds into a loan running a long time at a lower rate of interest. Such an issue would be popular with holders of the present bonds, and they would make desirable investments.

The New North River Bridge Bill.

The New York and New Jersey bridge bill is undoubtedly in a precarious situation in the senate, notwithstanding the fact that Senator Hill has twice succeeded in securing a majority vote upon his motion to consider it. His difficulty appears to lie in the fact that some of his support comes from the appropriations committee and when it comes to a test between the bridge bill and one of the appropriation bills the members of that committee feel obliged to support their chairman, and so Mr. Hill's slender majority disappears.

Noble Prohibits Sunday Opening.

Secretary Noble rent a letter to the chairman of the inaugural committee, in which he stated that his attention has been called to the fact that it is the purpose of the committee to open the pension building on sunday, the 9th inst., for one or more musical entertainments, at which a charge for admission will be made. The secretary explains that at the time of the granting of the use of the pension building for the inaugural ball it was not contemplated that it should be open to the public on Sunday, and as there will be opportunity on the next day, during which the building will be at the disposal of the committee to give concerts, he declines to grant permission for its use on Sunday.

Public Debt Increased In February.

A slight increase of the net debt of the United States was the result of the operations of the treasury department in February, as shown by a late statement. The exact amount was $615,502.14, made up as follows: Increase of interest bearing debt, $600; decrease of noninterest bearing debt, $221,881; decrease of cash in the treasury, $1,136,990.14.

ON TO WASHINGTON.

Mr. Cleveland and Party Will Arrive at 6 O'clock Tonight.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 2.—In the Cleveland cottage at Lakewood last night the president-elect and his family made their final preparations for departure. Mr. Cleveland will sleep in Washington tonight and 48 hours later will occupy his old quarters in the White House. The special train left here at 12:30.

The plans for the journey were designed under the direction of Mr. Cleveland to avoid publicity.

STRIKING NOVELTIES.

THE GENUINE UMBRELLA SKIRT FOR THE PROMENADE.

It Comes from Paris, but Our Dressmakers Are Adopting It Rapidly—Ruffles and Flounces Will Prevail on Spring Gowns, and They Are Graceful Too.

The most striking midwinter novelty in skirts to be worn on the promenade is the genuine umbrella skirt, the New York Tribune says. This skirt, as it is sent over from Paris, has from six to nine pointed gores of even size. This makes a skirt that is quite full at the bottom, but is narrowed at the top, so that it fits the hips smoothly with no apparent fullness, the gathers necessary to fit the skirt gracefully at the back being carefully concealed. A modification of this skirt is being quite generally adopted by our best dressmakers for walking gowns. It consists of six gores and is a little fuller at the back than is the Parisian skirt.

Every seam in the umbrella skirt is gored on both edges; therefore it is necessary to introduce a piping cord or some other trimming at the gores to prevent the inevitable sagging at the seams that must otherwise occur. All skirts are cut with as pronounced a flare at the bottom as it is possible to give them. They are fitting considerably higher than they were at the beginning of the season, the trimming reaching to the knees or above. As many as seven rows of fur, separated by spaces, are seen on some of the new skirts.

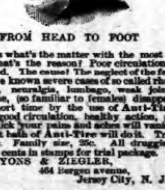
Tired from Head to Foot.



FROM HEAD TO FOOT

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the cause? Poor circulation of the blood. The cause? The neglect of the feet. We have known severe cases of so called rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, weak joints, backache, so familiar to females, disappear in a short time by the use of ANTI-TIRE. Get up good circulation, healthy action, see how quick your pains and aches will vanish. One foot bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 15c. Family size, 25c. All druggists. DON'TS FOR MOTHERS.

EVEN PROGRESSIVE WOMAN IS NOT FREE FROM VAGARIES.

Her Character Is Still Marred by a Few Disagreeable Traits — Suggestions to Housekeepers and Wives Whereby Some of Them May Be Relieved.

It is trying, isn't it, sometimes even exasperating, in these closing years of the 19th century, when the air is full of calls to culture and the aim of every self respecting woman is declared to be the development of individuality with a capital I, to note how little headway we make, after all, in some directions?

A woman is nothing if not progressive nowadays, yet one who has the leisure and the disposition to observe her sisters with a mildly critical eye can but be impressed and oppressed by the frequency with which certain tendencies develop among women of widely varying temperaments. They crop out under circumstances so diverse as to suggest, almost too forcibly sometimes, that in spite of our aspirations and our struggles to live up to our opportunities we are all "poor creatures" and very much alike despite the influences of classes and clubs.

Brevity is the essence of sound counsel in these days of overburdened minds, and one often longs to quote, more in sorrow than in anger, to women in various walks of life the concise if somewhat threadbare advice of Mr. Punch's oracle to persons contemplating matrimony.

Don't, if you are a housekeeper, even though your income is small and you are cumbered with many cares, live in a state of anxious and perpetual apology to guests for various little accidents that will occur even in a well regulated household like your own. The more obvious the defects are to which you thus call attention the more embarrassing for your friends.

In a lovely home owned by cultivated people, rich in literary and musical talent, where a delightful literary tone is one of the attractions of the house, the spirit of chaffing under small household worries is "the little rift within the lute" that sometimes turns all the sweet domestic music to discord for days.

A cordial welcome to an atmosphere which shall put them at their best is the choicest offering that can make to those who come, even for a few hours, beneath your roof. Simplicity, the essence of hospitality, is essential to this. It does not imply neglect of your guests, but a consideration for their comfort which forbids you to intrude personal worries upon their attention.

The household gods forbid that any one should disparage the science of housekeeping, but by all means let the home be kept first. Your parlor is none the pleasanter to callers if you audibly and repeatedly regret certain shortcomings of you housemaids, nor are your guests' opinions to be feared if they are likely to be uncharitable. If we are to have genuineness and simplicity for sturdy American virtues, how shall they be nourished but in a soil of self respecting independence?

Don't, if you are a professional woman, doctor, dentist or nurse, feel it incumbent upon yourself to acquire a sort of masculine carriage and tone of voice, a habit of crushing your trembling patients with brusque inquiries and sententious sniffs or ejaculations and a general disposition to regard suffering humanity as existing only for the operating table.

WHEELMAN'S HEADQUARTERS, 67 AND 69 PARK AVENUE.

Don't press yourself on your company and inexhaustible knowledge of mankind because you have a monopoly of one of the species. There are varieties. And don't commiserate your girl friends on the inconsistencies of their lives. If they are out in the world in careers of their own, as so many women now are, they may be obstinately blind to the disadvantages of their position and may find the society of several men friends, in whose pursuits they can sympathize, quite as inspiring as the constant companionship of the one to whom they might soon become a matter of course. Be contented with your own good fortune, by all means, but remember that it is all lent to make "an ostentatious display" of your happiness as of other worldly possessions.

Don't lay the flattering unction to your soul that all the girls with whom your husband was on friendly terms before he discovered you to be his "bright particular star" were more or less sentimentally interested in him and cherish the secret conviction that each was correspondingly dejected in your triumph. It takes two to make a bargain. Remember, too, that but for some little pebble which rolled beneath a wheel of fortune's car and turned its course a hairbreadth you might be cherishing the same fond allusions about some plain John Henry that you do about your own Charles Augustus. Unromantic, isn't it? But true.

On the other hand, don't, if you are a woman of independent income, whether inherited or due to your own efforts as an artist, a journalist, teacher, correspondent, bookkeeper, typewriter, or what not, don't commiserate too deeply your married friend who is economizing on a small income.

Don't, if you are a young mother, be a tire some imbecile over your baby outside your immediate domestic circle. Don't check the confidences of your girl friends by wide of the mark replies as you bang over that interesting infant. Don't interrupt the conversation too often by calling attention to the manner in which your fractious pet hits his fist in his mouth. Ten to one he cannot do it again. If you do make the wonderful way he winks his little eyes, the astonishing pace with which he manipulates his little hands, and his extraordinary intelligence the burden of your conversation, don't wonder if the friend of your childhood fall away from you and complain of their neglect. Above all, don't sink the wife into the mother. Some time you will regret it if you do, for your husband's and your children's sake as well as your own.

Don't make your own dresses and trim your own hats and practice all manner of small economies under the guise of virtuous and able management if you have an income which permits you, without extravagance, to afford such work to women whose comfort and even existence depend on their doing it. It is not admirable economy to take the bread from your sisters' mouth and sit at home sewing and turning and pressing an old new gown while you bemoan the fact that you haven't time for the new magazines, or the last lecture course, or to teach in the industrial school of your church.—Chicago Tribune.

An Intellectual Washington Woman.

One of the women in Washington distinguished for intellectual gifts is Mrs. Newcomb McGee, daughter of the noted astronomer, who has the honor of being the second woman elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and also a member of the Anthropological society. She was graduated in medicine from the Columbian university, and now at work in the John Hopkins hospital.

The Gum Chewing Habit.

If girls only knew how they are so often disillusionized in the eyes of nice young men by chewing gum, they would quit the habit at once. A pretty face, crowned with a tangled yellow braid and featured with a dainty tipsilted nose, a delicately rounded chin, a smiling and rosy mouth, plump cheeks and a smooth and peachy complexion, can look sadly distorted and homely when the jaws are worked in a passive and lackadaisical way over a little piece of gum. The prettiness all goes, and somehow the sight suggests the cow and her cud.

It is not the gum chewing habit itself, but one of its outshoots against which I protest.

This is the constantly growing habit of the chewer of this city to secrete her quid of gum on some article of furniture. A woman never throws away her gum. She hides it. She sticks it under the mantelpiece, under the table top, on the headboard of the bed or on the back of the chair and leaves it there for future reference.

It is an unnice habit.

It is not a habit of economy to be encouraged either, for a fresh "chunk" of gum can be bought for less than a cent and will last, through the wear and tear of ordinary teeth, for at least six months.

I have seen girls who are heiresses to hundreds of thousands stick a quid of gum which they had been chewing on for a week under the mantelpiece as though they considered it of equal value to a diamond ring. Next day they will hunt it up and chew bits of varnish and wood with it.

It is mortifying to call at one of those houses where a gum girl lives. You are sure to run on traces of her gum proclivities in every piece of furniture you touch. Her little knots of it are stuck in all sorts of places. When you find them, of course you are surprised and say lots of things in a hurry that will probably "queer" you with the girl forever.—New York Herald.

How to Treat Lying Children.

Some one asked Miss Harrison, the superintendent of the Kindergarten college in Chicago, what she would do with a child who told lies.

Miss Harrison does not believe in corporal punishment for any offense.

She said, "It would depend entirely upon the sort of a lie it was." Her advice, in substance, was this:

Lying is too often treated locally when it should be constitutionally treated. There are almost as many different sorts of lies as there are different sorts of fevers.

For example, exaggeration which comes from excess of imagination. This is to be cured by teaching accuracy of observation. Make the child count all the objects in the room. Make him hold steadily to proved facts in everything.

Then there is the lie of egotism, which is always claiming everything for itself. Ignore the story. Make it seem not worth his while.

The lie which denies is the fault of other people. Punishment has been given arbitrarily. That is to be corrected in the guardian.

The hardest fault to correct in a child or any one else is the deep lie of jealousy, the malicious lie. It always comes from jealousy, and there seems to be only one possible remedy. Get the jealous child to perform some service for the other. Make him participate in the other's life, in some way become a partner, as it were, and the jealousy ceases.—A. S. Duane in New York Press.

How to Wash Wash Silks.

In these days when wash silks are in common use a few words in regard to washing them may be of interest. As silk is an animal fiber like wool, it cannot be treated in the same way as cotton, which may be subjected to water of all temperatures without injury. Silk should be washed as rapidly as possible. Unless the article is very much soiled, and if there are any parts especially soiled clean them with a little benzine or gasoline applied with a flannel cloth. Then prepare a suds of lukewarm water and plunge the garments in it, sousing them up and down and rubbing them thoroughly in this suds.

Rinse them in a lukewarm little cooler, and then into a third water still a little cooler, and so on until the final rinsing water is perfectly cold. Do not lift them. Wring them out as dry as possible with a machine. Lay them in sheets or other heavy cloths and roll them as hard as you can to form rolls. Put them away for an hour, and at the end of that time iron them on the wrong side.—New York Tribune.

Mending Gloves.

I saw a pair of suede gloves that most women would have discarded made as good as new the other day. Several of the long pieces between the fingers had worn out, though otherwise the gloves were nearly as good as new. So out came a pair of sharp scissors and an old pair of gloves of a similar color. The fingers were carefully ripped out and laid lengthwise on an unsoiled place in one of the old gloves, as a pattern. The new pieces were then neatly stitched in place.

Some women believe it to be a matter of economy to have more than one pair of gloves at a time, but I am quite convinced it is the right and sometimes the left glove that is worn out first. The better glove if laid aside may chance to become the mate of one from the next pair, or may be used in mending. As a matter of economy, however, the habit of buying stockings of the same color and quality by the half dozen is the one value that in buying gloves in this way.—New York Post.

A Boost to Humanity.

"One of the greatest boons which will result from the industrial emancipation of woman," according to Mr. Carroll D. Wright, "will be a frank admission on the part of the true and desirable man that she is the sole rightful owner of her own being in every respect, and that whatever companionship exists between her and man shall be as thoroughly honorable to her as to him. Specifically she will be able to use her mind under conditions which have brought success to her father and brother. In callings where men surpass women, women will be obliged to abandon the field, but where services are performed with equal skill and integrity by both there will come honest competition and an equalization of compensation."

A Query Usually Ignored.

It is an unanswered query why parents so persistently ignore the fact that "many men of many minds" is quite as applicable in the nursery as in the drawing room. The average mother trains Daisy and Katherine, Willie and George, in one unswerving direction, which is her own visual line to rectitude. Meantime she is giving each plant in her conservatory sun or shade, dry air or damp, as their varying natures demand. This, too, while every speech of every little soul intrusted to her care is stamped with its speaker's individual need as completely as the shrubs in the florist's catalogue are marked with or without stars according to their propensity for blooming.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

THEY WERE GREEN.

He Thought He Had a Bargain, but Things Are Not What They Seem.

For the sake of realism we will say that the man in this story was Colonel R. of Saybrook, who knows timber almost as well as he knows state politics. Of course it wasn't the colonel, but that doesn't count. In any event, a year or so ago he was down on one of the mountain streams of east Tennessee picking up walnut logs. One day two very green looking yaps from the hills came into the tavern where he was stopping and asked for him. He happened to be in the office and heard their inquiry.

"I'm your man," he said. "What will you have?"

"We've got a walnut log down here in the crick," said one, "and we want to sell hit. We wuz goin ter Knoxville, an pap loved ez we wanted money we could sell the log an git enough ter pay our expenses. Do you want ter buy hit?"

"You've down to see me," said the Michigan man, and they walked about a quarter of a mile down the stream and found it moored to a root on the bank. It was a big one, and had been in the water so long it was black on the ends. The buyer walked along its length, ran his measuring rod around it, and then spread his hands, patted the back and found it solid, and at last offered the yaps $50 for it.

Their eyes fairly bulged out at the offer, and they took it quick. Then the Michigan man watched them take their departure for Knoxville. He chuckled then, for the log was worth $150 clean. But the Michigan man didn't say anything. He diverted the log down stream to the nearest shipping point to load it on the cars with some more he had. Three days later he went down himself.

"See that last log I sent down?" he asked of his man at the station. "Fine log; got it for $60; worth $150 sure," and he chuckled some more.

"Did you send that log?" inquired the man, laughing like a horse.

"Of course; what's the matter with it?"

"Nothin much; only it ain't a walnut log at all."

"Not walnut?" and the buyer looked sick.

"Course it ain't; it's sycamore, with walnut bark fastened all around it with fine wire that made such work in green walnut hull juice. I reckon it's worth about $4."

The Michigan man swallowed his Adam's apple about 17 times in 10 seconds. Then he recovered his speech and made the air so blue with profanity that the folks in the next county thought the words were on fire.—Detroit Free Press.

His Cushion.

Among the many anecdotes of Michael Faraday, the great scientist, is one which was printed originally in the "Proceedings of the Royal Society" in connection with other biographical facts chiefly derived from that eminent man's correspondence and notebooks.

It appears that he and Sir Charles Lyell were sent as government commissioners to visit the unfortunate upon those who had died by the explosion in the Hasswell colliery in 1844. Faraday crew examined the witnesses very pertinently. Among other questions he asked, by the rate of flow of air currents was measured.

An inspector in reply took a pinch of gunpowder from a box, as if it were snuff, and let it fall through the flame of a candle. His companion, with a watch, noted the time the smoke took to travel a certain distance.

The method satisfied Faraday, but he remarked upon the careless handling of the powder, and asked where it was kept.

"In a bag, tightly tied," was the reply.

"Yes, but where do you keep the bag?"

"You are sitting on it," answered the inspector carelessly.

The well meaning people, not being overstocked with chairs, had given the commissioners their best substitutes for a cushion. Faraday's agility in vacating this seat of honor may be imagined.

In the Same Language.

Many great men have written illegibly, and it was suspected that this was the reason that Judge Briefly cultivated a hopeless hand handwriting.

A hint that ought to have had a good effect was given the judge by a client, who called and found that the lawyer had left a note for him.

The client sat down and studied over the note for awhile. He could make nothing out of the hasty scrawl. Then he wrote beneath in four or five lines that looked as if they might have been meant for writing, followed by this sentence in a plain hand:

"This is in reply to yours of the 19th."—Youth's Companion.

Saved Himself.

At one of the New York music halls a hard faced variety actor came on near the end of the bill the other night and proceeded to tell stories and jokes that were meant to be side splitting. The audience failed to see any point in them and did not laugh once. As a matter of fact the auditors yawned and a few left. The actor was plainly disturbed, but undaunted. He kept on. So did the audience—yawning. Finally he saw that everything was falling flat, and walking down to the footlights he said in a sympathetic tone, "Ladies and gentlemen, I hope I am not keeping you up."—Vogue.

The following anecdote is told of a certain venerable and learned bishop who had as uncontrollable partiality for correcting and criticising the language of his parishioners.

On one occasion he happened to enter a crowded horse car running on one of the main thoroughfares of the town of F——. A business man of the city, who was also a member of his lordship's flock, chanced to be sitting near where he stood, and thinking it hardly right that he, a young man, should be seated while his bishop was compelled to stand, rose and said, "My lord, since you are the oldest, permit me to offer you my seat." Replied the bishop in a critically instructive tone of voice, "You should say, my dear friend, 'Since you are the older, permit me to offer you my seat.'"

The gentleman stared at him for a few moments, then tranquilly sat down again, and picking up his newspaper remarked politely, "My lord, since I am the younger I will keep my seat."—Detroit Free Press.

The Dunellen Call says of the Rev. Chas. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in this city: "Rev. Mr. Herring was present and conducted the service in the Presbyterian chapel on Tuesday evening. He spoke with a great deal of force from the passage, "Who shall withstand his cold." The lessons he deduced from those words were pointed and as well practicable. A large number were out to hear him notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather."

A LECTURE ON "FIRE."

A Large Audience at the Y. M. C. A. to Hear Mr. Smith.

Mr. Franklin S. Smith of the High school, gave an interesting talk before a large audience at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, last evening. His subject was "Fire." He began with a short description of the ancient theory concerning fire and showed by means of a candle and gas flames the nature of flame and combustion. He showed that a candle flame had three parts, the color being due to luminous particles of carbon. Then with a Bunsen burner, platinum wire and several salts he showed the effect of introducing them on the wire into the flame of the burner. By means of a fine jet of gas which was placed under a wire gauze, a singing flame was produced which burned quietly until excited by hissing or the shaking of a bunch of keys. The burning of magnesium wire and of particles of iron was shown. A small amount of gun powder was made and burned and after the room was darkened, phosphorous was burned under water by means of chlorate of potash and sulphuric acid. Then a number of slides made by Mr. Smith showing different kinds of locomotives were thrown on the screen, ending with a view of the present High School building.

Bars Before City Judge Coddington for Breaking Windows.

City Judge Coddington is becoming famous for his good advice and severe reprimands to boys who are brought before him to answer to the charge of violating city ordinances. Instead of sentencing them to imprisonment, the Judge gives them a sound lecture, explaining to them what such crimes lead to, and at the same time reading the city laws regarding their cases to them. In nine cases out of ten the lecture does more good than imprisonment would, which only serves to make hardened criminals of boys who committed their first offense out of pure mischief, not realizing the extent of the law to which they laid themselves liable.

This morning, two boys were arraigned before him for breaking a window with base balls. They at first denied the charge, but the Judge's little speech which he had in store for them rather took the boys by surprise, and they finally confessed to their guilt.

The Judge suspended sentence.

Bishop Vincent Decides that Liquor Selling is a Legitimate Business.

Bishop Vincent of the Methodist Episcopal church has handed down a decision in the case of Peter W. Palmeter and William C. Briggs, druggist, of Jamestown, Chautauqua county, who were charged with violating the discipline of the church in doing business under a storekeeper's license. The Bishop finds that the accused have not violated the rules of the church. He holds that as the church recognizes the propriety, under certain conditions, of the sacramental and medicinal use of wine and other alcoholic liquors, it would be unreasonable to refuse to a Christian druggist the right to conduct a legitimate business, so held by State and church. He says that the fact that the State has enacted license laws, liable to abuse by unprincipled men, is not a sufficient reason for refusing a Christian the right to conduct a legitimate business.—New York Sun.

Rector Jennings Must Vacate.

The Standing Committee of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Westfield, it is said, has made a decision that the Rev. J. J. Jennings, rector of Grace church, in that place, must vacate the parish by March 15.

Mr. Jennings had appealed to the Standing Committee against a decision of Bishop Scarborough that he must vacate his parish. The Standing Committee met in Elizabeth on Monday, and on Wednesday Mr. Elliott, chairman of the Westfield Vestry, received a report from the committee that the vestry must pay Mr. Jennings salary up to March 15, after which Mr. Jennings must vacate the parish.

Mr. Jennings can appeal to the Episcopal Convention, which will meet in May. Bishop Scarborough, however, can forbid his occupying the pulpit in case he should make such an appeal.

The Hurley—Miles Litigation.

The second action in the Hurley—Miles litigation, which has been before the courts for some time, began before Judge Barrett in New York, yesterday. Mrs. Catherine A. Hurley brought suit, as executrix of the estate of her husband, Samuel Hurley, to recover $650,000 from Jacob and William Miles.

William Miles is charged with appropriating the greater part of her husband's estate. It is also alleged that the agreement of June 27, 1882, by which Hurley gave up all claims to the property, is a forgery. The defendants deny everything.

Mrs. Herlick Gets $1,000 for Her Husband's Death.

Mrs. Herlick, widow of Peter Herlick, who recently committed suicide at Dunellen, has received $1,000 from the life insurance company in which she held a policy on his life, and will also receive $250 from W. G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of that place, of which order her husband was a member.

—If the old saying be true March this year will take its departure like "a roaring lion."

CORRESPONDENCE.

The School Board Side.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—At the hearing on Tuesday of this week before the Committee on Municipal Corporations, much was said by the speakers in favor of the schools, that the public should know, as we believe had Mayor Gilbert and his friends fully understood the matter they would scarcely have started out in the line they did. For the better enlightenment of the public school matters, so they may know just what our schools are doing, and just how the present school law works, we shall endeavor to give your readers from time to time a brief resume of the speeches delivered before this Committee and within a few days we hope a full statement from the Board of Education.

The remarks of Mr. Charles W. Opdyke of Broadway were as follows:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE: I come before you voluntarily, to protest against this bill. For twenty-four years a resident and heavy tax payer of Plainfield, never a school trustee and never sending a child to the public schools, while on the other hand, I have been a member of its Common Council, my testimony in favor of the School Board and against the Council may surely be regarded by you in this matter as disinterested.

For my own protection I have been in the habit of closely scrutinizing the public school expenditures and the result has been that I have not regretted my share of the school taxes. I know that their teaching is thorough. My own children report to me that scholars who cannot pass the examinations in the public schools, quit there and go to private schools. In fact, I must say frankly that I did not have to have those public school expenditures left entirely to our School Board than to have them submitted in addition to the control of our Councils. Our Councils have usually been partisan. Occasionally by some great effort, party politics have been kept out of their elections. I have once or twice been instrumental myself to this effect and have been threatened with being read out of my party. The reform has always been short-lived. Moreover our Councils are composed of men as a rule of less age, less experience, less invested interest in the city, of a briefer residence among us, of less knowledge and interest in school affairs, of less leisure to give attention to such an important and intricate a specialty—than our School Board. Therefore I say, I feel safer with the law as it is.

Our present Mayor and Council, having under the law, not been elected to have any voice in public school matters, have of course no control before you, in this question, noted outside of their official positions and are entitled to merely the consideration that you would give to any dozen citizens and no more. In truth they are entitled to less, for they are asking for an increase of their own powers.

I am confident that the change they ask of you is not desired by the citizens of Plainfield at large. And I believe that the change we shall seek in the surrounding to refuse a Council of still wider growth of our public school system and of still greater activity and energy in our school Boards.

A BELIEVER IN OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Says Bartling Did not Forge a Check.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The statement that appeared in another paper, that Charles Bartling forged a check on Simon Frucht of East Front street is not so.

It is denied by Frucht himself.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Hurlbut's subject, at the Methodist church next Sunday night will be "The Young Man a Conqueror." The sacramental service will be held in the morning.

A party of Plainfielders, which completely filled one of the cars of a local train, went to Westfield last night where they spent the evening at the home of Mr. J. S. Irvine.

Next Saturday evening the marriage of Mr. Richard Ten Eyck to Miss Bessie K. Melick will be solemnized at Metuchen. Cards of invitation to the reception have been received by friends of the couple in this city, who will no doubt attend.

Mr. John O'Rourke, who, for the past eight years, has been delivery clerk at the freight depot in this city, and a faithful employe of the company, died his house, on West Sixth street, at 10.30 o'clock last night. He had been ill only since Sunday of pleuro-pneumonia, and his death was very sudden. A large circle of friends mourn his loss, as he was well thought of by all who knew him. Deceased was a member of the Catholic Benevolent Legion and the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum. The former organization pays a death benefit of $1,000. The case is made doubly sad by the fact that his wife is lying dangerously ill with the same disease.

The Feast of Purim.

The feast of Purim, which is celebrated by Hebrews all over the world, was begun Wednesday at sundown and ended this morning. The Hebrews, in order to commemorate the deliverance of their forefathers from destruction, in the days of King Hamam, instituted a feast to last during the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month of Adar, according to the book of Esher. The day was religiously observed in this city yesterday.

Meeting of the Woman's Alliance.

A very interesting meeting was held February 28th at All Souls' church, being the regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Alliance. Subject: "Religious and Moral Training of Children." Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell gave an excellent lecture on the subject, and papers were read by other members. A very suggestive paper was read by Mrs. E. N. Harned and one by Mrs. H. B. Nichols. Mrs. Charles E. Ryder took for the subject, "Is Service or Training the Mother most Owes the Child?" Remarks followed by Mrs. A. M. Powell, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. T. J. Mumford, Mrs. A. C. Baldwin, and others.

"Physical Education" will be considered at the next meeting, March 28. A lecture by Hon. Chas. Hum will be given preceding it on March 16. Subject, "The Influence of Manual Training on Character" Whatever our position we all need an emotion. Especially do students require full exercise of the muscles of the chest and arms and the deep breathing which they stimulate. A man of letters is a poor, puny specimen of humanity without a developed muscular organization. There is a sympathy between Gladstone's axe and his pen. Hewing logs the hearty of the monarchs of the forest, he has been helped to penetrate the mysteries of many knotted problems of state. Who shall say that this habit of physical exercise has not given him length of days and mental vigor?

And scramble for what they can get.
Yours Respectfully,
A SCRAMBLER.

The postals are postmarked "Brooklyn." One of the recipients of the above says he thinks the sender is a former Plainfielder who recently moved to Brooklyn.

A Dunellen Man Shoots His Daughter

Henry Wendel, of Dunellen, who keeps a boarding house, yesterday morning while suffering with an attack of delirium tremens, shot twice at his daughter.

The first shot grazed her forehead and the second hit her left shoulder, inflicting a severe flesh wound. Constable Warden went to the house and found it barricaded, with Wendel standing at a window threatening to shoot anybody who tried to get in.

Finally the man was coaxed outside the house and captured. He was held for the action of the Middlesex County Grand Jury.

COAL LIKELY TO BE CHEAPER.

A Probable Result of the Reading Crash.

The recent Reading crash will, it is thought, be productive of great good to coal consumers and dealers, but more particularly to the former, for the increase in prices brought about by the celebrated coal combine will not hold, and, it is expected, will fall into the track of the combination. Coal is expected to drop in retail price fifty cents a ton in the next two months and as much more before May 1.

The theory is that as the Reading is now in the hands of a receiver there will be no more holding back of coal from tidewater on its part, as per agreement with the combination The other roads which were in the combine with it can not afford to hold back coal while the Reading is hurrying it to tidewater, and the consumers will see a big supply in the market and a drop in price.

Plainfield's (?) Raritan River Railroad.

The following ridiculous statement is clipped from an exchange:

"It is currently reported in Plainfield that the Pennsylvania Railroad has purchased the rolling stock, charter and right of way of the Raritan River Railroad. The road runs from Plainfield by way of Milltown and South River to South Amboy, where it connects with the New York Long Branch division of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The Raritan River Railroad authorities say they know no hing of the alleged purchase. The probable intention of the Pennsylvania Company in acquiring the road would be to prevent its purchase by the Central Railroad. Should the latter road secure it, extending the tracks to the main road at Bound Brook would afford direct communication between the main and New York and Long Branch dividons of the Central, and cut off the monopoly now enjoyed by the Pennsylvania Railroad of traffic between New Brunswick and New York."

—He who laughs last has the laugh. The coal combine magnates did some laughing last year. The laugh is on the other side now. Coal is soon coming down in price.—EX.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Washington society.

A delightful gossipy article about Washington society is contributed to Harper's Magazine by Henry Loomis Nelson. It is the best summing up we have seen lately of the marvelous conglomeration of men and women from all parts of this broad land that constitute Washington society. It is as much the duty of every moderately well to do American to spend a winter in Washington as to make the tour of Europe. There is to be found the nearest approach to real American society—and there is any such thing—that exists anywhere.

From all corners of the country our people come together there. The rough of speech and uncouth of manner are polished off in a few months to become at least respectable members of refined society. They are good, moral people, intelligent, too, wanting just what they will get from a season in Washington. Boorishness, selfishness and greenness are there, but they are shamed into nothingness by the exquisite flavor of courtliness and gentleness that will always pervade Washington society. Give everybody his deserts, this courtliness, gentleness and polished manner are due largely to the southern element in Washington. If we could unite northern energy and enterprise with southern graciousness and politeness, we should have the most fascinating specimen of humanity that has yet blessed this globe. He would be just about perfect too.

Mr. Nelson describes well the strange contrasts that meet one at a president's reception, contrasts sharply emphasized in dress, from the new rural congressman, who goes to evening parties in a frock coat, to the gorgeous Chinese minister in his rainbow robes of state. Here, too, is the hopelessly vulgar rich man, who somehow makes one think of hog bristles, who has for years been able to buy all he wanted and thinks he can buy a place in good society too.

Best of all is Mr. Nelson's conclusion

"[illegible] official society offers a great revelation of American character. These people who make the living panorama of a drawing room are the products of our institutions. In the countries of kings and emperors they could not have come to this. Some of them may be vulgar, many of them may be crude, most of them may be uninteresting to those whose pleasure lies in the alertness and skill of intellectual forces. The latest works on fetiches may be unfamiliar to them, they may not know the names of the leading French authors or painters, they may not have heard that Russia has a literature, they may think the equestrian effigy of Jackson more splendid than the graceful figure of Chief Justice Marshall; but they have self respect and kind considerateness for others, and they recognize the proprieties of speech and manners.

They feel their own powers and have realized their value. They are citizens who have helped to make us their heritage by their own efforts, for this is the congregation of the leaders of the republic, men and women who inhabit the homes of the country, in city and hamlet, on prairie and mountain and by seashore. They are the depositaries of the power and the products of its culture. From out their sturdy stock come the brilliant double blossoms of that which they inherit and which Columbus civilized. Most of those blossoms die with their generation, but the invigorating soil grows better and better with the years go on."

Music and the Church.

It was Charles Wesley who took bodily the airs of some exceedingly untheological songs and adapted them to the spiritual hymns that he poured from his poetic brain in such numbers. "Why should we let the devil have all the good tunes?" said he.

Various congregations have lately taken up this fine idea of Wesley's and extended it. They have during the present winter given Sunday afternoon organ recitals. Church music is acknowledged to be the most inspiring and satisfying of all the sweet sounds that can inspire humanity and lift it for a little time into forgetfulness of its woe and suffering. But at these organ recitals the music has not been confined to sacred selections alone. Extracts from many of the classic composers—Beethoven, Schumann, Weber, Chopin and others—have been performed. The exquisite touch of the most skilled organists in the land has filled the air with heavenly music, free to all who wished to spend an hour of a Sunday afternoon listening to it. It may be that there is sometimes as much of rest and worship in an hour spent thus as in listening to the most eloquent sermon. There are times when music can touch the heart, though the spoken word can not.

At any rate these superb organ recitals have begun a noble missionary work. Young people by the thousand go to beer gardens Sunday afternoons, and many of them are drawn down to the pit of ruin. If the church gives better music than the beer garden, more restful, sweet, thrilling and inspiring, it will draw the best of these young people within its own doors.

There is another view of the case. Our country is woefully lacking in musical culture. The Sunday school tunes played on a little cabinet organ are all that many people in America ever hear of music. The wretched rattat tomtom songs of the concert saloon are all that another large and unfortunately constantly increasing class of our population ever hears. Cannot the churches, powerful, progressive, desiring ever to help humanity, step in and cultivate both the popular ear and voice? Choral unions not for sacred music alone, but for all kinds, might be organized in every city and town. With good instructors in singing a musical talent that none dream of would be developed in our country. Furthermore, to say that people would not be attracted to such musical gatherings rather than to the beer gardens is to say that the prince of darkness is more powerful than the Almighty

SENATOR HILL IS ANGRY

His Hudson River Bridge Bill Has a Setback.

MR. WANAMAKER RETURNS THANKS

President Harrison Will Lecture on Law. Working Hours for Government Employees Are Not Prescribed—A Noisy Time In Both Branches of Congress.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Senator Hill is having much trouble in getting the senate to consider his New York and New Jersey bridge bill. Yesterday an appropriation bill was called up, and Mr. Hill excitedly inquired when it had been reported. Mr. Hale replied, "This morning."

Mr. Hill—Then I object to its consideration at this time.

Mr. Hale said that he had never known an attempt to be made in the senate to delay the consideration of appropriation bills. If the senator from New York, in the face of every precedent, insisted on his point of order and if the chair sustained it, he (Mr. Hale) would appeal from the ruling of the chair, and he had no doubt but that the senate would sustain the appeal.

Mr. Hill—Then I will not object.

Mr. Hill replied that he had endeavored to bring before the senate a bill in which his constituents were vitally interested and which affected the interests of the whole country. Twice the senate had voted to take it up, and twice appropriation bills had been interposed to prevent its consideration. If a majority of the senate desired to pass it, it should have the opportunity to do it and should not be met by technicalities. All that he desired was fair play for his people and himself.

Mr. Hale objected to the intimation that technicalities had been resorted to to prevent the bridge bill being considered.

Mr. Hill commented on Mr. Hale's statement that the senate would on appeal overrule the point of order and said: "There are your rules. They are framed for the protection of the rights of every senator. My colleague (Mr. Hiscock) objected time after time to the consideration of this bill. He did it for a purpose, and he had the active aid and assistance of some gentlemen on the other side. I said that I would appeal to the justice and fairness of the senate, and I make that appeal now."

Oil Upon the Troubled Waters.

Mr. Harris (Dem., Tenn.) appealed to both senators. He had never known in his 16 years' service any bill to be thrown in the way of the consideration of one of the great appropriation bills, particularly at such a late period of the session. He appealed to Mr. Hill to withdraw his objection and to let the appropriation bill be proceeded with.

Mr. Hale said that rather than be at the mercy of one man, he (Mr. Hale) would be obliged to self defense to insist that the senate should overrule the point of order and allow him to go on with the bill.

Mr. Hill said that he was not influenced at all by the senator's suggestion, intimation or threat. He of course realized the situation as much as any other senator. He was not responsible for the movements in Tennessee, and, as he suggested, he would withdraw his objection and let the appropriation bill proceed.

Work in Congress.

The sundry civil appropriation bill consumed the time of the house. There was a fight over the New York custom house provision and over the World's Columbian exposition amendment. There was great confusion, the speaker being obliged over and over again to appeal to members to preserve order and to direct the occupants of the galleries to do so.

But request and direction were equally unavailing. The confusion continued, and few members who were removed more than a couple of feet from the disputants could hear a word of what was uttered.

The galleries of the senate were crowded with visitors all the day, but there was very little in the proceedings that could interest them. The postoffice appropriation bill was completed, the paragraph in relation to the southern fast mail having been modified so as to leave the whole question to the discretion of the postmaster general.

The postoffice appropriation bill was followed by the Indian appropriation bill. The latter contained an amendment reported from the committee on appropriations appropriating $8,500,000 to pay the Cherokees for the lands ceded by them in the Indian Territory lying between Oklahoma and Kansas. The amendment provoked some discussion, but was eventually agreed to. Then the deficiency bill (the last of the appropriation bills) was acted upon. Both the McGarrahan and the New York bridge bills were crowded out by the appropriation bill.

The Legislative Bill Reported.

The conference report on the legislative bill was submitted. The house recedes from its effort to fix eight hours as a day's work for government employees. The house at present law remains, with the exception of a change in respect to sick leaves. Thirty days annually will be granted, but in case of contagious disease 60 days may be granted. The senate also gains its point in regard to its clerks and keeps the control of the Maltby building. It is understood that the amendment to purchase the building used by the census office was stricken out on account of the figure named as the price. The house amendment prohibiting the burial of officers or employees of the government at public expense was also stricken out.

Wanamaker Thanks the Postmasters.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has mailed to each postmaster in the country the following letter of commendation: "I desire officially to recognize the important service you have rendered as postmaster under the administration of President Harrison. What you have been accomplished in the advancement of the service has only been possible through the fidelity and zeal of those associated with the postmaster general. In making this acknowledgment of your valuable assistance I hope that in the future, whether in or out of office, you will continue your interest in the postal service and study to promote in every possible way its extension and improvement."

Mr. Harrison to Lecture on Law.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President Harrison last evening accepted a professorship in the Leland Stanford University of California. He will deliver a series of lectures on constitutional law, beginning in October next.

Going Back to Honolulu.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3.—W. C. Wilder, one of the Hawaiian commissioners, has arrived here from Washington on his way to Honolulu.

BISHOPS BEFRIEND THE CHINESE.

They Also Declare Against Government Aid For Sectarian Schools.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The house of bishops, at its session yesterday afternoon, unanimously adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That the house of bishops desires to place upon record the expression of its deep conviction that legislation calculated to bear expressly and harshly upon the Chinese race is not only essentially unjust and in violation of the most venerable traditions of our government, but is also likely to precipitate an antagonism to American citizens residing in China, which may lead speedily to the expulsion of all such residents from China and to the ultimate prohibition of the extension of American civilization or any of its benefits to that great empire."

Bishops Williams of Connecticut, Whitaker of Pennsylvania, Hare of South Dakota, Potter of New York and Paret of Maryland were appointed a committee to present the resolution to the president of the United States, the secretary of state and others in authority, and to "use all urgency to arrest the execution of the laws to go into effect May next."

Another matter discussed was the appropriation of government funds for the maintenance of sectarian schools for Indians. The opinions of the house were finally expressed in the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Lot as hereby reaffirms the conviction implied in the action of the board of missions at the last session in Baltimore; that it is not consistent for the government of the United States, under the provision of the constitution, to make nor of any religious body to accept appropriations for the maintenance of missions or schools, and that the bishops desire especially to commend to the support of the people and clergy of this church those schools which are under her care on behalf of which the church has declined to accept government appropriations."

A CURIOUS CRIMINAL CASE.

The Victim Dies, Yet the Assailant Cannot Be Tried.

NEWARK, N. J., March 3.—New interest is given to the case of Nathaniel Williams by the death of Ernest Treitel, whom he shot a few months ago. Treitel succeeded Williams as private secretary for William Steinitz, an ex-champion chess player, and Williams was so angry at losing his place that he fired a shot into Treitel's left arm, shattering it. He was tried on an indictment for assault with intent to kill and was found guilty.

His counsel made argument for a new trial and Judge Kirkpatrick will announce his decision next Tuesday. Treitel died in a New York hospital since the arguments were made. The county prosecutor says that Williams cannot be tried for manslaughter because of Treitel's death.

GERMANY WILL RETALIATE.

The Act Calls For a Modification of the McKinley Bill.

NEW YORK, March 3.—At the chamber of commerce Mr. Louis Windmuller offered the following:

Whereas, The German parliament has under consideration and is about to pass an act to compel all American merchandise to be stamped "United States of America" in the way in which German merchandise must be stamped in America in compliance with the provisions of the McKinley act, and

Whereas, Confiscation of all American merchandise not so stamped is threatened;

Resolved, That we ask our committee on foreign commerce to represent these facts to our government and request the repeal that part of the McKinley act which prompts the German parliament to make the restrictions mentioned.

The resolution was adopted.

Government Grog Shops For England.

LONDON, March 3.—In the house of lords the bishop of Chichester introduced a bill which proposes to place the retail sale of spirituous liquors under the control of local licensing boards, the profits to be devoted to the benefit of the district. The general outlines of the plan are similar to those of the Gothenburg system. The Archbishops of Canterbury, the Earl of Kimberley and the Duke of Westminster spoke in favor of the bill, and it then passed its first reading. Several members of the temperance delegation of the house of commons listened to the debate on the bill. Subsequently in the lobbies they declared that they would not accept the measure.

The Home-tead Relief.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., March 3.—At a meeting of the relief committee the treasurer's report showed the total amount of money received to be $5,350.68 and the amount expended $4,422.94, leaving a balance in the treasury of $917.74. The secretary reported that there are less than half a dozen families now in need of relief. A resolution was passed that the public at large be notified that no more money is needed for Homestead sufferers.

Creditors Anchor a Steamship.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The steamship Advance of the United States and Brazil line, which was advertised to sail on Tuesday last, is still tied up at her dock. Officials from the sheriff's department swooped down on the steamship just before her time of sailing and took possession. All of the cargo destined to be shipped to South America are protesting against the delay in the transport of their goods to their customers.

Another Triple Wreck.

LAFONTE, Ind., March 3.—A rear end collision occurred on the Lake Shore railroad between two west bound freight trains—one, a fast passing speed, crashing into the caboose of the other, scattering the debris in all directions. An east bound freight crashed into the wreck, piling up the cars in a frightful manner. The crews saved themselves by jumping.

A Concern Which Involved the Governor.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 3.—Attorney H. K. Taylor, assignee of the Youngstown Stamping company, whose failure involved Governor McKinley financially, stated that his investigation of the company's affairs shows assets of $90,692 30 and liabilities of $176,981.79.

Soldiers at Cherokee.

WICHITA, Kan., March 3.—All the available troops at Forts Sill, Supply and Reno were ordered out by Commander Wade of Fort Reno to patrol the northern line of the Cherokee strip to repel the threatened invasion by boomers.

Woman Suffrage In Kansas.

TOPEKA, March 3.—The senate concurred in the house amendments to the woman's suffrage bill, which now goes to the governor and will receive his signature. The vote on joint ballot stood 109 to 22.

The Billiard Record Broken.

LONDON, March 3.—In the billiard match between W. J. Peall and John Roberts, jr., for £200 a side, Roberts broke the record with a run of 797 points.

THE CAPITAL IS ABLAZE.

Everything In Readiness For Inauguration.

MR. HARRISON WILL GIVE A DINNER.

Yanmany Braves Are Everywhere—Mr. Cleveland Calls Upon the President and Will Dine at the White House This Evening—Callers at the Arlington.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The special train bearing President-elect Cleveland and party arrived at the Baltimore and Ohio station in this city at 6.30 last evening. An immense throng of people surrounded the station and filled the streets on either side of it, all eager to get a glimpse of the next president. The crowd began to collect as early as 5 o'clock and continually increased until the arrival of the distinguished party. It was rumored that Mr. Cleveland had gotten off at the New York avenue crossing, where he deceived the vigilant reporters on his honeymoon trip to Deer park. This intimation, however, did not have the desired effect of dispersing the crowd, and finally they were rewarded by seeing the president-elect alight from the car and take the arm of Colonel James Bereer, chairman of the inaugural committee.

A mighty shout went up when Mr. Cleveland's presence was known. With great difficulty a passage way was cleared, and Mr. Cleveland, bowing his acknowledgments, made his way to a carriage and was at once rapidly driven to the Arlington hotel.

Baby Ruth Sees the Crowd.

Assistant Chairman Norris of the inaugural committee escorted Mrs. Cleveland, and behind them was Mrs. Cleveland's infant daughter in the arms of her nurse.

HARRISON GOES TO CALL.

The party arrived at the Arlington about 10 minutes before 9 o'clock. In order to avoid the crowds that had gathered Postmaster Wanamaker an unusual route was taken to the hotel.

A small crowd of people had gathered in front of the hotel to see the distinguished party. Mrs. Cleveland was the first to alight, and she was followed by the president-elect and Mrs. Cleveland's maid. Then Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Don M. Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, Dr. and Mrs. John D. Bryant, Mr. C. Benedict and family, Mrs. S. M. Williams and daughter and Robert O'Brien, Mr. Cleveland's personal secretary, occupied the remaining five carriages. The members of the party were immediately shown to their appartments.

Mr. Cleveland Receives Callers.

The friends of President-elect and Mrs. Cleveland and of those who accompanied them, having learned of their safe arrival in the city, began to gather in the lobbies of the hotel and send up their cards. These were supplemented by large numbers of members of the various political organizations in the city, which made the scene resemble those incident to national conventions. The Tammanyites, attired in new silk hats, were out in force. The presidential party received few callers, however, and those were confined to personal friends. Out of the line of arrivals was Vice President-elect Stevenson, who remained but a short time.

Senator and Mrs. Vilas of Wisconsin were among the first of those who saw President-elect and Mrs. Cleveland. Colonel and Mrs. Lamont, Colonel John S. Wise and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison also called.

Official Etiquette Observed.

It is in accordance with official etiquette for the president-elect to call on the retiring president soon after the former's arrival in the city. The retiring president then returns the call. After dinner last evening the hour was too late for Mr. Cleveland to call on his predecessor, and he deferred that duty until this morning. Then at 10:30 o'clock he formally visited the White House and met the president. Within an hour after Mr. Cleveland's call President Harrison repaired to the Arlington hotel and formally returned the call of the president-elect.

This formal exchange of courtesies will be followed this evening by the more informal affair of a dinner at the White House in honor of President-elect and Mrs. Cleveland by the president and Mrs. McKee, his daughter. There may be a few outside guests invited, but the dinner will be in the nature of a family affair.

Tammany Provides For the Home Trip.

The streets and hotel lobbies are crowded with Tammany braves, who have arrived throughout the city and are registered in 20 different hotels. Immediately after the arrival of three or four delegations three large express wagons laden with supplies arrived at the Owen House, where a great many of the delegates are stopping, backed up to the sidewalk and unloaded the supplies, which were put into the cellars with orders that they were to be used on the return trip home. The theaters are packed and jammed with visitors, and the streets are overflowing with the mass of sightseers. Prominent among the arrivals yesterday were Governor Pattison and staff of Pennsylvania and Governor Peck and staff of Wisconsin.

The Panama Investigation Ended.

The Panama committee has failed to find anything of a criminal character in its investigations. The committee believes that it is to the interest of the United States that the American people should absolutely control the canal across the isthmus which shall not afford an opportunity for entangling subsidies from competing lines or a chance of falling into the grasp of any monopoly through stock manipulations.

MURDERER MARTIN COY.

His Last Day on Earth Is One of Various Moods.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 3.—Murderer Coy's last day on earth has been one of constant stir and excitement for him and for all connected with the prison. Rev. Dr. Clymer called and read to Coy the farewell letter from his counsel, Lawyer Parkhurst. The letter said that all human agencies had failed and recommended Coy to seek the consolation which the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ affords. Dr. Clymer was much affected by the interview, while Coy remained calm. Mrs. Baker, Coy's sister from Wisconsin, also called and spent an hour and a half with him in the guardroom, the interview being held in the presence of a large number of visitors who called out of curiosity to see the scaffold.

MARTIN COY.

The number of visitors has been very large, and Sheriff Crosby has admitted all to the guardroom to see the scaffold. Coy said he was willing to die and would not harm himself if an opportunity presented. Later he changed his tune, however, and expressed regret at not having killed himself before when he had plenty of chances. He told Dr. Barton, the jail physician, that if he could get at his medical case he would settle the matter quickly. He was in a desperate mood and was very closely watched by his keepers.

Drs. Barton and Clymer last evening administered communion. Coy softened under the solemn service and expressed his hope of future pardon. Visitors were admitted to the jail until 10:30 this morning, and the execution is to take place this afternoon.

ORANGEMEN GET EXCITED.

Burn Gladstone In Effigy and Trample the Home Rule Bill.

BELFAST, March 3.—More than 5,000 persons were present at the great Orange meeting. Dr. Kane, who presided, said that Ulster was prepared to defend herself to the last against the proposals of the home rule bill. The men of Ulster need not feel, however, that they would be alone and unaided in the fight for their liberties. They had the sympathies of Englishmen of all classes throughout the world. He had received letters from military and police officers in England and Ireland and telegrams from Canada and Australia promising co-operation with the men of Ulster if the latter resorted to arms to defend their liberties against the tyranny of their historic foes. A hundred thousand Orangemen were ready to resist to the death the home rule bill.

William Johnston, M. P. for South Belfast, who called the meeting, concluded a violent speech by swearing on a Bible that he never would submit to the laws of a Dublin parliament. Dr. Kane then tore to pieces and threw to the floor a copy of the home rule bill, and the meeting adjourned.

Last evening effigies of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Morley were burned in High street in the presence of a cheering crowd of thousands.

The Negotiator of the Check Goes Free.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Dawes E. Sturgis, the 17-year-old lad who was jointly indicted with George M. Nesbitt for forging the $6,000 check on the Merchants' National bank, was discharged from custody by Judge Cowing. The prisoner was allowed to go on the recommendation of District Attorney Nicoll, who wrote the following indorsement on the papers: "The youth of the accused, the fact that he was completely under the influence of the confederate, Nesbitt, who forged the check; his ignorance of all financial and business papers, the absurd attempt to negotiate the forged paper and the fact that his mental development has been slow, are considerations which make me doubt if he ever had the guilty knowledge necessary to establish his crime."

Anna Murray Acquitted.

TROY, N. Y., March 3.—The trial of Anna Murray, charged with the murder of Theodore Hunter, for whom she was housekeeper and whom it was alleged she poisoned with arsenic about two years ago, was concluded at Elizabethtown, the jury, after about three hours' consideration, rendering a verdict of acquittal. As a motive for the murder it was charged that the woman had forged a will which had left all of Hunter's property to her. This was the second trial, the first having resulted in a disagreement of the jury. The woman is still under indictment on a charge of forging the will.

The Princess Goes to Central Park.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Hawaiian Princess Victoria Kaiulani drove to Central park yesterday with Mrs. and Miss Davies, the wife and daughter of her guardian. The remainder of the day she spent in her room at the Brevoort House. In spite of the melancholy tone of her appeal to the American people, Victoria Kaiulani looked very bright and cheerful—looked, indeed, a bright and happy schoolgirl without a care in the world as she lightly ran down the steps of the Brevoort. House and entered her carriage.

The Official Souvenir Spoon.

NEWARK, N. J., March 3.—The designs for official souvenir spoons submitted by the Alvin Manufacturing company of Irvington, N. J., have been selected for the World's fair. Already 180,000 spoons have been ordered. Over 100 designs were submitted. A conservative estimate is that less than 300,000 spoons will be turned out by the Irvington firm for the fair.

The Chicago Strike Gains.

CHICAGO, March 3.—Two hundred more carriage and wagon makers joined the strikers in demanding a shorter day and increased pay for piece work. J. K. Andrews, manager for Kimball & Co., says there are plenty of idle men in the east, and if the old men do not return by Saturday their places will be filled.

Organize For Better Roads.

BOSTON, March 3.—A meeting of superintendents of streets from various cities and towns in the state was held here and formed the Massachusetts Highway association, having for its object the improvement of the highways of the state.

A County Clerk Short.

ASHLAND, Wis., March 3.—At the county board meeting Supervisor Wilmarth presented evidence showing County Clerk R. B. Fenley to be $16,000 short in his accounts with Ashland county.

The Lehigh Rental Reduced.

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—The rental of the Lehigh Valley railroad under the lease to the Reading is to be reduced from 7 to 5 per cent.

LEGISLATIVE PASSES.

Do They Relieve Railroads From Taxes?

CHARGES OF THE NEW YORK HERALD

Thousands of Dollars Said to Be Due New York State From Corporations Which Have Not Paid Their Just Taxes—The Magnitude of the Pass System.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The Herald today prints the following Albany dispatch: There is not a man to be found in this city, either in official or private life, who does not admit that corporation taxes are not collected with anything like the thoroughness they should be. But it is a curious fact that when you ask a legislator or an officeholder the reason for this he immediately begins to squirm and try to avoid giving an answer. This applies to Republicans as well as Democrats, all of whom seem to be afraid of incurring the displeasure of somebody whom they imagine to be responsible.

Passes Without Limit.

It is a notorious fact that every member of the present legislature, every state officer and every underling about any of the departments is not merely provided with season passes on the railroads, but can obtain trip passes for his friends on application. In former years these trip passes for friends have been furnished without limit, but this winter there is no end of muttering among legislators that the Central Railroad company has actually and as they consider meanly limited them to two trip passes for friends per week.

Would Lighten the Burden.

Is it any wonder that officeholders and legislators at Albany do not care to take any initiative in investigating the tax robberies of a particular corporation, whose short payments amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars annually? If they respond to the cash demands of the machine, say $25,000 a year, and supply another $25,000 in free transportation, why should they not be permitted to save $250,000 of their taxes? True, they are still $200,000 ahead, but what does the machine care for that so long as it has secured its necessary lubrication?

Railway Man Indicted For Murder.

CHICAGO, March 3.—The grand jury indicted Charles D. Law, general superintendent of the Chicago, Pittsburg and Fort Wayne road; Peter Schwartz, a flagman; John Albrecht, a gateman, and Henry W. Rouscup, an engineer. The charge against the men is murder on account of the accident at the Forty-seventh street crossing of the road on Dec. 24, 1892, by which four people were killed. It is claimed that Schwartz and Albrecht were not attending to their business, they having gone into a switch shanty to warm themselves. Rouscup is accused of running at too rapid a rate inside the city and not keeping a proper lookout. The indictment against Mr. Law is based upon the fact that he had general supervision of the running of the trains, and that it was his business to see that his subordinates did not violate the rules.

Ex-Commissioner Peck Meets Defeat.

ALBANY, March 3.—The general term of the third department, in session in this city, hands down a decision which brings the case of Charles F. Peck, ex-labor commissioner of the state, once more before the trial court. The demurrer to the indictments in this case, which was interposed by Mr. Meegan for the defendants, was sustained by Judge Clute in the county court and the case dismissed. An appeal from this decision was taken, and the decision rendered reverses the judgment of the county court and gives a judgment for the people, "with leave to defendants to withdraw demurrer and plead to the merits." The opinions are by Mayham, presiding justice, and Judge Herrick, Judge Putnam writing a dissenting opinion.

National Electricians.

ST. LOUIS, March 3.—At the electrical convention the following officers were elected: President, E. A. Armstrong, Camden, N. J.; first vice president, M. J. Francisco, Rutland, Vt.; second vice president, C. H. Wilmerding, Chicago; executive committee, John A. Seely, New York; E. F. Peck, Brooklyn (re-elected); A. J. Descamp, Philadelphia (to succeed Charles B. Falsen, Jr.); W. C. Morrison, Woodstock, Canada (to succeed M. D. Law); H. J. Smith, New York (to succeed Robert Mack); C. H. Baxter, Pittsburg (to succeed C. L. Abell).

A Draw After Eighty-two Rounds.

SIOUX FALLS, March 3.—The Daly-O'Donnell fight resulted in a draw after 82 rounds had been fought. The contest took place under a tent just across the line in Iowa. It began at 2 o'clock and was not finished until 7 o'clock. Daly had the best of the fight from the start, but his antagonist was game, and Daly found it impossible to knock him out. Neither is greatly punished, though O'Donnell was several times sent to grass.

Run on a Sandusky Bank.

SANDUSKY, O., March 3.—There was a run on the Sandusky Savings bank, about $50,000 being drawn by small depositors. The National bank and business men stood by the threatened bank, and before the bank closed the excitement subsided. The bank is perfectly sound, and no further trouble is anticipated. The late failures of Post, Wickham and others were the primary causes of the panic.

A Young Matron Decamps.

NEWARK, N. J., March 3.—Mrs. Lillie Heslin of Harrison, who is 21 years old and the mother of two children, one 5 years of age, quarreled with her husband because he would not allow her to attend parties and balls. She left home, taking her children and $1,000 which the husband had secured.

A RIOT IN HUNGARY.

Four Persons Killed and Several Wounded by the Gendarmes.

VIENNA, March 3.—A riot, attended by severe fighting and bloodshed, occurred yesterday in the town of Szobocsin, Hungary. The cause of the outbreak was the imposition of new market tolls, which the populace of Szobocsin and of the Hajdnick district generally strongly resented. A multitude of people both of the town of Szobocsin and the adjoining country were gathered, it being a regular market day for the townspeople and peasantry. As the authorities feared trouble, an extra force of gendarmes was stationed at the market places in Szobocsin.

The people gathered in large numbers and began pelting the gendarmes with stones and mud. The latter were unable to resist the mob and retreated to the Szobocsin town hall. There the gendarmes were quickly surrounded, the populace endeavoring to enter the hall in pursuit of the gendarmes. The latter barricaded the building and fired upon the furious multitude. The crowd only grew more enraged and would probably have captured the town hall and killed the gendarmes but for the timely arrival of re-enforcements, which were summoned to the scene. After a long conflict the rioters were dispersed, three of their number having been killed and many seriously injured.

County Clare Stirs the Commons.

LONDON, March 3.—In the house of commons T. W. Russell, Liberal Unionist member for South Tyrone, directed attention to the statement of Justice O'Brien that such lawlessness prevailed in County Clare that there was no security of life or property. Mr. Morley, chief secretary for Ireland, and several Irish members denounced the justice's statement as a misrepresentation of the facts for political purposes. Mr. Balfour, leader of the Unionists, said the government had deliberately shut its eyes to a series of the most dastardly crimes that ever disgraced Ireland. Colonel Saunderson, the champion of the men of Ulster, supported Mr. Balfour and denounced the Irish members as defenders of persistent criminals. He said that they were always in sympathy with murderers. William Redmond, Parnellite leader, challenged Colonel Saunderson, amid Irish cheers and opposition laughter, to repeat these words outside the house. Colonel Saunderson offered to repeat them anywhere.

The Jersey Protest Will Not Avail.

NEWARK, N. J., March 3.—The assemblymen of this county who voted for the race track bills have been asked if they will vote to repeal the laws. Their answers show that they will all stand firm. Assemblyman William Harrigan was asked, "Will you vote for the repeal of the race track bills?" "No, sir," he replied. "Will you vote to give the people a hearing?" was the next question. "Yes, sir. I voted that way already." "Why will you not vote for the repeal?" "Well, I do not propose to be the laughing stock of the state. To deliberately vote now contrary to the way I voted before would indicate that I was either a liar or a fool. I understand the bills that I voted for and do not propose to pose before the public now and virtually confess that I didn't know what I was voting for."

McAuliffe and Mooney Matched.

ST. LOUIS, March 3.—Jack McAuliffe and Mike Mooney met and agreed on a fight to be fought at 133 pounds, give or take two pounds, within eight weeks for $2,500 a side and the largest purse offered.

MOTHER LOVE AND THE MISTAKES IT IS RESPONSIBLE FOR.

The Necessity For Corsets—Women Talk Too Much—Punishing the Little Ones. The Care of the Complexion—The Beauties of Graciousness.

There is often a great deal of unconscious selfishness in love, even love of the highest type, such as mother love. I have heard mothers talk of the sacrifices they had made or were making for their children, as if these children were in some way to blame for being in the world, and so bringing these burdens on the mother. They will talk of what their children "owe" them, as if that word could ever come between mother and child. I have heard much of this same selfishness displayed in another way. Mothers meeting together will talk of the marriage of their children, their daughters especially, in this way: "I have gone through physical pain, constant watching, loss and self sacrifice for them when they were little, they have grown into my very life, they are all I have, and I know that no one else could do for them what I would, and it would be like taking the breath from my body to give them to strangers, and then at that."

Then another mother will say: "You are right, my dear. The only way you can save them suffering and sorrow is to keep them with you. You don't want them to go through all that you have, and you can't be sure what their lot would be." If we believed that this poor life were all; if there were no lessons for the soul to learn, if there were not to grow to glorious heights through the experiences of this life, the patience that love teaches, the strength that comes with motherhood, or the elevating influence of pain even, one might expect mothers to try to keep their girls babies, dependent upon themselves for happiness. But that is not as we read the meaning of life. Be sure that the Father knew what was best for his children when, as the book declares, "he setteth the solitary in families."

Our children are dear to us because of what they have cost us, but would you be willing to forego the rupture of these first days, when that tear just watched the opening intelligence of your baby's face, the mystery of the growth of another soul? It is easier for often for one to bear the greatest agony one's self than to see one they love bear far less pain. There are enough shadows that one's children cannot miss without adding the shadow of our own selfishness. How often the sunshine of love is darkened in this way! It is hard for a mother to see her daughter go away from her sheltering love, but is it not a selfish mother of a selfish daughter, who succeeds in shielding her from the character making experiences of actual womanhood?

You do come across a hardworking man or woman who insists that their son or daughter shall never know what it is to toil and save as they have done, and you may live to see the day when those very young people have a very decided knowledge of what it is to want. And the mother who bears the daughter's troubles generally puts the young woman in a position to bring to end all trouble on herself.—St. Paul Globe.

The Necessity For Corsets.

No matter whether a tight or round waist may be worn, a corset becomes a necessity to procure a handsome fit and to make the gown a comfort to the wearer. No one says that any corset will accomplish this feat, but one fitting properly will.

Now and then we hear a howl arise about the injury done by corsets because some one has discovered how a woman injured herself by lacing, but she may also wear too tight shoes, and for that reason do we begin to preach the doctrine of going bare footed?

Corsets are now made in so many styles and of such a variety of materials that they are suitable for every form and every sex. Therefore it is a great point in to select the proper fit, and that must be left more or less to the clerk selling the corset, but the buyer should know every measurement of her form and give them correctly. Do not say "waist 22 inches" when it is 25, as ladies call for a No. 6 kid glove when they really wear No. 6½.

The corset that never injures the wearer is one that feels perfectly comfortable in every part, is not too stiff to admit of bending the form easily, does not press against the wearer too closely, yet gives a feeling of support when worn, and is not so tight but that a long, easy breath may be taken from the bottom of the abdomen.

Such a corset supports the skirts, enables the dressmaker to fit the waist smoothly and comfortably and gives the wearer perfect freedom of motion, which is a long distance from proving the instrument of torture that some talk and write about. We do not say that all corsets have these effects, but the right corset on the form will, and if the wearer laces herself in spite of having a well fitting corset it is not the manufacturer's, clerk's or dressmaker's fault, but the result of following her own sweet will. And if a woman wishes to distort and injure herself by lacing she can do it with skirt bands and belts and yet not wear a corset.—Dry Goods Economist.

Women Talk Too Much.

Very lovely and very lovable is the sister who has cultivated a disposition angelic enough to see the good and not the evil side of human nature. Who can never with her own failing while she excuses the faults of others. We are told that she is a dull, uninteresting creature, and we find if we take the trouble to look into the matter that this woman refuses to laugh at her neighbor's pet weakness, does not enjoy flitting out right and left in the world at large and is always ready with a plea for unseen and unsuspected reasons which, if they could be revealed, would go a long way toward modifying harsh judgment.

My lovable woman may not be witty. She may indeed be a trifle prosy, but she it is to whom we go when down in the depths and in perfect confidence confide the heart trouble that is shadowing existence and handicapping us in the race of life. Feeling an instinctive trust that our precious secret will not be torn to shreds as soon as our back is turned.

We chatter too much. Women have an idea that this is being entertaining. In the hope of keeping up our reputation for brightness we say outright or slyly insinuate things against this friend and that, which if known would give us an enemy for life.

Be more tolerant. Have patience with personal oddities and seemingly inconsistent actions. How can you know all the difficulties to be encountered and overcome by the people whom you criticise? Yes, we talk too much.—Dorothy Maddox.

Punishing the Little Ones.

"To spare the rod and spoil the child" may be the motto of some stern parents who think that a good whipping is the only mode of punishment that accomplishes any satisfactory results. This rule may work with some natures, but in the majority of cases such a course only incites to rebellion. There are, however, many modes of punishment that make a far more lasting impression than the sting of the hand or a switch, which in reality only lasts a minute. Kindness and gentleness work wonders, yet there are times when even the tenderest mother realizes that she must rebuke the transgressor in such a way that the offense will be remembered long after its actual happening.

A mother, whose success in the training of her little folks is something beautiful to behold, believes in "making the punishment fit the crime" and finds this rule to work far better than measures that have no real bearing on the case. For instance, the untouched little one is not permitted to speak until only correct statements are promised faithfully to be uttered. If a child disarranges the workbasket or litters up the room, it is not sent away after a shaking or a slap, while the mother spends an hour in putting things to rights, but is made to pick up everything and arrange things just as they were before the busy little fingers did their mischievous work.

It seems to us that this mode applied to all the wrongdoings of childhood would leave an impression that could not fail to prove an effectual barrier when next the temptation to repeat the offense presented itself.—Exchange.

The Care of the Complexion.

Since feminine beauty is the topic upon which poets, painters and novelists alike love most to dwell, it is not unnatural that every woman should desire to be beautiful. As to what constitutes beauty no definite rule can be laid down, for each distinct type is most beautiful when viewed in con*trast with other types.* Regularity of features is not beauty, for a little irregularity will sometimes afford a charm which the most perfect face—"faultily faultless, icily regular, splendidly dull"—falls far short of possessing. The most beautiful individuality of character that will otherwise be lacking. It is generally conceded, however, that beauty can be absolutely perfect only when it is found in hand with perfect health, and that an erect carriage, sparkling eyes and a clear complexion possess attractions which are not found in mere faultlessness of features.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the value of the bath as a skin beautifier, and a tension bath taken every week will be found of inalculable benefit. A fact greatly in its favor is that it is less exhausting than the Turkish bath, as the perspiration it induces is moderate and natural. The idea that cold water is beneficial to the skin is a very mistaken one, a cold bath being really harmful to many persons, particularly those who suffer from any kind of heart trouble. A hot bath twice a week and a warm sponge bath every morning should be the rule, and the face and neck should be bathed thoroughly every night with hot water and a little good soap, a flannel wash cloth being used. The face should be dried gently with a soft towel, the rubbing being always in an opposite direction from the wrinkles. Harsh rubbing should be carefully avoided, as it injures the cuticle and induces inflammation and any number of skin disorders.—Goodey's.

The Beauties of Graciousness.

So few very beautiful women consider it worth their while to be gracious. They rely so entirely on their charms of person to attract that they do not put themselves out or exert them-elves to please other than by sheer beauty. This is a great mistake, for though they may rule for a season, by the power that feminine loveliness always exerts their court will soon be narrowed to the very few who are willing to serve out unlooked-for favors to beauties, with no hope of entertainment in return.

The spell of graciousness womanhood, however, lasts so long as life remains, and the charm depends not upon beauty of face or figure, but upon a grace of mind that puts self in the background and endeavors to bring out the best and brightest in all those with whom it comes in contact.

The celebrated women who have been admired for their intellect they were not renowned for their beauty, but rather for their tact. Imagine some of the belles of today listening, with apparent interest (whether feigned or real we cannot say), to the reading of a sad tragedy, or the impassioned rendition of some sonnet written by one of their adorers. They would probably yawn in the face of the aspiring genius and destroy forever his fond illusions.

The woman who can become interested in the hobby of whoever is in her society, or who can make that other feel that his or her words are important and worthy of regard, will be the one to whom her entire circle will swear allegiance.—Philadelphia Times.

The Girls' School In Rome.

The Scuola Professionale, the great school for girls in Rome, which is recognized by the queen and the municipality as one of the most successful institutions in the Eternal City, was founded by a woman—Signora Ribighini. The curriculum includes sewing by hand and by machine, dressmaking, the making of all kinds of fine millinery in gold and silver and silk, stocking weaving, artificial flower making, washing, ironing and cooking. Indeed mending is elevated among the professional arts by the regulation that girls who take the course in mending must take also a course in geometry that they may understand the designs of fabrics. Geometry is also considered an essential in embroidery.

But besides these feminine arts there are courses in moral and civil law, in domestic and commercial mathematics and business forms, including instruction in modern languages. In the dressmaking classes gowns and costumes are made for women and the ladies of the court. The course in artificial flower making begins with drawing and copying from nature, and in the preparation for the moulding of wax the making of point venise and gothic point is mastered. The secrets of ancient tints and colors are discovered by patient experiment, the beauty of old designs, frayed and faded, are reproduced, and lost arts are regained and supplemented with new industries by the 800 pupils and their numerous teachers.—Rome Letter.

Let Women's Ability Be Conceded.

"There is nothing in this world quite as tiresome as fuss," remarked a woman who had been eminently successful in her undertakings that day in her own power fully demonstrated the ability of a woman to do whatever she saw fit to take up, and do it well. "I see so also in the everlasting twaddle about a 'successful woman.' I can't, for the life of me, see why there should be anything phenomenal in the fact of a woman carrying on a successful competition any ordinary branch of business.

"All their lives women have been in the habit of grappling with the most complicated situations, turning to and remedying errors, putting up with all sorts of inconveniences and producing order out of confusion that would have made a man tear his hair in sheer despair, but just now, because she happens to have taken up something that women haven't been in the habit of doing, and because she seems to have done well at it, the papers and the pulpit and the public generally are talking and ah-ing in a manner that is absolutely wearisome to the flesh.

"Why can't these goshers and croakers and peddlers of all sorts of calamities just keep quiet, and when a woman does something that no woman has ever done before take it for granted that she can do not only that, but almost anything else she sets about? It certainly seems to me to go without saying that a woman who can manage a large household ought to be able to do almost anything she which presents itself, and that, too, without exploitation and being forever talked about on account of it."—New York Ledger.

Never Dread Old Age.

They were a company of concerned women before an open fire over 5 o'clock tea, and one of them was saying how she hated to grow old and lose her zest in life and its bringings. Then a fresh faced matron, with a pair of steady, true eyes, spoke out with her native vehemence:

"Nonsense! What do the years bring but greater treasures and greater capacity to enjoy them? Do you suppose I guessed one thing about real happiness in what we called 'youth's happy days?' Why, every year that I have been a wife and mother I have known intensely keener joy; better and better appreciated what life offers me. Every day I value and delight in my friends more and more; every day I take on a wisdom of experience that gives me a sense of power against what may come, and as to the future and old age, why, I never think of it to dread it. I take care of old tomorrow, I say to myself, and what is the future but always only tomorrow? By and by, when I do sit in the chimney corner and knit and watch the children's children play around me, I am sure I shall think how happy and safe am I, and what a beautiful thing life is, particularly the close of it!"—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Wife and Sweetheart.

Every bride knows her power; every wife comes to know her weakness. A good proportion of the heartbreak of every married life is due to the ferment of this knowledge. The poor child whose lover gave up his cigars and his club with such angelic meekness, finds that her husband can smoke like a chimney and leave her alone nights in order to spend the evening with his men friends. She imagines that he cares less for her than he did, which is a mistake in most cases. Seven out of ten men love their wives better than their sweethearts.

It is simply that her presence is not the absorbing excitement that it was when love was new. The chances are that the wife is become a dozen times more necessary to the man than ever the sweetheart could have been. He would feel her death far more keenly, but he does not need to adjure his heart to "sit still" whenever his fancy summons her from home. In short, she is become the bread of existence in place of the elixir. Now, most of us who have sense would prefer to be bread rather than elixir, but there is no question that more fuss is made over the elixir.—Octave Thanet in Ladies' Home Journal.

Women Not Ambitious Enough.

A typewriter employed in the office of a prominent real estate firm in St. Paul has such accurate knowledge of the realty of the city that she is often consulted in preference to her employers. One of the firm said that if she were a man he would be the office boy himself, so great is her business ability; yet she receives only the regular typewriter's salary.

Another woman in the west has for 15 years conducted a large insurance business for the regular agent. He receives the agent's profits, she a meager salary.

Men clerks and stenographers claim that their chief reluctance to women entering these different lines of business is that the women reduce the salaries paid, not because of their numbers, but because they are too easily satisfied with small pay and are not ambitious enough for promotion.—Exchange.

Young Women, Take Heed.

"I am willing always to give up my seat to a woman in the street car," said a man the other day, "but I will not be bulldozed into doing so. The woman who stands in front of me making audible remarks on masculine impoliteness in general and my own actions in particular can stand until doomsday so far as I am concerned, for I relinquish my seat only to a lady, and the person that acts in the manner I have just mentioned is no lady, and therefore is quite able to stand along with the rest of the strong minded individuals in the car."

Women's Natural Field.

Jessie Curtis Shepard, the very best woman pen and ink artist in the world, made the remark a few years ago that there was no field of labor which so truly belonged to women as the artistic profession of pen and ink sketching.

"Women are clever at stitches," said she, "and it seems odd that there are not a larger number of women engaged in it. Many women can draw a face or a figure with much finer and more dainty lines than any man."—New York Advertiser.

Headache Among Children.

Sick headache is very apt to occur in school children from leaning over books, from imperfect digestion, or from too little exercise in the open air, and not infrequently from a combination of these unhygienic conditions. A child who suffers from sick headaches should be promptly relieved from any unwholesome influence.—Youth's Companion.

A dainty little sack for a baby a year old has its top in a band of worked muslin above a plaited yoke, below which there is a straight band of the muslin. This recourses at the cuff of the sleeve but full sleeve. This sack fastens at the back and can be made in cambric, in percale or in wash silk.

An excellent way to restore the brightness of tarnished brass is to dissolve in a saucer of ammonia a little of any of the scouring soaps sold. Apply with a toothbrush and polish with a bit of chamois.

At Lexington, Miss., the postoffice and telegraph office are in charge of a woman. The chief express agent is a woman, and her two assistants are women.

A weary sufferer from rheumatism has found great alleviation in the use of a hammock as a change from bed and lounge. It is a swung low in the room.

Plants in windows should be turned once or twice a week. Sun favors, which is half the beauty of a plant, cannot be attained without this.

Talk hopefully to your children of life and its possibilities. You have no right to depress them because you have suffered.

"A Lovely Time Was Had."

Bill Hucks, the item chaser on the Willer Crisk Gazette,

Was the likeliest hustler that old man Mc-Cray could get.

As a runaway reporter or a writer up of shows Bill never had an equal nor a rival, goodness knows.

So we sent him up a ticket to a party Susie gave,

And he writ a piece about it that was fine, as we'll be bound.

But all I kin remember is, "We hardly need to add,

The guests agreed at leaving that a lovely time was had."

Oh, yes—now, come to think of it, her mar mixed up some cake

And pies and Boston bread and brown stuff Susie helped to make;

And they was pickerlilly, too, and beets and cold slaw and chicken salad, and some sandwiches of ham,

And them Bill said was "viands," which is writin up be owned

"Made a complete feast of good things, and the table fairly groaned,

And when the wee sma' hours were come, we all went home

The guests agreed at leaving that a lovely time was had."

Old Bill has gone from Willer Crick, The Gazette no more

He's now at Susie's party that "a lovely time was had."

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

THE LAST MEETING OF THE YEAR A SHORT ONE.

The First Session in the New Council Chamber — Councilmen Hegeman and Sebring and Mayor Saunders Compliment Each Other.

That the borough Council has a cozy and compact meeting room was remarked by each member of that body as he entered this new room in Spencer's Hall, last evening. It is smaller than the old room in the engine house, and for that reason does not look so barren, as the furniture fills up the space better. The desks of the members are arranged in a half circle, which gives it a better appearance than the old way of placing them along the sides. Another new feature of the room, is, that the mayor is placed on a level with the Councilmen, hitherto he has been above them—about a foot. The mayor, in observing the fact, said "Maybe they are letting me down easy," which may prove true.

As Borough Clerk Brokaw was absent Mr. Hegeman moved that Borough Counsel Reed act as clerk pro tem. The motion prevailed and that gentleman assumed the duties of that office. The reading of the minutes of the last meeting was dispensed with. The following claims were presented:

F. Gleim	$10.00

Mr. Needham, from the special committee appointed to look into the matter of securing a pest house, reported that the committee had met the Plainfield authorities, and that they had a suitable place in view which could be put in proper shape for that purpose at a cost of about $2,500. "The Plainfield Council," he said, "will discuss the matter at its next meeting, and the committee deemed it advisable to await their action. Your committee has met with the Plainfield Board of Health and it was decided that a house for both the city and borough's use would be adequate." The report was received and filed.

Mr. Neal, of the Street Committee, said he thought the ordinance relating to the cleaning of snow and ice from the sidewalks should be amended. At present anyone not cleaning off his sidewalk can have it done by the Street Commissioner at a small cost added to his taxes. He said he favored the imposing of a fine on nonconforming to the borough ordinances, besides the expense of the work.

A report from Collector Spencer, showing taxes collected since the report of Feb. 10, to be $188.19, was read and filed.

The following resolution, offered by Mr. Neal, was unanimously adopted:

Be it Resolved, By the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, that in the retirement of Mr. A. Hegeman, jr., and Mr. C. F. Sebring as honored members of this body, we realize the loss of able, faithful workers, and in behalf of the people of the Borough of North Plainfield, we extend to Mr. Hegeman and Mr. Sebring the assurance of sincere appreciation of the valuable services rendered by them in guarding the interests and welfare of our community.

Mayor Saunders said as he had no vote on the resolution, he wished to state that he was heartily in sympathy with it; and that he had observed during his term of office that the two retiring gentlemen had rendered valuable service not only in borough business but in other public matters as well.

Mr. Sebring thanked the Council for the token of good feeling expressed in the resolution toward him and said he hoped that the same friendly spirit which had always existed between himself and the Council would still prevail.

Mayor Saunders said: "Thank you gentlemen. I could have done nothing without the aid which you have so kindly given me."

The meeting adjourned sine die.

Plaintiff and Defendant Both Fined.

A hearing, in the case of Fry vs. Quash, took place before Judge Codddington this morning. Quash was arrested on complaint of Fry, who, he said, had assaulted him. The plaintiff's only witness finally testified against him. After deliberating over the matter the Judge came to the conclusion that they were both guilty, and fined them each five dollars.

MR. HONEYMAN ACCEPTS

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE IS A MAN OF PRACTICAL IDEAS.

That was the Opinion Expressed by the Many Citizens who Called on Him Yesterday to Urge him to Accept the Nomination.

Prominent Republicans and Democrats have waited on Mr. A. V. D. Honeyman and urged him to accept the Republican nomination for Mayor of the Borough of North Plainfield, assuring ing him of their most hearty support. Never in the history of the borough has such a representative body of men from all sections of the borough waited upon any man and manifested such an earnest desire for him to become a candidate for the mayoralty, as was present at Mr. Honeyman's residence last night. He has not sought the office. The office has sought the man, and the fact that such an unusual desire is manifested to have him accept the nomination indicates that the community feels that it needs such a man for the office—a man whom all recognize as possessed of legal acumen and practical ideas, and the borough will honor itself in honoring him with an election by an overwhelming majority. The following is Mr. Honeyman's letter of acceptance:

Messrs. P. A. Emmons, H. W. Spencer and M. E. Needham, Committee:

GENTLEMEN: Your notification that the Republicans of North Plainfield, at a primary meeting held on Wednesday evening, had nominated me as candidate for the position for Mayor to be voted for at the ensuing election has been thoughtfully and earnestly considered.

My private wishes, as you are aware, are subordinated to the call especially when it is well known, not only that the office has remained vacant without any salary, but that the honor of it usually finds its rank thereafter. I am influenced in this case by the constituents that his own views on leading Borough questions are upright and responsive of the public will. This latter feature, probably, has in other years induced many, whose residence in the Borough and pecuniary business fitness had pointed them out conspicuously as the most available men to hold the office, to decline even suggestions of a nomination to it; and I must frankly say it has made it seriously question whether I am called upon to make the sacrifice necessarily involved in a campaign, which has only been of late disagreeable elements thrust into it.

But I have come to the conclusion, asserted thereto by your kindly personal sentiments and assurances of hearty and earnest support, that the inducements named constitute all the strongest reasons why I, as a citizen, should respond to a nomination which is the spontaneous offering of good men, actuated from right motives, as to a call to duty; and that no man, whose private business does not absolutely preclude his attention to borough affairs, has a right to decline the use of his name, when by so doing he would thereby practically preclude his attention to borough affairs, when by so doing he would thereby practically preclude his attention to borough affairs, when by so doing he would thereby practically preclude his attention to borough affairs

More than half of the street railways of the United States are now operated by electricity.

The government bounty on sugar this year will be $8,000,000, $2,000,000 less than was estimated. That is one case at least where the expenditure did not exceed the estimate.

Every human being is bound by the most solemn obligations to do something to help other people. That we are as well off as we are now is due to the fact that through the ages royal souls have worked for others as well as for themselves.

The curse of corruption money has already begun to work in Italy. Zerbi, a member of the Italian parliament who was charged with receiving $80,000 in bribes from the Banca Romana, is dead. He could not live under the disgrace of being found out.

The London Daily News thinks that if the United States would refuse to annex Hawaii it would escape a serious danger. Yes, but it is a good plan on general principles for the United States to do just what the English newspapers think is not best for her.

France has an annual goodness show at which the French academy awards prizes to the persons who have presented remarkable examples of self sacrifice and devotion to other people, sometimes, in fact, to people whom it would have been better not to help at all, but who ought to have been left to take the consequence of their own misdoing. However, the academy does not include in that very closely. Prize prize winners are almost without exception women, and the odd part about it is that the men do not appear to be at all jealous of them and never strive to win the prizes themselves. They seem quite willing that the female sex should monopolize all the goodness there is. Funny, isn't it?

John Burns, the Labor Leader.

The Idler is an odd magazine to contain a sketch of one of the busiest men living, yet in that British monthly Mr Blaythwait describes a visit to the home of John Burns, the labor leader. Burns has helped to organize more than 100 trade unions and been connected with "something like 40 strikes." He lives in a picturesque, rose embowered cottage at Battersea on the Thames, a suburb of London. If he is as Mr. Blaythwait represents him, then John Burns, the labor leader, is one of the greatest as well as most fascinating personalities of his time.

His work as a member of the London county council requires irksome clerical tasks, attention to statistics and business details. "It is work that I hate," said Burns. "I was made for a fighter; to lead a forlorn hope; to face a battalion of police. However, my greatest victory in life has been the conquest of myself." The old story once more and ever. He who can entirely control himself can control all mankind and prevail against the powers of darkness. Burns' policy in the council and everywhere else is "a standing protest against imperial buccaneracy in foreign and domestic affairs." He wants to give to the British colonies the civilization that Greece and *Rome gave to theirs, without the mili*tarism that accompanied it.

Burns is a born enthusiast. He loves art and poetry and all things beautiful. His ideal government is "a republic wherein throne and aristocracy, church and class, will have forever melted into nothingness." No wonder John Burns can move a nation. Read how he gained his knowledge:

> These books were bought with scores of wealth. Mallock's "Is Life Worth Living?" represents a new issue in my mind as to whether it seems no use to a pair of boots, and the book won the day. Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations" I dug up in the midst of an African river. My gracious, what a revelation that book was to me! There is Carlyle, and there is Booth's "Labor and Life of the People."

A great string of visitors poured in while Mr. Blaythwait sat by. He seems scarcely able to find words to express his admiration of how the labor member of the London county council managed them all. "It was a striking and impressive sight, the perfect confidence and love of all these people, the cheery sympathetic manner; the keen insight of the judge advocate general himself." But the wonderful, magnetic personality of the man is greatest of all:

> He is at home everywhere and with every one. I have seen him in the palace of the stately Anglo-Roman cardinal, with whom he was so thoroughly at ease as he was on the following day with a number of young artists in a studio in Bohemia. He instructed the cardinal, he listened to him, he deferred to him, he differed from him, he laughingly triumphed over him, and on the following day he engaged them all. "It was a striking and impressive sight, the perfect confidence and love of all these people, the cheery sympathetic manner; the keen insight of the judge advocate general himself." But the wonderful, magnetic personality of the man is greatest of all:

six inches thick cover the ceiling. From the dome in the center is suspended an immense ship of state 30 feet long and with three masts. Immense portraits in oil of the president and vice president form a conspicuous feature of the decorations in their position against the upper galleries. Arc lights will shine dazzlingly from the top balcony, and over 2,000 electric lights will bloss along the sides of the ballroom.

Mrs. Cleveland's Gown.

Everybody wishes to know what Mrs. Cleveland has decided to wear, but like every loyal citizen of this republic he knows that if Mrs. Cleveland has decided to robe herself in heavy moire with clinging skirt—why, a heavy moire with clinging skirt is the thing to wear.

Such it is of heavy white moire, made with clinging skirt and a tight fitting bodice, cut low and edged with an exquisite pattern of silver passementerie. The puffed sleeves reach to the elbow, where they will be met by long gloves. At the juncture of sleeve and glove the passementerie trimming appears again, and is repeated in the outlined vest of the bodice and on the skirt. Nothing could be simpler and yet more elegant than this costume. Mrs. Cleveland's preference for white is no secret known that it will surprise no one to see her wearing her favorite color as she reigns supreme tonight.

The Fireworks in the Evening.

The illumination and fireworks will be on a more extensive scale than on any previous inauguration night. The Capitol, the treasury building and the whole length of Pennsylvania avenue from the Peace monument to Twenty-third street will be illuminated with electric suns. This display will last for half an hour.

The illumination will be followed by a fireworks display in the monument grounds. Among the set pieces will be portraits and statues. As an example there is to be an equestrian statue of fire of Washington, similar to the one in Washington circle, and another brilliant picture will be a facsimile of the Lafayette statue in the square which bears his name. There will be portraits of Cleveland and Harrison, Stevenson and Morton. Above the Cleveland medallion will be emblazoned the famous utterance, "A public office is a public trust."

Among the other interesting fire pictures will be an allegorical one of Columbia. There will be no end of rockets, roman candles and the like shot off, and after the national colors have been unfurled in flame the display will end with a "good night" done by electric lights. The illuminations are in charge of Robert Brune, the pyrotechnist of St. Louis.

The Tammany Tiger.

Tammany Hall is very much in evidence today. The big chiefs of New York have been leader and more profuse than ever in their claims of loyalty to the new administration. Hill Democrats, Tammany Democrats and every other kind of Democrats have agreed to tell everybody they met that, offices or no offices, they will do their level best to help President Cleveland to have a most notable and brilliant administration.

At midnight last night a crowd of at least 100 of the Tigers were gathered in front of one of the big hotels watching half a dozen little darkies in the jaws and scramble for pennies. One of the boys would pat while the others danced un'l somebody tossed a few pennies or nickels into the group. Then would follow a wild scramble for the coins, to the great amusement of the crowd. This performance was kept up for more than an hour.

The Brave Wear Modest Violets.

The street fakirs have reaped a harvest selling roosters and the little striped tigers that were so common in New York about election time. It is lonely enough, however, these emblems of victory are not bought by the Tammany men, who appear to prefer modest bunches of violets in their buttonholes. The Tammany men are keeping quiet, and there has not been the first sign of boisterousness or intoxication among them. In fact their behavior has caused comment among those who expected them to paint the town red. But for all that they are having a good time and made a grand showing in the parade.

An Interrupted Serenade.

The president-elect spent yesterday afternoon in his apartments, where he and Mrs. Cleveland received a number of visitors, mostly personal friends. In the evening they dined with President Harrison at the White House. The hour set for the dinner was 7:30 o'clock, but Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland were delayed in their departure and did not leave the Arlington until five minutes after that hour. At 7:30 not more than 10 people were gathered about the carriage entrance to the Arlington, drawn there by a suspicion that the president-elect and his wife would appear. A few minutes later the Kings County Democratic association, with Congressman Cheney and ex-Congressman Archie Bliss conspicuous in the lead of the column, came along the broad plaza in front of the hotel, the band rendering "The Bowery" with vigor.

The purpose of the association was to serenade the wives of a number of its members and incidentally the president-elect. It so happened that just as the association and the band came to a halt little Ruth Cleveland managed to pull up the curtain of one of the windows in the Cleveland apartments and, perching on its sill, pressed her nose against the pane in an endeavor to see the band. The members of the Kings County association and the crowd of fully 1,000 persons who had gathered about them saw the child and set up a cheer. The leader of the band, correctly surmising that Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland had left their rooms and were about to appear, influenced in this belief perhaps by the appearance of an elegant equipage at the entrance way, quickly changed the air to "Hail to the Chief," and to this familiar rendition the president-elect and Mrs. Cleveland came out of the doorway, with Private Secretary Thurber close at hand. The carriage whisked away in an instant, the cheers growing louder as it passed through the crowd, and Mr. Cleveland doffed his hat in recognition of the demonstration.

Presidents who have been re-elected have invariably in their second terms made more decided the characteristics of the first. Of course this is not applicable to Mr. Lincoln, murdered in the second month of his second term, and, he is the only president elected twice who did not serve his eight years. General Jackson and General Grant developed their most striking personal points in their second terms. Washington's grandeur manifested with years and Jefferson was tiresomified by age.

The Vice President Sworn In.

In the senate chamber General Stevenson was sworn in as vice president. The senators took the oath of office, and the organization and adjournment of the new senate immediately followed.

Harrison Saying Goodby.

The last day of the outgoing executive is always a busy and fatiguing one, and President Harrison's experience yesterday but served to emphasize the truth of this statement. At an earlier hour even than usual the president was at his desk going over the bills ready for his examination and approval. He was subjected, however, to constant interruptions until a late hour in the afternoon, and that he was able to make any progress at all in his work proved his unusual powers of application. Before the hour for opening the house to the public the president received a number of callers, chiefly senators and representatives who were interested in the measures on his desk awaiting his signature. A few of these, however, called merely to say goodby.

Sergeant-at-arms Valentine of the senate, accompanied by Senators Teller, McPherson and Ransom, the committee of arrangements for the inauguration, also called to perfect the last details of the programme. Indiana people who are in office, to the number of half a dozen or so, called to bid the president farewell, and this was one of the hardest experiences of the day.

After the exchange of calls with Mr. Cleveland and his brief but touching leavetaking of his cabinet, the president received the members of the diplomatic corps, who called in a body to say farewell. Nearly every member of the corps was present.

Autograph Fiends Ever Present.

In the intervals between these semipublic functions the president was called upon to furnish his autograph to numerous seekers. In the corridor outside waited a woman interested in behalf of an unfortunate prisoner whose application for pardon was pending. The president was unable to inform her that as the case was not a capital one, with a sentence to be executed before 12 o'clock, he could not possibly find time to consider it.

After lunch the crowd thinned out, and the president was left largely to himself. At 3 o'clock he bade adieu to Major Halford, who then left the house to take the train for New York. This was quite a trial to both of them. Neither is much given to manifesting any emotion, but they are possessed of sufficient sensibility that they were stirred up to their depths by the severance of relations which had existed many years and which during the past four years had been as intimate as those between brothers.

The little folks, Benjamin and Mary McKee, in charge of their governess, made the rounds of the house before the hour of closing, saying goodby to the clerks and employees and expressing their regret over the coming separation quite prettily.

In the afternoon President Harrison received and accepted the resignations of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Gear and Solicitor of the Treasury Hepburn. These officials are members-elect of the Fifty-third congress and had to sever their relations with the department.

Last Hours of Congress.

The senate gave an illustration of the ease and celerity with which it can transact public business. Before it had been more than three hours in session it had discussed, voted on and agreed to conference reports on four of the general appropriation bills. Three were the legislative, the postoffice and the agricultural and naval bills. Back of them and still in conference were three other appropriation bills—the sundry civil, the Indian and the deficiency. The senate also took from the calendar and passed all the house bills that were objected to and disposed of various other odds and ends of legislation.

The session of the house which expired at 12 today was an unusually noisy one. The galleries were crowded by sightseers, and although as a whole the assemblage was an orderly one the individual whispers aggregated a volume of conversation which several times interfered with public business.

There was also great disorder on the floor. Representatives were exchanging their last greetings and wishing each other a safe journey to their respective homes. New members were being introduced by their defeated predecessors. Good humor and good feeling were manifested everywhere.

The contest which attracted the attention of the house was that which occurred over the senate amendments to the sundry civil bill pending to the World's fair. The amendments were disagreed to, and the bill was returned to the conference. The conference reports on the naval, agricultural and postoffice appropriation bills were concurred in.

The Closing Confirmations.

The senate, in executive session, confirmed the nomination of Thurlow Weed of California to be minister and consul general to Roumania, Servia and Greece, and the following promotions in the navy: Commander Merrill Miller to be a captain, Lieutenant Commander Samuel Holden to be a commander and Lieutenant R. R. Ingersoll to be a lieutenant commander.

NEW IMMIGRATION LAW.

A Restrictive Measure Just Signed.

POPULAR WITH BOTH THE PARTIES.

Not Prohibitive In Any Sense, but Calculated to Give It a Healthy Index of Foreigners, Barring Paupers and Criminals—One of Harrison's Last Acts.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Harrison last night signed the restricted immigration bill. The immigration law provides that masters of vessels and surgeons of vessels shall make affidavit before the United States consul at the sailing ports that the emigrants are eligible to admission to this country. The emigrant must state the full name, full age and sex, whether married or single, the calling or occupation, whether able to read or write, the nationality, the last residence, the passport for landing in the United States, the final destination, if any, beyond the seaport of landing; whether having a ticket through to such final destination, whether the immigrant has paid his own passage or whether it has been paid by other persons or by any corporation, society, municipality or government; whether in possession of money, and if so whether upward of $30, and how much if $30 or less; whether going to join a relative, and if so what relative and his name and address; whether ever before in the United States, and if so when and where.

Whether Pauper or Convict.

It must further be stated whether ever in prison or almshouse or supported by charity; whether a polygamist, whether under contract (express or implied) to perform labor in the United States, and what is the immigrant's condition of health, mentally and physically, and whether deformed or crippled, and if so from what cause.

Another clause is a section of the bill relating to the inspection of immigrants at the ports of arrival in this country. Any person who may not seem to be clearly entitled to admission shall be detained for a special inquiry to be conducted by not less than four officials acting as inspectors, and to be designated by the secretary of the treasury and the superintendent of immigration. The favorable report of three of these inspectors is required to pass the detained person. Any one of the examining inspectors can appeal from the decision of his associates to the superintendent of immigration, and this official's action shall be subject to review by the secretary of the treasury.

Canadians Censure Goldwin Smith.

TORONTO, March 4.—A largely attended monthly meeting of St. George's society adopted the following resolution: "It has been brought to the attention of this society that Goldwin Smith, one of its life members, has openly proclaimed himself in favor of severing Canada from the rest of the British empire and has also accepted the office of honorary president of an association having for its object the active promotion of the annexation of Canada with the United States. This society desires emphatically to place on record its strong disapprobation of any such movement, and while it expresses the extreme regret that the society should contain in its ranks a member who is striving for an object which would cause irreparable injury to the Dominion and would entail a loss to the motherland of the most important part of her empire and would deprive Canadians of their birthright as British subjects."

Cook Fights In a Church Steeple.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 4.—Considerable excitement was caused by Independence Day celebration here when it became known that the steeple of one of the leading churches had been utilized as a cock pit while the pastor was holding services in the auditorium below. It is said that a number of cocking mains have been held there. The handlers of the chickens entered the building ostensibly for the purpose of participating in the worship, but instead of going to the auditorium they would steal into the belfry.

Secretary Gresham Leaves Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Judge Gresham said goodby to his friends in the government building yesterday. He made a tour of all the offices and shook hands with the various officials. THE CURIOSITY SHOP

THE MODERN NECKTIE.

Its Evolution From the Ruff and the Lace Neckcloth.

To trace the origin of the necktie we must go back to the times of the English Stuarts. Down to the early part of the 17th century the ruff, which had grown to an enormous size, combined the offices of a neckcloth as well as collar. It was not until the close of the reign of Charles II that neckcloths, or cravats, were first worn in England and were doubtless welcomed as a change from the stiff ruff. They were usually composed of rich brussels or flanders lace, tied in a knot under the chin, and the ends allowed to hang down square. Still later they were worn much longer, the ends being passed through the buttonholes of the waistcoat. The lace neckcloth was succeeded by the small muslin cravat, not unlike those used by clergymen, and these were very generally worn by gentlemen during the reign of William III. The lace neckcloth again became fashionable in Queen Anne's time, but was finally abandoned about 1735. This was followed by a black silk cravat, which fashion ordained to be worn round the neck and tied in a large bow in the front. A few years later white cambric stocks, the buckled behind were introduced, and these were succeeded about 1789 by the muslin cravat, which was more comfortable to the wearer as well as graceful in appearance. The muslin cravat was passed twice round the neck, then tied in a capacious bow in front, in which at that time it was the fashion to bury the chin.

NECKTIES OF THE PAST.

It was about this period that stiff linen collars first became generally worn, and the ruffle disappeared as a part of ordinary dress. We now come to the early part of the present century, when design and style in costume became still plainer. The cravat now assumed a more modified form and was worn in various styles, always passed twice around the huge collar and tied in a bow or some fanciful knot in the front, according to the taste of the wearer. Until about 1820 cravats were made very wide in the center and tapered off toward the ends. Still later they were made narrow, often crossed in the front and secured by a breast-pin of large dimensions, a greater variety of patterns and materials also being introduced in their manufacture. Thirty years ago stocks and cravats commenced to disappear, and scarfs made up into various styles and shapes began to take their place, and they have gradually assumed smaller proportions until we arrive at the neat productions of our own day. At the present time neckties of English manufacture command the best prices and are sought after in Paris, America and almost every country in the world, being looked upon as the correct thing by those who would be thought well dressed.

The French Dickens.

Alphonse Daudet, the French Dickens, as he is sometimes termed, is one of the most striking figures in the world of Paris. His fine head is enveloped in flowing locks of jet black hair, which fall thickly on his shoulders, and the lower part of the face, the pallor of which is in striking contrast to his lustrous eyes, is likewise covered with luxuriant mustaches and beard—in short, an incarnation of the poet of romance. With all this outward display of Bohemianism, he has been happily "ranged" these many years, and he finds in Mme. Daudet a constant and valued helpmate.

Daudet was born at Nimes in 1840, tried schoolteaching for a year, and then, sick of the work, made his way to Paris, where he arrived with a capital of 40 francs and a bundle of poems. For these he was in time fortunate enough to find a publisher. "Les Amoureuses," however, did not foreshadow his fame, and it was not till he left poetry for fiction that he became known.

The American Eagle.

It is the great white headed eagle, the most stately of his tribe, which has been chosen by the American people for their national emblem. He is indeed a kingly bird. In size he is immense, measuring, when fully grown, more than three feet from beak to tip of tail, and in spread of wing upward of seven feet. His body is covered with feathers of dark brown, glossed with a coppery tint. The head is white, as is the tail, which extends beyond the folded wings. The beak is dusky brown and the claws bluish black. The feet are golden yellow, and the scant tough and warty, suited for holding slippery objects. The popular name of bald or bald-headed eagle, by which this magnificent bird is known, is pronounced by a writer in Popular Science News, who gives the foregoing description, to be as absurd as it is erroneous, for the head and neck of the bird are both thickly covered with a beautiful white plumage.

What Is It a Name?

Ironwood has no more iron in its composition than other wood. It is a tree about 35 feet in height and is sometimes called hornbeam.

The heliotrope is no rose, but a species of the ageratilla family of fragrant flowers.

Dogwood is a small tree and was not named for any of the canine family. It is common to all parts of the United States and is sometimes called boxwood. Its botanical name is Cornus Florida.

Pompey's pillar has no historical connection with Pompey, the celebrated Roman; Cleopatra's needle was not erected by the Egyptian queen of that name, nor is her honor.

Whalebone is not bone at all; neither does it possess a single property of bone. It is the horny laminated plate in the mouth of the white whale.—Exchange.

CHUNN OF CHINA.

A Canton Merchant Who Will Attract Attention at the World's Fair.

One of the very prominent men at the Chicago World's fair will be Mr. Chunn of Canton, very nearly or quite the richest man in that empire. When the Chinese government, angered at the act excluding its subjects from the United States, finally refused to take any part, Mr. Chunn called on Consul Charles Seymour at Canton, and volunteered to make the Chinese exhibit himself. A cable was at once sent to have the space reserved, and Mr. Chunn, with very little help from other merchants, has organized a very creditable display.

MR. CHUNN.

The Chinese millionaire is actuated by interest as well as patriotism, for he has built up a considerable trade with the western nations and hopes to greatly extend it by a display of what China has to sell. He travels a great deal and in princely style. His face is well known in the large mercantile establishments of Paris, where he has established profitable connections, and he now hopes to do as well in the United States.

A Splendid Display For the Fair.

The emperor of Germany has consented to send to the World's fair what will be one of the most remarkable and attractive features to be seen at Chicago next year. It will consist of a collection of presents received by his grandfather, the Emperor William; his father, the Emperor Frederick, and himself from their fellow sovereigns in Europe as well as from the people of Germany. The collection will be intrusted to the care of the Latin-American department, but the conditions under which it will be exhibited have not yet been announced. The presents consist of jewels and other personal ornaments, silver plate, decorations and an infinite variety of other articles. The collection is worth millions of dollars.

To Aid Catholic Educational Exhibits.

The pope's letter to Bishop Spalding has been printed in nine languages on a sheet of fine paper 16 by 22 inches. The letter in full is in the center and is a facsimile of the letter as it came from Rome. This is surrounded by translations in English, Bohemian, French, German, Irish, Italian, Polish and Spanish, arranged in alphabetical order. A copy of this valuable polyglot publication will be mailed to all who, in response to the invitation of the archbishop's recently published letter, contribute $5 in aid of the Catholic educational exhibit.

Cold Storage at the Fair.

The Cold Storage or Ice pavilion, as it is called, at the Chicago World's fair grounds is quite an oddity in external observatories, and a central one 191 feet high, which is to be utilized as the smoke-stack and to do duty as an architectural ornament. The builders claim it will be the most artistic smokestack ever erected. At least 80 tons of ice will be manufactured daily during the fair, and the machinery is so arranged that a large crowd of visitors can witness the whole process. Similarly all the models of cold storage will be shown. Architecturally the building is of the Romanesque order.

Freaks For the Fair.

When the Siamese twins were first exhibited in America, the impression was created that no other such case of a double life was known, but this was an error. Such cases have been at various times, and at least two are now before the public. The colored girls known as Christine-Milly are well known, and now two Bohemian girls, known as Rosa-Josepha, are making their way slowly toward America to appear at the World's fair. Unlike the others, they have but one abdomen, though physically perfect above. They are six 15 years old, the offspring of a peasant couple named Ralsek, and are fine featured and delicately built, with black hair and the ordinary Bohemian cast of countenance. They have been on exhibition at times since the age of 6. Of course the separation of such a pair (if pair it may be called) is impossible, and both must die at the same time.

ROSA-JOSEPHA.

COOKIES MADE EASY.

The Minimum Expenditure of Time, Money and Labor.

Here is what a writer in the New York Christian Union calls a perfect recipe for making cookies, requiring no unnecessary expenditure of money, time or labor, no board, no rolling pin, no cutter: Put into the mixing bowl 2 cups of sugar (1 of granulated and 1 of C), with a good half cupful of butter, 2 heaping teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, less than half a teaspoonful of cloves and the half of a small nutmeg. Cream these together as carefully as if for pound cake and then add 1 well beaten egg. Beat down in well and pour in half a coffee cupful of milk. Stir well.

Next sift in the flour, beginning with 1 pint, and 2 slightly heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add more flour very carefully as you beat. If you get the least bit too much flour, the cakes will be fit only to send to the missionaries. You will have to experiment here, as no sure rule can be given. You will soon learn just the right degree of stickiness, for sticky the dough must be. Never mind if your hands do get all stuck up. Wash them off and go at it again. When you get it so that it can be handled, rub your hands with flour and take with a silver spoon a very small piece of the dough and shape it into a ball between your palms. Now toss it into a half cup of granulated sugar and shake briskly till the ball is well coated, then place on the well greased baking sheet.

The little balls must be placed some distance apart, as they spread themselves out into full fledged cookies in the baking. The oven must be moderate, and the cakes must be placed on the floor of it first, or they will puff up into cones instead of flattening out into cookies. Don't, I implore, bake them too much. They need be only a very pale brown. Then take them out and pack away at once, between napkins, in a jar or cake box.

Run a thin, broad knife under them to loosen them from the pan, and they will not break.

They ought to come from the oven spicy and sparkling and cracked all over, like macaroons.

A Fashionable Trimming.

Green velvet is fashionably trimming black ladies' cloth gowns.

A Practical Glove Mender.

As gloves have the faculty of calling upon the aid of thread and needle more frequently than any other article of woman's apparel, a practical glove mender is a necessity.

To make one, buy a small silver ring. At different parts of this ring sew pieces of narrow ribbon. Let them hang down a short distance from the ring. To the first one attach a pair of silver topped scissors, to the next any odd shaped silk needle book; tie on the third piece of ribbon a silver finger, which you can have made at any jewelry store. This is to put on the finger of the glove while mending. Sew to the last piece of ribbon a braided strand of different colored silks. Have the silver ring hang from two broad pieces of ribbon fastened with a bow at the top.

The Tailor Made Girl.

The tailor made girl naturally prefers severely simple house gowns. She has no patience with a loose negligee wrapper.

SEVERELY SIMPLE.

A suggestion for such a house gown is shown in the illustration given herewith. There is a plain ball shaped skirt of cheviot brown silk warp cashmere, made with a very full back. Around the bottom is a band of persian trimming, caught here and there with crescents in gold and black braid. The trimming is in scarlet and dull green. The waist is made plain, with a straight collar of the persian trimming. There is a deep belt of the same trimming fastened in front with a dull gold horseshoe buckle.

The silk warp cashmere is used for the sleeves, which are puffed from the shoulder to the elbow. The puff is finished with a band of the persian trimming.

Clear the Way.

There's a change about to come.
Clear the way!
In the world of fashiondom.
Go they say.
Skirts have been worn close and flat,
But we'll have no more of that—
Oh, it's terrible they're at.
Clear the way!

Build the street cars good and wide.
Clear the way!
Even then the men outside
Have to stay.
And they'll make a dreadful fuss
Just because within a bus
There is only room for us.
Clear the way!

Married men with wives to dress
(Bills to pay)
Are the pictures of distress,
For they say
That it certainly will take
Just as much again to make
Dresses of the proper shape.
Clear the way!

Ruffles go from hem to waist.
Clear the way!
Just to suit the wearer's taste
For display.
Merchants wear a foolish grin
O'er the custom they will win
When the extensive comes in.
Clear the way!

It Was the Clock.

The hands of the clock pointed to the hour of 11.

Being night, it was therefore 11 p. m.

It was the hour when graveyards and other things yawn.

All except the young man calling on the girl.

In fact or in fiction, gay or severe, the young man never yawns.

If he did, the humorist might reverse the personal of his stories.

As before stated, the hour was 11 p. m. The young man was looking, as was the girl, but the graveyard wasn't.

The young man, however, was.

The young man had been talking, talking, talking.

All at once, by some strange power, his attention was directed to the clock.

"Heaven my soul," he exclaimed. "It is 12 o'clock."

"Yes," the girl assented stagely.

Then he took out his watch.

"Why," he said, "that clock is an hour fast."

She looked at him silently, persuasively appealingly, eloquently.

"Then I go, do you want you?" she asked tremulously, and a minute later he was softly closing the front door behind him.—Detroit Free Press.

"FOUNTAINS OF CRIME."

ARE WHAT OUR LEGISLATURES WILL BECOME.

"If the Present State of Things is Allowed to Exist," Said the Rev. Dr. Yerkes in His Sermon Yesterday Morning.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes, in the First Baptist church, yesterday morning, preached an eloquent sermon, scoring the legislators for passing the infamous race track bills. He took for his text "Abhor that which is evil, and cleave to that which is good." He said:

"Between good and evil there is an irrepressible conflict. They do not run reasonable directions but constantly in opposite directions but constantly in front each other in deadly strife for mastery, and woeful the day when evil triumphs over good.

"We are charged by the apostle to abhor evil; not only to shun it, but to detest it, to loathe it. And while it is accordant to the precepts of our religion to love all men, there are occasions when if you would strike at evil you must strike at the evil-doers, and such occasions occur when men ally themselves with public measures which are at war with the well-being of society. Such men are to be held up to the scorn of righteous public opinion and visited with its just condemnation. Sometimes, by the brutal darting of conscienceless men, evil arrays itself against the welfare of the people by methods which give it a tremendous added power for the destruction of good. This happens when wicked men combine together and organize the energies of the princes of darkness to establish iniquity by law. Then the authority of government becomes the protector of vice, that justice which is the defence of honest men is supplanted by injustice, and the halls of our legislature become the refuge of scoundrels, and law, which is the protector of virtue and innocence, becomes the shield and cover for desperate villainy.

"That is the very state of things with which we are threatened by the passage of these 'Race Track Bills.' The intent of their originators is to make gambling public and lawful, so that blacklegs may ply their vocation without restraint or fear in defiance of the public sentiment of the people. The form of gambling which these bills propose to legalize is held to be criminal in every State of the Union. It has been driven out of every country of Europe, and the only places so far as we know, where it lawfully exists, is on that miserable little principality of Monaco.

"What think ye! Shall this foul and corrupting thing be planted on the soil of New Jersey? If so, then our commonwealth will stand alone in her eminence of infamy to be pointed at by the whole civilized world as the only commonwealth that fosters crime, corrupts her youth and pollutes the fountains of justice according to law.

"Let such legislation pass unheeded, and let the prowlers who go about the streets, by day and by night—thieves, burglars, pick-pockets—the destroyers of virtue and innocence, assassins and murderers; go up to our Legislature and demand laws for their protection while they despoil and destroy our inalienable right to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness, proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence and guaranteed us by our Constitution. Let our Legislatures become the fountains of crime and encourage the sanctuary of criminals! Can such things ever come to pass? We answer, no! But it seems to me if we would make that No effective this whole business of the enemies of society must be brought to, an end now. In the age of Chivalry the gallant knights rode forth to defend the right against the lawlessness of their times. The youthful candidate for knighthood, by most solemn vows, came to tread the path of honor, to defend the weak and innocent and to avenge the wrongs of the injured. The age of Chivalry has passed away and government, by righteous law righteously executed, assumes to protect and defend the interest of the people. But shall it come to pass in this 19th Century, in this age of the righteous reign of law, and on the soil of New Jersey, made sacred by the blood of her heroes and patriots, that just laws shall be annulled and iniquity be established by law, in order that the people may be made the victims of a horde of brutal gamblers and criminals? Never! Though the age of Knight-errantry is passed, there are yet left true Knights, panoplied in the armour of righteousness, armed with battle axe and lance, ready, to go forth to defend the weak and innocent and to avenge the injured against the wrong doers. Before them these free booters of the track and their minions must bite the dust."

Dr. Richards' Sermon Against the Race Track Law.

Dr. Richards' preached a strong sermon yesterday, against the race track legislation. He used as an illustration the bible story of Haman and Mordecai. The Jews celebrated the Feast of Purim last week. Dr. Richards said it was a coincidence that the law was passed on the same day the Jews celebrated. Haman thought to hang Mordecai and the Jews. Instead he was hung on the gallows he had erected for them.

The moral was plain.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city has received a challenge from St. Joseph's Society, Jersey City, to bowl a series of three games. It will likely be accepted.

$500 IN FIVE YEARS.

IS WHAT THE NON-SECRET ENDOWMENT ORDER PROMISED.

But What the Members Will Get Now That the Order is in the Hands of a Receiver is Quite Another Matter.

Another "get-rich-quick" concern has gone into the hands of a receiver. This time it is the Non-Secret Endowment Order, a branch of which was instituted here about two years ago. It was to pay $500 in five years, and about fifty Plainfielders joined it. The assessments were to be $1.50 each, and not more than $2 a year were to be issued.

THE NEWS has repeatedly sounded the key note of warning against these short time orders. A few years ago one of them was exposed through these columns, at the time publishing a letter from Secretary of State Kelsey denouncing them as swindles.

The local branch of the order held a meeting Saturday night, at which it was decided to continue the organization a while longer, until the supreme officers, who are located at Worcester, Mass., in which State the most of these concerns originated, were heard from. The Non Secret Endowment Order is about the last of these short time orders to give up. The supreme officers claim that the insurance companies sent them to the wall, but that they will be able to pay each member the amount of his assessment.

Trying to Catch the Republicans Napping.

The Borough Democrats tried to spring a trap on the Republicans yesterday. While the good people of the borough were observing the day becomingly, the Democrats were holding a caucus in a back-room of a store on Somerset street plotting to catch the Republicans napping in the supposed failure to name a candidate for the office of Councilman. The present encumbent was appointed by Council, and it was supposed, by the Republicans that the new law did not effect him.

The Democrats, however, thought otherwise, and appointed a committee of two to shadow the clerk all day yesterday and not file the certificate of the candidate chosen by the Democrats until within a few minutes of twelve o'clock last night, as twelve o'clock last night the time would expire for filing the necessary certificate, and if the Republicans should deem it prudent to get up in their night shirts and make a nomination after that hour it would then be too late.

Every precaution was taken not to excite the least suspicion of the Republicans, but somehow they found out what was up, and quietly counted against any chance of being left, and every one of them amused themselves smiling at the "shadows" shadowing the clerk who was of course quite innocent of it.

This is the first our wily Democratic friends knew that they have got left.

MR. CRAWFORD READS.

THE NOVELIST DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINS PLAINFIELDERS.

A Large Audience Occupies Every Seat in Seminary Hall—The Next Entertainment in the Course to be Given at Miss Tweedy's.

A large and appreciative audience, occupying every seat in Seminary Hall, assembled on Saturday evening to listen to novelist Francis Marion Crawford read selections from his own works. Mr. Crawford is a man of distinguished presence, being more than six feet in height and of muscular frame. In his college days he was conspicuous as an athlete. Mr. Crawford was born in Rome, Italy, of American parentage, and while yet a boy came to this country with his widowed mother. Here he received his education and training. While yet in the twenties he entered journalism, visiting many of the countries of Europe in that capacity. It is said that he even stopped as far as India. Twenty novels have come from his prolific pen. His home is at Sorrento, Italy, where he lives with his wife and children.

The charm which pervades his writings is plainly visible in the man, and his hearty courtesy and winning manners at once gained him the favor of his audience. The secret of his marked success, both as a writer and a reader, lies largely in the fact that he is a man of personal magnetism and of wide sympathies. His reading of his own works is an interpretation in the true sense of the word; for he adds to them new light and meaning.

He is, at times, dramatic and almost impassioned, as in his rendering of the love scene, from the "Witch of Prague," where the dwarf makes love to the heroine. This was perhaps the finest bit of serious work of the evening. Mr. Crawford is an easy and delightful talker, and charmed his hearers with a story told of Jasper, "A Bit of Folk-Lore from the Shores of Calabria." In this he showed decided comic power, and kept his audience laughing during the whole tale.

The last selection read, a beautiful passage from "The Children of the King," was full of poetic thought, and has been so universally admired that the author always includes it in his programme.

Mr. Crawford expressed himself as being very much pleased with his audience, and with Plainfield generally.

Miss Kenyon, who is one of the patronesses of the course of which this reading forms a part, generously offered her hall for the occasion, thus deserving once again, as so many times before, the gratitude of our citizens for her public spirit.

The next and last entertainment in Mrs. Hall's course will be given on next Friday evening, March 10th, at the residence of Miss Tweedy. Mrs. Hall will read a paper entitled "Byron and the Heroes of the Greek Revolution."

He died a few minutes later.

It was largely attended by the friends and relatives of the deceased, and the large auditorium was filled to its utmost capacity. The Rev. Father Smyth. As a rule the Catholics do not eulogize the character or habits of the dead, but yesterday Father Smyth said he could not help speaking of the fitting character of the departed. The floral offerings were handsome, consisting of a broken column from the C. B. R. employes, a harp, bearing the word "Legion," from the Catholic Benevolent Legion; a pillow, on which were the letters "C. L. M. L.," from the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum; and a pillow from the house of worship. The bearers were: Messrs. J. J. Keney, T. A. McCarthy, J. Gallagher, A. Keney, E. Harding and J. Hibbits.

THE OBNOXIOUS LAWS.

NEW JERSEY CITIZENS' LEAGUE TO DEMAND THEIR REPEAL.

Gov. Werts Says the People are Bitterly Opposed to Such Legislation, Yet there is not Much Chance to Secure a Repeal.

The outcome of the agitation over the race track bills in the Legislature this week is anticipated with anxiety by the people generally, who are represented by the New Jersey Citizens' League, and by the racing men as well. The Assembly chamber has in former years been made the scene of more than one exciting struggle between factions of the House, but the excitement this week promises to surpass all precedent unless the racing men bend to the storm that is brewing, or show the reserve strength which many believe is there. If the Citizens' League finds that it has votes enough to pass the racing repealers, it will struggle as desperately to keep the Legislature in session until they go through as the racing men may to break the session up. How far-reaching this will be is expressed that Gov. Werts will be appealed to until an extra session. The Governor could scarcely refuse to bring the members back, knowing the determination of the moral element to wipe the obnoxious laws out.

Aware of all their resources to defeat more force and to accomplish their ends, the racing men may after all submit to the demand for a public hearing, and in other ways give the people their play. This may be their perseverance, for they are saying now whether the racing bills are repealed or not the licenses obtained for Guttenburg, Gloucester, and Monmouth Park will hold good. The licenses have been granted for five years by the local authorities of the places in which these tracks are located. It is held that as the law specifies a certain limit of time for the holding of the licenses they cannot be abrogated by a repeal of the statutes. It is further held that in the case of granting a liquor license for one year by an Excise Board or other authority, that if the law is repealed under which such license is granted the license holds good until the term fixed expires.

A prominent State official, who is well versed in matters of this kind supports this opinion, and says there is no doubt of its being upheld by the courts. Should this be found true, the gambling set, and with Plainfield generally, for only a limited period, as an act would certainly be passed next Winter, if not in extra session sooner, declaring bookmaking and pool selling illegal in the State, and imposing severe penalties for its violation. The Citizens' League will not relax its efforts, however, to put the repealers through.

From South Jersey comes the information that the men who voted to pass the bills over the Governor's veto, have had a decided unpleasant experience at their homes.

Governor Werts says about the action of the Legislature on the race track laws:

"Yes, New Jersey is very much stirred up over it, and with good cause. The people are bitterly opposed to such legislation, yet I do not think there is much chance to secure a repeal at this session of the Legislature. The job was put up too neatly for that, and the men who are interested in poolrooms and who have horses running all the year round are in a position to control matters at Trenton. However, they may not be so influential by the time another Legislature is convened."

NO RACING IN UNION COUNTY.

Mayor Rankin Says He Will not Sign a License if the Council Pass It.

A mass meeting was held at Library Hall, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon, to protest against the race track bills and to urge the citizens to appeal to the Governor not to refuse to license any track at Elizabeth. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. F. M. McAllister, Mayor John G. Rankin, Judge Joseph Cross, W. H. Corbin and Judge P. H. Gilhooley. Mayor Rankin announced that he would not sign a license even if the Council passed it, to allow the track to open.

A meeting was also held at the Opera House at the same time. Addresses were made by R. V. Lindabury, counsel for the Citizens' League of the State; the Rev. O. Hagenbuch, F. Bergen, Charles E. Forbes, W. H. Corbin, A. B. Bigelow, the Rev. John Edgecomb, the Rev. W. Judd and the Rev. George F. Green.

May be Repealed.

Assemblyman Lansing, of Mercer, has come out boldly and manfully against the race track bills, and will now do all he can to pass the repealers.

Senator Terhune is said to be ready to reverse his vote on the race track question.

Senator Miller has heard the voice of universal indignation in his county and is wavering.

Assemblyman Utter, of Morris county, is reported to have just persuaded to vote for the repealers.

The facts lend color to the hope that the vicious legislation of last week may yet be repealed.

They certainly inspire every man and every woman in the State who loves morality and hates gambling, to work as never before with the members of the Legislature, and if possible influence them to make the grievous wrong of last week.—Elizabeth Journal.

WILL HE FIGHT THE COMMITTEE?

Rector Jennings Makes Announcements for Easter Sunday.

The Rev. J. B. Jennings, the rector of Grace Protestant Episcopal church, West-field, refused to be removed from his charge by either Bishop Scarborough or the standing committee of the diocese. He held service yesterday morning and preached to a congregation composed of the usual number of men, two small boys and the boy who pumps the organ.

Mr. Jennings made announcement of the special services to be held in the church on Easter Sunday.

The Bishop after ward ordered Jennings to vacate the parish, but he refused, and appealed to the standing committee of the diocese, which sustained the Bishop. According to the latest order Jennings must vacate the parish March 15. The vestrymen and parishioners who have withdrawn from the church are convinced that Jennings means to fight the standing committee. Their belief is strengthened by the fact of his making announcements for Easter Sunday.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Lake Superior, frozen 50 miles out from shore, is a spectacle even for this ice-bound winter.

You may save all the gay entertainments and festivities in Lent that you want if only the object of them is to help the church and the poor. So fashionable society has decided.

We are glad to observe that Washington's farewell address was read to the United States senate on the 22d day of February. But it is a wonder some senator did not rise and move an amendment.

Hon. J. Sterling Morton, Mr. Cleveland's secretary of agriculture, is a widower with four sons, but no daughters. If he should marry Washington the next time he comes out a widower still, he is a brave man.

The recommendation has been made that ex-presidents be senators of the United States at large for life. Why should they? They already get nearly as much honor and a good deal more fun out of being presidents of humane, scientific and social societies. One of our presidents showed his true greatness by accepting the office of justice of the peace among his neighbors after his term in the White House was ended.

What Wrong?

Poor pretty little Princess Kaiulani of Hawaii, heir expectant to Liliuokalani's throne, does not take it at all kindly that she is to be stripped of her glory and her expectations and be just a rich young woman in private life, as the United States government and the Hawaiian commissioners propose she shall be. She asks somewhat pathetically, "Have I done anything wrong that this wrong should be done to me?"

Yes, Kaiulani, you have done wrong, and we can tell you what it is. Even you innocent and sweet as you are, have been guilty of a crime. Your crime is that you believe in the divine right of kings and queens. You believe that by mere virtue of condescending to be born you have the right to rule over a nation, and that its people must maintain you in royal state and utter idleness, giving you every luxury while they toil daily for bread for you and themselves. You would not give them any equivalent for all you cost them.

No king or queen or royal family ever does give such equivalent. They do not govern, for it is only the representatives of the people who have sense enough to govern. Every king, queen, prince or princess who is thrown out of a job marks one step more in the progress of civilization. That old idea of the hereditary right of kings to rule must be exploded quickly, and the sooner it is done the better for the race. It is an idea that has no right to lurk anywhere in this age of the world. The really royal souls walk in the path set by their own deeds, and none other has any right to a throne.

The Irish Home Rule Bill.

The home rule bill, which is the crowning glory of Gladstone's life, will give to Ireland, if it is passed, a government apparently almost half way between our American state government and that of a British colony. The body for local self government created by this bill will not be called a parliament, but a legislature, the upper house of which will be called a legislative council and the lower one a legislative assembly. They will do most things that our state legislatures do put in the place of a governor will be the lord lieutenant of Ireland, appointed by the imperial government. He, assisted by a cabinet called a privy council will constitute the executive department. The lord lieutenant has a veto power over bills passed by the legislature, and the queen has a veto power over both the lord lieutenant and the legislature, though this royal power would be seldom used. The queen of England would not dare use the veto power as even the governor of a state in our Union frequently does.

The Irish will still be represented in the British parliament, but the members of the house of lords or commons will have no vote on questions that concern only Great Britain or any part thereof or on bills for raising money anywhere out of Ireland. A member of the Irish legislative council holds office eight years. The term of the legislative assembly is five years. Ireland must bear the expenses of her own government, and her share of the duties, customs and public revenues will be set aside as a fund for her use. Out of this which is called the Irish consolidation fund must be paid both the loans and allowances made under the land purchase act at present existing. This act in one under which public money may be loaned to small farmers desiring to buy the land they till. After three years the Irish government itself may take charge of the sale and letting of land in Ireland.

The "royal Irish constabulary and metropolitan police," placed by the British government in Ireland and around her coast to preserve order and prevent smuggling, will gradually be reduced and finally abolished as the Irish home government requires it by officers of its own. The lord lieutenant may hold office six years and a man may be appointed lord lieutenant no matter what his religious belief is.

SUNDAY AT THE CAPITAL

Washington Did Not Wear a Churchgoing Aspect.

THE INAUGURAL BALL A SUCCESS.

Mr. Cleveland Takes a Rest, but Mr. Private Secretary Gets in a Day's Work. Afterwards of a Great Day in the History of the Democracy.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—There was but little outward indication yesterday of the quiet and sacredness which are considered attributes of the orthodox Sabbath. The enthusiasm aroused by the quadrennial political revolution peculiar only to the American republic continued with some trifling diminution throughout the night. None of the visitors went home except those who were impelled to that step by necessity. When the serious work of inducting a new administration into office was completed, the restraint of discipline was removed, and the hosts of good natured citizens who had bodily captured the federal capital proceeded to consult their personal preferences as to ways and means of enjoyment. Civilians and those who wore the uniforms of militia, guards, sinners and artillerists emphasized their exuberance in every tumultuous way imaginable.

PARIES DRIVE SUNDAY BARGAINS.

The desire to yell and cheer seemed instinctive, and this was later supplemented by a longing to throw torches and worry the police. Up to a late hour many clubs, preceded by bands, paraded the streets, serenaded their friends and found comfort in the noise and confusion they created.

In the early morning hours which preceded daylight the celebration became more individualized but scarcely less demonstrative. The roll of drums and blare of trumpets were heard less frequently. The hotel corridors were filled all night with men who strolled about in an aimless way, tired out but unwilling to admit the fact. Pennsylvania avenue was crowded until morning with men who seemed to believe that such enjoyment could not again be found until four more years should elapse.

It was a matter for amazement how the men who had stood waiting for several hours previous to the parade, and who then had a long and tedious tramp in the teeth of an icy wind, could still manifest sufficient enthusiasm to cover many miles in marching after nightfall. But a majority of them appeared fresh and contented, while the variety of forms in which they expressed their feelings was practically limit.

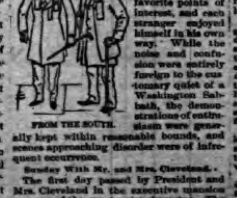
Tammany In Exuberant Spirits.

When the Pullman band struck up "On the Bowery," the New York men, including many Tammanyites, seized each other in the middle and commenced the gyrations of the "Boom de ay" dance. When the same band played the canalboat song from "Sidney," the Brooklyn men chanted the refrain. The friends of a dignified gentleman attached to the staff of Fitzhugh Lee had to hold him by main force to prevent him from descending a break-down when "Dixie" and "Old Virginny" were played.

A favorite form of amusement was "cracking the whip," and it was an odd sight to see such solid and dignified citizens as belong to the Duckworth club of Cincinnati trying to hurl into bellicose space the unfortunates who, being at the wrong end of the line, had to serve as "crackers."

In marked contradistinction to the daybreak of inauguration morning, the Sabbath dawn was almost irreproachable. The violent wind had moderated to a gentle breeze. The gloomy clouds had vanished, revealing an ideal winter sky. The sun condescendingly smiled, and the frigid temperature, unusual in Washington at this season, slowly yielded to this favorable conjunction of the elements. The brightness of the day seemed to infuse new life into the hosts of visitors, who appeared determined that such an opportunity for sightseeing and pleasure should not be neglected.

Throughout the day the streets were thronged with pedestrians, and every thoroughfare was enlivened with more or less brilliant equipages. Clubs and bands paraded, groups of guardsmen promenaded, many visited the various favorite points of interest, and each stranger enjoyed himself in his own way. While the noise and confusion were entirely absent due to the customary quiet of a Washington Sabbath, the demonstrations of enthusiasm were generally kept within reasonable bounds, and scenes approaching disorder were of infrequent occurrence.



FROM THE SOUTH.

Sunday With Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland.

The first day passed by President and Mrs. Cleveland in the executive mansion was one of the most quiet character. The public entrance remained closed, although constantly besieged by visitors whose curiosity prompted them to seek admittance. The various walks through the grounds adjoining the White House were consequently thronged with strangers, who quietly listened to the cadence of the church bells.

The only formal calls at the executive mansion was Judge Gresham, who will today become the premier of the new administration. The judge called shortly after midday, paid his respects to the president and remained to luncheon. Soon afterward he returned to his apartments at the Arlington. Later in the afternoon the president and Mrs. Cleveland took a drive in the suburbs, carefully avoiding the crowded thoroughfares so as to prevent any possibility of a demonstration.

The cabinet ministers of the new executive [illegible] yesterday. Hoke Smith left a card on each member of the cabinet of his friends, Colonel Lamont received a number of kind friendly calls, few of which were personal, and Private Secretary Thurber was at his desk in the White House nearly all Sunday, and to-day Mr. Gardner took a favorable look in the formidable mass of mail that is banked up on the various tables in the working end of the building. The only caller to-day to see the president-elect was ex-Senator Pasco. The ex-senator's card bore the name of James H. Cullen, the cashier of Hon. M. Dickinson's law firm in Detroit. When Mr. Cullen came down stairs he told a reporter that Mr. Thurber was head over ears in work, but that after he had thoroughly acquired the lay of the land in his new post the private secretary intended to observe the Sabbath to keep it holy. Mr. Cleveland did not answer any letters.

The Inaugural Ball.

By long custom the inaugural ball has grown to be almost as much a part of the ceremonies of inauguration day as the inauguration address. It has been but the intermissions in the series of inaugural balls to commemorate the accession of a newly elected president to the chief magistracy. That covers a period of 64 years.

Cleveland's first inauguration and Harrison's election were each celebrated by [illegible] balls, but neither of those festivals could compare in splendor to the one held on Saturday night. Much of the spectacular success of the affair was doubtless due to the modern improvements in the use of electricity, of which full advantage was taken.

A Symphony of Sound and Sight.

The scene of flowers, the combined radiance of myriads of electric globes, the dainty blending of green and gold and white, sparkling fountains of tinted water, perfect harmony of orchestral music, and, what was to many the most interesting feature of all, toilets of surpassing taste and magnificence, all combined to make a spectacle that will be long carried in the minds of those who saw it.

The programme for the concert, promenade and dancing was as follows:

Grand inaugural march, "The Great Republic." Fanciulli; band and orchestra, written for the occasion and dedicated to Mr. Cleveland).

Overture—"Le Prophete." Lanz.

Grand selection, "The Merchant of Venice." Pinsuti.

Pastrale comique, "Trip to Mars," Fanciulli.

Waltz, "Christmas Eve," Johns.

Lancers, "Dancing Master," De Koven.

Polka, "May Blossom," Lamothe.

Promenade, "Unarine," Canns.

Lancers, "Isle of Champagne." Faret.

Waltz, "Pulse Beat," Waldteufel.

Schottische, "Country Band," Smith.

Promenade, "Divertissement Espagnol," Desgrau.

Lancers, "International," Moses.

Promenade, "La Mascotte." De Lontz.

Waltz, "Bachelor's Favorite," Williams.

Promenade, "New York," Fanciulli.

York, "Old Comrades' Reunion," Simons.

Lancers, "Robin Hood." De Koven.

Polka, "High School Cadet March," Sousa.

The Presidential Party Arrives.

It was at 10 minutes to 9 o'clock when Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland arrived at the pension office building. The president led the way on the arm of General Schofield, while Mrs. Cleveland leaned upon the arm of Justice Gray of the supreme court. It is estimated that 12,000 people attended the affair, but only a small proportion of those took part in the dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland left the ballroom shortly before 10:30 o'clock.

Upon their departure the band struck up "Home, Sweet Home," and the assemblage quietly dispersed. The whole proceedings were marked by a staid and stately decorum more in accordance with an ancient minuet than of a modern ball.

What the Ladies Wore.

The gown worn by Mrs. Cleveland was of heavy white satin, empire front and train, the latter being long and richly trimmed with point lace and embroidered with crystal beads. The embroidery ran up in rows, about 12 inches from the bottom of the skirt, which was pointed in the back. The empire front was outlined with the lace and the crystal embroidery. The sleeves were large puffs made of satin, dotted with the beads and had stiff satin bows at the shoulders. A heavy fall of the lace completed the corsage. The gown was covers in style, but very rich and graceful.

Mrs. Stevenson's gown was a combination of cream and heliotrope moire antique and velvet. The left and corsage were of cream moire. About the bottom of the skirt was a narrow arrangement of the heliotrope velvet. The corsage was decollete, with a full berthe of very old duchesse lace outlined by a garland of violets. Mrs. Stevenson's gloves and fan matched the velvet, and she wore no jewels.

Chicago Tribune Enterprise.

Washington was treated to a newspaper surprise Sunday morning. Among other newspapers that were offered by the swarms of newsboys to eager buyers was the Chicago Tribune's inauguration edition—a bright, attractive, complete journal of eight pages, containing the admirable account of the inauguration that was supplied to the Tribune by its augmented staff of Washington correspondents.

Mr. Dana's Editorial.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The Sun's editorial upon the inaugural address is as follows:

The inaugural address of Mr. Cleveland begins by declaring that there are "certain conditions and tendencies among our people which seem to menace the integrity of their homes and their government." Of these, the first is "the exposure of a sound and stable currency to [illegible]," and the peril is of a character that "should arouse to activity the most enlightened statesmanship." His promises to exercise every executive power "demanded by duty to maintain our national credit or avert financial disaster."

Another danger that confronts us and is "not less serious" in doctrine is "the prevalence of a popular disposition to expect from the operations of the government special and direct benefits."

Of the virtue of the voters, in mere, has confessedly the maintenance of protection for protection's sake, and it also demands the destruction of the veteran pension system. Mr. Cleveland's This destruction requires "a refusal of bounties and subsidies to aid in stimulating or encouraging any branch of business," and "reckless pension expenditures," with the limit of public appropriations to the public necessity.

He holds also that appointments to office, "instead of being the rewards of partisan activity," should be bestowed "as a testimonial of fitness" and "public employment" should furnish "honest employment to the best men who will accept it." Finally, he declares that "the civil service must be improved and its existing policy and principles must be thoroughly carried out."

Such is the platform on which Mr. Cleveland proposes to govern the country. Whether it should be left to "revision" or to "abrogation" and "repeal" is a question that "time and experience" and on the success that "the coming congress may prove to possess the wisdom and patriotism" to [illegible] the "remedies for the people." He adds that "patiently for the redemption of the pledges which my party has made" he will "work with the complete confidence of the trust the people have reposed in me," and that he will "endeavor to deserve the approval of my fellow citizens." He will "work with conscious fidelity to the constitution," and "earnestly for the restoration of the good will and confidence of the people which my party has lost." Finally, he will "invoke the support of all patriotic citizens, nor is there any need which furnishes a clew to the success of the administration on that question."

Comments of the London Press.

LONDON, March 6.—In reference to the president's address The Daily Graphic says: "Mr. Cleveland's confession of faith is by no means clear, but the general impression is full of good sense and is expressed in very happy language. It is a most admirable sermon in political self reliance."

The Morning Post says: "The address breathes throughout a spirit of moderation and firmness. The striking feature of it is the contrast between the vulgar adulation of wealth that characterizes the appearance of the Republicans and this fair promise to attempt vigorously to restore the finances and improve the general tone of public life."

The Standard regards Mr. Cleveland's utterances as tantamount to a declaration that the tariff, although reduced, will be so levied as to be essentially protective, saying: "Although Mr. Cleveland begins well. The vast prosperity of the States is such that, even with the worst rulers, it would be difficult long to retard the progress of the people."

The Daily Telegraph says: "Mr. Cleveland's brave words would have been more welcome to our minds if our own reforms if he had not already been in power and failed to do much to root out the plagues of American life. Tammany and kindred associations laugh at any efforts to purify politics."

The Daily Chronicle says: "It is long since an American president has had the courage to speak such words to his countrymen, who are accustomed to being addressed from Washington with sparseling flattery. Mr. Cleveland speaks of the silver and tariff questions with the greatest clearness, and shows those who thought that, now the election was over, the ex Brandlished about the roots of McKinleyism would be laid aside, how completely they were mistaken. The spirit of the whole address is a welcome new departure in American politics."

The Times says: "The address boldly grapples with the most crying evils in American politics in language and vehemence of decision, which is all the more important because Mr. Cleveland is not flashing for votes. He declares war against McKinleyism and the attendant corruptions. We however do not expect any doctrinaire application of the abstract principles of free trade."

HARRISON RETURNS TO INDIANA.

The Ex-President Stops at Pittsburg and Washington.

PITTSBURG, March 6.—The ex-president stopped in Pittsburg en route from Washington to Indianapolis to spend a quiet, restful week in the Hoosier capital. The special train bearing General Harrison and his party arrive about 2 a. m.

The ex-president positively announced that the ex-president and party would attend the morning service, fully 2,500 people occupied the space calculated to accommodate 1,500, while hundreds were unable even to reach the outside vestibules.

The ex-president says that his engagement with the Leland Stanford university in California will engage only about two month of his time each year. Next winter he will devote his time to writing a book, which will relate specially to a number of the public utterances given while his administration that the public have not fully understood.

To Be Welcomed at Indianapolis.

The evening reception will occur at the state house between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock. Short addresses of welcome will be delivered on the part of the state by Governor Matthews and on behalf of the citizens by the Hon. C. W. Fairbanks, to which General Harrison will respond. After these exercises General Harrison and Mrs. McKee, assisted by Governor and Mrs. Matthews and Mayor and Mrs. Sullivan, will receive in the rotunda.

The Wife Gave Her Blessing.

NEWARK, N. J., March 6.—Monroe Wheeler, who lived at and conducted the Rose Park hotel, a well known summer resort on the north side of this city, and eloped with Kitty McBride, a rosy cheeked Irish girl who had been employed at the house but a few weeks. Seven and a half years ago Wheeler married Miss Ida Ward, the heiress of one of the largest estates in the county. Her parents were opposed to the match, but the girl listened to her lover and ran away with him just as her parents were about to start for Europe with her. Mrs. Wheeler was greatly surprised several days ago when her husband said that he was tired of living a double life and that he loved Kitty McBride, the servant. Mrs. Wheeler sent for Kitty, who tearfully announced that she intended to elope with Mr. Wheeler. The wife dismissed the couple with her blessing, and in a few hours Wheeler had gone with the tearful Kitty.

A NEW LICENSE SYSTEM

Recommended by Labor Commissioner Carroll Wright.

THE ACTS OF THE LAST CONGRESS.

It Passes the Billion Dollar Limit, as Has Its Predecessor—Only Two Little Items of the McKinley Bill Have Their Wings Clipped—Financial Problems Remains.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The commissioner of labor, Hon. Carroll D. Wright, transmitted to the president his fifth special report, dealing with the origin and practical operation of the so called Gothenburg system of regulating and restricting the liquor traffic of Norway and Sweden.

Briefly stated, the Gothenburg system is the granting of a monopoly of licenses in any given locality to a commercial company. These companies enjoy the monopoly to an amount equal in Sweden to 222 quarts and in Norway to 43 quarts disposed at one time. These companies control and will call for relief. Many of the sale as shareholders, as a rule, many of the official business or professional men of the locality. The companies receive the monopoly in consideration of handing over all profits derived from the traffic above 6 per cent interest on paid up capital stock.

How It Works.

Under existing law in both Norway and Sweden local option of the country districts is encouraged, so that, as a matter of fact, prohibition prevails in most of such localities in both kingdoms.

As regards the towns, out of 90 in Sweden 17 have adopted the Gothenburg system, while 13 continue to dispose of licenses at auction, and in 3 prohibition prevails. In Norway 21 towns may say all—have adopted the company system, and in the country districts only 27 licenses to sell spirits prevail. In the country districts of Sweden there are 188 of such licenses in operation.

It is said by experts that the system is the best means ever yet devised for the control of the liquor traffic, and that the principle of licenses is admitted at all, and few who understand its ch racter and have studied its operation will be bold enough to deny it.

Senate In Special Session.

The senate of the Fifty-third congress assembled in special session today at noon. Usually these special sessions are perfunctory and formal, the business being confined to the reception of nominations from the president, beginning with the cabinet nominations and winding up when the places within the gift of the chief executive which are of the first grade of importance are made. But because of the peculiar condition of affairs, so far as the composition of the senate itself is concerned, with the doubtful standing of the senators who hold appointments from the governors of their states instead of credentials of election by the legislatures, and further because of the announced intention of Senator Stewart of Nevada to precipitate a silver discussion by the introduction of a resolution of inquiry directed to the new secretary of the treasury, it may be that this great body will assume a degree of importance and excite such popular interest as has never been witnessed in such cases.

The Acts of Congress.

The silver and tariff questions, the anti-option bill and the reduction of appropriations were the leading topics of consideration by the Fifty-second congress, and secondary only in importance to these matters were measures relating to the World's fair, equipment of railroads with automatic car couplers, national quarantine and immigration, Behring sea and Hawaiian annexation.

Nothing of an affirmative nature, except to prevent two items in the McKinley bill taking effect, was actually accomplished so far as respects silver, the tariff or anti-option, the session taken on each of these questions in one branch of congress being negatived by the action or nonaction of the other.

The result of the agitation of the necessity for a retrenchment of expenditures is not apparent in any considerable change in the aggregate appropriations carried by the national supply bills. The condition of the public treasury, however, though it did not result in the Fifty-second congress getting below the $1,000,000,000 limit, undoubtedly influenced legislation to a considerable extent.

In tariff revision two bills became laws containing block tin on the free list and fine linen at 35 per cent ad valorem.

Under the McKinley bill large duties were to take effect on these items in the near future.

A SALVATION LASS MARRIES.

Court Martialed and Dismissed In Disgrace For the Act.

FORT DODGE, Kan., March 6.—Captain Wilson of the local branch of the Salvation Army has been court martialed and dismissed in disgrace from the army for marrying against the advice of her superior officer. Captain Wilson is an extremely pretty girl and had always been one of the most active and efficient officers of the army. Some time ago Tom Eslinger, a young man who was not an army member, began paying her attentions. He joined the army, and Captain Wilson promised to marry him. Nearly all the local army members objected to the marriage, claiming that their captain was disgracing herself away on a worthless young man. Finally the young people were married by the Baptist minister. Captain Wilson was promptly shorn of her shoulder straps and dismissed from the army.

Firetugs Infest Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 6.—Four more incendiary fires have occurred since Saturday evening, and business men and the police are greatly excited. Last night the fire was in the cellar of the Hotel Richardson House. The fire was started in a cupboard in the end of the main hallway. The cupboard doors were charred considerably, but no great damage was done. Officers found a quantity of burned paper and hay in the cupboard.

Is Paderewski to Wed?

NEW YORK, March 6.—The report is current that Paderewski has fallen in love; that his affection was reciprocated and that his engagement to be married would be announced soon. The prospective bride is said to be Dunham, a rich young woman of New York.

Goddard Not Satisfied With Defeat.

NEW ORLEANS, March 6.—Joe Goddard has deposited $200 for another fight with Ed Smith, to take place at some other town than New Orleans, as he objects to this city. Meaning that Reform Duffy's decision were against him.

THE SOUTHERN CYCLONE.

Aid Asked For the Sufferers Who Are Penniless.

ATLANTA, March 6.—The reports from the center of the cyclonic disturbance of Friday night prove that the great destruction caused will call for relief. Many of the cyclone sufferers are in a destitute condition, having been rendered homeless and penniless by the wind, with not a vestige of clothing except the garments they had on their backs. They were exposed to the biting cold. Starvation stares some of them in the face. A meeting held in Greenville appeals for assistance, giving out the statement that "the facts are brief but terrible." The town is now absent of medication. Many of her elegant homes as well as her humble cottages are destroyed, and numbers of families are destitute, penniless and homeless. Four of her churches and her beautiful college have been leveled to the dust.

In Troupe county the cyclone swept away nearly all the farm houses, scattering all—have their supplies. A man who returned today from the storm swept regions says: "We followed the track of the monster eight miles and noted nothing but complete devastation and destruction. It was terrible to witness the sufferings as we went along. People here and there, white and black, were gathering up their bedding and cooking utensils and what provisions could be found scattered over the hills. So complete was the destruction that it is stated that there was not enough dry cloth in Piedmont to bind the wounds of the suffering. Many were left without the clothes they went to bed in. Everything was blown away and drenched in the pouring rain."

Twenty persons were probably killed and the number of injured is great. At Greenville the greatest damage was done. Of the 200 houses of the town, not over 50 remain intact. Great suffering is reported from there. The center of the town is completely demolished.

ALL POWER TO MGR. SATOLLI.

No Appeal From the Papal Delegate's Decisions.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The pope's communication establishing the office of papal delegate in America gives Mgr. Satolli all power to settle the affairs of the Catholic church in the new world. After referring to the fact that for grave reasons the churches of the United States demand special care and provision, the holy father continues as follows:

"Therefore, venerable brother, holding you in very special affection, we, by our apostolic authority and by virtue of these present letters, do elect, make and constitute you to be apostolic delegate in the United States of America, at the same time reserving to ourself and of this holy see.

"We grant you all and singular the powers necessary and expedient for the discharge of the office of such delegation. We command all whom it concerns to recognize in you as apostolic delegate the supreme power of the delegating pontiff. We command that they give you aid, concurrence and obedience in all things and that they receive with reverence your salutary admonitions and orders. Whatever sentence or penalty you shall declare or inflict duly against those who oppose your authority we will ratify, and with the authority given us by the Lord will cause to be observed inviolably until condign satisfaction be made, notwithstanding constitutions and apostolic ordinances or any other to the contrary."

Priests Defy Mgr. Satolli.

SWEDESBORO, N. J., March 6.—Rev. William Treacy and his brother, the deposed priests, created a scene in church when Rev. Father Leahy, who was sent here by Bishop O'Farrell to take charge of the parish, attempted to read the bishop's letter to the parishioners. Rev. William Treacy, accompanied by an officer, strode dramatically out upon the altar and loudly commanded Father Leahy not to read the letter. Father Leahy saw that the priests and the officer were in earnest and quietly withdrew. The Treacys are in possession of the rectory here and openly defy the authority of Mgr. Satolli and Bishop O'Farrell. They say Rome alone can control them.

A BRITISH LANDSLIDE.

A Town Slides Toward the Sea, Destroying Its Buildings.

LONDON, March 6.—The people of Sandgate, county of Kent, were aroused by the rocking of houses and loud rumblings underground. Walls split, ceilings dropped, foundations sank and roofs fell. As the inhabitants fled to the streets they found large rents in the ground and were almost overcome by noxious vapors. Everybody supposed that the town was being shaken by an earthquake, and as the rumbling continued hundreds fled in a panic to the nearest town. It was found that the ground on which Sandgate stands had sunk several feet, and that a less subsidence had extended throughout the surrounding district, affecting in all about a square mile. The gas mains had been broken, and the connection with them to burn the fluid interfered so that supplies of both gas and water had been stopped.

The disaster was caused by a landslide. The town is built on a comparatively low cliff close to the sea. The waves are believed to have undermined the cliff, which then settled and slipped toward the water, carrying with it the town. Two hundred houses were destroyed.

Hazing With Possible Serious Results.

HARTFORD, March 6.—J. C. Underwood and R. G. Pitcher, students at Trinity college, were hazed with such rigor that serious consequences are likely to result to them and their persecutors. They were dragged out of bed and compelled to climb down in there in a pouch hazel full of ice and snow and then imitate rowing a boat. They were further soaked with cold water by wet towels, which they were compelled to throw at each other.

A GOLD CURRENCY BASIS

Our Monetary Affairs Are Marveled At.

EVERYTHING MUST BE POSSIBLE.

An Austrian Banker Discourses Upon Our Silver System and Says It Only Benefits Mine Owners and Cannot Last—Austria's Gold Standard.

NEW YORK, March 6.—"Austria will have a new currency on a gold basis beginning Jan. 1 next year, and the knowledge of the change of affairs has already had a wonderfully favorable effect on the financial condition of the country. I cannot understand why the United States continues to purchase silver for the sole benefit of the owners of silver mines. If any such financial policy which the United States has so long maintained were kept up half as long by any other country, that country would be ruined."

So said Arnold Weisenburger, the Austrian financier. Mr. Weisenburger is connected with the Privileged Imperial and Royal bank of the provinces of Austria and is going to C longo to establish a branch of the bank for the accommodation of Austrian exhibitors and Austrian visitors during the World's Columbian exposition.

"Everything must be possible in America when the government can purchase so much silver and at the same time maintain its credit. It is a mystery to me how it is done, but it is done just the same.

The Government Acting Unwisely.

"But it cannot last long, and the United States is acting most unwisely in permitting its gold to leave the country. Of course Austria has no complaints to make, because in this country we find the easiest market in which to get gold. The Privileged and Imperial Royal bank alone has secured $10,000,000 of America's gold exports.

"Austria's credit has been increased to a remarkable extent by establishing its currency on a gold basis. There are no bimetallists in Europe to speak of, and the conference at Brussels will not amount to anything. The gold craze here will have a great effect in changing the attitude of some of the delegates when the monetary conference meets again in July, but the result will probably be the voting down of or satisfactory will be accomplished by the delegates. The United States, in order to maintain its credit, will have to put a stop to its silver purchases and at the same time put a stop to large exports of gold."

DR. TALMAGE'S TABERNACLE.

The Eminent Divine Says, "We Must Have More Help or Stop."

BROOKLYN, March 6.—The Rev. Dr. Talmage on Sunday referred to the church troubles as follows: "The story in a nutshell is that years ago we built a large church. The next year we enlarged it at almost the expense of a new church, and just as we were getting it paid for it burned down. Then we built another large church, and just as we were getting it paid for the lightning put an end to it. We then built this church, which is practically the fourth church, counting the enlargement referred to as a new building. We have raised during pay pastorate $1,000,000 for religious purposes, but no church on earth could endure without serious embarrassment what we were called upon to go through, and we must have help or stop."

Collars Still Higher.

Straight collars, cut as high as can be borne comfortably, are most fashionable. Women's garments are finished in this way—small bands of chenille or ones trimming—such as are used to border skirts and finish edges—are laid on the extreme edge of the collar. Or, again, bebe ribbon in many loops laid one above the other, forming a thick ruche, is a neat and pretty finish to a waist. The ribbon is sewn on a strip of plain satin ribbon, which in its turn is laid inside the dress collar, and there secured, the loops standing up evenly around the throat.

From a Physician's Standpoint.

A physician of high repute declared one day last week that if it were in his power he would pass a law that all women's garments should hang straight from the shoulders. The Greeks of old, as all know, were the very highest types of manly and womanly beauty, and very much of this perfection of form was attributed to the loose, beautiful style of their dress. A few evenings later the doctor and his wife attended a social gathering, and the latter was attired in a straight, falling costume, a la Grecque. The effect, says one who was present, was most beautiful; it was not even quaint, but peculiar to a degree, affording another proof that theories reduced to practice do not always justify the experiment.

A Novel Spring Cape.

This charming little garment is quite novel in cut and make. It is composed of Havana brown broadcloth. The col-

GOOD HEALTH

THE GRAPE SEED DEFENDED.

It May No Longer Be Defamed as the Cause of Appendicitis.

A correspondent of Popular Science News asserts that the accession of murder is suddenly withdrawn from the grape seed, and that Dr. O. W. Holmes will have to rescind his witty observation that the appendix vaci seems to have been created solely for the purpose of catching grape seeds, and thus disposing of such surplus people as prefer the stones to the juice of the grape. The correspondent says:

Dr. J. S. Nixter, who is known to have performed many times the operation for the removal of the appendix, declares that neither in his own practice nor from any authentic report has he ever known a grape seed to be found in that part of the body.

Appendicitis usually involves general inflammation, with an abscess bulging and visible. According to Nettestock, perforations, with immediate death, take place in 122 out of 146 far advanced cases. Both Nixter and Richardson insist on an early operation, but nothing is found, save hardened feces, pin or magnesium deformation in the mischievous little appendix. 'Tis a pity the grape sellers had not sooner known of their friends, the surgeons, for popular fear is said to have lessened seriously the sale of grapes the past autumn.

Water as Medicine.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn out particles are cast aside and eliminated from the system, while the new are ever being formed, from the inception of life to its close.

Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiplies the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment. According to Hall's Journal of Health, persons but little accustomed to drinking water are liable to have the waste products formed faster "than they are removed. Any disturbance in the free working of natural laws at once produces disease, which if once firmly seated requires both time and money to cure.

People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a full tumbler of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night and leaves the tissues fresh and strong, ready for the active work of the day.

Danger In Lifting the Hat.

Not one man in a thousand goes out of doors 10 minutes of the day without taking the precaution to put on a hat. Experience has taught him that a neglect to do so may bring on a fit of sneezing, a watery suffusion of the eyes, a sore throat, headache, earache, neuralgia, toothache and symptoms of a cold, with fever, a cough and perhaps pneumonia. The National Popular Review says that is so fully recognized in England that the custom of saluting ladies and friends by lifting the hat has been of late years greatly superseded by the wave of the hand or half military salute.

For the Complexion.

Some one advises blonds never to use glycerin on the face. If they must use grease to soften the skin, let it be a little almond oil, mixed with almond meal and the cereal or cornmeal. According to the same person, ammonia in the water wrinkles the skin, and little lumps or swellings are generally relieved by bathing with spirits of camphor.

ETIQUETTE

FASHIONABLE STATIONERY.

What Is Now Good Form In Note Paper, Visiting Cards and Invitations.

The most elegant note paper is either pure white or cream white. Blue bond paper is also used. The choice now lies between a paper of medium light weight, smooth in finish, or a linen finished paper or the rough vellum. Eccentric styles in letter paper find no favor with people of refined tastes. The thin bond paper which is so much liked by writers is fashionable in both blue and pure white.

When a personal mark is put upon the paper, it may be a crest or the initials of the writer entwined in some odd, fanciful way, rather than cut in monogram. The address of the writer is often used embossed or stamped on the paper across the middle of the page at the top. When the address is used, it is written out in full, the number of the house being the only figure which it is allowable to print in numerals. The initials entwined, however, are quite as often used as the address, and in such a case they may be placed in the center of the page or a little to the left at the top. Some ladies who like a character istic stationery have a little etching of a favorite corner or of a fireplace, which all their friends will recognize, stamped at the top of their letter paper, though this is a costly fad of a few and not in particularly good taste. Sometimes a favorite flower of the writer is stamped in natural colors on special stationery, and this, too, is rather fantastic. The flower chosen usually has some special significance. Gold and silver are quite generally used in embossing and stamping, though a dark shade of red and ultramarine are both fashionable, and a pale shade of gray and violet are also considered elegant.

While for cards the extremely thin "laid board," scarcely heavier than paper, engraved with a heavily cut, rather coarse lined script, such as is used by English ladies, is affected by extremists, fashionable stationers find that the majority of their customers prefer a cream vellum and use a "medium thin" card, well printed in script. Of course no ornament or flourish is allowable in the inscription, the letters being kept as plain as possible. Gentlemen's cards remain small and oblong in shape, while ladies' cards are large and square, as they have been for years.

Invitations—except those to a wedding—are quite generally engraved on cards. Wedding invitations are always engraved on note paper. All figures, including dates, are written out in full, except the number of the house. There are no abbreviations. An invitation should never give the effect of being in a hurry. A matter of social finesse to be always elegantly most heedless leisurely. The letters "R. S. V. P." are now generally omitted from invitations, says the New York Tribune in concluding this summary of "what is now thought good form."

THE CAMEL.

A Patient Beast of Burden Very Useful to Man In Desert Countries.

One of the most useful animals known to man is the camel, which is called the "Ship of the Desert," as it conveys men and merchandise over long distances. In the countries east and south of the Mediterranean sea the great, lonely deserts can only be crossed by the aid of this most patient beast, which, in spite of its slender legs and awkward build, is very fleet and able to obtain for days from food and drink.

A HALT IN THE DESERT.

This is why the camel is so superior to the horse in those countries where water is found only in the scattered oases, often several days' journey apart.

Traders who wish to sell their goods in the interior travel in large companies called caravans. This is for protection from the Bedouins, who live in the desert and often subsist by plundering passing travelers. A caravan frequently contains a thousand camels, traveling in single file, some carrying the goods to be sold, others saddled as you see in the picture. The Arabs are very kind to their camels, which are valuable, docile and domestic animals. The camel kneels to receive his burden, and if too heavily laden will complain of the cruelty in bitter cries and refuse to rise. The engraving faithfully portrays his manner of resting.

The Fox and the Stork.

Sly Reynard once, in a sportive mood, Praised Gossip Stork to share his food. "Neighbor, I must entreat you'll stay And take your soup with me today; You've kindly ventured were it known." She yielded as he thus bent her, And soon arrived the joyous evening In plates of shallow depth, provoking. 'Twas vain the guest essayed to fill With nonsubstantial fare her bill. 'Twas vain she failed to find a collop; The host soon lapped the liquor all up. Dame Stork consoled her dinnerless, But thought to find revenge at leisure. "Gossip," said she, "my friend, you'll try My humble hospitality; I know your taste, and we'll contrive— Tomorrow I'm home at five." With punctual haste the wily soother Accepts his neighbor's friendly offer, And entering, cries: "Dear stork, how is it? You see I soon return your visit. I can't rest when you invite; I've brought a famous appetite. The steam which issues from your kitchen Proves that your pot there's something rich in."

THE SPRING SEASON.

BRILLIANCY OF COLORING WILL PREVAIL IN CHEVIOTS AND SERGES.

Those Staid Old Goods Show a Tendency Toward Frivolity With Their Pats and Plaids—Several Charming Models For Light and Inexpensive Gowns.

The approaching season, the New York Sun declares, will be one of exceeding brilliancy and extravagance in color effects. Even the cheviots have caught the craze and flaunt a perfect abandonment of color, and the staid serges, long valued for their sobriety, show a reckless tendency to frivolity, with their dots and flecks of colored silk.

A pretty model for one of the plain nursing gowns, for which they are especially adapted, has a full, short skirt, trimmed with five graduated rows of hercules braid, a short, round bodice, edged with the braid, and opening in graceful revers over a bit of red silk crossed with the braid in narrow lines. Full sleeves have a turned back cuff of the silk, covered with braid just above the elbow, and a close fitted lower sleeve, edged with a piping of red at the wrist. The back of the skirt is gathered and sewed to the lower edge of the bodice, which has no seams and is finished across the bottom with the braid like a round waist. The model is particularly serviceable for traveling, business or morning wear and is equally effective in cheviot or serge.

TWO PRETTY GOWNS.

Another gown safe to buy is one of swiss or organdie muslin. The swiss muslins have dots of white beside a pattern of flowers in clusters, festoons or shadowy sprays. The organdies have stripes or bars of white among their flower sprays, which copy the dainty patterns and colors of Dresden or the bolder designs of old wall papers and cretonnes, with long stemmed flowers, sometimes four or five inches in length.

The challies have silk lines, either single lines or clusters of stripes or bars all in white, with pretty china patterns. Now, a china pattern, for the benefit of the uninitiated, is one in which the edges or the figures are not well defined, but slightly blurred, as if the pattern had slipped or the colors had run, producing a soft and shadowy effect extremely artistic. Now, the muslin gowns may be made over white or colored silk, or if it is desired to have them very inexpensive and simple white lawn may be used as a lining. The skirts are gathered to a belt made short enough to escape the ground, trimmed with ruffles or with bands of insertion. If the muslin is made up over a color, these rows of insertion are let into the skirt to show the color through. If the lining is white, the strips of insertion are put in over ribbons.

A pretty model which may be utilized for any of the cottons or challies, even the simple china silks, in the wash colors has a spray of green and a white ground tipped with small and delicate flowers of violet. The lining is green silk and shows through the bands of insertion which finish the skirt. A lace yoke, which may be lined or not, as the wearer fancies, has a deep ruffle of lace about the lower edge, and the sleeves are of lace, with full puffs of the muslin at the top. The folded waist has a soft scarf of green tied about and finished with a bow without ends at the back.

A pretty idea for a bodice to a wash gown has a plaited collaret edged with lace gathered about the neck and falling out over the shoulders. It slopes to the folded bibs in front, but is cut to a point in the back in the form of a yoke, which does not extend down to the belt. Another bodice has a Schulike drapery of lace forming ruffles over the sleeves and crossing in front beneath the belt to outline a yoke, long on the shoulder and plain, which may be of lace or fine needlework or of the material laid in tiny plaits, with fine bias stitchings or hand run tucks.

Bread Pudding.

Instead of throwing away bread crusts try this method of disposing of them: Dry them thoroughly in a cool oven, roll, and some day when the dessert problem confronts you take a teacup of your dried crumbs, soak with boiling water, add pint of milk, 2 eggs, generous half cupful of sugar, pinch of salt, teaspoonful of flavoring, and bake. If you want it extra good, after it is baked spread some raspberry jam on top and cover with a meringue—white of 1 egg and a tablespoonful of sugar beaten to a froth. Brown in quick oven.

A Smart Parrot.

Several days ago a paragraph appeared in this column relating to a parrot named Dick, owned by F. V. Ziegler of Columbus, Pa. Mr. A. M. Rambo of this city, who is acquainted with Mr. Ziegler, says that Dick is considered one of the family and is perhaps one of the most intelligent birds of its species in the country. Mr. Rambo was taken in hand in household matters, Mr. Rambo says. "If Mr. Zeigler's son does not get up in the morning at the usual hour to go to the office, the parrot will say to the girl, 'Call Clem,' and he will insist on his command being obeyed. I recollect on one occasion," Mr. Rambo further says, "when the family were seriously discussing some local event Dick broke in as follows, 'Papa, do you love mamma?' 'Yes, of course, I do,' replied Mr. Zeigler, when the parrot blurted out, 'Oh, you old fraud!'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Trifling With the Court.

"You were arrested at midnight walking on the safe of the bank with a sledge hammer, and yet you protest that you are innocent," said Judge Duffy to a burglar.

"I am an innocent man, may it please your honor."

"It would please me very much to think that you were innocent, but was your object in tapping on the safe so as to get change for a $5 bill?"

"They don't have any $5 bill."

"I know that, judge. I expected to find one as soon as I got the safe open."—Texas Siftings.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR MARCH MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Special Committee on Sewerage Report.—Beerbower's Liquor License Granted.—Ordinances Passed on First and Second Readings.—Finance Committee to Secure an Option on a Property in View for a Pest House.—Other Business.

The City Common Council met in regular session last evening, with all the members present except Mr. Johnston. The minutes of two previous meetings were read and approved. A petition for a liquor license was presented by Wallace V. Miller, and referred to the Committee on License. Several petitions for express, truckmen, auctioneers and truckmen's licenses were read, referred to the proper committee and afterwards granted. The monthly reports of the City Treasurer, Collector and Physician were received and filed. The Special Committee on Sewerage presented the following report:

Report on Sewerage.

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE,
Plainfield, N. J., March 6, 1893.

To the Hon. Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN: As chairman of the Special Committee appointed by your Honorable Body February 1, 1892, I herewith submit the report of the Committee on the question of sewerage, which has been reached after a most thoughtful consideration of the matter in all its many details, will, I trust, meet with the approval of the Honorable Council. In order that the report may be particularly called attention to the recommendation of the Committee with reference to the sewerage system of the several streets.

After carefully considering this branch of the question, the Committee reached the conclusion that there is no other feasible way of constructing a sewerage system, and at the same time, of securing the economy required by making cash payments when contracts are completed than by putting into the tax budget the entire cost, or by an issue of bonds running for a long term at a low rate of interest. A long bond could probably be floated at four per cent, and it seems reasonable that as expenditure for a great permanent public improvement should be met as the population and assessable valuation increases, rather than by an immediate increase of taxes, which would prove burdensome to our own people and, at the same time, prevent strangers from making permanent investments here.

This, together with the fact that many, probably a large majority, of our citizens could not well pay a much heavier tax than they are now called upon to pay, seems a sufficient reason why an immediate issue of bonds for the entire cost of the system should be set aside as unprofitable.

In consideration I will add that it is the opinion of the Committee that the question of the issuance of bonds should be submitted to the people before any active measures are taken to carry out the recommendations of this report.

Respectfully submitted,
GRISCOM, Chairman.

THE SEWERAGE OF PLAINFIELD.

To the Hon. Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN: At a meeting of the Common Council held February 1, 1892, a Committee was appointed for the purpose of considering and determining what action, if any, should be taken by your Honorable Body with reference to the introduction of a Sewerage System into the city.

This Committee, composed of four members of the Common Council and fifteen citizens, held its first meeting March 1, 1892, and elected Mr. Addison A. Gilbert as Chairman, and H. K. Sherman as Secretary. Numerous meetings have been held by the Committee and the question in its various details has been fully discussed and the Committees have pursued different lines of investigations relating to the general subject. The results of these investigations, which it is only set forth in the accompanying reports, are: 1. Estimated cost of a sewerage system to the Raritan River. 2. Estimated cost of sewerage to the Arthur Kill through Fanwood, Westfield and Linden Townships, with estimated cost of pumping station and annual cost of maintaining the same. 3. Estimated cost of disposal by intermittent Filtration. Report of committee to Lawrence and South Framingham, Mass., to inspect Intermittent Filtration plants in operation there. 5. Examination into legal questions involved. 6. Report of committee to Lawrence and South Framingham, Mass., to inspect Intermittent Filtration plants in operation there. 5. Examination into legal questions involved. 6. Report of committee on finance, and provisional funds for the prosecution of the work.

To assist the deliberations of the Committee, engineers were employed to make profiles and estimates prepared therefrom and herewith submitted.

A comprehensive system of sewerage of any district should provide for the removal of all fecal and liquid refuse from dwellings and places of business in the interest of the public health, and of the subsoil and the speedy disposal of the resulting accumulations, without damage to property or nuisance, but should, at the same time, attempt to be of the simplest possible arrangement and construction, consistent with safety and cheapness of future maintenance.

SEPARATE SYSTEM.

The "Separate" system of sewerage contemplates the removal of sewerage and liquid manufacturing wastes through an independent system of pipes, whose dimensions are proportioned to the volume of sewerage to be carried off, and it is essentially a system for the removal of filth by water carriage, the water being limited to the smallest necessary quantity.

The amount of sewerage conveyed by such a system is consequently very uniform; with it, when properly constructed, there are no accumulations of deposits in the sewers, generating noxious gases and only to be removed by the cleaning out of sewers; water bailed in sewers being daily filled to their maximum sewerage capacity at the hour of maximum flow, the main sewers are daily swept clean of deposits, the sewerage is rapidly and completely carried to the outfall before any putrefactive change has taken place in it.

In this primary lateral sewers, the amount of sewage is usually insufficient to keep the sewers clean, and hence frequent flushing with water becomes necessary. This may be effected by connecting house drains connected with the public water supply, or where there is a small flow of small stream of water, say of five gallons per minute, at the head of the sewer, a tank at the end of the entering water produces a small overflow of water, which, when discharged, carries the contents of the tank are discharged into the sewer with great rapidity, producing a powerful flush.

In this system the rainfall is permitted to flow over the surface of the streets to the gutters, and through the street gutters to the nearest water courses. In the most direct manner. Local accumulations become troublesome, under, however, and damages for the same are provided for relief.

COMPARATIVE COST.

It is generally admitted by the best of engineering authority that the first cost of sewers on the "separate" system is about one-third that of the "combined" in which both rainfall and house sewerage is provided for. For small and unpaved cities, Plainfield, there can be no comparison as to the superior merits of the separate system of sewerage.

TOPOGRAPHY OF THE DISTRICT.

The topography of the district to be sewered is such that the sewers will naturally converge toward the intersection of Grant avenue and Front street. The summits of the ground at this point is 35 6-10 ft. lower than Front street at Watchung street; 26 feet lower than at Richmond and Lafayette streets; 20 feet lower than at Broadway and Kensington avenue; 14 feet lower than at the bottom of Cedar brook at Somerset, and about 7 feet lower than bottom of Cedar brook at Park avenue. Of the total difference of level on Front street, however, almost one-half occurs between Grant avenue and Plainfield avenue, and this feature of the topography has a very decided influence on all the sewer grades laid in Plainfield, as the sewers have generally deeper cuttings than if the slope of the whole district was more uniform. The axis of highest ground north and south is along Washington street, and east and west, it generally along Seventh street. The topographical features are so defined, that, coupled with the location of the principal points of drainage and the limits of the sewer connection, there is not much room for a choice of routes for the sewers to be connected with the cost of construction. The construction of the double tract electric railroad along Front street, and Grant avenue to the north main sewer in Second street, the use of the Cedar brook sewer, and the line of Front street, and therefore in its favor as the proposed route.

THE NORTH MAIN SEWER.

The North main sewer commences at Richmond street on the line of Grant avenue, then along the center of West Second street to Fairfield street, then along Fairfield street parallel with the railroad to the center of East Second street, where it is about 12 feet below the surface. The following table, compared with the sizes of pipe shown on the profile submitted with this report:

Sufficient depths have been given to allow for future connections with the main sewer and for any lateral sewer that may hereafter be built in North and South streets, and for grading to greater basements. Fourteen manholes are to be built at street intersections and other points, and flushing tanks will be allowed for. The total length is 5,807 feet, and the estimated cost is $14,521.50 per lineal foot. Lateral sewers will cost between 60 and 75 cents per lineal foot, exclusive of tanks below extra.

THE SOUTH MAIN SEWER.

The south main sewer commences at the intersection of Richmond street and La Grande avenue, and runs along the center of La Grande avenue, to Front street, thence along the center of Front street to Sixth street to Central ave.; with a connection at Broadway for a 10-inch pipe from an interceptor sewer to be built under or along the Sixth street to Central ave.; with a connection at Broadway for a 10-inch pipe from an interceptor sewer to be built under or along the south side of Somerset street to Netherwood; thence along Netherwood to Madison avenue; thence along Eighth street to Plainfield avenue; thence along Plainfield avenue to the center of East Second street, at the depths and with the grades and sizes of pipe as designated on the profile submitted herewith. As in the north main sewer sufficient depths have been given to allow for future connections with the main sewer and for drainage of cellars.

The total length of the south main sewer is 9,000 feet, and the estimated cost is $14,197, or $1.57 per lineal foot. Lateral sewers will cost between 60 and 75 cents per lineal foot, exclusive of tanks below extra.

THE SOUTH MAIN SEWER.

The south main sewer commences at the intersection of Richmond street and La Grande avenue, and runs along the center of La Grande avenue, to Front street, thence along the center of Front street to

EDITORIAL NOTES

Philosophical Evolutionists.

We are so glad to be able to lay before our readers a summary of the work of one of the many societies that exist for the spread of true light among us ignorant heathen of the outside world. No doubt our readers will feel with us that, after finding out what a certain ethical association had done for us and the rest of mankind, we would not for anything have lived in another age of the world, and so have missed our share of this great light.

The president of the society records in The Popular Science Monthly what his organization has done to redeem the race's morals and make us all healthier, happier and handsomer, likewise wiser. "Society," says the president, says he, "is not an artificial mechanism, but an organic growth, depending for its strength and utility on the intelligent volition of its constituent units." Do you catch on to that now? If so, take breath and engulf the next great truth: "To effect results, however, the units must not illustrate an individualism which is antagonistic and repellent, but an individualism inspired by the social sentiment." We think this means that everybody should love his neighbor as himself, but we are not quite sure.

The members of this good and great association have been meeting now for some 12 years. Their particular mission in life appears to be to become philosophical evolutionists. At each meeting some P. E. who has been reading, copying and cramming for some months more or less in a dusty and badly ventilated library reads an essay. In some cases these essays have been worthy and long winded enough to attract the attention of Herbert Spencer, and that is the highest glory. The longer the paper is and the drier, and the more big words there are in it, the greater is the work done for humanity, only humanity will never know it, more's the pity. After the paper is read people who like to hear themselves talk "discuss" it till they are choked off.

The papers read from time to time have told a suffering humanity about such thrilling, lively themes as "The Religions of Ancient Egypt," "Zoroastrianism," "Neo-Platonism" and "The Origin of the Religious Idea." Words cannot describe how we throb and thrill to learn that this society is the "authorized recipient of the first English translation of that monumental work, "The Mahabharata," published by the Datavya Bharata Karyalaya, at the head of which is its devoted translator, Baboo Pratapa Chandra Roy." How thankful we ought to be that Baboo Pratapa Chandra Roy translated "The Datavya Bharata Karyalaya" or "The Mahabharata," we don't quite know which!

Everything American goes—that is, it is beginning to go. For generations the world's famous stage dancers came from France, and no other country was thought able to equal the nimble and polite French in the art terpsichorean. Yet now an American girl, Lois Fuller, has taken all Paris by storm by her wonderful serpentine skirt dancing. Those who have seen her at home will not be surprised. She has been lightly dancing over the hearts of the gay Parisians for some four months. They are so delighted with her that she has signed a contract to dance at one of the Paris theaters three years more. The most respectable people not only among the French, but also among the American and English residents of Paris, go to see her magical rendering of the poetry of motion. "La Loie" is as much the rage as Bernhardt in her way. Andran, the famous composer, was so charmed with her that he has undertaken to write the music for four new dances for her. America is coming on top everywhere.

A former president of the board of tax commissioners of New York city recommended that all taxation of the personal property of individuals in that city be abolished and the levy placed only on real estate and corporations. He thought it would encourage rich people from all over the Union to go to New York to live, spending their money there, and increasing consumption and making trade lively. It is said that there is $4,000,000,000 worth of personal property in New York state that annually escapes the assessor as it is, and of course they are proportional amounts in other states.

The weather this winter is certainly hoodooed. Since the middle of December the sun has been struggling to shine, but in most cases has given it up. If there came one pleasant day, the hoodoo worked before night to cloud it over and bring snow. Such blizzards, such snow falls, such below zero figures, such frozen rivers and frozen noses the country over have not been recorded since the weather bureau was established. We have had all kinds of weather, agreeing in only one particular—they were all equally mean.

That is an excellent plan for relieving the poor that was devised by the Cincinnati chief of police. Instead of opening soupkouses to feed both the just and the unjust, this shrewd chief had all those needy apply to the city department for help. The worthy poor were sent to the city infirmary, the unworthy to the city workhouse. By that means the tramps were enabled to earn their living in the workhouse.

CABINET IS CONFIRMED.

Mr. Cleveland's Lieutenants Approved by the Senate.

REPUBLICAN SENATORS IN CAUCUS.

The Case of the New Kansas Senator—The Princess to Appear Tomorrow—Judge Gresham Appoints Josiah Quincy as His First Assistant Secretary.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The senate was in session for only 35 minutes, but within that brief period it received a message from the president submitting for confirmation the names of the members of his cabinet, went into executive session, passed upon and confirmed each of the appointments, directed a notification of its action to be communicated to the president, came again into open session, had a resolution offered by Mr. Call (Dem., Fla.), in reference to railroad lands in his state and the interference of railroad companies with senatorial elections and had a joint resolution introduced by Mr. Sherman proposing an amendment to the constitution. The amendment proposed is to fix the time for the beginning and termination of the term of office of president and vice president and congress at noon on April 30. The change is to go into effect in 1897 and continue thereafter. Mr. Sherman's joint resolution was laid on the table at his request, he signifying his intention to have it referred hereafter to the committee on privileges and elections.

The Republican Caucus.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The Republicans of the senate in caucus appointed the following committee to arrange the Republican representation on the senate committees: Mr. Allison, chairman, and Messrs. McMillan, Proctor, Jones of Nevada, Wolcott, Sloan, Aldrich, Higgins and Davis.

The caucus was well attended and was presided over by Mr. Sherman. Neither Mr. Stewart nor Mr. Peffer were present, although they were given to understand they would be welcome. The Republicans recognized the fact that they were in the minority and discussed the line of policy that should be pursued in the future. The discussion was in the most general terms, however, and not directed at any one matter in particular. There was no attempt to interfere with the reorganization of the senate by the Democrats, the Republicans recognizing that such action could result in nothing but antagonism that would prove futile and decrease the effective work of a vigorous and alert minority.

The case of Mr. Martin of Kansas, who was sworn in Saturday, was discussed for a short time. Before Mr. Martin was sworn in the Republican members of the committee on privileges and elections conferred with the Democratic members and came to the conclusion that Mr. Martin was, on the face of his credentials, entitled to his seat. The question of the legality of the certificate was a matter that could be opened at any time, and this agreement accounts for the absence of any protest against Mr. Martin's participation in the business of the senate. The Republicans decided that the question whether Mr. Martin's seat should or should not be contested would be done by the party that is now in full possession of every branch of the government. According to all precedents the first thing is to reorganize the committees, which practically control legislation. The Democrats have been quietly canvassing the situation and the pumping process has been going on to-day. Through the medium of this caucus many Democrats who have been heretofore content with unimportant assignments will be given more desirable positions upon more commanding committees. Of course the minor committee chairmanships which have been held by the Democrats under Republican rule, will, by the same courtesy, be given to the party that is now in the minority.

Tomorrow the Princess Will Appear.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Mr. T. H. Davies, ex-Hawaiian minister, and Princess Kaiulani of Hawaii, has written to Dr. Mott Smith, the Hawaiian minister in this country, and to Mr. Paul Neuman, the attorney for Queen Lilioukalani, that she will arrive in Washington with the princess tomorrow morning. Messrs. Smith and Neuman were in conference over the matter and they were in doubt as to how Mr. Davies, owing to his lack of official standing, would secure an interview with the secretary of state and president, which seems to be the object of his visit.

Enforcing the Exclusion Act.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The treasury department is informed that numerous fraudulent papers have been presented by Chinese upon the Pacific coast and Canadian border, claiming to be merchants, with the right to domicile in the United States. In view of this state of affairs Assistant Secretary Spaulding has instructed collectors of customs to disregard all such papers, and refuse entry unless it is proven satisfactorily that the persons presenting them have the right to land.

Quincy Is Assistant Secretary.

WASHINGTON, March. 7.—Hon. Josiah Quincy of Massachusetts was formally tendered the position of assistant secretary of state by Secretary Gresham, which he accepted. Mr. Quincy is a member of the national committee, and in the late campaign was chairman of the campaign literature. He is a graduate of Harvard and a lawyer by profession.

Cleveland's Ex-native Clerk.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The president appointed Robert L. O'Brien of New York executive clerk at the White House in place of E. P. Thomas, who will remain with General Harrison for some time. Mr. O'Brien was Mr. Cleveland's private secretary during the campaign. The salary is $2,000.

A Rehearing Denied.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Justice Field has given directions to Clerk McKenny to enter a denial and notify counsel in the case on the application of the Illinois Central Railroad company for a rehearing of the celebrated Chicago lake front case.

To Refund Canal Tolls.

OTTAWA, March 7.—In parliament the government announced that it had under consideration a proposition to refund to owners of Canadian vessels the amounts paid as tolls to the American Sault Ste Marie canal.

SPEAKER FLYNN BACKS DOWN.

Ex-Governor Abbett Highly Indorsed by the New Jersey House.

TRENTON, March 7.—The state house was densely thronged with spectators last night, the expectation being general that the evidence in the race track subject would come up in some form. Greatly to the astonishment of the crowd on the floor Speaker Flynn ordered the sergeant-at-arms to clear the chamber of all but members, reporters and employees. The crowd stood 12 and 12 deep in all the aisles and against the wall on the sides of the chamber. Four or five hundred left the chamber when the speaker gave the order. The others stood hedged in and made no effort to get out. The speaker then said that the floor would have to be cleared, and that the sergeant-at-arms would be authorized to use force if necessary. Still the great crowd refused to budge. The speaker gave no other orders, however, and petitions and memorials were declared in order.

Several members presented petitions of constituents protesting against the race track bills and demanding their repeal. They were all referred to the committee on municipal corporations, which has the repealers in charge and of which Mr. Thompson, the "Duke of Gloucester," is a member.

Mr. Dupuy of Bergen offered a resolution that in view of the resolution adopted at the mass meeting of the Citizens league protesting against the confirmation of Leon Abbett, this house express it to be the sense of the members that Mr. Abbett is eminently entitled to any position within the gift of the people. This resolution was adopted.

Faribault Pins at Trenton.

TRENTON, March 7.—The bill which is intended to divide the state school moneys with the parochial schools of the state in the way that was sensibly chamber last evening. Mr. Coyle of Hoboken volunteered to introduce it into the house. The bill provides that incorporated private schools may file certificates with the state and county school superintendents, and that when such schools are declared to be for use as additional public schools the county superintendents shall name the president, secretary and treasurer of the corporations as school trustees. They are to be subject to the general school laws and they are to have a per capita allowance out of the state school moneys equal to the per capita cost of maintaining the public schools of the state.

Tamatav Swept by a Hurricane.

PARIS, March 7.—A hurricane swept over Tamatav, on the east coast of Madagascar, on Feb. 22. The Alaimo, a French ship, was stripped almost instantly of masts and rigging and a few minutes later went to the bottom with all on board. Five coasting vessels foundered almost simultaneously, and but 10 men of their crews were saved. Four other coasters sank before the storm passed. In Tamatav the streets were swept clean of people and vehicles in a minute. Twenty-two of the best buildings in the place and a large number of huts were wrecked. The roof of the custom house was carried away and the walls were unroofed. The British consulate was demolished and four sugar factories were leveled to the ground.

Blow at the Leather Trust.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—The proposed $50,000,000 Leather Trust will receive a serious blow if the shoe manufacturers in all parts of the country go into the tanning business themselves, as Frederick Brierly, the representative of a Boston shoe manufacturer, who is now in this city, says is contemplated. "The raw material cannot be controlled by the trust," Mr. Brierly declares, "for should the manufacturers be in the tanning business they could afford to pay a little more for hides by reason of getting the finished leather at actual cost and doing away with tanners' profits."

Senator Morgan Taken Sick.

LONDON, March 7.—Senator Morgan, one of the representatives of the United States on the Behring sea court of arbitration, who was a passenger on the American line steamer New York, which arrived at Southampton on Saturday, was taken sick on the voyage. Since his arrival he has become worse and is now confined to his bed at the Southwestern hotel at Southampton.

Railroads Charged With Carelessness.

PROVIDENCE, March 7.—Coroner Brennan's verdict at the inquest on the death of Joseph Lewis, Texas soldier, is as follows: His decision is that her death was due to the gross carelessness of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company in not protecting sufficiently the grade crossing.

The Lake Erie and Ohio Ship Canal.

PITTSBURG, March 7.—A project having for its object the construction and equipment with private capital of the long talked of ship canal between Lake Erie and the Ohio river is receiving the serious consideration of local capitalists. Twenty-seven million dollars will be needed for the work.

Returned to His First Love.

KINGSTON, Ont., March 7.—Frank Turner, who eloped from Utica last week with a married woman, was found in this city. His wife arrived here from Utica, and after an interview with her husband he agreed to abandon wife No. 2 and return to Utica with his first wife.

THE RUSH FOR OFFICE.

Mr. Cleveland Is Besieged by Vast Crowds.

INVITED TO ATTEND THE BIG FAIR.

Tammany Has Not Yet Pushed Forward Any Candidate—The Claims of New Jersey and Connecticut—Worthless Petitions Presented to the President.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Office seekers are to be found every place in Washington. You meet them strolling along the street, standing at corners, swarming in hotel lobbies and pestering statesmen who have a "pull" and the members of the new cabinet.

Petitions of every conceivable description are flourished on every hand. Some are well printed and dog eared documents, with a bewildering assortment of styles in chirography. Others are neatly printed and bound in pamphlet form. They all have many signatures.

There does not seem to be any probability that President Cleveland will seriously regard the "machine made" petition. He appreciates it at its just value. One representative signs a petition handed him by another and the first hands over to the second representative another petition, which receives the second representative's signature. It's all a matter of reciprocity, and probably hundreds of names on as many petitions are purely perfunctory evidences that a favor of some sort is being repaid.

What Tammany Wants.

Although President Cleveland has only been president for 48 hours, candidates in great number and for big offices have arrived. Tammany has not as yet pushed any man for a cabinet office, and is not likely to for some time. This organization does not wish to be precipitate. It wants the good places in New York that Mr. Cleveland will dispose of. It includes the postmastership, the United States marshalships and the internal revenue collectorship.

The antisnappers are not modest by any means, and when the two factions hitch upon their respective candidates a warm contest will undoubtedly result.

New Jersey Is After a Mission.

New Jersey wants a first class mission. The men it will indorse have not been formally decided upon, although there is a disposition among the friends of ex-Governor Redle to push him to the front. Ex-Representative William McAdoo is spoken of in connection with the assistant secretaryship of the navy. Mr. McAdoo is extremely well liked here. He has considerable experience in naval affairs and would make a good official, it is thought. President Cleveland, it is said, regards Mr. McAdoo with considerable favor.

It is believed that ex-Secretary Bayard can have the mission at the court of St. James. Holding the most important place in President Cleveland's former term and not having been recognized thus far, it is quite reasonable to suppose that Mr. Bayard stands a very good chance for this place if he wants it. As it is regarded as the best position in the gift of Cleveland's gift Mr. Bayard would probably take it.

Connecticut Wants Many Offices.

Connecticut wants much, as it has stood by Mr. Cleveland staunchly when other New England states did not support him. Consectient did not present any names for Mr. Cleveland's cabinet. For this reason anything in reason from Connecticut may want is likely to be granted.

Ex-Representative Wilcox of Middlesex county has been suggested by his friends for the Greek mission, but Mr. Wilcox is a popular but conservative man, and has not expressed himself in any way regarding the matter. He was not a candidate for congress during the recent campaign, and his friends think he should be given the ministry to Greece merely as an evidence of the president's appreciation of the services of Connecticut. Mr. William Downs of Bridgeport wants to be consul at Montreal. Mr. John C. Bixby of Meriden wants to be internal revenue collector of the district which includes the states of Connecticut and Rhode Island. Mr. Frank W. Hyde of Hartford would like to be consul to Liverpool.

Invited to the World's Fair.

President Cleveland's first official invitation was extended to him by the World's Fair commissioners at Washington, and was presented, according to previous engagement, in the cabinet room at 1 o'clock.

Introductions were made by ex-Senator T. W. Palmer, chairman of the Columbian exposition commissioners. After all the gentlemen had been greeted (many of them by the president-elect by name) Mr. Palmer addressed the president, who stood at the head of the table with his hands on his hips, in an attitude of earnest attention, extending him an invitation to be present and participate in the opening of the World's fair, together with Mrs. Cleveland.

President Cleveland's response was entirely informal, and consisted mainly of questions as to the length of the programme and the time it would be necessary for him to remain in Chicago, to perform what was expected of him. "If I go," he said, "it will be because I deem it a public duty which I ought to discharge. At this time, as you gentlemen are doubtless aware, there will be many matters of public importance to demand my presence here."

President Cleveland said he would consider the matter and announce his decision in a day or two. The committee and gentlemen then shook hands with him and retired.

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off at the first joint. Then the sore broke out on my hand. Then the sore broke out on my arm, came out on my neck and then on both sides, discharging terribly. I had a sore right eye also, on my right arm. Doctors said it was the

they ever saw. It was simply awful. Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken two bottles, and then I quit, for I felt that I was cured. I got for that investment? A thousand times more than I paid for it. For the past 4 years I have had no sores. I

PARNELLITE AND ORANGEMAN.

A Prospective Encounter Ends In Peals of Laughter.

LONDON, March 7.—When Colonel Saunderson denounced the Irish home rule members on last Tuesday as defenders of criminals, William Redmond, Parnellite, challenged Colonel Saunderson to repeat the words outside the house. Colonel Saunderson offered to repeat the words anywhere, and after the debate he wrote a note to William Redmond offering to repeat in the lobby what he had said. Last evening Colonel Saunderson and Mr. Redmond encountered each other in the lobby. Mr. Redmond, going up to the doughty colonel, said, "Do you accuse me and my colleagues of being murderers?"

Colonel Saunderson coolly replied, "I know nothing of you personally, but I accused the Irish party of conduct leading to murder."

Both Redmond and Saunderson were angry, and confronted each other in a pugilistic attitude. Peers from the house of lords and members of the house of commons gathered around in expectation of seeing the first blood in the threatened civil war between the Ulsterites and the rest of Ireland. Just as the two seemed about to fall in friends interfered, and the would be combatants were hustled apart amid much laughter. It is reported that Colonel Saunderson has challenged Mr. Redmond to a duel on the continent.

HARRIS' FIGHT FOR LIFE.

He Is Given New Hope Through Dr. Kinmonth's Affidavit.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Carlyle W. Harris, under sentence of death for poisoning his wife, Mary Helen Potts Harris, was given new hope yesterday in his application for a new trial. Dr. Hugh S. Kinmonth has made affidavits that Helen Potts Harris had purchased morphine pills at his drug store in Asbury Park.

The basis of Harris' appeal for a new trial is the claim that his wife was addicted to the use of morphine. The evidence heretofore introduced in support of that claim has been suspicious in itself, and strongly contradicted. It remains to be seen whether this witness will share the fate of several others under the investigation by District Attorney Nicoll.

Lawyer William F. Howe made affidavit yesterday, showing that considerable quantities of morphine had been sold to Druggist Van Mater, where Witness Joseph Lefferts worked at the time when he claims to have sold Miss Potts morphine, though the druggist himself had made affidavit that not more than one dram of morphine was in the store during all the time Lefferts was there.

Protecting Foreign Embassadors.

PARIS, March 7.—In the chamber of deputies M. Develle, minister of foreign affairs, spoke at length in support of the bill making punishable with special severity all libelous attacks of the press upon foreign embassadors. M. Ribot said that the government had no intention of curtailing the liberty of the press, but that such blackening accusations as he had been current a short time ago and other scandalous insults could not be tolerated. The bill was approved by a vote of 287 to 188.

Less Than $2,000,000 Gold Remains.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Two million seventy-five thousand dollars in gold was taken from the subtreasury for export today. United States notes and treasury notes were paid for the gold. This large export will leave the United States treasury with a little less than $2,000,000 in gold—the lowest point it has reached since the passage of the act for the resumption of specie payments.

More Troops For the Strip.

The boomers are gathering upon the line in large numbers, but there is no disposition to enter until the opening takes place.

WELCOME TO HARRISON

The Ex-President Honored at His Old Home.

THE CITY IS GAYLY DECORATED.

A Crush of People at His Reception Last Night—Congratulations From the Indiana Legislature—A Visit to His Wife's Grave at Crown Hill.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 7.—This city was gayly decorated in honor of the return to his home of General Harrison, ex-president of the United States. The business buildings and residences along the line of march, from the Union station to the New Denison hotel, were festooned with flags and bunting, and many of General Harrison's pictures were displayed.

Twelve members of the reception committee left this city to meet General Harrison and accompany him back from a point this side of Richmond, where the ex-president spoke as follows:

MY FRIENDS—You will excuse me from attempting to speak. I very deeply appreciate your kindness and the cordial way in which you receive me as I come back to my old state. I assure you it is with a great sense of satisfaction that I find myself again simply an Indianian (cheers); your neighbor and friend, as you are mine. In the future I shall endeavor as a citizen to co-operate with you in all that makes for the dignity and honor and prosperity of Indiana.

A Warm Welcome Home.

Carriages were in readiness when General Harrison's train arrived at Indianapolis, the first being for the use of the ex-president. Governor Matthews and General Harrison's grandson, Benjamin Harrison McKee, also occupied this carriage, which was preceded by the marching clubs, the first of which was the Columbia club. The welcome home of General Harrison was as warm as was his godspeed to Washington enthusiastic four years ago.

At the station thousands sent up a cheer as General Harrison dismounted from the train. His old regiment, the Seventieth, became his personal escort in the procession of 2,000 people. The bands played "Home, Sweet Home." The procession ended after marching seven blocks, leaving those in carriages to accompany General Harrison to his old home on North Delaware street.

After luncheon General Harrison and Mrs. McKee visited Mrs. Harrison's grave at Crown Hill. They were deeply affected and left handsome flowers on the grave. The homecoming of the president has made the keener his recent sorrow. The only speech of the trip was made at Richmond and ended in the ex-president's choking with emotion.

Congratulated by the Legislature.

Last night General Harrison was tendered a reception at the state house. There was a crush of people. Governor Matthews and Hon. C. W. Fairbanks made addresses of welcome, and General Harrison responded feelingly. Governor Matthews and wife, General Harrison and Mrs. McKee held a reception in the rotunda afterward.

Yesterday the house of representatives unanimously adopted a resolution extending to General Harrison a cordial and hearty welcome upon his return to his home and its congratulations to him for the high honor he has achieved for himself and the state of Indiana as the president of the United States of America, from which high office he has just retired full of honors.

It is authoritatively announced that General Harrison will not return to the practice of law for at least a year to come. He will go to Stanford university, California, for two months in the autumn.

The Pope Is Gratified.

ROME, March 7.—Pope Leo is gratified by the offer of American Roman Catholics to give to Satolli a residence in Washington as a present in honor of the pope's episcopal jubilee, and will send his benediction to the donors. It is reported that Dr. O'Connell, the American secretary to the propaganda, has been appointed to a high position, and that the delay in America in the assumption by Rev. F. X. Rooker of Albany of the post of secretary to Satolli is due to the negotiations in regard to the Rev. Mr. Rooker succeeding Dr. O'Connell.

Asking For Mr. Nelson's Release.

HAGERSTOWN, Md., March 7.—In the session of the Baltimore conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. W. D. Clemm offered a resolution calling attention to the imprisonment in Brazil of Rev. DEMPSEY GETS SEVEN YEARS.

The K. of L. Lodge of Which He Is Master Stands by Him Notwithstanding.

PITTSBURG, March 7.—Elizabeth Hugh Dempsey, master workman of District Assembly No. 3, K. of L., has been sentenced to seven years in the Western penitentiary in connection with the Homestead poisoning case, the fealty of the association has not swerved from him in the least. If all efforts fail and he be compelled to undergo the sentence of the court, he will still remain master workman of the K. of L. for the term for which he was elected. During his incarceration Mr. Vincent, the foreman of the district, will discharge Mr. Dempsey's duties jointly with his own, and no change in the official status of the organization will be made. The association is still hopeful that a new trial can be secured for Dempsey, and every effort is being exerted in this direction.

No More Commutations to Be Paid.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Today is the time fixed for finally putting in force what is known as the presidents' agreement of Oct. 17, 1893, which provides that railroad passenger rates from St. Louis and Chicago to New York and other eastern points shall be strictly maintained and that the payment of commissions or rebates shall cease.

THE COCO DE MER.

This Wonderful Plant Has at Last Been Reared in a Botanical Garden.

The extraordinary palm tree known as the coco de mer, or double cocoanut, and considered by the late General Gordon to be the tree which grew in the garden of Eden and bore the fruit of the "knowledge of good and evil," has at last, after many unsuccessful efforts, been reared in the botanical gardens at Kew, England, a fine specimen of the Lodoicea seschellarum, as it is botanically termed, being on view in the Victoria house. This strange plant, which has its home in the Seychelles islands, to the northeast of Madagascar, a locality somewhat remote from the generally accepted site of the garden of Eden, is extremely difficult to rear.

DOUBLE COCOANUT PALM.

As will be seen from the sketch, the cocode mer has a very different method of growth from that adopted by the general run of vegetation. The huge double fruits, 14 inches or so in length, require a good deal of coaxing to induce them to send out a shoot. This shoot, too, is very capricious and must be carefully tempted to attach itself to the soil, which it does at some distance, often as much as two or three feet. The shoot then sprouts up like an ordinary well behaved plant, and the leaves commence to develop. The whole process is shown in the sketch, where the fruit is seen placed in the small pan of damp moss and scaling forth a shoot to another pot. The large fibrous fruits, which look like two cocoanuts joined together, are frequently found floating in the sea, and this has given rise to many traditions, as their origin was for a long time unknown to naturalists. Among others the sailors of the Malay peninsula aver that the fruit grows on a tree deep down in the unfathomable depths of the ocean.

The Hydrophone.

A valuable apparatus for coast defense and also for the defense of ironclads has been brought into practical use in England. Its object is to give warning of the approach of a hostile torpedo boat or battleship during the night or in a fog. It consists of an instrument resembling a microphone. This instrument is placed inside an iron diving bell and suspended in the water at a convenient depth. The electric wire from the instrument are led to stations on the coast or on board the battleship, and variations in the current can be indicated in a suitable way. When a ship approaches within the range of a mile of the instrument, the vibrations of its engines and the motion of the propeller produce a corresponding vibration in the diaphragm. This vibration in the diaphragm is used to produce a variation in the electric current, which in its turn indicates the vibrations on the station. The Industrial World thinks that the applicability of this instrument is very wide, and it will prove useful in the merchant service for the object of informing the coast guard of the approach of a steamer to the rocks during the fog.

Ancient and Modern Tools.

A two years' study at Gheezeh has convinced Mr. Flinders Petrie that the Egyptian stonecutters of 4,000 years ago had a surprising acquaintance with what have been considered modern tools. Among the many tools used by the pyramid builders were both solid and tubular drills and straight and circular saws. The drills, like those of today, were set with jewels (probably corundum, as the diamond was very scarce), and even laths tools had much cutting edges. So remarkable was the quality of the tubular drills and the skill of the workmen that the cutting mark in the hard granite give no indication of wear of the tool, while a cut of a tenth of an inch was made in the hardest rock at each revolution, and a hole through both the hardest and softest material was bored perfectly smooth and uniform throughout. Of the material and method of making the tools nothing is known, says Popular Science News.

The Sapphires of Montana.

Julian Ralph, writing in Harper's Weekly about Montana sapphires, says: "And what do I think of them? They are very beautiful when they are cut. They sparkle and almost flame as the original or fashionable Asiatic sapphires do not begin to do. In fact, the Asiatic sapphires when put beside them appear to highly polished colored glass beside a flaming jewel. I am assured that this fiery quality of the Montana stone will endure forever, because of their very great hardness. The diamond, being classed as 10 in point of hariness, is only one-tenth harder than these Montana stones."

Power of a Light Belt at Quick Speed.

At slow speeds a heavy leather belt takes the power of the motor to the machine. As speed increases the same equivalent of power is conveyed by a lighter belt, and the lightest Ball shows that a belt as light as sewing cotton, running at the speed of a rifle bullet, would carry a horsepower, while, if it were possible to run a belt of the lightest line known—the spider's web—with the velocity of light, it would carry something like 250 horsepower.

Gold Colored Varnish.

For preparing a gold colored varnish pulverize 1 dram of saffron and ½ dram of dragon's blood, and put these ingredients into 1 pint of spirits of wine. Add 2 ounces of gum shellac and 2 drams of sonestrine aloes. Dissolve the whole by gentle heat. The Horological Review says that yellow painted work varnished with this mixture will appear almost equal to gold.

Latticed Furniture.

Lattice and bamboo work represent what is probably the most fashionable of country house furnishing. Fortunately this artistic style is not beyond the power of the amateur furnisher, with a little assistance from a clever carpenter. At any rate a California woman artist who believes that beauty and cheapness can go hand in hand achieved, among other delightful arrangements, the washstand of which a cut is here reproduced from The Decorator and Furnisher.

WASHSTAND WITH TOP OF LATTICE.

As will be seen, the design is at once artistic and unusually convenient and can be carried out in whatever woods and draping materials one prefers, from the simplest to the most expensive. It is worth while to bear this arrangement in mind when planning the furniture for a summer cottage.

Fried Rabbit.

After the rabbit is skinned, washed and well soaked, put it into boiling water and let it boil for seven minutes. Drain it and when cold cut it into joints. Dip each piece into beaten egg and then into fine bread crumbs. Season well with pepper and salt. When all are ready, fry them in butter over a moderate fire for about 15 minutes. Simmer 2 or 3 strips of lemon peel in a gill of gravy. Boil the liver of the rabbit for five minutes, let it cool and then mince it. Thicken the gravy with a lump of butter rolled in flour, add the liver, give the sauce a minute's boil, stir in 2 tablespoonfuls of cream, and lastly the juice of half a lemon. Dish up the rabbit and pour the gravy round it, but not over the bread.

Pineapple Trifle.

Soak an ounce of gelatin in a cupful of cold water; put into a bowl with 3 cupfuls of white sugar, 2 peeled and chopped pineapples, 1 grated nutmeg and the juice and rind of a lemon. Mix and let stand an hour, pour on it 2 cupfuls of boiling water, strain and put some into a form. When the mixture jellies, whip the whites of 4 eggs and drop in a spoonful at a time; beat well and let all harden. Cover the top with pineapple in which is mixed grated pineapple.

Codfish Cream.

Put into a saucepan any remnants of boiled salt cod (picked out in flakes and perfectly free from bone and skin) with a piece of butter and a cupful of cream, plenty of white pepper and a little mustard. Let the whole simmer till perfectly hot, but do not let it boil, and serve.

ART NEEDLEWORK.

Novelties That Tempt to the Pursuit of a Fascinating Occupation.

This season's embroidered book covers are superb as to decoration. One is of crimson velvet, with design entirely worked out in gold bullion and thread. The Pedor rose decoration, with jewel in the center of each flower, and its companion, with the lily worked in pale yellow and shaded with pearl beads in medallion, with ground of sky blue, is another example. These Pedor books are great favorites and hold their own even against their rivals in Kensington work.

A perfect frame for the photograph of a bride or a pretty debutante is that of cream satin thickly padded and embroidered with tender green and other pale tints.

A large screen, the three folds graduated in height, has panels of white Bolton sheeting having designs of conventionalized flowers boldly drawn and worked with shades of bronze and yellow and touches of blue.

A novelty in cushions is that of a greenish gray cloth embroidered thickly with white floss silk. The design of dragons, coiled and interlaced, is worked with a running pattern as a border in Alsatian cotton, electric blue finding most favor. Sometimes the design is carried across the cloth. Newer than this are the tesselotta, table runners and square center pieces worked in large heart's cases and leaves, with colored touches on the edge, and then cut to the form of the leaf or flower—a most effective treatment.

If it be true that needlework is going out of fashion, it is certainly not due to the fact that workers have no temptation to pursue that gentle art, for every kind of novelty seems to have been devised to encourage this most womanly pursuit.

How to Clean Currants.

Currants should be washed in warm water until the water is merely reddened by them, but not soiled at all. When clean, turn the fruit on a sieve to drain and dry them in a cool place, sprinkling a little flour over them and rubbing them in a cloth. This will remove many of the small stalks which will probably still adhere to them even after washing. Now take a few currants at a time and sprinkle them on a plate to discover if any small stems remain. The noise they make will betray them. It is a good plan to clean currants as soon as they come into the house and to store them in a jar, and it is safest not to attempt more than a pound at a time. They must on no account be used when they are wet or hot, and they should have a little flour mixed over them before being mixed with the other ingredients. If liked, they may be scalded with boiling water to make them plump and tender, but even in this case they must be thoroughly dried and floured before being used.

A MONETARY CONFERENCE.

The Significant Treasurer Would Negotiate No Loans.

"Julia," said Mr. Pilver the other morning while sitting at the breakfast table waiting for his coffee to cool, "Julia, let's have a monetary conference."

Mrs. Pilver is treasurer of the establishment, and the suggestion immediately attracted her attention. "A monetary conference, James?" she queried cautiously.

"Yes," said Mr. Pilver, with an insane giggle, "something like they have just had in Brussels, you know."

"Well?"

"Well, we'll pretend to be countries, you know. You can be France and I'll be—let's see, I'll be"—

"Russia," suggested Mrs. Pilver, with great significance.

"Yes, Russia. Russia of course," said Mr Pilver nervously.

"Well?"

"Well, then, Russia would like to negotiate a loan with France. Not a large loan, you know, although it's the custom for nations to deal in large sums of money, but say"—

"I didn't know that they negotiated loans at the Brussels conference," interrupted Frances.

"They didn't," admitted Russia, "but of course they could have done so. What good would a monetary conference be, I'd like to know, if money couldn't be borrowed at it? But, as I said, Russia asks only a small loan, say $1.75 or $2."

"Did I understand you to say, James," said France, "that you wanted this conference to be as much like the Brussels conference as possible?"

"Yes," said Russia hopefully.

"Then I declare it adjourned until next summer," said France decisively, and when Mr. Pilver sadly turned his attention to his temporarily neglected coffee he saw that a thin crust of ice had formed upon it.—Rochester Democrat.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

STATEMENT BY THE MEMBERS OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Showing the Value of the Plainfield Schools, of School Property and of the Present Management.—A Full Explanation of all Questions.

A few weeks ago, in the performance of the duties devolved upon it by the laws of the State, and the trust conferred upon it by the citizens of Plainfield, the Board of Education purchased a piece of property for the purpose of increase in the school accommodations of the city, rendered necessary by the enlarged attendance. This act of the Board has been made the occasion of much criticism in certain quarters, and also professedly because of this purchase taken up upon them to attempt a change in the laws of the State, taking away certain powers and trusts granted by law and the citizens to the Board of Education, so that the same might be transferred to them. In view of these facts, and also because of misrepresentations arising from the discussions have been made regarding the powers of the Board and of the necessities of the case, the members of the Board have thought best to submit to the following statement to the public, that the people may judge as to the propriety of the actions of the Board, and also of that of the city authorities.

As to the Need of Another School House.

Notwithstanding the recent enlargement of the Bryant school and the cutting off of three class rooms from the Assembly Hall in the Stillman building the present season, there is not now a single vacant room in any of the city buildings, except the Irving building, while many of the rooms are overcrowded already. The Irving School was built three years ago in a rapidly growing section of the city, with provision for the supposed necessities of five years growth. The wisdom of this is now evident, as it bids fair to be crowded by the time the five years are up. Two additional class rooms were occupied in that building at the beginning of the school year. But the new vacant rooms in that building at not available to relieve, even temporarily, the overcrowding of the other buildings because of its distance. Scholars cannot be sent two miles from their homes.

Another year will see the demand for more room greatly increased—for instance, the second grammar class in the Franklin school, which now is crowded into two rooms, will next year number 140 pupils, and cannot be accommodated with less than three rooms. It is true that there are vacant desks in some of the rooms, but these cannot be filled by scholars in other classes, nor can other pupils be transferred to these classes without doing violence to the system of grading and causing loss to the pupils themselves; and some extra seats are always necessary to provide for changes in grades as they occur. In the High School the classes are necessarily smaller, and for this reason there is room for the admission of pupils from outside the city limits, by means of which a large part of the expense of maintaining the High School is provided for without taxation.

By reason of the above facts it is patent to the Board that another building must be provided at as early a day as practicable.

Shall it be a High School?

The needed building might be either a primary, a grammar or high school, and by relieving the present buildings, supply practically to the same extent, the demand. The cost of the building would also be about the same whichever grade it was built for, and it therefore became a question for the Board to settle, which would be of the most benefit to the schools and the city. In the matured opinion of the Board, and of both the former and the present superintendents it was thought better to give up the rooms in the Stillman Building now used for the High School, to the grammar grades, for which they are better adapted, thus massing the grammar classes mainly in the Stillman and Franklin Buildings and devote the new building to the High School, where its needs could be better provided for.

The Board is aware that there long has been, and to a certain extent now exists an idea that the public funds should not be used to furnish a higher education than could be obtained in what was known as the "common schools," but the majority of our citizens realize that the exalted reputation of the Plainfield High School, known far and near as one of the best in the land, has done very much to render Plainfield a desirable place of residence, and so has doubtless added far more than its cost to the taxable valuation of the city. In addition to this is the fact that this same reputation has drawn so many scholars here from other towns to obtain its benefits, that the tuition received from them is sufficient to pay all the extra expense necessary to maintain this high school at its level—that is to say that if our High School was degraded to the level of those of many other cities and boroughs the saving would not be so much as loss of tuition. The amount of tuition for the present year will be about $2,300, the most of which comes from High School pupils.

The Selection of the Site.

Having this end in view, the Board have for some time been looking for a suitable site for such a High School building. It was desirable that it should be centrally located, not too near, and yet not too far from the grammar schools, for the sake of easy supervision, in a healthy and respectable part of the town, away from the distraction of business and the noise of the railroad. Several sites were considered but when the Wadsworth property was offered to be obtainable at a very reasonable figure, the Board unanimously decided that it was the most desirable for the purpose, and it was therefore purchased.

The Objections Raised.

Immediately the purchase was made there rose a cacophonous mingled hue and cry against the Board and its individual members, and against this particular purchase. The first are passed unnoticed. The objections to the site seem to have been two fold—its cost and its location. As to its cost, which was said to be extravagant, etc., no one seems to have given the Board credit for the same business sagacity. It was assumed that the present building on the property would be torn down and the site thus be used for the school. While in the opinion of many of the friends of the city that, even, would have been wise, the Board planned to move the dwelling on to one edge of the land, after the close of that have left a large lot for the school at a very low figure. In the opinion of many good judges no desirable lot for so little money could not have been purchased elsewhere in the city. The objection to the location has mainly arisen from a few of the property holders in the vicinity, under the impression that property in a public school would depreciate. As the present school will be a High school to be open only from four to five hours a day, and as, followed by young gentlemen and young ladies only, who behave themselves as such, with no outbuildings or playgrounds, it is difficult to see how it could prove itself a nuisance to any neighborhood. In fact, others of the property holders in the vicinity, in evidence for such a school house over the more numerous small houses and stables which in the event of a probability would have been built on the property if it had been sold to private parties. The former owner parted with the property at a sacrifice because the house was not adapted for a family requiring up so large and expensive grounds, and the locality was not good enough to warrant expensive improvements, while the price was in keeping with the grounds. All the conditions seemed to point to this particular site as the most desirable for the purpose the Board had in view.

The Powers of the Board.

It is evident from discussions on the method of purchasing the property through an individual member of the Board that it is thought necessary to call attention to the fact that the Common Council employed precisely the same method in the recent purchase of a site for an engine house, only that in that case an agent was permitted to earn a commission, which in the case of the Board will be saved to the city. The Board made even less effort to keep the real purchaser in the background—he bought through its secretary, the Council through an agent. The negotiations no misrepresentations were made by the Secretary of the Board.

The Powers of the Board.

The Powers of the Board of Education have been strangely misrepresented. In common with most Boards elected by the people and entrusted with special duties and responsibilities, the Plainfield Board of Education is given sufficient power to carry out its trusts, and no more. The same as many other Boards of Education are given too much power because, etc., it is given the power to determine within a given limit the amount of taxable property in the city for the use of the particular interest in its charge, the city authorities are charged with the duty of assessing, collecting the same, and when collected the Board has the exclusive right to dispense it. It is the duty of the Board, as of other boards, as the election held for that purpose, Dec. 7, 1892, by a two-thirds majority, to fixed the amount to be raised annually for the running expenses of the schools by thirty cents on one hundred dollars of taxable valuation. In addition to this the people and the State law empower the Board to submit propositions from time to time as it may become necessary, but not more than one in any year; and for this purpose the Board is authorized to raise money by mortgaging the school property in its possession. Board has no power to issue bonds. The only bonds which have been issued for school purposes in Plainfield were voted directly by the people, of which bonds there are now outstanding only $3,500. The Board of Education can put no lien on a dollar's worth of taxable property, nor can it ask the city to raise by taxation one dollar more than voted in any year in payment of the indebtedness of any school building. It will be seen how quickly it must reach a limit to the amount of money it can spend for school houses—because as soon as the property in its possession is mortgaged as highly as it will stand, no more can be borrowed, but the Board must await the slow process of paying off the indebtedness at the rate of $1000 each year on each mortgaged school, until enough is paid off to permit of borrowing again for building another.

There is a very different thing from the statement of His Honor the Mayor to the Common Council, that: "This law as accurately interpreted by the Board gives to it the power to expend for the current expenses of the Public School system each year an amount not to exceed one half of one per cent of the taxable valuation, and in addition such further sum as the Board may consider necessary for the purchase of lands and the erecting of buildings for school purposes. This amount the Board is authorized to have added to the tax levy without regard to public opinion on the subject." It need not be said that had his Honor interpreted the law before writing the above, he would have found that not only such was not the interpretation which the Board put upon the law, but that the law is incapable of such an interpretation.

How Has the Board Executed its Trust?

But once in its history, namely in 1888, has the Board called for the whole of the one-half of one per cent, which the people have voted to put within its power. On the contrary, every effort has been made to keep the expenditures as low as possible consistent with maintaining the quality of the schools, which public opinion requires it to have. Last year the school tax was reduced below that of the previous year, notwithstanding an increase in the number of teachers—and it is a notable fact that this was the only item of the tax levy which was reduced, notwithstanding the Common Council was elected with the express purpose of reducing the extravagant expenditures of the previous "combine."

It has been said that the cost of the schools is too high in comparison with others, and very unfair parallels have been drawn between Plainfield and some other places where very little money is spent, and the quality of the schools in consequence, at their cost. The last State report published is for 1892, and its statistics are somewhat out of date, though it is from them that all such comparisons have been drawn. It shows that the cost per head of average attendance in all the cities of the State ranging from $13.94 in Phillipsburg to $31.18 in Orange, averaged $20.35, while Plainfield was $23.13, Bordentown was $31.18, Camden $28.90, and Montclair $29.78. It will be seen that, next to Plainfield's very superior schools the cost is less than half that of the highest, and only twenty per cent. above the average.

In the matter of school houses also the action of the Board will stand the closest scrutiny. Even the severest censurers have not had the hardihood to impugn its acts in this respect. Its actions taken to Trenton to testify in favor of the Mayor's bill could only say that the Board had built the best of school houses and with the utmost economy. The Deputy State Superintendent of Public Instruction has stated that no city in the State has finer school houses or more economically built. Even the Mayor has expressed himself as fully satisfied with the Board in this respect, stating, as for an unexplained reason, he has influenced the Common Council to pass a resolution to that effect, and also assisted to pass through the Legislature a law to prevent the Board doing anything more in this line. That law was "to take effect immediately."

What Would be the Gain by the Proposed Law.

The plan of the Mayor to transfer to the Common Council the trust which the people have confided in the Board of Education, would be to place a divided responsibility, wherein neither party could be held even partially liable to public opinion. 2d. It would place the question of when, where and how a school house should be built in the hands of a body generally selected by ward "bosses," elected by political pull, backed by political influence, and frequently managed by political rings, unfamiliar with the needs of the schools, and unfitted to do their duties, than in a body selected by the people at large because of their responsibility to no specific purposes, familiar with, and actuated only by the needs of the schools. 3d. It would place the Board entirely divorced from politics. Would this be a gain? And why?

The proposed law is entitled "a law to limit the expenditures for schools." Would it limit them? As stated above, the Board has the power to limit the amount that it can spend, and has no power to place a lien on any taxable property. The Common Council, however, by a law passed March 31, 1892, has the power to submit to the people, to issue bonds for the purchase of lands, and the erection of school houses to an extent equal to seven per cent. of the assessed valuation of the city, which bonds will be a first lien on every dollar of taxable property in the city. By means for Plainfield a limit of $690,000 of school bonds, if the Mayor's bill becomes a law, of the amount to be issued provides for the taxation of one third of this amount in each year, under the Mayor's scheme of innocent bill. The taxpayers might be called upon to pay on bonds and interest that he bought through its secretary, the Council through an agent. In the negotiations no misrepresentations were made by the Secretary of the Board.

The Powers of the Board.

The people of Plainfield are respectfully requested to consider the above facts before deciding that there should be an appeal of the Board from any of their public school system, which has so long been a pride of the city. Plainfield has always led the State in educational matters. The first common school in New Jersey was in Plainfield, and in the legislation in the State for public instruction has been based upon what has been done in this city. To-day, as in the past, no school system in the State surpasses, if it equals this; no more competent, devoted and able corps of teachers can be found in the United States than we have in Plainfield; the work of the schools is equal to the best in the recent examinations in Yale the students of our high school outranked those from the finest academies of the land. All this has been largely the result of the fact that the members of the Board of Education is elected and empowered. The change which has been proposed would be retrograde in the worse. Are the citizens of Plainfield ready and willing to see their fairest structure undermined?

A TERRIBLE FALL.

JOHN FERGUSON'S SKULL FRACTURED AND BACK BROKEN.

He was on a Telephone Pole on which Electric Light Wires were Fastened, Connecting a New Customer's Place When the Accident Happened.

John Ferguson, a lineman employed by the North Plainfield Electric Light Company, fell headforemost from the top of a thirty-foot pole, at Somerset street and Manning avenue, about half past five o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was picked up apparently dead and carried to Dr. Mattison's drug store. Blood was issuing from his nose, mouth and ears. The doctor was serving on the Board of Registration nearby and was hastily summoned. He forced some brandy down the man's throat. Doctor Berg was also sent for. It was found that the man's collar and skull were fractured. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital at half-past six o'clock. Later he recovered consciousness for a few moments and said: "My back is broken, I am dying, take me home." It was falsely reported that he died during the night. Although still alive he is not likely to recover. He is in charge of Dr. Probasco. His wife was by his bedside all night.

There are many rumors about the cause of the accident. It is said that the man left the electric light station fifteen minutes past five to connect a new wire to Stahl's candy store, and told Engineer Brown not to "start up" until he returned. It is supposed he was gone a few moments. Engineer Brown is said to have forgotten about the matter and started the engine and dynamos at the usual time. The man touched his head to a live wire and fell.

Another story has it that the man had been repairing the circuit in different parts of the city all day, and had commenced work on the pole where the accident occurred at about the time the current was turned on. While fastening a wire with a pen knife he was shocked.

Again it is said that the current was "cut on" and that the man slipped and fell.

Borough Marshal Pangborn saw the man fall. He says the lamps in the store lighted and that the man slipped and lost his balance. Dr. Probasco says there are no marks of electricity on the man's body.

Dr. Ormsbee examined the injured man in Dr. Mattison's drug store. He says the man had not received an electric shock but had lost his balance.

Those in charge of the new sewer district covered several minutes before 6 o'clock. The engines were not started until that time.

Mr. Ferguson was not recently employed by the company. He says he helped "string" the wires and on account of his experience was taken south by Superintendent Peach, where he helped lay out an electric railway. While there he fell from a trestle and broke both ankles. He has since been hospitalized for climbing and had been advised by his friends to give it up.

LATER.—At six o'clock this afternoon Mr. Ferguson was still alive.

SUB-COMMITTEE REPORT

OF THE WORKS IN OPERATION IN TWO MASSACHUSETTS' TOWNS.

Lawrence and South Framingham Models upon Which the Plainfield Proposed System will Probably be Based.

Report of Sub-Committee on Sewerage concerning Inspection of Filtration System at Lawrence and South Framingham, Mass.

To the General Committee on Sewerage for the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN:—At a meeting of the General Committee on Sewerage held in the Mayor's office on the evening of April 26 your sub-committee was authorized to visit several localities in Massachusetts where sewage disposal works are in operation for the purpose of investigating the kind and cost of construction and the cost of maintenance of such works, the character of the materials used in the purification of sewage, and their effectiveness in the treatment of the sewage so as to prevent such disposal methods from becoming offensive to the residents in their vicinity and thus creating a nuisance.

At Mr. Mayor's request, Mr. Gunn, President of the Common Council, was appointed to join the Committee. Having selected your sub-committee arrived at the Experiment Station of the Massachusetts State Board of Health at Lawrence, Mass., on the morning of May 6, where they were met by Mr. Allen Hazen, chemist, in charge of the station, who kindly placed himself at the disposal of your sub-committee for the two hours devoted to the inspection of the works. Interesting experiments now in progress at that station.

The State Board of Health of Massachusetts is required by State law to establish and maintain such experiment farms in the State as to the best practicable method of sewage purification and disposal, and for this purpose there has been established and maintained by the State Board of Health the station at Lawrence, for obtaining the information they are expected to be qualified to dispense on application.

The filtering grounds, comprising about two-thirds of an acre, are situated on the south bank of the river, on the north bank of the Merrimack River, and are in the immediate vicinity of factories and tenement houses. The sewage is conducted to said grounds in a 12-inch pipe, which having a top surface area of one-two hundredth part of an acre, are covered with a coarse gravel to the depth of about 4 feet, and underlaid with fine gravel and sand. These tanks are filled with intermittent doses of filtering materials, and are double-walled with sewage and filtrate in the space between the walls, so as to discharge of stores and dwellings of about 10,000 people; the main sewer from which the sewage is taken is laid at a point above the entrance of the streams from the factories, and the sewage as we saw it is considered to be about the same as that carried by the pipes of a separate system such as is proposed for Plainfield.

The object of the work with these tanks is to secure the purification of sewage. The working of the tanks; the kind of material used; their efficiency under periods of daily use; the sewage before and after filtration; the bacteria and their growths; these and many other interesting features of sewage disposal, were very fully explained and illustrated by Mr. Hazen, to the benefit. It would be interesting to give the matters in detail, but we feel that it is hardly necessary to do so in a report of this character, where results only are desired. Whatever might be written here must be but extracts from the published reports of the State Board of Health of Massachusetts, to which those desiring more fully informed are referred. But if a committee is investigating sewage disposal they will go no farther, the experience of this station is sufficient to instruct them how to proceed.

Leaving Lawrence at noon we arrived at South Framingham at 2.30 p. m., and at once found quarters in the sewage house immediately Mr. John B. Goodell, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Sewerage, and Mr. Fiske, who have been the beginning been specially interested and active in the promotion, planning, construction and management of the sewerage system of South Framingham, which is in many respects similar to that of any of these Framingham sewage disposal beds.

The cost of preparing the surface of the Framingham beds was about $25 to $100 per acre, one man is employed permanently to manage them; there is no change of conditions in the Winter, the warm sewage flowing the ground in a state of satisfactory porosity. The disposal beds have worked with thorough satisfaction for more than three years, and the soil shows no sign of deterioration.

Should the system be introduced in Plainfield there will be no difficulty in pumping; nor will the expensive disposing appliances of the Framingham farm be required, suitable land can be obtained in the vicinity which can be prepared relatively at small expense; the quantity of sewage is not large and will not be for some time to come; the estimated cost of disposal of the sewage of Plainfield without offense to any body and at a very low cost to the citizens are unusually favorable.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Tesla and Edison.

The greatest triumphs in the application of electricity to the industrial arts belong distinctly to America, and it is here that the most remarkable inventions have been made. Perhaps this is owing to our dry, stimulating climate, but at any rate thus far Europe has done little else than repeat our inventions and apparatus. The two leaders in the field of electrical invention are Edison and Nikola Tesla, representing two rival companies, the Edison and the Westinghouse. It is notable that both these made great discoveries early in life. Edison was very young when he figured out the phonograph, and a mere stripling when he invented duplex telegraphy. Tesla is as yet only 36, and his great discovery of a rapid alternating current was made some years ago. One of the results of it is that an electric glow like daylight may be produced between the opposite walls of a room by simply having metallic wall paper and connecting it with the central generating plant.

Edison, the wonderful young American, was educated in the telegraph office mainly and has not much of an opinion of poring over books. Tesla, on the other hand, is the product of the best polytechnic schools of his native country, Austria. He is from the province of Croatia, but came to America at the age of 30 because he had read that the United States was a great field for ambitious young electricians. Which wizard is greater, the American who was educated in practical life or the Austrian American who had the learning of a scientific school besides, it will be for the future to determine.

Edison's past successes and future expectations are sufficiently well known. Tesla has perfected apparatus which will produce an alternating current of 1,000,000 alternations per second, such rapid waves, in fact, that they cause no affect on the human body. He has produced a flame which lights without making heat or combustion, but which can be changed so as to produce both when they are wanted for warming a house or for cooking. Thus the light will not burn up the oxygen of a room. His machine will make ozone, and by another invention he has made to declares himself able to electrically disinfect all creation. If he can give the world ozone in such quantity, then nobody need ever die of consumption or suffer for want of fresh air. He has made an electrical current flow through vulcanite, hitherto regarded as the insulator nearest perfect of any known. He says he has found five different kinds of electrical discharge, from an infinitesimally thin thread to a huge stream of light. These are some of the claims of electrical wizard No. 2.

The Beekeeping Industry.

At their convention in Washington this winter the National Beekeepers' association resolved to petition congress to protect them against the encroachments of glucose honey, which is placed on the market in great quantities. The glucose is mixed with liquid honey in such a way as to almost deceive even the very elect. It cannot deceive the expert beekeeper, however, or the expert honey eater, and both these want the same kind of legislation that helps butter makers as against the oleomargarine makers.

Few are aware of the proportions the bee honey industry has assumed in the United States. Last year $13,000,000 worth of honey was produced, besides $1,500,000 worth of wax, and the people who own the bees that added all this wealth to the country think it is time something was done to keep their staple from being counterfeited.

The advance in the beekeeping industry since the days when the pioneers tapped and robbed bee trees is as striking as the progress from corduroy roads to railroads. The Romans knew the prime favorite in the Italian one, undoubtedly the descendant of those of whom the classic Latin poets sang. But the Latin bees' descendants have not degenerated as the descendants of the ancient Latins people have. On the contrary, they seem to improve. The beekeeping is a work requiring constant care, but it is not heavy and not disagreeable. It seems especially adapted to women, and many ladies are at present earning a comfortable living from it. A Texas woman has raised in one season 2,000 queen bees, the greatest number on record by any one person. The raising of queen bees as blooded stock for breeding is a lucrative branch of the industry, and it has been brought to as exact a scientific basis as has the breeding of race horses and pug dogs.

This year promises to be as remarkable for fire, flood, accident and disaster as 1892 was. The most appalling disaster thus far is the inundation at Brisbane, Queensland. The streets of the city were covered with water to a depth of 30 feet and in the suburbs houses 60 feet high were in some cases wholly under water. The suffering among the people who escaped with their lives is only less deplorable than the thought of the scores who lost their lives.

Every time any royal bird in Europe is bestowed on some petty princeling to aid the political aspirations of a male relative it is carefully proclaimed to all the world that this is a love match—a love match here and now, i.e. Oh, yes!

FIRST CABINET MEETING

Business Started In a Simple, Direct Manner.

THE NEW OFFICIALS TAKE CHARGE.

Another Democratic Senatorial Caucus.

The President Twice Receives the Public—A Silver Service For Uncle Jerry Rusk From Former Employees.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The first meeting of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet was held at the unusual hour of 3 o'clock p. m., and it lasted something more than two hours. All the members were present. Just prior to the assembling of the new officers in the cabinet room Secretary Carlisle had a talk with the president concerning the home question, and was the first member of the cabinet to arrive at the White House. Postmaster General Bissell came early, with Secretaries Herbert and Gresham close behind him. The others came straggling in, with the exception of Secretary Morton, who did not arrive until 10 minutes before 4 o'clock. There was no formality or ceremony observed in opening the meeting.

Considering Appointments.

Mr. Cleveland, sitting at the head of the table, started business in a simple, direct manner. The session was devoted to the discussion of matters of current public importance, including Hawaiian annexation and the financial question. The greater part of the time was taken up, however, with a consideration of the question of appointments, particularly those of assistants to the various cabinet officers. The necessity for filling these positions without delay was taken as a self evident fact, but Mr. Cleveland impressed upon his official family the necessity of going slowly in making selections. The cabinet adjourned at 5:10 o'clock.

The New Officials Assume Control.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The induction into office of the members of President Cleveland's cabinet gave Secretary Gresham, who was sworn in Monday—was a blissful event in the state department. For the first time in the history of the government the heads of the departments assembled in the diplomatic parlor and together took the oath of office.

After being sworn in Secretary Lamont went over to the war department, where he had a private conference with General Schofield. The chiefs of the various bureaus were then presented to the new secretary. While he was so engaged a large crowd, including several ladies, assembled in the secretary's office and were subsequently presented.

Hoke Smith of Georgia was formally inducted into office of secretary of the interior at noon. His expected arrival at the department had brought together a large number of people, who crowded the corridors about the secretary's door for a full hour before the time set for his appearance. Secretary Noble had for the last time signed his name to his official capacity and notified the heads of the several bureaus of his department that the new secretary would be soon expected to arrive and would receive the officers and the clerks, which he did, Charlie Bennett in Mr. Smith's private secretary.

Mr. Bissell's First Visit.

The change was made at the postoffice department with as little ceremony as possible and with a good deal of pleasant feeling all around. As this was Mr. Bissell's first visit to the department Mr. Wanamaker explained to him the location of the offices occupied by the postmaster general and his chief officials. Mr. Bissell in after moments of leisure, also had the people who are at the head of affairs in the department.

Secretary Tracy severed his official connection with the navy department yesterday and Secretary Herbert took charge. He had a final conference with Mr Tracy relative to various matters now pending. After the conference Mr. Tracy presented the various bureau chiefs to his successor.

The new secretary of agriculture, J. Sterling Morton, arrived at the department about noon, coming direct from the state department. The chiefs of divisions and their assistants were presented to him by Assistant Secretary Willetts of the department. After the presentation ex-Secretary Rusk took farewell of his late employees.

Attorney General Olney was presented to the United States supreme court by the retiring attorney general, Mr. Miller, who, in a few appropriate remarks, announced his own retirement and expressed the hope that his successor would find his relations to the court equally pleasant.

Democrats Again Caucus.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The Democratic caucus which met in the senate chamber was well attended. The action taken indicates that the Populist senators are to be ignored. Senators Kyle of North Dakota and Peffer of Kansas, the old Populists, and Mr. Allen, the new Populist elected in Nebraska, were not invited to attend the caucus, and to this extent at least it would seem that they had been summarily neglected. Mr. Martin's case was different, however. Although elected by fusion votes, he is considered a Democrat and as such was invited by Mr. Gorman to attend the caucus, and he was present and participated in the proceedings. Mr. Allen, it is understood, will vote with the Democrats when it comes to the organization.

Much of the time was consumed in a discussion bearing upon the standing of the senators who have been appointed by governors. A spirit of opposition against seating these men was manifested. It was decided, however, that these matters, together with the case of Mr. Martin, should be referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

The President Receives Twice.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Mr. Cleveland received the public twice during the day, each reception lasting less than an hour. He shook hands with 1,000 people, although only 5,000 passed through the White House. At 2 o'clock the doors were closed to those not bent on business, and this rule, which has been observed for many years, will be continued.

A Silver Service For Uncle Jerry.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Last evening the officials and employees of the agricultural department met at the residence of their late chief, ex-Secretary Rusk, and presented him a handsome silver service of five pieces, with salver and lamp. Each piece also bore the monogram "J. M. R." The affair was a complete surprise to the ex-secretary.

Receipts Exceeded Expenses.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Notwithstanding the unprecedented inauguration weather people on receipts during the inauguration exceeded all expenses.

GIBBONS WHIPS DALY.

It Took the Peterson Lad Thirty-one Rounds to Do It.

NEW ORLEANS, March 8.—There was more than the usual interest taken in the fight last night between Austin Gibbons of Paterson, N. J., and Mike Daly of Bangor, Me. As early as 9 o'clock in the evening the crowd began to congregate, and from that time on until they were ready to enter the ring they kept coming in by street car loads and train-loads. Among the spectators were some of the most prominent sporting men of the United States, who had come to see the great battle between Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Hall, who battle this evening for a purse of $5,000 and

AUSTIN GIBBONS.

$2,000 purse. An immense crowd of admirers of the latter all filled the house. Gibbons was the favorite in the betting, although Daly had many strong supporters among the country contingent. Both Gibbons and Daly were under the stipulated weight when they weighed in at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and were in prime condition. Gibbons claimed that he never felt better in his life. Daly looked ragged and in good shape to stand a hard fight.

The boys commenced work at 9:30. The first three rounds revealed no advantage to either, but in the fourth Gibbons played with Daly like a cat with a mouse. In the sixth Gibbons nearly finished his man. Daly rallied in the eighth and made several hard blows count on his antagonist, and in the ninth Daly had the best of the round. In the tenth and seventh, however, Gibbons began to get up and showed his superiority. The next rounds found Daly making things interesting for Gibbons. The fourteenth round was opened with Daly being aggressive for the first time.

In the succeeding rounds Gibbons dealt some hard blows, but Daly showed remarkable staying qualities. As the fight progressed, it was evident that Gibbons would win it, which he finally did by knocking Daly out in the thirty-first round.

CHIEFS ARTHUR AND SARGENT ACT.

They Order Fifty Engineers and Firemen to Quit Work.

TOLEDO, March 8.—This morning at 8 o'clock 50 engineers and as many firemen of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railroad went out on strike. An order to this effect was issued last night by Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Engineers, and Chief Sargent of the Firemen. Attempts to settle the differences between the company and the engineers have proved futile. General Manager Ashley of the Ann Arbor left town and the other officers of the company have nothing to say in the matter. It is thought, however, that the places of the strikers will be filled by nonunion men. The old engineers on the road were being relieved as fast as they came in off their runs, and new men were taking their places.

One Killed, Two Fatally Hurt.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Mackaye spectatorium was the scene of an accident in which one man lost his life and three others were injured, two of them fatally. William Sabkiere, bridge builder, was killed. The injured are Michael Brennan, bridge builder, leg broken, shoulder dislocated and internally injured; William Lamoyne, bridge builder, hip dislocated and internally injured, will die; Joseph Seamus, chest and chest crushed, will die. The accident was caused by the falling of a derrick beam. A defective casting broke and let the beam down.

Spain's Infant King May Assist.

CHICAGO, March 8.—Spain's infant king may help President Cleveland set the machinery of the World's fair in action on May 1. It has been proposed to connect the Atlantic cable with the electrical apparatus at Jackson park, and at a given moment have President Cleveland, standing in full view of the audience at the exposition grounds, and King Alphonso, surrounded by the royal family at Madrid, press the electric button simultaneously.

The Lehigh Valley's Rental.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—The statement made last week that the management of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company had agreed with the receivers of the Reading upon the calling of the annual dividend paid the Lehigh Valley stockholders from 7 to 5 per cent., is supplemented by the announcement that the money to pay at the latter rate the dividend due next month is now in the treasury of the company, and the same will be paid when due.

More Evidence For Harris.

NEW YORK, March 8.—More evidence has been received by Lawyer Howe in behalf of Carlyle Harris. Miss Anna Wardell swears that she had frequently occupied the same bed with Helen Potts at the Jackson school, and had seen Miss Potts take a pills from a small glass bottle which Miss Potts said contained morphine. Miss Potts told her she often took the pills.

THE RACE TRACK FIGHT

The Committee Grants the Citizens a Hearing.

SPEAKER FLYNN PALE AS A GHOST.

The Doors of the House Ordered to Be Locked—Distinguished Counsel Is Engaged to Advocate the Obnoxious Bill. Many Ladies Present.

TRENTON, March 8.—The citizens of New Jersey crossed swords again with the race track people and defeated them. They secured what they have contended for, a hearing on the repealers to the anti-race track bills. True it was only a hearing before a committee, and not the whole house as they wanted, but nevertheless it was public and was attended by many of the assemblymen who voted for the race track measures.

The committee of 30 appointed at last week's antirace track demonstration met in the chancelor's room in the morning and appointed ex-Senator George A. Large, ex-Speaker J. J. Bergen and ex-Assemblyman William H. Corbin a committee to appear before the legislature to pose the repealers.

In the senate, Senator Marsh moved that the committee be given a hearing. President Adrian ruled the resolution out of order on the ground that it was unprecedented. The president said that the proper thing to do was to have the committee to which the bills were referred give a public hearing.

Flynn Orders the Doors Locked.

Mr. Hutchinson brought the matter up in the house. He moved a call of the house, which was carried. Speaker Flynn then upon ordered the doors locked. Mr. Hutchinson then moved that the representatives of the committee of 30 be given a hearing. Flynn promptly ruled it out of order on the ground that it was unprecedented. Mr. Lane moved, as an amendment, that the house go into committee of the whole and allow the committee to be heard.

"Does the speaker rule that out of order, too, as unprecedented?" The speaker said he did. Mr. Hutchinson then made an eloquent speech. He said that during the debate on these bills the speaker had made rulings which six times denied the people of the state the rights guaranteed them by the constitutions of the United States and the state of New Jersey. At this the galleries and lobbies broke out into applause. Speaker Flynn checked this, and said if it occurred again the galleries would be cleared, adding that the house would not be influenced by outside clamor.

The Speaker Pale as a Ghost.

The speaker held to his ruling, claiming that the proper motion to make was that the committee on municipal corporations give a hearing. Hutchinson appealed from this decision of the chair. The vote was put, and the speaker was overruled by a vote of 34 to 33. Some one called for adjournment.

Sergeant of Sussex left the room surreptitiously and the clerk went on calling Swartout, while Thompson, Carroll and other race track men hurried around and tried to get the members to change their votes. Flynn sat in his chair immovable, but as pale as a ghost. It was plain that he was worried. Thompson and the race track men were also disconcerted. The vote showed that some of their men who had voted for the race track bills had voted to override Flynn's ruling.

They tried every argument known to them, but were met with the reply that the people were entitled to a hearing and should have it. Finally Assemblyman Reed promised that the committee on municipal corporations would give the hearing if the speaker were overruled. This settled the mixed affect. Those who had voted against the chair changed their votes, and after some spirited parleying the chair was sustained.

The Hearing Finally Granted.

True to their promise the committee gave a hearing in the afternoon. The assembly room crowded to its utmost capacity, the ladies' galleries being crowded with the women of the state. Dr. Kempshall of Elizabeth, ex-Speaker James J. Bergen and Dean McNulty, of Newark the Catholic priest of Paterson, spoke. The committee will give a hearing to the supporters of the bill when General Edwards, the legal counsel of the Newark board of works, Samuel Kalisch, Newark's most prominent criminal lawyer, and ex-Judge William T. Hoffman, of Jersey City, the leading criminal lawyer of Jersey, will speak against the repealers.

Trying to Impeach Flynn.

TRENTON, March 8.—Articles of impeachment are to be drawn by the Citizens' league against Speaker Flynn, but their passage is doubtful, as opinion is divided on the wisdom of such a course. The State Citizens' league decided today to establish county leagues throughout the state, the object being the suppression of race track gambling, the repeal of present laws and the prevention of the passage of similar ones in the future.

Mr. Carlisle May Issue Bonds.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Secretary Carlisle yesterday had a long conference with Senator Jones on the question of the probable issue of bonds in order to keep intact the gold reserve. It is the almost general opinion of public men in Washington, Republicans and Democrats, that the new secretary will be compelled to take some action at once to replenish the depleted treasury supply of gold, but it cannot be learned definitely that the sale of bonds has been agreed upon.

Protesting Against the Russian Treaty.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Cassagie Music hall has seldom held a larger crowd than that which gathered last night to protest against the ratification of the extradition treaty with Russia recently passed by the senate. The meeting was held under the auspices of the United Hebrew American societies of the city. The Central Labor federation and the Central Labor union also gave the demonstration their moral support.

Rival Revolts In Honduras.

PANAMA, March 8.—Two revolutions are now destroying the tranquility of Honduras. Two revolutionary armies are about to engage in battle for the supremacy, and two rivals for the presidency stand ready to seize the government, which Ponciano Leiva, the lawfully elected executive, was forced to abdicate.

ANOTHER AMERICAN VESSEL.

The Stars and Stripes Hoisted Over the Ocean Greyhound Paris.

NEW YORK, March 8.—At noon the American flag was hoisted from the flagstaff of the American line steamship Paris, and at that moment the big ocean greyhound was declared an American vessel, privileged to carry the flag of the United States into any foreign port. The steamship was formerly the City of Paris, but hereafter she will be known simply as the Paris.

The ceremonies were not so elaborate as those performed on board the New York, but they had the same significance. Miss Fannie C. Grissom, daughter of the president of the American Line Steamship company, hoisted the stars and stripes on the Paris. The ceremony was witnessed by many prominent persons. After the flag was raised a luncheon was served on board the steamship. During the ceremony the steamship was fastened to the dock.

The Paris had already been christened, and all that was necessary to complete the formal ceremonies was the raising of the flag. She will sail Saturday.

STARTED WEST WITH REVOLVERS.

They Got as Far as Troy and Had a Capital of 3 Cents.

TROY, N. Y., March 8.—Two bright looking boys were lodgers at one of the stations in this city last night. They had grimsacks, and their troubled countenances suggested to the officer in charge that perhaps they were runaways, and by questioning it was learned that the boys were victims of cheap literature. They gave their names as Ross J. Bowden, 17 years old, and Frank McLaughlin, 18 years old, of Dorchester, Mass. The boys left home Sunday night on route for Omaha. They purchased revolvers and ammunition with stolen money. A third lad, who had started with the others, left after going a short distance, taking the pistols. The two continued and had just purchased tickets for St. Louis. When locked up at the station they had 3 cents between them. The boys will be detained until their parents can be notified.

A MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY

Rosie Rutzler Found In a Park With Her Throat Cut.

SHE HAD A COMPANION IN DEATH.

Her Assailant Unknown, but He May Be the Young Man Found Dying by Her Side—He Protests His Innocence on His Deathbed In the Hospital.

PITTSBURG, March 8.—Rosie Rutzler, a pretty young girl of Apollo, Pa., on the Western Pennsylvania railroad, is lying cold in death at the morgue, the victim of an assassin's knife and pistol. James Gill, a young man who was with her, is lying at the Allegheny General hospital dying from wounds inflicted by the same person who killed Rosie.

Whether the person is Gill or not is unknown at this writing. He recovered consciousness long enough to say he did not do it. The tragedy occurred at 12 o'clock in the Allegheny parks near Cedar and Ohio streets, almost under the equestrian statue of Washington. Gill and the girl were noticed sitting on one of the benches by a park policeman. He had gone but a short distance when he heard two shots. He ran back to where he saw the pair but a few minutes before.

He found the young woman lying on the ground. Over her prostrate form was the young man. Her throat was cut and blood was spurting out from under her dress.

An Awful Spectacle.

There were also two bullet holes in her face from which the blood was running down in two small streams. The young man's throat was also cut from ear to ear. The blood from the wounds of the two people ran all over their bodies and saturated their clothing. As the body of the young woman was picked up it was found that life was extinct.

The young man, who was still living, was conveyed to the Allegheny hospital, where the doctors say he cannot live. He managed to say he did not kill Rosie.

The case is shrouded in mystery. It was almost midnight when the tragedy occurred. At that hour the park is generally deserted. Detective Glenn found footprints in the snow back of the bench upon which the couple were seated. Several officers believe an attempt at double murder was made by persons hostile to the young couple. Others think the tragedy was the result of a jealous lover's quarrel.

Neither Gill nor Miss Rutzler is known in Pittsburg.

Yesterday two armed men were sent from here by team to his relief. The money is all right.

MYSTERIOUS POISONING CASE.

Husband Dead, Wife Dying and Three Children Critically Ill.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 8.—The husband dead, the wife lying at death's door and three children critically ill—the result of poison—is the sad state of affairs at 1067 Francis street. Henry T. Horner, with his wife Henrietta, aged 45 years; Rudolph, aged 7 years; Harry, aged 3 years; Harry Harris, a grandchild, and Thomas Horner, a young man, comprise the family. How they were poisoned is a mystery that County Physician Isaacs and Coroner Jeffreys are investigating. When the house was visited the lifeless body of the father lay on a couch in the sitting room, and the pitiful moans of the sick wife and children up stairs could easily be heard.

CHILDREN'S DRESSES.

Suggestions For Making Several Handsome Ones For Little Girls.

All the new wash materials are particularly pretty for children's frocks, and short lengths of handsome fabrics sold at a reduction may be made up most effectively for young girls. One advantage in little children's attire is that the mode varies but slightly from one season to the next, so that it is quite safe to begin on the simple gowns for the summer now when the dressmakers and seamstresses are not busy. The prettiest little organdie gowns are made with a low necked, short waisted bodice, about which is gathered a full ruffle, edged with lace, and falling low enough to entirely conceal the waist. The little skirt is gathered and finished with a plain hem or with a little frill.

A pretty model for a cashmere dress has a pointed capeike ruffle, gathered from the neck and falling quite to the belt in the front and at the back. The ruffle is finished on the edge with a scallop embroidered by hand and having rows of dots worked in following the outline of the scallop. Another pretty idea is a gathered waist of wool, belted with many straps of velvet and worn over a white embroidered guimpe. The gown of soft fawn shalley, with green leaves and tiny flowerets, has its trimming of thin velvet, or a plain blue wool, light, is made stylish with a decoration of brown velvet.

Another pretty idea for a challie is copied from a dressy little frock of yellow bengaline. The skirt is plain. The waist is shirred at the front and back, leaving a standing ruffle of the goods. About the waist is a broad belt made of pipings of bengaline about half an inch wide, with rows of gold braid between. This belt does not meet in front or at the back, but is finished on either side the shirred space with two rosettes of the braid. A full ruffle gathers over the shoulder, stopping at the shirring, and is finished on the edge with the braid. Baby ribbon in velvet or satin might replace the gold on a figured dress, and matching some color in the material make a p[illegible] addition to the summer dress.

Good For Colds.

A medicinal lemonade of value is made of flaxseed, lemons, sugar and water. Pour 1 quart of boiling water upon 2 tablespoonfuls of flaxseed. Add the juice of 2 lemons, but not the peel. Sweeten to the taste. Steep three hours in a covered pitcher. Ice it before drinking. It is admirable for colds.

The Old Made New.

The favorite way of bringing a last year's jacket up to date seems to be to add a velvet shoulder cape to it. A lovely confection on Broadway, New York, was of black cloth, tight fitting, with a shoulder cape of purple velvet. A very pretty toque of the same velvet as the cape was worn with it, trimmed with sable tail. The way some suburban young ladies twist and turn their finery about so as to give it a spring, summer, autumn or winter aspect is quite wonderful. For instance, a winter bonnet is instantly transformed into a spring one by the placing of a bunch of violets on and under the brim. Later on the violets give place to more seasonable flowers mixed with a little light lace.

White Hands.

An excellent whitener and softener of the hands for occasional use is made of 2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, 1 of glycerin, 1 of colorless almond oil and a few drops of the triple extract of violets.

A Mouse Full of Pillows.

There is a certain old adage to the effect that too much of a good thing is well nigh as bad as none, but in this day of luxurious couches and innumerable pillows it seems difficult to reach the superabundant point.

To make a pillow like the one the drawing shows, purchase a 20-inch square of sage colored sateen, some twisted silks of lighter shades of the same color, and one yard of india silk, one shade lighter than the cloth.

A TASTY DESIGN.

On the sateen draw or have stamped one large horse chestnut leaf and embroider it in long and short stitches with the twisted silks. Cut the india silk into 6-inch strips, hem the edge and make a full and ample frill. With some plain, simple material for the back, make the cushion cover and stitch the frill into the seam in three of the four sides. Slip in the pillow and close the open end with as many invisible stitches as you can make.

FOUR WESTERN STATES.

Buildings Erected by Illinois, Iowa, Idaho and South Dakota at the Fair.

Illinois modestly claims to have a state building at the World's fair which for convenience and beauty, both external and internal, is not excelled by any other. Its dimensions are 150 by 400 feet, and its floor area 2.2 acres. The summit of its flagpole is the highest point on the exposition grounds. It stretches 55 feet above a dome which itself reaches a height of 236 feet 6 inches. The building has cost about $200,000, and its design is a French adaptation of the Italian renaissance.

The southern arm extends 75 feet beyond the walls of the main building, is three stories high, and will be used by the board of commissioners and governor of the state as council and reception rooms. All the artistic work of the reception rooms and library has been done by ladies. Miss Ida Burgess painting the frieze which is attracting so much attention.

Most of the states have made earnest and generally successful efforts to have their buildings at the Chicago World's fair typical each of the state and its products, and that of Iowa is quite unique. The original settler in Iowa,

IOWA BUILDING.

Julian Dubuque, besides doing a little trading with the Indians, worked the lead mines, of the existence of which he was informed by the aborigines, and it is therefore but natural that this product and relics in connection with it should form an important feature of the Iowa exhibit, although a great deal of space will be given up to agriculture, for it is a fact that Iowa contains less waste land than any state in the Union. All the rare plants of the state will also be on exhibit and many interesting relics of early days and Indian tribes.

Idaho, as almost the youngest commonwealth of the great sisterhood, has a state building at Chicago which attracts by its novelty. As Florida has reproduced her oldest fortress, San Marco or Fort Marion, and other states have in like manner chosen for modern some structure most typical of their history or products, so Idaho appears to have taken as her model an ideal summer home in the mountains. Its architecture is not to be described in the standard phrases; the cut tells it all. The building will be a news exchange and home for Idaho visitors rather than a place for exhibiting products.

South Dakota was fortunate in securing one of the best and most prominent sites on the fair grounds, her state building being the first to attract attention on the south side of the Fifty-seventh street entrance. The building is 70 by 120 feet, two stories high, each story 16 feet. Fourteen of the principal cities of the state will be memorialized in as many beautiful windows. Every nail has been driven by South Dakota muscle. The cuticle has been finished in Yankton portland cement, a newly developed product which promises to furnish one of the greatest industries of the state. The exhibit will show in separate groups the products of all sections from the mountains and rivers to the Big Sioux basin. There will be views showing artesian creeks and lakes and a few of the most wonderful artesian wells known, some having a flow of over 1,000 gallons per minute and a pressure of 150 pounds to the square inch. There are no other artesian wells of such volume and power. Their capacity for industrial usefulness is beyond comprehension.

Education and the Fair.

Speaking of one feature of the Columbian exhibition, a Boston paper says that there are no institutions in which patriotic Americans take a keener pride than the schools, academies and colleges. The great common school system is our country's unique glory. To make a display of American products and progress which ignored the schools would be shortsighted and absurd. At the express and repeated invitation of the directors of the World's fair the educational authorities in the several states, aided by appropriations, set to work to prepare suitable exhibits of the work of the schools and colleges. Large sums of money have already been expended, with a promise of the most satisfactory results, and the exhibition space asked for is likely to be too small rather than too large.

A TERRIBLE TALE.

What Would He Have Done if His Station Had Not Been Reached?

Several gentlemen sitting together in the smoking compartment of a Pullman car fell to relating their experiences in railroad accidents. Four or five adventures of the sort had been related, when an Englishman in the party declared that all these stories were as nothing compared with a railway tragedy in his own country, of which he had been an unwilling spectator. It cannot be was at once called upon to tell the story.

"Five years ago," the Englishman said, "I took the 6 o'clock train one morning from Bristol to go to a town about 80 miles distant. It was a local branch road. As you are no doubt aware, the English locomotives are not furnished with comfortable cabs for engineer and fireman—or as we call them, the driver and the stoker—as yours are. Those two persons are practically out of doors.

"Our train had gone on without incident for some miles, when I, who was in one of the foremost carriages, heard loud voices, apparently of persons in a violent quarrel somewhere in front of me. I put my head out of the carriage window and saw that the engine driver and stoker were engaged in a fight on the engine.

"Their angry words became fewer and fewer as their blows rained thicker and thicker upon each other. Finally they clutched in a desperate struggle. The driver seemed to be engaged in an attempt to force the stoker off the engine.

"I shouted to the guard, but he was out of hearing in the after part of the train. Nearer and nearer the two desperate men came to the step of the engine. The driver gave his antagonist a desperate push. The stoker saw that he was gone, but clung to the lever. It fell terrible struggle and over both went to the ground.

"This left the engine entirely unattended. Evidently the steam had been left fully turned on, for the train began to rush forward at an increasing rate of speed. On and on we went at a pace which became terrible. No one could get to the locomotive, and no one knew how to handle it if he could have got there.

"We whizzed past a station where we should have had our caught glimpses of astonished faces looking at us. Past another station, past a third, past a fourth, on we whirled at ever a swifter speed.

"Then we all knew that the next station was a terminus. When we reached that, we should be hurled against a buffer, and the train would be wrecked. What was to be done?

"Nothing was done. We plunged on and on. The terminus came into view. It came nearer and nearer, seeming to bulge swiftly into greater size as we bore down upon it. In a moment more"—

The door of the smoking compartment opened, and the porter called out, "All hany!"

"Good day, gentlemen!" said the Englishman, getting up quickly. "Sorry, but this is my station!"

He disappeared, and the others in the smoking compartment never heard how the story came out.—Youth's Companion.

A Child's Version.

The idea presented to a child's mind by a word which he thinks he understands, though he mentions has never been explained to him, is often quite foreign to anything which the dictionary has to offer.

"The wind bloweth where it listeth," read the Sunday school teacher to her class of little girls. "Do any of you know what listeth means?"

The children, with one exception, shook their heads. The exception was an 8-year old Saxon haired girl, who after a moment's reflection said sagely, "I know!"

"You may tell us, then," said the teacher encouragingly.

"I'm afraid," said the little girl in a dubious tone, "that I can't make the rest of them understand, for they haven't any grandpas to the country, same as I have. But there's always a strip on the bottom of the front doors in the country that grandpa told me was 'list,' and if you could just feel the wind blow in under that door once," said the child in a tone of conviction, addressing the rest of the class, "you'd know what that queer mount is a minute!"—Youth's Companion.

Boyhood's Delights.

I'd like to be a boy again without a row or cares, with freckles scattered on my face, and haywood in my hair. I'd like to rise at 4 o'clock and go a barefoot boy, and save the wood and feed the hogs and lock the stable doors; and herd the hens and watch the bees and take the mules to drink, and ride the horses to the field and back, so that they wouldn't sink; and milk about a hundred cows and bring the wood to burn and stand out in the sun all day and churn and churn and churn; and wear my brother's coat of clothes and walk four miles to school and get a licking every day for breaking some old rule, and then get home again at night and do the chores once more, and milk the cows and feed the hogs and carry mules galore, and then crawl wearily up stairs to seek my little bed and bread and say: "This worthless boy! He isn't worth his bread!" I'd like to be a boy again—a boy has so much fun. His life is just a round of mirth from rise to set of sun, I guess there's nothing pleasanter than closing stable doors and herding hens and closing bees and doing evening chores.—Washington News.

To Establish a Race Track.

The Crescent League wheelmen held a meeting last night. The principal business of the evening was the discussing of the question of establishing a cycling race track on the Crescent League grounds in North Plainfield. Nothing definite was arrived at, but the most of those present seemed to be in favor of it.

STATE CHARITIES.

Meeting of the Union County Branch Monday Evening.

The meeting of the Union Co. Branch of the State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey held Monday evening in the parlors of the Crescent avenue church, was well attended and interesting. The president, Hon. Chester M. Voorhees of Elizabeth, was obliged to be absent at a meeting in Linden to oppose race-track gambling, but Rev. Dr. McAllister made a very acceptable chairman.

A vacancy in the executive committee was filled by the unanimous election of Mr. Anthony Comstock, whose home is in Summit.

The Committee on Jails and Almshouses reported that the new warden of the Elizabeth jail seemed capable, and willing to co-operate with the committee in their efforts to elevate the prisoners. He had agreed to put up some bookshelves which had been purchased by the Association, and donations of books suitable for the prisoners to read were solicited.

The Committee on Exhibit at the World's Fair reported that the State appropriation had arranged to send a handsomely bound volume of the society's annual reports.

Mayor Dilbert, being asked by the chairman whether any improvement had been made in the condition of the Plainfield poor, said that the conditions were at present the same in Battle Row, but that it had come to be regarded as a nuisance by the Alms Committee, Common Council, and citizens, and was likely to be soon done away with. Better accommodations would probably be provided for the paupers within a few months.

Mrs. Williamson of Elizabeth, the general secretary, gave a short account of the work of the State Association, saying that its chief object had of late been devoted to bringing about measures to prevent the keeping of children and insane persons in alms-houses. She spoke of the wise provisions of the parole-bill introduced by the Association by which prisoners were released before their term of sentence had expired upon their promise of good behavior, to be re-imprisoned if this promise should be broken.

She told also of the special work of Union county branch, and made an earnest appeal that some of the visitors present would become members. Rev. Mr. Nourse and Rev. Hobart Clark spoke on the same subject. Mayor and Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Henry B. Newbalt were elected by acclamation, and at the close of the meeting Mr. Isaac Miller and Mr. George H. Goddard gave their names to the secretary. The next meeting of the Association will be held in Elizabeth on the first of May.

Mr. Pliny Fisk's Opinion.

The New York World, in publishing views of prominent business men the financial situation of the United States, gives the following from Mr. Pliny Fisk of this city:

"We have paid off $250,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds during the last four years, and have created under the Silver act of 1890 about $130,000,000 in treasury notes, so that our total obligations to-day are in the neighborhood of $120,000,000 less than they were four years ago, and still per talk about a bankrupt treasury. Now, there is probably no question but that the Government will have to issue $50,000,000 in bonds or certainly be disposed of at fair price. We shall know in a few weeks or sooner just what is to be done, and then all this scare will be over.

"There is no question of the ability of the United States to pay its obligations in as good money as any other country pays, and, whatever happens eventually, we will settle in gold. There is no doubt about it.

"I have not heard of any meeting of the Clearing-House to discuss the issue of certificates, and see no necessity for any such action. The high rate for money is caused merely by discrimination of collateral. I believe that all the money wanted can be borrowed at the legal rate on first-class collateral.

"I do not see any reason why that the Government proposes to tax Clearing-House certificates as it does circulation. I do not, nor any one else, think that Clearing-House certificates are only issued, of course, in times of great pressure, and are outstanding usually for more than a few weeks, or a few months at the utmost. It could not be done arbitrarily and without a proper law.

Horse Railroad Bonds Taxable.

An important decision was rendered in the Court of Errors and Appeals in Trenton, N. J., yesterday in four suits brought by the city of Newark against the Merchants' Insurance Company, of Newark, to recover tax due on several millions of horse railroad bonds.

The decision which is a victory for the city of Newark, will compel the payment of taxes amounting to many thousands of dollars. The general effect of the holding that such bonds are taxable will be to tax horse railroad bonds all over the State.

The city of Trenton commenced suit against the Trenton Passenger Railway company yesterday to recover $70,000 for back taxes.

The Corporation Counsel's Opinion.

The Corporation Counsel was asked what he thought of the difference between the Mayor and the School Board on the legal question in dispute. He replied that neither the Mayor nor members of the School Board were lawyers, and it was not surprising that they should differ on legal questions when one considers how often even judges disagree. He thought, however, as to the school laws, that any good lawyer could easily convince the School Board that they are in error on their law.

BEAT THE CHAMPIONS.

PARK CLUB BOWLERS DOWN THE CRACK N. J. A. C. TEAM.

It was the First Time They Have Been Defeated on Their Own Alleys This Season—A Good Game and a Close Finish.

About twenty-five members of the Park Club accompanied that club's bowling team to Bergen Point, last evening, and witnessed one of the best played and most exciting contests in which that club has taken part this season, besides the defeat of the New Jersey Athletic Club's crack team, the champions of New Jersey.

The Park Club team has won games from the Union County Country Club at this city, the Racquet Club, the Orange Club, and the Westfield Athletic Club, and while these victories are a credit to the team, the glory of last night's victory overrides them all. Their victims have won eleven out of twelve games this year, and have not been defeated on their own alley before.

The Park Club bowlers were over 100 pins ahead at the end of the fifth frame.

This was more than the champions could stand, and to be in the lurch was bad enough, but to be behind 100 pins was too much altogether, and they forthwith began their club yell, and kept it up with such vehemence, as to partly accomplish its object, that of "rattling" the visitors. But despite this feat and its nearly fatal results to the Park Club's big lead, the champions were forced to acknowledge defeat in their own ballwick.

The following is the score:

PARK CLUB.		N. J. A. C.

The order requires the defendant to show cause on March 16th before the court, why an injunction pendente lite as asked for should not be granted. The order was granted on motion of the plaintiff's counsel.

THE UNION GUN CLUB WON.

The Second Shooting Match of a Series of Five.

Twenty-five expert trap shooters assembled on the grounds of the Rolling Springs Gun Club at Rutherford, yesterday, to take part in the open programme events which preceded and followed the team match between the local team and the Union Gun Club of Springfield. The day was almost perfect for target work, the strong sun enabling the shooters to keep comfortable without the aid of overcoats.

The team race was between teams of ten men each, and twenty-five artificial targets were shot at by each man, the shooting being under the five-trap rapid firing system. This was the second match of a series of five, and the Unions duplicated their previous performance of winning. The scores:

Opposed to the Catholic School Bill.

At a meeting of the Classis of the Reformed Church in the New York Avenue Church in Newark, last night the Rev. Dr. James M. King, secretary of the National League for the Protection of American Institutions, introduced the matter of the proposed sixteenth amendment to the United States constitution, which will prohibit the use of State moneys for an institution of a sectarian nature.

Dr. King said that although the United States had given $400,000 to the Catholics for the education of the Indians in that faith, other denominations had refused government aid and could speak freely. Referring to the recently introduced Faribault system in the West, he said:

"What under Heaven has the American free school system to make in the way of a compromise with Catholics? New Jersey is having the distinction of being the battle ground of the entire Republic. The insidious undermining of the fundamental life of the State is not the race track but the Catholic School bill which has been introduced in the Legislature. I believe that the bill has more peril in it than all the gambling and race track measures that can be placed upon the statute book."

Hard Winter for Birds.

The West Jersey Game Protective Society is distributing quails throughout the lower counties of the State. It is stated that more game will be put out this season than for a number of years. During the severe winter in December and January, it is said, hundreds of quails perished for the want of food and from the intense cold. The farmers state that the quails were so weak for the want of nourishment during the Winter that they could not fly, and could be easily caught and fed from the hand. In some of the lower counties the residents protected and fed the birds. It is stated that many of the birds were killed by unscrupulous persons, who hunted them and found no trouble in catching them without firing a gun.

Theatrical Notes.

Concerning "The Devil's Auction" to be played at Music Hall, Saturday evening, the manager says: "The most complete and expensive production which The Devil's Auction has ever had, will be given during the season of 1892-93, by manager Charles H. Yale, who has spared no effort or expense to present it on a scale of magnificence that will most effectually eclipse any spectacular performance which has ever been presented in this country."

Comedian Wm. H. Crane's success in "On Probation" has been so pronounced that arrangements have been made whereby he is to remain with his company at the Star Theatre in New York, until the arrival of Summer. The contracts which were made for his appearance in other big cities have all been cancelled.

Dainties During Business Hours.

Those who work in offices are apt to nibble on fruit, candy, or other dainties during office hours. Where steam is used for heating a delicious and healthy morsel can be obtained easily. Place an apple—a Baldwin apple is best for the purpose—on the warmest part of the steam radiator. In about three hours it will be thoroughly cooked. Cut it in quarters. The pieces will remove rapidly, and you have a delightful, tasty, steam-cooked apple, the odor of which will float about the office and make every-body's mouth water. It is far superior to an oven-baked apple.

Roselle to Have Sewerage.

The Roselle Sewerage Company has been granted a franchise to construct a sewer in Roselle, to run through the township to tidewater, emptying into the Bound near Hoge's Creek. The incorporators of the company are Messrs. C. D. Miller, H. F. Baldwin, J. W. Hope, Wm. T. West and Wm. H. Peddie. Seven miles of sewers will be built immediately. The capital stock of the company is $25,000.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

To Decide Whether Harris Shall Have a New Trial.

NEW YORK, March 9, (Special.)—Recorder Smith is not sitting in General Session to-day. He announced yesterday that Judge Martine would occupy his place on the bench in Part III. for a day or two.

The Recorder thus resigns his place to Judge Martine in order that he may devote himself to a careful examination of the remarkably contradictory affidavits submitted by Mr. Howe and the District-Attorney on the motion for a new trial for Carlyle W. Harris, convicted a year ago of wife-poisoning, and who seeks a new trial on the ground of the discovery of evidence that Helen Potts-Harris, the victim, was an habitual user of morphine.

NEW YORK, March 9—(Special).—No news of the missing steamship Narcotic.

THE BILL IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

The State will not Support the Parochial Schools.

The bill introduced in the New Jersey Legislature for the purpose of securing from the State money for the support of the Catholic parochial schools will not be pushed to final passage.

Its fate was decided at Trenton yesterday afternoon by an opinion from the Attorney-General which was sent to the House of Assembly by a resolution presented to that body by Mr. Wright, of Bergen. When the resolution was presented it produced much discussion. Messrs. Harrigan and Coyle opposed the resolution, and Mr. Lake of Union favored it.

Mr. Hutchinson arised in favor of submitting the bill to the Attorney-General and it was adopted by a vote of 41 to 13. Late in the afternoon Attorney-General Stockton sent in his opinion.

After referring to the provisions of the bill he says:

"The constitution of the State provides that 'no donation of land or appropriation of money shall be made by the State or any municipal corporation to or for the use of any society, association or corporation whatever.' I am of the opinion that the act attempts to appropriate money to the use of a corporation within the prohibition of the constitution. The same question was submitted to me some years since in reference to an appropriation for Bordentown College, and I then gave the opinion that the appropriation was unconstitutional. Having formed the opinion that the bill is unconstitutional for the reasons stated, it is unnecessary for me to consider any other question. It is within the power of the Legislature in providing for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools for the instruction of all the children in the State between the ages of five and eighteen years, to accomplish this result by the instrumentality of a private corporation."

After the receipt of the bill was counted to the desk of the Speaker's private secretary, where it will remain.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Edison says that by his new process for extracting magnetic iron 10 men will be able to work up 20,000 tons of ore in a day.

Just before a retiring president goes out of office he always issues a proclamation to the United States senate to hold a special session March 4. This meeting is that the senate may officially recognize the new president's cabinet; also that it may confirm the nominations of the high officials, foreign ministers and consuls who are to come in with the new administration.

A special extra session of congress has only been called by a newly inaugurated president four times in the last 50 years. Such extra sessions are the beginning of a new administration are exceedingly rare. Of the four that were called, three were made necessary by the failure of the outgoing congress to pass appropriation bills. The other was called by President Lincoln at the outbreak of the war.

Whatever happens or does not happen in regard to the currency question in this country it will be well to bear in mind a few facts. The soil is here just the same, and it will raise as large crops. So there will still be the same work for farmers. People must still wear clothes, so there will be the same work for textile manufactures. Human needs will in all cases remain just what they were before, and they are constantly enlarging besides. As long as these needs must be supplied there will be work and trade, consequently ways to get a living.

Will the Chinese in the United States register their names and residence and place their photographs on file at government offices as required by the Geary law of congress? If they do not do this before May 1, under that law they will be expelled from the country. Very few of them have complied with the law as yet, and most of them says anything at all about it. What are they going to do? And if they refuse to be photographed and registered, will the United States engage in a business which can only be compared to the expulsion of the Jews from Russia? It has been suggested that the Chinamen are violating the law in order to carry it into the courts and test its constitutionality, but they do not admit any or deny it. One thing is certain, Chinee can do that some Christian white men cannot, and that is, keep his mouth shut.

Outgoing and Incoming.

It is to be observed that at the present change of presidential administration there is an unusual amount of good feeling between the outgoing and incoming officials. Whatever of bitterness there was in November, it has in great measure subsided, and each party seems disposed to let the other party down gently. Republicans cheered as heartily as Democrats when Hilary Herbert entered the house of representatives the first time after his appointment as secretary of the navy. Perhaps here is one good result of having our elections so long before the entrance on an office.

Apparently our national officials consider that it never belittles the greatness of anybody to recognize the merit there is in his opponent. There are measures that are for the good of this whole people, Democratic, Republican and Populist—yes, and Prohibitionists and Woman's Righters, too, saying nothing of Nationalists. Victorious parties can well afford to look at these measures and accept the best, no matter who suggests it. So Gladstone obtained and has kept his supremacy and always got what he wanted at last. Even in the parliamentary fights at the close of the late congress it was noteworthy that it was particular measures rather than political differences that brought out the resources of parliamentary strategy.

Coast Defenders of the New Navy.

Three of those of the largest type have already been ordered, the Massachusetts, the Oregon and the magnificent vessel lately launched, the Indiana. The Cramps are building the Massachusetts at Philadelphia, while the Oregon is under construction at San Francisco. These three monster ships are the favorite contribution of Secretary Tracy to the new American navy. Of what the three will be when completed Mr. Tracy wrote three years ago, "Their equal as fighting ships does not exist at the present day."

The Indiana is a type of these three coast line battleships. Mr. Tracy says of them further, "There are others of greater size, none of greater efficiency." The Indiana is 348 feet long and cost $3,020,000. She is not meant for speed, merely for destroying the ships of a hostile fleet that might attack our coast cities. The main batteries of the Indiana could throw at a single discharge over three tons of shot and shell. Her belt armor is 18 inches thick and 7½ feet wide, extending 4½ feet below the water line and 3 feet above. She has a ram bow.

The engines are of the twin screw kind, and in case of need this great floating arsenal can travel 16 miles an hour, though speed is not her strong point. That is fighting. In addition to her main batteries she has 20 secondary guns; likewise a set of torpedo guns that can keep up a steady discharge all around the vessel. All the same, the day of great naval battles is probably over.

FITZSIMMONS IS VICTOR

Jim Hall Knocked Out In the Fourth Round.

A TERRIFIC RIGHT HANDER DID IT.

The Purse, $40,000, Was the Largest Ever Offered In the Prize Ring—The Victor Takes Out Naturalization Pap rs Before the Fight—Sketch of the Winner.

NEW ORLEANS, March 9.—Bob Fitzsimmons and Jim Hall fought in the arena of the Crescent club last night for $40,000, the greatest purse ever hung up for two boxers. The fight was at catch weights, and both men had trained hard and faithfully for the battle. Hall had not been in the best of humor since his arrival, and when he arose he looked decidedly pale and drawn. He claimed that he had not been able to sleep well. In the afternoon, accompanied by Mitchell, he retired to a country hotel to take a nap. On the contrary, Fitzsimmons knocked about the streets unattended save by a dense admiring rabble. The clubhouse filled rather slowly when the doors opened. The fight was scheduled to take place at 9, and the crowd was in no particular hurry to put in an appearance.

Arrival of the Combatants.

At 7:35 Hall, accompanied by Mitchell entered the building and was loudly cheered. Fifteen minutes later Fitzsimmons and his trainer and backer walked through the main entrance. The ovation given him was much greater than that accorded to Hall. Both men announced themselves in fine fettle. At 8:10 there were about 4,000 people in the building, and they were still coming in a steady stream. Before the battle Charley Mitchell announced his faith in Hall's ability, and it was said that Squire Abingdon, who was in Hall's corner, had bet a large amount on the result.

New York men were prominent throughout the building and the leading sports of the country were present. Most of the southerners put their money on Fitzsimmons late in the afternoon, and the result was that the lanky Australian went into the ring a slight favorite.

Shortly after his arrival in the city Fitzsimmons applied for naturalization papers, which were granted. He did this in order to justly wear the stars and stripes.

The Fight Begins.

At 9 Jim Hall entered the ring followed by Charley Mitchell, Jack McAuliffe, Squire Abington and John Kline. Hall took his seat in Bowen's corner. He had won the toss. Fitzsimmons entered a moment later bearing an American flag over his shoulder. He was seconded by his brother Billy, Martin Julian and his trainer.

At 9:18 both men stepped to the center of the ring and shook hands. A moment later they were circling warily around waiting for a chance.

Round 1—Fitz feinted. Hall jumped back. Again Fitz feinted, but failed to land. Fitz tried with his right and missed. Both men were like jumping jacks. Hall parried a blow and landed his left on Fitz's neck. Fitz hit Hall a left hander on the neck. Hall caught Fitz a light blow on the left eye that made him smile. The redhaired man replied with a blow in the ribs.

Fitzsimmons Had the Best of It.

Round 2—Fitzsimmons still pursued his leading tactics and landed his right and left several times very lightly. Hall's body, he also got in a good right and left on Hall's face. It was not until well toward the close of the round that Hall ventured to land a few good blows, but then they were by no means dangerous. Fitzsimmons had by far the best of the rounds.

Round 3—Fitz was the aggressor, feinting with his left, which he landed on the stomach. Hall received a right on the body and on the head. A moment later Fitz received two heavy lefts on the face and a heavy right uppercut. Fitz clinched to save himself and Referee Duffy had a hard time in parting them. Fitz was clinching to avoid punishment right along and still around the ring. Both men were fighting hard when the round ended.

Round 4—Hall came up the aggressor. Fitz landed a heavy right on the jaw, knocking Hall into the middle of the ring. The blow was a tremendous right hand swing and landed full on the point of the jaw. Hall was a long time in coming to, but he finally drew his left hand up to his mouth and was finally helped into his corner by Fitzsimmons, his conquerer.

The referee awarded the contest to Fitzsimmons, who, waving the American flag over his head, walked over to his opponent's corner and shook his hand, and as he was leaving the ring he received a tremendous ovation. The fight was the easiest Fitzsimmons has had in America, and the blow which Fitzsimmons delivered that knocked Hall out was universally said to be the hardest that any one of the old ring habitues ever witnessed. The audience rose to its feet and a tremendous shout went up

Record of the Winner.

Bob Fitzsimmons was born in Cornwall England, in 1863, and moved to New Zealand when a mere child with his parents. He is a blacksmith by trade, but has made fighting his occupation for the past 10 years. He is six feet tall barefooted. He generally fights at 154 or 158 pounds, but weighed yesterday about 164.

Ten years ago, in a boxing tournament, he knocked out four men in one night, and on a later occasion five men went down before him. He next whipped Herbert Slade and then Bill Slavin. His latest victims were Rapp, Conway and Dick Ellis, each in three rounds. Afterward Hall, the vanquished in the present battle, knocked out Simmons one in the fourth round. Then in succession he defeated Billy McCarthy, Arthur Upham, Jack Dempsey and finally Peter Maher.

Want a New Party.

PITTSBURG, March 9.—A call has been issued for a conference at Lafayette Hall, in this city, on the 16th inst., of prohibitionists, woman suffragists and others interested in the general reform of the government, to organize a new national party. The call is signed by 1,000 western Pennsylvanians, including 60 ministers, numerous lawyers, men and several prominent public officers.

NO REVOLVERS FOUND.

The Scandal In the Massachusetts State Prison Increases.

BOSTON, March 9.—The search for weapons supposed to have been concealed by convicts in the various workshops of the state prison was continued. An iron jack was found in the repair shop, and in the bed shop were discovered a number of stout hack saws. The search will be resumed, and it is thought that two weeks will be required to complete it.

The prisoners had planned an escape for the afternoon, but the plot was discovered, and no attempt was made to carry out the design. The prisoners, however, showed their disappointment in the evening by howling several minutes, and when Night Watchman Hyde gave the signal to put out the lights in the cells he was greeted with a storm of curses.

Ex-Warden Lovering says the story about the prisoners having revolvers is a fake, and Governor Russell acted as warden at the state prison. He is personally overseeing the search of the prison for weapons. The convicts are all in their cells and will be dealt with individually. General Benjamin F. Bridges, Jr., has been appointed warden at a special meeting of the governor and council.

MISS HALL COMMITS SUICIDE.

She Threw Herself In Front of an Engine and Was Killed Instantly.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., March 9.—Miss Julia Hall of New Canaan, daughter of Russell Hall, the banker of that town, committed suicide by throwing herself in front of a locomotive on the Connecticut Valley division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road. She was instantly killed, and her body was frightfully mangled. Miss Hall was recently sent to the insane asylum here from New Canaan, and was the young woman who created so much excitement last November by wandering away from home. She disappeared twice, and on both occasions hosts of men in the vicinity of her home turned out to search the woods for her. She was out walking in the grounds with an attendant. Suddenly she started for the railroad tracks, and before the attendant could stop her Miss Hall threw herself in front of a fast approaching train.

Sexton Predicts Home Rule Success.

DUBLIN, March 9.—The national convention of the Irish National federation was held in Dublin. There was a crowded and enthusiastic attendance. Mr. Sexton presided in his address that before the end of the session the Irish home rule bill would reach the house of lords, and that the peers would find themselves in a critical position. If Ireland, Mr. Sexton continued, would heartily help Mr. Gladstone, the Grand Old Man would beat down opposition, and also the melodramatic exhibition which the Orangemen were offering in order to bewilder and scare British fellow-subjects.

Balfour Is Still Leader.

LONDON, March 9.—The meeting of Conservatives at the Carleton club was thronged by the leaders as well as the rank and file of the party's parliamentary representatives. The occasion was one of intense interest, for every one was anxious to know what course would be taken in regard to the recent vote of censure against Mr. Balfour's leadership. No spirit of opposition was manifested, however, and he was retained as leader. It was unanimously decided to move as an amendment to the motion for the second reading of the home rule bill that it be read six months hence.

A Plot Blocked In Honolulu.

HONOLULU, March 9.—A conspiracy that boded ill for the preservation of peace in the Hawaiian islands has just been nipped in the bud. It was a conspiracy to bring about a conflict between the English and Americans in Honolulu in the hope that an international issue might arise, so that during a possible subsequent clash between Great Britain and the United States the question of annexation might be forgotten and the islands left to themselves. The move was checked by President Dole ordering that the guards of the ex-queen be immediately disbanded.

MONTREAL, March 9.—A pamphlet of 200 pages entitled "Clerical Rule" and which promises to create a great sensation in the religious world, has been made public. The work is from the pens of Canada's most brilliant of younger French Canadian writers, among whom are Sen Vail, formerly of the Patrie, and Filiatrant of the Canada Review.

M. DE LESSEPS' STORY.

Herz Received Large Sums For His Influence.

VERY HEAVY DEMANDS IMPOSED.

The Payment of the Money Was Necessary to the Success of the Enterprise—A Sensational Session of the Court of Assizes In Paris—Herz Was Powerful.

PARIS, March 9.—The Assize courtroom was crowded yesterday, the occasion being the opening of the trial of ex-Minister Deputy Antonin Proust, Deputy Dugue De la Fauconnerie, Senator Bersal, ex-Deputy Gobron, M. Blondin, M. Charles de Lesseps, M. Marius Fontane, ex-Minister Baihaut and M. Sans-Leroy on charges of corruption in connection with the Panama lottery bonds bill.

In replying to the questions of Judge Desjardins, Charles de Lesseps sketched briefly his duties in the Panama Canal company. He managed most of the business connected with the advertising and the guarantee syndicates, he said. He was employed for these purposes by his father, whom he was proud to serve in any capacity.

Herz Had Great Influence.

"M. Herz came to my father and me and told us that he had great influence with the government," said M. De Lesseps. "His proposals greatly embarrassed us, but we did not feel that we could afford to ignore or offend him—he was too powerful. He invited me to accompany him to Monte-Vaudrey to see evidences of his friendship with Rouvier. I went to Nice with him and found that M. Herz was received as a friend of the family."

"Your duty as a man of honor was to show such a fellow the door," interpolated Judge Desjardins.

"If we had appealed to the law, we should have come to grief. In 1888 we issued the lottery bonds. Immediately telegrams were sent all over the world announcing that my father was dead and subscriptions stopped. We were obliged to protect ourselves or be the victims of all sorts of plotters. The subscriptions came to nothing. Then financiers showed us how to resort to those methods which are now matter of general knowledge.

"They said: 'Unless you pay money to all the banks under the influence of Giraudin you will have all the newspapers in Paris against you.' We were forced to avail ourselves of this sort of assistance, and this mode of procedure was encouraged by the government."

A Large Sum Necessary.

"How did you come to be introduced to M. Baihaut?"

"A friend of the minister of works told M. Fontane that the minister was ready to introduce the lottery loan bill, but would require a certain large sum to defray the expenses of advertising.

"We feared that M. Fontane's information was only pretending that he came from the government," answered M. De Lesseps, "and so I advised M. Fontane not to deal with him. M. Fontane answered: 'I should have asked shortly to visit the minister. If the arrangements be not perfected I will conclude with the intermediary, the minister will surely oppose the introduction of the bill.' Later M. Fontane saw M. Baihaut, who said he was against the measure. When I learned of this, I said to M. Fontane, 'Well, send for this gentleman, then.'

"You remember giving that order?" asked Judge Desjardins.

"I never denied it. The gentleman was M. Blondin. He demanded for M. Baihaut 1,000,000 francs and 375,000 francs were paid down. The bill was then introduced.

It Was Extortion.

"It was extortion. I believe it will be difficult to prove that it was corruption. M. Baihaut told me that he had been charged by the cabinet with the task of studying the Panama canal matter, and that the introduction of the bill depended entirely upon him. He put the matter so that there was no room for hesitation."

When questioned as to his dealings with Baron de Reinach, M. De Lesseps said:

"I paid him large sums to meet the expenses of the press. Refusing would be greatly of his influence. I offered him a part worth 2,000,000 in the underwriting syndicate, but was obliged to raise the offer to 3,000,000. I demanded 10,000,000 francs from 12,000,000. Such an amount, he said, was required by Mr. Herz, who had enormous influence.

"I refused to give such an exorbitant amount, although he protested that he would be a lost man and the whole enterprise ruined. He upset the budget in my refusal. While these negotiations were pending an ordnance officer came to me to say that M. De Freycinet wished to see me. I went to see M. De Freycinet, who said he had sent for me not in his ministerial capacity, but as one of the guardians of the Republican party. He said:

"'M. De Lesseps, there is a question of a suit against you, to be brought by Baron de Reinach. That would be very annoying. See now how you can settle the matter.'

The Baron Got $5,000,000 Francs.

"I explained to M. De Freycinet that the question was one of extortion. I told him that pressure was being exercised conjointly by Herz and Reinach, who were trying to make me pay debts not my own. The result of my visit to M. De Freycinet I did not fully recall. I positively refused to do and raised my offer to Baron De Reinach from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000, which he accepted.

"I resisted at first, but after my talk with M. De Freycinet I considered it my duty to give way. M. Clemenceau also begged me to visit him and spoke to me, as did M. De Freycinet, about the necessity of having no open rupture with Baron De Reinach. Subsequently M. Riquet said to me: 'Why do you not pay that money to Baron De Reinach? If I were you I would do so and so,' advising me to accede to Reinach's demands.

M. De Lesseps denied that he knew any of the money paid out by him to Baron De Reinach was to be used in bribing the officials whose names were found on the stubs of the Propper checks.

PRESIDENT KEPT BUSY RECEIVING.

Ex-Governor Gray Wants to Go to Mexico.

Judge Goode of Virginia Would Be Solicitor General—Kentucky After an Assistant Secretaryship.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The period of perfunctory visiting has passed, and the greater number of politicians who called on President Cleveland were bent on business. Each had his ax to grind, either for himself or for some constituent, and applications for office were filed by the score. The president was up betimes, and then he entered his private office, there were numerous cards on his table with the men whose names they bore waiting expectantly in the cabinet room. Mr. Cleveland saw nearly all who came and devoted a few minutes to each. Those who were in a hurry saw Private Secretary Thurber, and he soon had his hands full attending to their wants.

A Virginia delegation, consisting of Senator Hunton and Representatives Wise and Meredith, presented to the president the name of Judge John Goode of Virginia for the solicitor generalship.

Senator Lindsay of Kentucky came with C. T. Allen of this state and asked Mr. Cleveland to appoint the latter an assistant postmaster general.

Congressman Kilgore of Texas had a little talk with the president about the Mexican mission, the position for which he has been indorsed by the Texas legislature and a host of prominent persons.

Some of the Prominent Candidates.

Charles S. Hamlin of Massachusetts will probably be nominated for assistant secretary of the treasury.

Judge Browning of Illinois is being seriously considered for commissioner of the general land office, it is said.

Ex-Governor Gray of Indiana called at 2 o'clock and saw the president. He remained with Mr. Cleveland more than half an hour, and when he left the White House smiled knowingly when asked whether he had been given the Mexican mission. It is said that Governor Gray acknowledged to intimate friends that he would be nominated for the position.

Congressmen Cable and Forman of Illinois called late and saw Mr. Thurber. Mr. Cable is said to be after the German mission.

The most reliable information makes Robert Maxwell of Buffalo the prominent candidate for fourth assistant postmaster general, who has the disposal of fourth class postoffices, which was formerly the duty of the first assistant.

It May Be McAdoo.

Assistant Secretary Soley of the navy tendered his resignation to Secretary Herbert. The resignation is to take effect immediately. His successor will probably be named today, and from present indications there is little doubt that it will be ex-Representative McAdoo of New Jersey.

Patrick A. Collins of Massachusetts will probably be nominated for consul general to London.

Richard Croker made his deal with the chief executive. Croker and Senator Murphy were at the White House in the afternoon and had a long conference with Mr. Cleveland. As a result of that conference, it is learned, was that the patronage of the state as well as the city of New York was to be divided between Tammany Hall and the Cleveland men of the state and that Senator Hill was to be ignored.

It is stated by those in a position to know that Secretary Hoke Smith has not yet definitely decided on the appointment of any one for the assistant secretaryships or other important places in his department.

Frank Lawler has presented a monster petition to the president for his appointment as postmaster of Chicago.

Programme In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The members of the Democratic caucus committee state that nothing has yet been done in the matter of the elective officers of the senate, and it is doubtful if anything of this kind will be taken up for many days. It is understood that while the precepts of the senate will be adhered to in many respects the chairmanships will not go in every case to the ranking senator of the Democratic membership of the committees in the last senate.

The geographical location of the members is being considered in the distribution of the favored places, and an innovation is being suggested in the shape of a scheme which will put senators at the head of committees who were not at the head of the recent minority list, but who, by reason of their qualifications, are best fitted to do the work that will come before those committees. It is also not unlikely that one or more minority committees of the senate may be wiped out, and if this is done it will reduce the number of chairmanships the Republicans will have. The Republicans are resting on their oars and simply awaiting final action by the Democrats.

Carlisle Accepts Denver's Offer.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary Carlisle has accepted the proposition of the clearing house of Denver to exchange $1,000,000 of the treasury notes of the issue of 1890 for $1,000,000 in gold. This will increase the free gold in the treasury to $3,125,000.

Secretary Carlisle has taken no steps to issue bonds and has not indicated what policy he will pursue. "I will not talk on that subject," said the secretary. His reply was made in a courteous but determined manner, which put an end to further conversation with him on the bond question. Secretary C. S. Clinton of the Clearing House association states that, if requested, the association would make another tender of a similar amount.

Paraguay's New Minister.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Consul Edward Shaw at Asuncion has notified the state department that the government of Paraguay has appointed Dr. Cesar Gondra envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States. It has been some years since Paraguay was represented at Washington by a minister stationed here.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The new cabinet officers find little time for work on account of the vast crowds that visit their departments. They receive bushels of mail daily. Room office seekers.

STUDENTS FIGHT THREE HOURS.

Washington and Jefferson College the Scene of a Riot.

PITTSBURG, March 9.—Washington and Jefferson college was the scene of a riot between the sophomores and freshmen. The trouble began in the afternoon, when the freshmen hoisted their class colors to the highest point on the new gymnasium building. They removed the scaffolding before the sophomores could get their colors up. This was taken as a direct insult by the "sophs," who secured ladders to reach the top of the building.

This started a free for all fight. The freshmen routed the "sophs" and took possession of the gymnasium. The sophomores gathered in Fraternity hall, and with sticks and clubs marched in a body to the gymnasium. The freshmen were waiting for them. In another minute over 100 men were fighting wildly for possession of the main entrance. Some were flung down the stairway and trampled upon. The sophomores rallied and fought desperately up and down the winding stairs.

After three hours' hard fighting, in which numerous heads were cracked and noses and arms broken, they ascended the perpendicular tower and tore down the freshmen's colors. The faculty will expel every student engaged in the fight.

The Princess In Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Princess Kalulani and party arrived in Washington about noon over the Pennsylvania railroad from Boston. They were driven from the station to the Arlington hotel and immediately repaired to the apartments prepared for them. There were no unusual scenes or gathering about the hotel, and the arrival of the party was quiet and unostentatious. The princess was conspicuous by wearing a wreath of roses around her neck and a large Gainsborough hat. She also wore glasses. Prince David was at the hotel to meet the party. The princess, who was much fatigued by the journey, excused herself, but Mr. Theophilus Davies, her English guardian, gave out to the press a long statement in support of her right of succession.

Society Men Fight Fifty Rounds.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 9.—Joseph Oates and Edward Corcoran, two well known young men of this town, it became public last night, fought 50 rounds—prize ring rules—and Tuesday night at a prominent place in Elizabeth to avenge an insult arising out of a game of cards. The fight was a brutal affair, both being horribly mutilated at the finish. Oates broke his arm in the seventh round and fought in that condition to the end of the fight. Corcoran toward the end ranged left one of Oates's eyes. The police, as soon as the facts became known, secured the names of all persons present, and they have been entitled to appear in the courts. They are members of society and a great sensation was caused by the disclosure.

Switchmen's Demands Denied.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Inside information is very positive to the effect that it was decided by the general managers of roads centering here that the demands of the switchmen could not be allowed. The reason is that the roads are now and have for some time been working at a loss which will show a large decrease in net earnings, and that it was simply impossible for them to increase expense at the present time. The manager of each road will impart the decision to the men working upon his line within a few days.

The Pittsburg Tragedy.

PITTSBURG, March 9.—The murder in a public park of Mrs. Rosa Ruttler was the most grewsome deed committed in Allegheny county for years. M. J. Hill, the murderer, cut his own throat. The woman's refusal to lend Hill $300 on a judgment note caused it. Lieutenant Thornton, who discovered the bodies, was so ill from the effects of the sickening sight that he could not attend the inquest.

Yale at the World's Fair.

NEW HAVEN, March 9.—The exhibit that Yale will make at the Columbian exposition will consist of a general representation of the university plant by means of ground plans on a large scale of the various buildings in seven groups, together with a comprehensive collection of enlarged photographs.

Hung Himself In His Cell.

BUFFALO, March 9.—Thomas Carlin, hailing from Holyoke, Mass., was gathered in by the police as a vagrant. During the night he made a rope from his clothing and hung himself to the bars of his cell. When discovered he was barely alive, but recovered under the application of restoratives.

Kinch's Body Found.

PATERSON, N. J., March 9.—The body of William S. Kinch, who disappeared mysteriously from his home on Dec. 26, was discovered floating in the Passaic river. It is thought he committed suicide.

Twelve People Killed In a Storm.

VIENNA, March 9.—Lichtenwarth, a village in lower Austria, was swept by a terrific thunderstorm. Five persons were struck dead in the streets and seven perished in burning buildings.

Still Another Receiver.

BALTIMORE, March 9.—Charles A. Coombs has been appointed receiver for the Annapolis and Baltimore Short Line railroad by Judge Morris of the United States court.

STYLISH SLEEVES.

Favorite Models For Evening and Day Gowns—Puffs Popular.

Sleeves are a prominent feature in dresses of today, whether for day or evening wear. The top is invariably puffed, in some way. The drooping ball puff widening toward the elbow now rivals the round balloon puff of empire gowns. If very great fullness is required, two puffs are used, one long and full around the armhole, with gathers in the joining seam and a smaller puff above the elbow. A drooping frill is also now much used about the elbow, whether of velvet like the puffs on a close lower sleeve or else of lace to complete the sleeve. Slashed puffs of velvet inlaid with lace or satin are very elegant at the top of cloth or silk sleeves.

SLEEVES FOR DAY AND EVENING WEAR.

Four styles of sleeves, all equally fashionable, are shown in the accompanying cut. No. 1 is a dressy sleeve for evening wear composed of a lace flounce prettily draped and fastened on the shoulder under an embroidered butterfly sparkling with jet.

No. 2 is a directoire sleeve of silk, cloth or woolen material cut on the cross without any outside seam and gracefully folded on the upper part of the arm, while the narrow wrists are set off with beaded gimp.

No. 3, a demitoilet sleeve, is composed of an empire jockey puff, encircled with fur, frayed out silk, etc., and finished off with a long, narrow armlet in black open embroidery over gay silk.

No. 4, the Recamier sleeve, is of net or light colored silk, bordered with a beaded galon and draped with a double puffing, slashed on the outside and smartened up with bows in shot silk.

Arguing Against the Repealers.

TRENTON, March 9.—The house committee on municipal corporations sat in the afternoon to hear arguments against the racing repealers. Lawyer Samuel Kalisch of Newark was the only speaker. He represented the Dwyer Brothers, and said that the hue and cry raised by the people was not justified, so far at least as it related to the doings at the tracks of his clients. He made as strong an argument as was possible for his side of the case and held that racing was no worse than the lotteries which the churches used to run when their funds were low.

Adjournment of the Magnates.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The National league finished its labors at 8:15 p. m., making public at the close of the session nothing of its transactions beyond a few changes in the phraseology on the rule governing sacrifice hits, the fact that John B. Day had been elected an honorary member and the schedule. The championship schools opens on April 27 and closes on Sept. 30.

Exposure at Washington Killed Him.

NEW YORK, March 9.—William B. Hanson, a member of the John J. O'Brien association, who participated in the recent inaugural celebration in Washington, died yesterday from pneumonia, resulting from exposure at the capital. Mr. Hanson was the owner of two saloons on the Bowery, and it is estimated that he was worth about $100,000.

A Jersey Assemblyman In Trouble.

NEWARK, N. J., March 9.—Detectives stopped one of Assemblyman Harrigan's soda water wagons and confiscated 180 bottles which belonged to different dealers. A warrant has been issued, and the assemblyman will have to give bail to appear before the grand jury.

The Railroads Again Beaten.

BOSTON, March 9.—In the superior court a verdict of $9,000 was returned for Annie C. Quilty and $1,800 for her husband Timothy against the Boston and Albany railroad—the one for personal injuries and the other for loss of services of wife.

Likely to Pass the Senate.

ALBANY, March 9.—The Republican senators met in secret caucus and decided not to make the bill providing for the purchase of Fire island by the state a party question. This probably insures the passage of the bill in the senate.

"I can't understand it," said Mr. Georger at the gas office. "Last month my bill was $16, and this month it is $30. I haven't burned a bit more gas this month than I did last. Now, how in the name of honesty do you account for that?"

"You didn't pay last month's bill," said the clerk.—Harper's Bazar.

HONITON LACE.

How to Make a Centerpiece with Bowknot Design.

The bowknot design in illustration requires simply the application of the braid, of which two patterns are used, one for the border and the other, more delicate in effect, for the bowknots, and then the completion of the work by means of a buttonhole stitching all around the braid, the edging being also of buttonholing worked in scallops, no other stitch being employed upon this piece of work, which is nevertheless particularly pretty and quaint both in shape and design, says The Ladies' Home Journal.

In all pieces and for every design which is equal in height and width, whether round or square in shape, the work is started upon an accurately cut square of linen. The linen is then carefully doubled over and creased both up and down across and diagonally, in order to divide it into eight equal parts, and thus mingle lines mark as guides to insure an accurate setting of the braid in position. Measure the distance at which it is necessary to place the braid to start each section of the design—namely, about nine inches from the center of the linen—then, counting the divisions of the braid, notice that fifteen are required for each quarter of the mat, the middle or eighth one coming exactly on the diagonal dividing mark, and being placed by measurement fifteen inches from the center.

These eight points being correctly formed, the curving of the braid and basting it carefully in position should prove an easy matter, but too much emphasis cannot be laid on the importance of getting the shape of the mat properly and accurately made. The placing of the sections of the braid pointing inward, to complete the border pattern, is next in order and easily accomplished. Each bowknot is similar in position and arrangement. In sewing down the braid it has to be firmly basted on the outside at each turn, and on the inner edge gathered with a fine thread in order to make it lie flat. The center of each bowknot is formed by a piece of the braid used in the border. The work being thus prepared, the buttonholing may be commenced.

In the piece sketched here Japan wash silk was employed for the purpose. Except for the outer edge, the buttonholing is done in one long and two short stitches, with care that each stitch is taken exactly at right angles to the edge which is being sewn down, a slantwise or uneven direction of the silk giving a very undesirable effect. For the scalloped edge, the linen is doubled under to give an added firmness, having been previously cut to the necessary shape and size, following the outline of the mat. When all the work is finished, the linen is cut away from beneath the braid and the edges neatly trimmed with a pair of sharp scissors.

Finally the piece must be carefully pressed in the following manner: Lay the work right side downward on an ironing board covered with a clean flannel; wet a piece of very thin muslin with water, wring it out as dry as possible, lay it over the wrong side of the work and then iron it until the muslin is quite dry. Strip the muslin off, and the linen should be perfectly smooth and without creases. The work may be repeatedly laundered without injury.

A Dressing Table Necessity.

An almost indispensable adjunct to the dressing table is a hair receiver. This one is of opaque white celluloid, with painted or decalcomaniad panels. The size of this receiver is 5½ inches across *and 8 inches long. Three pieces of ex*act size, with holes punched exactly alike in all, then lined and finished as shown. It is well to cut three pieces of bristol braid smaller than the outside and cover with a delicate cover of thin silk to slip inside, not only protecting, but preventing the contents from shading and spoiling the effect of decoration.

OLD BARRELS.

Put to a New and Valuable Use With a Little Ingenuity.

Old barrels may be made good use of, as the accompanying illustration shows. Anybody clever at home carpentering can devise many ways of using them. The cabinet of shelves here shown is built of well selected barrel heads, whose parts are held together by a broad cleat nailed on the under side of each head. These are supported by four upright pieces, with grooves sawed in the edges at different levels. Brackets strengthen the frame and secure the shelves properly. The edge is finished with a fringe or some other ornamental decoration about three inches deep.

A useful stand may be made of a barrel sawed in half lengthwise, and resting upon a framework of plain boards with a shelf below. This may be filled with earth for a winter window garden, or may have a cover hinged on for a table and be draped with a cloth to hide the barrel shape, which affords a spacious receptacle.

Still another may consist of two ends of a barrel, with the heads in each part being sawed off just at the second hoop. Through four holes in the lower one run the supports of the frame, and let the top part rest upon their ends. Some small brackets under each barrel head will strengthen the whole. Covered and decorated with cloth and plush and with cushioned sides and pockets, this makes a very convenient work table, or, decorated in rustic fashion, a very pretty plant stand.

Fish and Potato Puffs.

Mash 2 cups of cooked fish with ½ cup of bread crumbs and 1 dozen shrimps, chopped fine. Add butter, pepper, salt, and moisten with milk or fish stock. Roll into oblong balls and cover with a layer of potatoes, mashed with milk and egg. Brown in the oven and garnish with salad or cooked green vegtables.

Some Matters of Etiquette.

Every now and then, the New York Times says, this item floats through the press, "The napkin must be half folded and thrown down beside the plate." This is all very well so far as it goes; it trouble is it doesn't go very far. Only part of the rule is given. The whole goes on to say, "Unless napkin rings are used and you expect to take another meal in the same house."

Of course no one will use your napkin, so if you have no more need of it it may be thrown aside. But in many American households the same table linen serves the same people more than once. Assuredly you should not reflect upon your hostess' daintiness by assuming that this is not possible—like a certain woman in whose own home the napkin ring was reigning, who tossed the napkin in an untidy heap upon the table three times a day of a three weeks' visit—in face of the fact that it was invariably placed in a ring beside her plate when she sat down to eat. She had seen or grasped the first part only of the dictum, and she fancied she was impressing her entertainers with her elegant information.

Sometimes a custom becomes obsolete. It was once proper for a man to precede a woman in ascending stairs. Later advices state that he should allow her precedence everywhere and at all times. It is out of fashion, too, for one's escort to cling tenaciously to the outside of the walk, that rule having been expended in other days and other environment than this. It is so out of date as to be a woeful blunder when a man gives both arms to a girl with whom he is walking.

An Embroidery Novelty.

A new effect in embroidery is done on coarse white net, upon which hand painted satin flowers are appliqued. A design of large patterned flowers, like iris or sunflower, is painted upon coarse satin: these are cut out and pasted on the net, and stitched on very close and strong when dry. This work is especially graceful and effective as portieres or large panels for screens.

Poetry in the Kitchen.

Beneath this pleurant that I roll
I see—oh, lovely spot—
A wild, wild world,
A shaded brook,
O'ergrown with cherries wild.
Where fairies and their elves are tossed in air
On waftling breems mild.

And in these cups I slowly work
I see a meadow fair,
Where daisies grow,
And clover, too,
With grasses every where,
And lovers, too, whose all grown o'er
With wild grapes growing there.

And white a polish bright my stove
I see a mountain gurge;
And o'er the valley
And o'er them hie
Long briers all filled with bloom.
And dainty form of maidenhair:
I hear the wild bird's tune.

And sweeping floors and dusting chairs,
I see a pasture green,
A velvet floor,
That's all grown o'er
With waves, a grassy sea,
Where buttercups are growing gay,
Which nod to you and me.

And so in all the work I do
I see a picture sweet,
A lovely spot
That cheers my lot
And makes my daily care
All bright with blossoms and with songs
From nature's wild woods fair.

CARE OF THE PIANO.

Some Practical Suggestions Which Should Be Remembered.

"The care of a piano must be begun the moment the piano enters your house," a piano mover said to a New York Recorder writer, "and to be effective it calls for the employment of some good common sense. If it be an upright piano, do not stand it close to the wall unless you prefer to have the tone muffled. It will sound best across a corner of a room. Keep a piano in the winter in the coolest part of the room—not exposed, of course, to frost or dampness.

"The most serious injuries that befall pianos are usually the results of temperatures, either it is too dry or too damp. From careful observation it is safe to say that 90 per cent. of the pianos in cold latitudes have after the first year one or more cracks in their sounding boards. If your house is heated by a stove, put your instrument in a room without a stove—in one that is heated from an adjoining room. If you have steam or furnace heat, your piano will do better if kept in a room that is not quite warm enough for comfort.

"You know the sounding board—the life of a piano—is forced into the case when it is made so tightly that it bulges up in the center. The wood is supposed to be as dry as possible, but of course it contains some moisture and gathers a lot more on damp days and in handling. Now, when you put a piano in an overheated, dry room all this moisture is dried out, and the board gets flabby and finally cracks.

"How can you prevent it? Easily enough. Keep a growing plant in the room, and as long as your plant thrives your piano ought to, or else there is something wrong with it. Just try it and see how much more water you will have to pour on the flower in the room where your piano is than on the plants in any other room.

"Every one has observed, after purchasing a new piano, that it soon takes on a dull, smoky appearance. To remove this use a fine sponge, tepid water and castile soap. Go over the case a little at a time. The water alone, with the soap, will usually be all that is needed. A chamois skin, as dry as can be rung out of water, should be used to dry the surface after using the sponge. For old pianos a polish of raw linseed oil, two parts, alcohol and best vinegar, one part each, may be applied with good results. Shake the polish frequently, use a soft cotton cloth, one piece to rub it on, and a large, clean piece to finish off with. Bruises, usually on the front, can be taken off by rubbing with powdered pumice stone and water, or with sapolio. Clean the keys with alcohol and water, equal parts.

To Erase Match Scratches.

If you have been annoyed by having matches scratched on your spotless woodwork, cut a lemon in half and rub the marks hard with it. Then dip a rag in water and afterward in whiting and rub till the stain disappears. Dry with a clean cloth.

After Long Absences.

After an absence of 10 years Roy Page returned to his native village. He walked slowly by the brown house where he used to live. He scarcely recognized it now, for it had been painted red, and the two elms near the door had been cut down. Strangers were looking out of the windows. He called on his old friends one by one, impatient to receive their greeting.

The minister did not know him at first. Then he said: "What a change! You must have prospered. You look 10 years younger than when you went away, Roy."

He called on the grocer, who said solemnly: "I can hardly believe it is you. You must have suffered. You look 20 years older than when you left us, Roy."

He met in the street Farmer Hale, who did not stop. Roy cried, "I'm Roy, who lived with you all one summer!"

The farmer stared at him awhile and said: "Maybe you are, but you've changed a right good bit. You weigh 50 pounds more than when you lived here, Roy."

He called on the lawyer, who, after putting on his spectacles, said: "Yes, yes, I have a faint recollection of you. But how this and lady's fingers grow!"

He saw hitched to a post in the street the old white horse which his family used to own, and which he had fed so often that as the sound of his footsteps the horse would neigh for the expected hay or oats. Roy went up to his old friend. The horse stopped back as from a stranger.

Roy, sore at heart at changes everywhere, suddenly met face to face a little old man, who at once grasped his hand warmly and said:

"Roy, old boy, how natural you look! You haven't changed a bit. I should have known you in China. The $5 you borrowed from me 10 years ago would you have the kindness—could you oblige me now?"—Youth's Companion.

Always Sympathetic.

George Butler, canon of Winchester cathedral, was the son of Dr. Butler, head master of Harrow. The boy grew up to be a dignified and serious man, a power in ecclesiastical matters, but it is said that he had a demure sense of humor is shown by one anecdote of his earliest years.

Dr. Butler wore a fine suit of black, with knee breeches and cloth gaiters, and with his powdered hair was a figure calculated to inspire any schoolboy to admiration and awe. One morning little George watched him as he set out for school and observed that his father wore only one gaiter. When Dr. Butler returned, he said to the lad:

"You were here, George, when I went away this morning. Didn't you see that I had only one gaiter?"

"Yes, papa."

"Then, why didn't you tell me?"

"Because," answered George innocently, "I thought it would amuse the boys!"—Exchange.

His Opinion.

An English general in reviewing a corps of cavalry suddenly stopped before a splendid looking fellow and asked abruptly:

"Which is the best horse in the regiment?"

"No. 40, sir."

"What makes you think it is the best horse?"

"He walks, trots and gallops well, is a good leaper, has no vice, no blemish, carries his head well, is in his prime."

"And who is the best soldier in the regiment?"

"Tom Jones, sir."

"Why?"

"Because he is an honorable man, is obedient, tidy, takes good care of his equipment and his horse, and does his duty well."

"And who is the rider of the best horse?"

"Tom Jones, sir."

"And who is Tom Jones?"

"I am, sir."

The general could not help laughing, but he gave a sovereign to his informant.—Swansea (England) Gazette.

BREVITIES

—Mr. "Dave" Carney is said to be the managing spirit of the Democratic faction in the Borough.

—The Independent Order of Foresters of this city, is arranging to hold a public meeting in the near future.

—"When two good men are up for election," said a voter, "Who ought to get the vote?" The man your party nominated, of course, Mr. A. D. Honeyman.

—It is reported that the American Engine Company in East Bound Brook will soon resume operations. They will manufacture a new engine in place of the one which did not prove a success.

—During the heavy rain fall of last night many of the streets presented the appearance of miniature rivers. Under the railroad bridges, especially, the water was from one to two feet deep.

—The large audiences that attended the illustrated sermons, in the Methodist Episcopal church, have led to the arrangements for another course, beginning next Sunday evening. The subjects will be as follows: "March 12, 'A Composite Character;' March 19 and 26, 'An Apostle of the Eighteenth Century;' April 2 (Easter Sunday), "The Empty Tomb."

—According to a notice sent us of the play to be given at Music Hall Saturday evening, vouched for by Manager Demarest, it is not a vulgar burlesque, "but a refined and delicate production in every sense, and one which ladies may witness without being annoyed by unseemly features of any character." The notice as written to prove this is rather too extended for our columns, giving details which those who propose to attend would prefer to see and hear, instead of having their interest spoiled by being told all about the plot beforehand, even if our space permitted. Among the other statements in the notice is one that "when it (the play) had been presented the theatre has been crowded to its utmost capacity," all tending to show what interest people feel in "The New Devil's Auction."

—A young lady, known to Plainfielders, who recently attended a young ladies college in the New York State, is a firm believer in advertising. At the college she lost a shawl, which had been very handy to have to throw over her head when running between the college and dormitory. She realized that an advertisement, to be valuable, must be read and talked about. This is what she wrote and posted on the bulletin:

LOST—A shawl by a young lady slightly ill. Both ends around the edges brown-ish gray in the middle four feet wide and three feet long very comfortable to wear over the head reward for its return to

The principal, a very benevolent and enormous woman, was one of the first to see this quaint advertisement. She read as far as "young lady slightly unwell ends around the edges" and then her laughter brought almost the entire population of the college. The shawl was returned to its owner.

A Church Tea.

The tea held at the residence of Mr. W. A. Woodruff, 45 East Second street, last evening, under the auspices of the Ladies Christian Work Society of the Trinity Reformed church, was quite largely attended despite the severity of the storm. Mrs. J. F. MacDonald presided at the table and was assisted by Miss Kittie Glen and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle. General sociability prevailed and music, instrumental and vocal, was a pleasant feature, Mr. Chas. P. Leggett acting as accompanist.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff, the kind hosts, have generously consented to open again their home this evening from five to nine for the benefit of the many who were prevented from attending last evening. The item in yesterday's NEWS which was sent in, under the caption of "Tea and Smoker" was incorrect, as no "smoker" formed a part of the evening's entertainment.

103 YEARS OLD TO-DAY.

MRS. NANCY BAKER CELEBRATES THE GREAT ANNIVERSARY.

Relatives, Neighbors and Friends Welcomed by the Old Lady—"Granny" Keeps in Excellent Health and Eats all Kinds of Food—Her Story.

Mrs. Nancy Baker, of Locust Grove, Union county, N. J., celebrated the one hundred and third anniversary of her birth to-day in the small farm house near Springfield, in which she has lived for sixty-eight years.

Friends, neighbors and strangers from miles around, dropped in en honor to be present and brought "Old Granny Baker," as she is generally known, many tokens of their esteem.

"Granny" Baker was born in Springfield on March 10, 1790. Her maiden name was Nancy Williams. Her father, Foster Williams, fought in the Revolutionary War, and was killed in a skirmish on Springfield Bridge, a few miles from her present home, in 1789. He had assembled with a few brave farmers to prevent a band of renegade marauders from plundering and burning their homes.

The long war had left brave Foster Williams' larder rather bare, and after the battle on Springfield Bridge her two-year old daughter Nancy into the family of Mr. and Mrs. Rawl for adoption, while she bravely started out to care for her living.

Nancy Williams' adopted parents treated her as one of their own children. They gave her a good schooling and made her an excellent housekeeper. They grew to love the child and she returned the affection.

She never shunned those in disease or affliction and was always to be found at the bedside of a sick or unfortunate neighbor. She has always been known throughout the county and is loved by all.

When fifteen years old she was danger ously ill with typhoid fever and all her hair fell out, afterward returning stronger than before. She was married when seventeen years old to Stewart Mills, a few days before the battle of Trenton. When eighteen years old she contracted chills and fever and did not recover from the disease for a year. Sixty-eight years ago she was stricken with a severe attack of bilious fever. She was not ill again until last Spring when she had a severe attack of the grip and pneumonia and was confined for three months.

"Granny" had six children by her first husband, two boys and four girls. They are in order of their ages, Mary Keepie, now deceased, Mrs. Hannah Williams, now 76 years old, and Samuel Mills, deceased, of Westfield, Joseph Mills, aged 68, of Decatur, Illinois, Mrs. Phebe Fowler, aged 65, of this city, and her "baby", Mrs. Electa Lyons, who is now 58 years old, and takes care of the old lady. Mrs. George A. Moore, of No. 45 East Front street, and R. J. Fowler, No. 142 Central avenue, this city, are her grandchildren. Her only remaining son, Joseph Mills, is a prosperous merchant in Decatur, Illinois. The old lady says she has seen all her old companions and friends die, and that she is the only one left. She is very much grieved at her son's misfortune. A few years ago he broke his hip and has since been crippled. He had a family of grown up daughters, several of whom have died within a year.

"Granny" was married for the second time in 1852, when eighty (two years of age, to William Baker, a well-to-do New York shoemaker. He was many years younger than she. He died ten years ago of dropsy.

She never travelled much, though she has been in Brooklyn, Kingston and Trenton. She went to New York five years ago and says: "I was an old one then and the city was changed so much that I was afraid of getting lost. I went in," she continued, "with my son's wife's mother and had quite a giddy time. Her only previous visit to the metropolis was in 1812 when she met the man who is living a week because her second husband.

She remembers General Lafayette, and says he was entertained at the home of her adopted parents when she was quite a child. She never saw General George Washington.

Sixteen grandchildren, twenty-two great grandchildren and one great great grandchild have gathered about the old lady. She says, however that she "doesn't like children, because they are so noisy and inconsiderate. Tweren't so," she said, "when I was young. The young ones then were to be seen and not heard." "I like grown up young people, immensely" she added.

Mrs. Baker's faculties are remarkably acute. She has received her second sight and reads and sews without spectacles. She does not seem to feel fatigue from effort and cares. She retires regularly at nine o'clock at night is up in the morning and eats breakfast at eight o'clock. She sleeps during the day "whenever she feels like it."

"Granny" is always glad to have visitors come and see her, and she entertains them well. Her talk is full of dash and piquant brilliancy, and one quite readily forgets her great age when listening to her strong voice and well rounded sentences. Her voice is not the least bit "rasp" and she laughs heartily as she talks. She says she has never allowed anything to worry her.

A doctor from New Haven came to see her recently and she says "he punched me about the shoulders, felt of my pulse and did lots of other things, and he said there wasn't a blemish about me that wasn't perfect." "The hacking cough,"

MRS. NANCY BAKER.

Born in Springfield, N. J., March 10, 1790.

she continued, "I have had for years, and the doctor says it's merely caused by bronchial shrinkage brought on by old age."

Last year she rode in a carriage to Orange and back in one day. She did her own house work until she was thirty-nine years of age. She remarks that her children are grown up now and she can take life easy. She is very fond of apple dumplings, and "I'd turn in and help bat not otherwise."

"Occasionally I wipe dishes," she says "so's to keep my hand in."

Mrs. Baker has a most excellent memory and very clearly describes how they used to dance the "straight four" sixty years ago. She says she "used to be a great dancer." She also remembers traveling to the old Presbyterian church at Springfield every Sunday in an ox-cart. She still has a pew in the Presbyterian church at Westfield which she has occupied for the past sixty years.

On the occasion of her one hundredth birthday, three years ago, sixty-five relatives and their children gathered her by their presence on the occasion. She says she has always made it a rule never to invite anybody to see her. "If they want to come, they're always welcome."

"Granny" hopes to visit the World's Fair at Chicago. She says it will not have her "a morsel," and that she's good enough for another generation yet.

Mrs. Baker rode on the first train ever run on the Central Railroad of New Jersey from Plainfield to Elizabethtown and attended the dinner given by the company, at the time.

She says "the young folks nowadays will never live to be a hundred years old. They have so many dainties, we had no pies, no lumps, no potted foods, no candy, and were the fleshiest. We made all our own clothes, grew and spun the flax and only went to town twice a year."

She tells of the "grand country gatherings, the turkey suppers, and the great ovens built outside the house where they used to bake "not one loaf at a time but dozens." "Why we didn't have to give security to borrow $100 in those days," she continued, "and in harvesting time or times of trouble everybody helped their neighbors as much as they could without pay."

She thinks that steam and electric cars and electric and gas lights are very wonderful things, and says she "doesn't know what they'll do before they stop, but I guess they'll go on."

Mrs. Baker says she won't marry again "unless there's a million or so in it."

She has always been known for her benevolence and for doing a good deserving. She was a staunch advocate for higher education, and her grandchildren say that when they visited her on the farm in the Summer, she always made them study before going out to play. We sincerely hope that Granny may live to enjoy another generation as she desires.

—Owing to his increasing business Mr. Terry, the North avenue fish dealer, has had to have a larger stand built on which to show his fine assortment of sea food. It was placed in position to-day for the first time.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DR. HURLBUT'S REMARKS AT THE RECENT HEARING AT TRENTON.

Before the Committee on Municipal Corporations, on the Board of Education Bill — The Fame of Our Schools Known Throughout the Country.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The remarks of the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut at the recent hearing at Trenton, before the Committee on Municipal Corporations, were as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentleman of the Committee:

"The public schools of Plainfield are universally recognized as inferior to none in the State and superior to most. Their fame has gone throughout the country. In Kansas and in Minnesota people who did not know of my own relation to the schools have spoken to me of them in the highest term.

"People have moved into Plainfield on account of the high rank of our public schools.

"What have given them their honor? Simply the fact that they have been managed by a non partisan board of gentlemen who are not complicated by outside control. We ask that they be permitted to remain under their present auspices and go on in their good work.

"At present $2300 are annually received as tuition in our schools from non-residents who desire education in our schools for their children, a tribute to their efficiency from outside our city.

"It is alleged that no new building is needed because there are 400 vacancies. There are some vacancies but they are primary schools in the remote parts of the city. Our High School is over-crowded. Shall we send our High School pupils to schools a mile or two from the centre and give them seats in primary classes where the vacancies exist. It is preposterous.

"A High school we need in the centre of our town and it must be built and supported without the direction of a partisan Board of Council whatever be its political complexion.

"The State Board of Education, through Mr. Betts the Deputy State Superintendent, stated that the Plainfield System of schools was now the most highly perfected in the State. That the system approached that of Pennsylvania which was ahead of all the rest in the State and worked so admirably there and that many towns and cities in this State were modelled after our system. He also stated that Plainfield had more for the money spent than any other place in the State; that the statistics gave evidence that our schools were economically built and while not showy or expensive were solid and substantial."

A BELIEVER IN OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Why Is It?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The side-walks in the Borough, especially on Somerset street, are cause enough to make the strongest angel be overworked, besides spoiling the complexions of pedestrian's "inner man."

Where there are flag walks they are, as a rule, uneven. The hollows are full of water. The board walks are all cracks through which about a quart of water shoots up the very time they are stepped on by the unfortunate people who have no wings or carriages and have to walk.

At the corner of Grandview avenue and Somerset street, all Winter building has been going on, and still Winter the sidewalk has been "out of sight."

Why is it the Borough officials don't have the matter looked to?

A FINE SCORE.

Crescent League Bowlers Easily Defeat Alcyones.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather last evening there was a good attendance of members at the Crescent League club house to witness the contest between the league team and the Alcyone bowling team. The game was too much one-sided, to be very exciting, but still it was interesting to the Crescent Leaguers to see their favorites put up such a remarkably fine score. In the second frame only one break was made by the Crescents. This is something unusual for a ten-men team.

The victors held the lead from the start. The following is the score:

CRESCENTS.		ALCYONES.

If Thiers wins the game he will at once roll one with Van Emburgh to close the tournament, but if Thiers loses to Doane the tournament will be closed. The winner will be rolled at 8 o'clock. Look for further notice, and the penalty for not being present will be the forfeiture of the games.

A Robbery in Broad Daylight.

Yesterday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, while Ticket Agent Nelson at the North avenue depot, was absent the office door was broken open and the money drawer robbed of about $100. It was done in an instant, as Mr. Nelson returned in less than five minutes from the time he left the office.

Detective Morris of Elizabeth was in this city yesterday and to-day searching for some clue to the thief.

Last week the office at the Broad street station of the Central Railroad was robbed in the same manner, and it is thought the two thefts have been committed by the same person.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Twentieth Century Tenement.

It will be what Lucia True Ames depicts in The New England Magazine probably. She says the tenement house system properly managed furnishes the best solution of the problem of housing the poor, and that the smallest death rate she has found anywhere was that in an east London tenement house.

Mrs. Ames proffers a large building, which will house from 50 to 60 families. She would have them all supplied with heat for their rooms from one central plant, the heat being either from hot air or steam. She argues rightly that this could be furnished by the owner of the building and its expense charged in the rent for much less money than is now paid for fuel by the wretchedly poor as well as wasteful tenants, who buy it in small quantities and carry it up three or four flights of stairs, leaving the halls and steps constantly dirty and littered. This proposition is self evident.

The next great reform will be to have a kitchen on the top floor of the tenement. Here one trained cook and two assistants can prepare nourishing, wholesome food much better than the tenement occupant usually gets and supply it to the families for less than they pay now. By means of dumb waiters it could be conveyed to every family. Thus at one blow both wretched cookery and the hideous cook stove, with its dust and ashes, labor making and poisonous gases, would be eliminated from the tenement house. Certainly the millennium would begin if this sort of a tenement house were to be sprung upon us suddenly. So far as real civilized needs go, the tenement house occupant in a mansion like this would be practically as well off as the guest of a fashionable hotel.

Dumas on Husband Hunting.

The most scathing bit of literature which has appeared recently is the letter written by Dumas the younger to a French girl who sent to a newspaper a complaint that she found no husband, although she had been educated for marriage on the most approved plan. Dumas replies that her letter shows her to be utterly heartless, looking to marriage only as a means of support, and on man merely as a creature designed to maintain her in luxury when she is fit for nothing useful on the earth.

Dumas himself evidently does not go in very strongly for marriage. The conclusion of his published letter is calculated to set both girls and the mothers who hunt husbands for them to thinking:

You don't think work is respectable. You are mistaken. This old world of ours is going to pieces, and a new society will arise based on equality and labor for all. Do not count on men, young girls; count on yourselves. Do not despise art, science, industry, commerce, which represent life and are the basis of all society. Read a little of what we have found in them—a real value that is lacking in your gowns, soirees and dances. That is the best way to find a husband, if you still want one when you amount to something, which is not certain, for your present great desire to get married is only the result of your education, which has incapacitated you from doing anything else. It is quite likely that when your own work has secured for you your independence men will appear in a different light to you, and that you will prefer to remain single, as is often the case with us men.

The majority of women, not to say all, always say, "If I were a man, I should never marry," which shows what they think of marriage. No, do not worry about husbands. Work, young girls; paint pictures like Rosa Bonheur, write books like Mme. Sand, act like Sarah Bernhardt, philosophize like Heloise, translate like Mme. Dacier, make pianos like Mme. Erard, conduct a store like Mme. Boucicault. Neither do I mean to say that we men are not found in less tiresome than this eternal hunting after husbands and less humiliating than not finding one.

The new premier of the Australian colony of Victoria, Mr. Patterson, began life as a workingman, like John Burns, and is in full sympathy with industrial progressive movements in all their forms. It is something new for workingmen to have a man from their own ranks hold a high official position, but it shows what must come. It is said that the first object of Mr. Patterson will be to revive the declining prosperity of Victoria and to make an effort to stop the piling up of any more debt. This resolution is especially gratifying to England. By the way, it is odd, is it not, while the United States is rich and prosperous and growing more so as fast as any country can, that the colonies of Great Britain are struggling with debt and seem to be moving backward? Canada is one example of it; India is in a chronic state of poverty and distress—often hunger—while some of the colonies even of rich Australia, Victoria, for instance, are in a condition of great financial depression.

M. Molesan, a member of the French Academy of Sciences, declares that at last he has accomplished the feat of melting down pure carbon and crystallizing it into genuine diamonds. He did this by means of an electrical furnace, which enabled him to obtain a heat of 3,400 degrees Fahr. If, now, it becomes possible to manufacture diamonds, their great value will at once be gone, for anybody can own and wear them. In the same way, if gold were as plentiful as iron, it would be much less valuable than iron. Everything is cheapened by becoming common except common honesty.

A department of labor will be established by the new British cabinet as one of the government bureaus.

If one-half of the world was as wise as the other half thinks itself to be, what a wise world this would be!

All the world hates a kicker with a grievance.

THAT HILL INTERVIEW.

It Is the One Topic of Political Conversation.

HAWAIIAN TREATY WITHDRAWAL.

Patrick A. Collins, Isaac P. Gray, Josiah Quincy and Robert A. Maxwell Get Important Appointments—A Day of Interest at the National Capitol.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The visit of Senator David B. Hill to his great political rival, President Cleveland, was a matter of much gossip and interest in political circles, in the White House and by appointment, presumably arranged by Congressman Rockwell of New York. That his visit was more than a mere perfunctory call is attested by the length of the interview. It lasted 30 minutes, and during that time Mr. Cleveland received no cards from the waiting politicians in the cabinet room.

Mr. Hill came early. The great flood of officeseekers had not begun to flow into the White House when he arrived. He passed rapidly through the hallway in the public part of the mansion into the room of Private Secretary Thurber, who evidently had been posted, for he ushered Mr. Hill into the adjoining executive office without a moment's delay.

Other Visitors Had to Wait.

When Mr. Hill entered the president's room word was sent to Doorkeeper Loeffler that Mr. Cleveland was very busily engaged and could not see any visitors for some time. As a consequence the arriving official callers filled the cabinet room, and by the time Mr. Hill left the White House there were more than ten seats in the apartment. The interview was of a strictly private character, but from the fact that it had been previously arranged and from its length there can be little doubt that it was of more than a mere social character.

Mr. Hill, by virtue of his office as senator from the state of New York, would be obliged by the unwritten code of official etiquette, to call on a new president elected by his party, unless the personal relations between the two were of such a character as to make a personal visit seem like hypocrisy.

He Remained Twenty Minutes.

But an official visit of this character would not last more than a minute—in fact, just long enough for the caller to shake the president's hand and to make a few pleasant remarks about the condition of the thermometer, or to say that the call was simply for the purpose of paying respects. Twenty minutes is an unusual length of time for any caller, no matter how distinguished, to remain in the president's room during these busy days in the executive mansion, and if Mr. Hill and Mr. Cleveland talked airy nothings for a third of an hour while a crowd of patriotic citizens were waiting to be heard, they were particular that none of their remarks were overheard.

The First Executive Communication.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—President Cleveland's first executive communication to the senate of the United States came in the afternoon and proved to be a surprise to the only two republicans in the house, Democrats as well. In the communication President Cleveland withdrew the treaty with Hawaii which was sent to the senate a few weeks ago by President Harrison. The message was short and to the point, the president simply requesting the senate to transmit to the executive the proposed treaty with Hawaii. The message was received without comment on the floor of the senate, although the Republicans were prone to criticise the proceeding with considerable emphasis among themselves. Democratic senators look upon the act from a twofold point of view, some taking the ground that it shows Mr. Cleveland to be against annexation or American domination of any sort in the Hawaiian Islands, while others hold that he will send in another treaty more to his liking. It is understood that the reason for the withdrawal of the treaty by President Cleveland is because he is opposed to the treaty in its present form.

It is intimated that the president will suggest either by message or personally to senators that a commission be appointed to visit the Hawaiian islands this year during the interval between the adjournment of the special session of the senate and the reconvening of the next congress.

Some Important Nominations.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Josiah Quincy of Massachusetts to be assistant secretary of state.

Robert A. Maxwell of New York to be fourth assistant postmaster general.

Isaac P. Gray of Indiana to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Mexico.

Patrick A. Collins of Massachusetts to be consul general of the United States at London.

Accompanying these nominations were a number of minor army and navy nominations.

The nominations were received and laid over, inasmuch as they could not be referred until the committees have been organized.

Sketches of the Nominees.

Josiah Quincy is one of the politicians of the younger school who has managed to win the confidence and esteem of President Cleveland by energetic and well directed efforts in the management of delicate questions of party policy. He is about 34 years of age and enjoys the distinction of being the last of the historic Quincy family of Massachusetts. He is in comfortable circumstances and is a lawyer by profession, but has devoted most of his time to the pursuit of politics, for which he has shown a peculiar aptitude. He is chairman of the Democratic state committee, a member of the national committee, and during the last campaign was a manager of the literary bureau and a member of the executive committee of the national committee.

Patrick A. Collins of Boston was born near Fermoy, county of Cork, Ireland, March 13, 1844; came to the United States in 1865, received a common school education; was in early life an upholsterer; read law in the Harvard law school and in Boston, where he has practiced since his admission to the bar in 1871; was a member of the Massachusetts house of representatives in 1876-9 and of the Massachusetts senate in 1879-80; was judge advocate general of Massachusetts in 1875; was elected to the Forty-ninth congress; was re-elected to the Forty-ninth congress as a Democrat and re-elected to the Fiftieth congress.

Maxwell Is an Antimasquer.

Robert A. Maxwell is a citizen of Batavia, N. Y., and a man of means, having amassed considerable money as a marketer, from which business he retired some years ago. For 20 years he has been prominent in the politics of New York and is recognized as a Democrat of the old school. Mr. Maxwell was one of the leading spirits in the antisnapper convention and has long been the warm personal friend of Mr. Cleveland and Postmaster General Bissell.

Mr. Gray is a Chicagoan by birth and at present resides at Union City, Ind. He was a Republican until 1876, when he joined the Greeley movement. In 1876 he was nominated for lieutenant governor of Indiana by the Democrats as a representative of the Greeley followers on the same ticket with "Blue Jeans" Williams, and was elected. Toward the close of his administration Governor Williams died and Mr. Gray assumed the duties of governor of the state. In 1890 he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor but was defeated and put upon the ticket for second place. This ticket was defeated. Four years later Mr. Gray rapidly through the hallway in the public part of the mansion into the room of Private Secretary Thurber, who evidently had been posted, for he ushered Mr. Hill into the adjoining executive office without a moment's delay.

A SECOND CONFESSION.

M. Baihut Pitifully Acknowledges His Guilt.

PROGRESS OF THE PANAMA TRIALS.

M. Blondin Denies That He Instigated M. Baihut's Demand For Money—Baseleroy Is Amazed That the Prosecution Should Seek His Conviction.

PARIS, March 10.—When the Panama trials opened, Presiding Judge Desjardins proceeded to interrogate M. Marius Fontane. The latter stated in reply that he was a member of the board of management of the Panama Canal company when the transactions with M. Baihut occurred. He described the visit of M. Blondin, who assured the board that M. Baihut would introduce a bill authorizing the lottery bonds if the Panama Canal company would make a substantial pecuniary sacrifice, and that *the money would be used to procure pub*licity for the scheme.

M. Fontane further admitted that, acting under the direction of Charles de Lesseps, he visited M. Blondin. He found M. Baihut there. Baihut said, "The money in question will be used in promoting the interests of the country." Charles de Lesseps thereupon proceeded to discuss with M. Blondin the question of the million francs claimed by Baihut. The matter was eventually settled at Fontane's residence.

The Day's Great Sensation.

In reply to the presiding judge M. Fontane continued, "Some of the drafts payable to bearer were issued in favor of verifying and to satisfy the robbers who waylaid us like footpads." This closed the interrogation of M. Fontane for the time being, and *there followed the great sensa*tion of the day.

M. Baihut was called upon to answer interrogatories. He showed a disposition at first to throw the blame upon M. Blondin, who had acted as the go between in the negotiations. Baihut said: "I acted at the instigation of Blondin, whom I gave 7,500 francs. I have wished to restore the money I received, but I feared thereby to accuse myself."

Up to this moment M. Baihut had spoken clearly and with apparent self control. Now he broke down, and with a pitiful expression of sorrow and despair he exclaimed: "I am a broken vessel." I acknowledge having been led astray. I am guilty. My words express the grief and repentance I feel. I do not understand how I could have fallen so low. I ask pardon of my country, whose good name I have perhaps sullied." As soon as M. Baihut regained his self control he asked for death in advance to any sentence which the court may pass on me."

M. Blondin's Testimony.

M. Blondin was then questioned by the presiding judge as to how he came to act as intermediary between the Panama company and M. Baihut. In his answers Blondin denied that he had instigated M. Baihut's demand for money and that he had received 7,500 francs for his services in arranging matters between the two parties to the affair. He had arranged the meeting between Baihut and Charles de Lesseps in the belief that it would be for the best interests of the company. He had admitted that he had settled matters connected with the payment of the bribe. Charles de Lesseps had handed M. Baihut 200,000 francs and M. Baihut 100,000 francs and 125,000 more in the lobby of the senate.

M. Baihut, recalled and cross examined by counsel for the defendants, said that he thought that M. Blondin had obtained a commission on the transaction between him and M. De Lesseps.

Testimony Is Amazing.

In examining Sans-Leroy, the next witness, Judge Desjardins recalled that while a member of the parliamentary committees on the Panama affair he was opposed to the Canal company then making proposals to deputies. M. Sans-Leroy hardly waited for the judge to cease speaking before exclaiming angrily:

"I am amazed that the prosecution should dare fasten on a word or two spoken by me to the examining magistrate, in order to throw me into prison, while they forget to arrest many others who they know are really criminals."

"Why, after voting for a report hostile to the bill, did you reverse your vote?"

"There were three of us who favored abandoning the bill" replied M. Sans-Leroy evasively. "I was one, when I changed my opinion that the Canal company were approaching deputies. I never spoke with the lobbyist, Arton."

Senator Bozi was asked to explain why he received 40,000 francs from Baron de Reinach. He said:

Was Regarded Money as Fees.

"This was the amount of my fees for having given Baron de Reinach advice concerning the Tania railways." This statement Senator Bozi supported with documents.

Deputy Dugue de la Fauconnerie said that the 40,000 francs given him by Baron de Reinach were part of his profits as member of one of the guarantee syndicates.

Ex-Deputy Gobron admitted having cashed a check drawn by Baron de Reinach for 200,000 francs, but denied that the check was in any way connected with the Panama lottery loan bill. After Charles de Lesseps had confirmed this statement M. Gobron protested feelingly that his whole life disproved the accusations now brought against him.

Deputy Antonin Proust said that the 300,000 francs received by him from Baron de Reinach constituted his share of the profits from a guarantee syndicate. At the request of M. Proust's counsel, Charles de Lesseps was allowed to say that he had known M. Proust for many years and believed that the accusations brought against him were utterly unfounded.

Why De Lesseps Confessed.

PARIS, March 10.—Charles de Lesseps told a friend that prior to the recent trial he had been promised a minimum sentence if he would plead guilty to the charges. He replied that this was beyond his power, because, as far as he was aware, no Rightist was implicated. As he received the maximum sentence, he said, he would now show no mercy toward the authorities.

The Massachusetts Prisons.

BOSTON, March 10.—Matters at the state prison are reported as in status quo. There has been no trouble or special demonstration, and everything is said to be proceeding in good order. General Bridges, recently appointed warden, stipulates that he will not accept the position unless he is given full control.

INSANE HOSPITAL INVESTIGATION.

Van Wagenen Admits That He Charged All That He Could.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 10.—The investigation into the financial condition and management of the Hudson River State Hospital for the Insane was resumed.

F. A. Van Wagenen said he had furnished beef, mutton and lamb to the institution for the 23 years it had been in existence with the exception of about 10 months. He said very frankly he did not know he was the only bidder or he would have charged as much more as he could get.

He was asked to explain why he charged 8½ cents for beef when the institutions at Utica, Buffalo and Matteawan paid only 6½ cents. He said they got a poorer quality of beef than he furnished at Poughkeepsie.

Judge Gilbert asked how he knew this, and Mr. Van Wagenen replied, "I know from the man that furnishes them that they do not get the same quality." He refused to tell from whom he got this information, but finally said it came from an Albany employee of the Armour Beef company.

When asked to produce his books, showing how much he paid Armour & Co. for the beef sold to the asylum, he refused to do so, and the matter went over. The witness admitted selling at wholesale in Poughkeepsie in smaller quantities than he sold to the asylum.

THE DEADLY MACHINE SAW.

One Man's Heart Cut In Two and Another's Arm Severed.

WYANDOTTE, Mich., March 10.—Herman Meinke and Amos Coan were using an old fashioned machine saw yesterday converting a lot of timber into logs and sticks. Meinke placed an extra heavy and knotty piece of wood on the table. While he adjusted it he and Coan, who stood directly back of him, were engaged in conversation. When the blade had dug its way about half through the wood, it struck a snag, and the saw leaped from its bearings. In its flight through the air the blade struck Meinke squarely in the breast. The saw severed the ribs as if they were made of paper, and striking the heart fell in the center cut that organ in two. Meinke was thrown back wards by the force of the blow, and the saw, thus released, flew over the dead man's shoulder, and striking Coan on the left arm cut that member clean off about four inches below the shoulder. The accident was caused by the breaking of a woden screw with which the saw had been fastened to the frame.

The Grand Jury's Finding Approved.

KITTANNING, Pa., March 10.—The grand jury found true bills against Sprague, Ryan, Kromer and Wyckoff, charging the first three with burglary, all four with the murder of William C. Shaeffer at Leechburg on Feb. 21, and Dr. Wyckoff with keeping a gambling house. The announcement of the finding of the grand jury was received with manifest satisfaction.

KEENE'S WHEAT DEAL.

He Will Either Win or Lose $10,000,000, It Is Said.

HE CONTROLS 20 000 000 BUSHELS

It Is a Toss Up Whether He Will Succeed or Not—The Gigantic Deal Is Being Engineered by "Sandy" Eggleston In a Masterly Manner.

CHICAGO, March 10.—"Jim" Keene, it is reported, stands to win or lose $10,000,000 on the Chicago board of trade.

Operating through Sigmund Gruner, a stock, cotton and sugar broker of New York, Keene has obtained control of about 20,000,000 bushels of the best wheat in western storehouses and has accumulated a prodigious line of futures. The cash end of the deal is in charge of "Sandy" Eggleston and the speculative ends charge of John Cudahy, both masters in their specialties.

Nearly all of the contract wheat in Chicago, amounting to about 10,000,000 bushels, is lodged with Eggleston and nearly as much more high grade property in St. Louis, Minneapolis, Duluth and other western centers is controlled by the same individual.

The Elevator Space Cornered.

Besides his immense cash holdings in this city Eggleston has cornered about all the elevator space in Chicago that can by any possibility become available for the storage of new receipts between now and the end of May.

He has accomplished this feat by contracting with elevator companies to provide him room for several million bushels of grain which he expects to receive before the end of May. If by any chance he should not get the grain the elevator company will not care, as Eggleston has contracted to pay full storage rates on this space.

Eggleston can get more money from the banks than any man in the city and on closer terms, but in this case he has not drawn upon the local banks heavily. The great bulk of the money required to finance the 20,000,000 bushels of wheat centered in Eggleston has been drawn from New York, Sigmund Gruner paying the drafts.

REPORTED FALL OF SANTA ANNA.

According to Rumor the Rebels Succeed. Isidoro Commits Suicide.

VALPARAISO, March 10.—There has been received here a rumor that Santa Anna, the state of Rio Grande do Sul, which has been besieged by the rebels, had fallen, that the leader of the government, General Isidoro Fernandes, had committed suicide.

Previous to the receipt of the rumor correspondent in Montevideo telegraphed that General Tavares, with 2,000 well armed troops, was encamped three leagues from Santa Anna.

He was then planning to give battle to the government troops commanded by General Isidoro Fernandes. On the result of this battle will depend the fate of the revolution. Foreign residents in the state of Rio Grande do Sul have been attacked by adherents of both parties. Reports of the defeats of the revolutionists, except at Sanlome, are now vigorously denied.

WOMAN AND HOME.

CHILDREN SHOULD BE TAUGHT TO BE SELF DEPENDENT.

Making Dinner a Formal Function—Contentment of Motherhood—Woman on a Rainy Day—A Hint to Correspondents, Where Many Mothers Fail.

"Mamma, what can I do now? Tell me something to do, mamma." What unwise mother has not heard this oft repeated, tedious request, and with a sigh has not wished her child would form her own plans and amuse herself.

I have known two sisters—so near of an age that they ought to have been able to play happily together all day long—even after they were large children, go, first one and then the other, to their mother with this exasperating question. And I have felt that if I were allowed to answer them I could settle it in their minds for once and all.

And yet we cannot lay all the blame on the children. I have called the mothers unwise. And it is so, and time proves it.

The girls who are brought up to be always amused, always attended to first, are the ones who grow up taking all that is given them as a matter of course. Always absorbing, never giving out.

They make the visitors who sit with folded hands and idly watch you at your work. They do not attempt or offer to make their own beds. They gaze listlessly out of the window or exhaust, by fragmentary reading, the books on the center table.

Instead of having a trifle of fancy work in her hands, or offering to read aloud to her host as she works, or to dust or put in order, one of these keeps her entertainer in a continued nervous strain as to the guest's amusement. The guest who entertains herself by her own work or doing unsought many little things for her friends, and who spends a part of each day in her room leaving her hostess free, is the guest who is urged to come again.

It is the guest who depends on us for each moment's pleasure whom we are loath to invite the second time. How can we inculcate this virtue of self reliance in our children? We can begin early, and the sooner the better.

There is no reason why a baby—and I am speaking now only of the healthy children—at the early age when he begins to blink at the light from the window and stare at the colors in the room should not be left in comfortable position in his crib or cradle and be allowed to blink and stare for an hour at a stretch several times a day. Is it not reasonable to suppose it is pleasanter to him than to be continually caught up, tangled in his long clothes, jumped, shaken, kissed—and a whole article might be written under this head—trotted and talked to, his poor weak head supported unnaturally, until every little sensitive nerve is expectant of the shock of new sensation it is to be called upon to endure?

The answer is self evident, and it says his mother more than she ever express if he is taught that his cradle in his happy hours is the place for him.

Then as a child grows older and is able to sit up and notice things there is no reason why he should not be pillowed up on the floor or bed for an hour or more at a time and taught to play with his toys. He can shake his rattle or look at pictures, or your lying prostrate before him and doing that for him or of treating his squeaking pig or pulling at his worsted reins. Show him how, and he would much rather do it.

it, when a little older, he runs to you to string beads or buttons, teach him how; then let him do it while you work. Let him paste his own pictures, build his own blocks, look over his books himself.

If a child is well and bright, he has resources of his own. But if he has everything done for him from the moment of his birth, when can you expect these resources to develop? It will only be under some severe stress of circumstance or heavy discipline, and the lesson will be hard. Independence and self reliance taught through youth never desert one. "Apron string" boys are simply boys who have not been allowed to think or act for themselves.—Sallie Kennebec in Home Magazine.

Making Dinner a Formal Function.

At a recent tea there was an interesting discussion between three or four whether in an unpretentious home dinner should be made a formal ceremony for which the men folks should be indicted to array themselves in evening attire.

"I believe in it," said a doctor's wife, the mother of grown sons and daughters. "I feel very proud of my mankind seated at dinner in their white ties and black suits. I can remember how Robert used the occasion for the rest of us after his return from visiting an English family. You know over there the etiquette of dinner always requires an evening suit, and I firmly believe it is only the first step for making the most of our family gatherings.

"One person can set up an irresistible standard of home life by a few unobtrusive personal habits. If you sit down to the table in a slack, easy going way as much as to say, 'It doesn't matter much, there is no company present,' the young people will very likely come in the same way, with no regard for their toilet. Perhaps conversation will be boisterous, and the meal will be eaten as hastily as possible to leave time to prepare for some entertainment, but if you attach some ceremony to this family reunion even the domestics will straighten up and wait on you more courteously."

"But what would my tired out husband say if I asked him to come to dinner in a dress suit?" asked one of the group. "For my part, I believe home should be a place where a man can enjoy freedom from fashionable fads.

"It is no fad. If it seems too much trouble for a man to get into dress suits, compromise by asking your husband to wear a Tuxedo and your boys to put on Eatons. It will hardly take a minute to change the tie. See that your own dress is in harmony with dinner etiquette. The system of the English household teaches children good manners at home as well as abroad, and I am sure that this habit of dressing for dinner, of making it an important event in the day's routine, inculcates self respect. The younger boys will adopt better manners by this bit of ceremo*niousness in the matter of dress*, and among the remarkable changes resulting conversation will become more cultured, dinner will not be eaten so hastily, and the hour will be one of mingled rest and pleasure."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Contentment of Motherhood.

What is the happiest moment of a woman's life? As maiden or as wife? This question can best be answered by those who have reached the pinnacle of old age and each look back with unpredulced eyes upon the past. If we go to the elderly matron and say: "At what time was life fullest to you? Was it before marriage, when the homage of a lover created romance in your young days, or during the weeks of the honeymoon, when new and old struggled together and the startled and delighted heart hardly knew whether it was moved most to pain or pleasure by the sweet, new experience of ever present love, or in those latter days when, the novelty of wedded life over, you settled down to the sweet pleasures of a home and a growing family of children?" If you say this, we ask what will the answer oftenest be? "The years of early wifehood and young motherhood brought me the deepest joy. Though they were marked by many trials, they were gilded with a freshness of enjoyment that made toil easy and responsibility light." And it is strange how true this is.

As girls we have seen young couples in their new made homes nourishing and petting the children, the issue of their love and wondered sometimes why the mother's eye betrayed so much secret contentment when work was so plenty and care so unceasing. Then the babe! A commonplace object enough when it is your neighbor's child, but what a wonder, what an unspeakable wonder, when it carries your own blood in its veins and smiles—did ever a baby smile before?—with just that brightness you have seen round its father's lips at times and which has govern a deed. Ah, young mothers know all we would say and all we would have them infer, and only young mothers, for though with maturing years come profounder emotions there is a touching quality in the feelings that cluster about the firstborn child which is experienced but once.—Exchange.

A Woman on a Rainy Day.

Just go to your window the next rainy day and notice the sights you see there. See how she is forced to concentrate all the energies of mind and body on herself and her closings. One delicate hand clings desperately to the unwieldy umbrella; the other is ceaselessly struggling to keep firm hold of the multitudinous draperies, and it took, basket or bundle adds a share of her attention but cause is pitiable indeed.

Down goes one fold upon the wet flagstone, detected only by an ominous flapping against the ankles when the garment has become saturated—a loosened hold on the umbrella, of which it takes advantage and immediately sways instinctively over the gutter—a convulsive and random clutch at the petticoats. The umbrella righted, a sudden gust of wind threatens to bear it away, and one hand and both shoulders detain it the other involuntarily comes to the rescue—sweep go the draperies down on the pavement; then another clutch, another struggle, and forward the bundle and so on to the dreary, draggled end.

Stalk—stalk—stalk—comes up the man behind her. Stalk—stalk—he has passed. Stalk—stalk—stalk—he is out of sight before she has passed a single block.

Of course he is. One sinewy hand tightly pressing his umbrella, waterproof overcoat, "close buttoned to the chin," tight fitting trousers tucked into enormous india rubber boots. What is the storm to him?

Is this a woman's only beloved friend, smaller matters than these have swayed the world, and ten thousand such small matters mark the childhood, youth and maturity of twice ten thousand small men and women.—Gail Hamilton in "Men and Women."

A Valuable Hint to Lady Correspondents.

So far as the etiquette of the signature is concerned, there is now no varying rule for women, married and single. It is never right, nor good form, to sign one's name with the address of Miss or Mrs. You are Miss Emily Jones, not Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald Jones, to whomsoever you may be writing. If it be necessary to notify your correspondent or your married style and estate, you may do so, and in one of several ways. Please observe that a correspondent should never be left in doubt as to this, which is embarrassing, being frequently caused by the omission to letters between signings of exact information as to whether the writer is married or single. You may easily believe all you wish to tell.

You may place [Mrs. P. F.] before the Mary Emily aforesaid in brackets. You may write Mrs. Patrick Fitzgerald out fully and plainly in the left hand corner of your sheet, below your proper signature. Or you may simply inclose your address in a folded card in your letter, this being on the whole the most elegant and also the most convenient method of showing one's relation to society. This exception must be remarked here that the visiting card is out of place in an exclusively business letter, one which has not even remotely a social bearing.—Harper's Bazar.

Where Many Mothers Fail.

A woman's first duty is always to her family, yet she forfeits the right itself a very essential in consequence of fulfilling to the very highest degree the exactions of her office. It is in this that many loving, devoted mothers fail in their highest tasks. They see no further than the childhood of the little folks given to their care, and in performing the manifold duties incident to the early years of their sons and daughters' lives they forget that the babies will soon blossom out into observant young people, who will be much happier if their mother proves a congenial companion instead of having deteriorated into a domestic cipher.

It is as much the duty of mothers to keep well informed as it is for them to see that their little ones are properly fed and clothed. In keeping pace with the doings of the outside world they are not laying up for themselves a store of future delight, for when that day comes when the nursery no longer claims the greater part of their time and attention, instead of realizing that they have been left behind in the dark, they will be able to prove an interesting companion to both husband and children, who have kept pace day by day with the progress of the world.—Philadelphia Times.

Unhappy Rich Maidens.

Worse off than the match girls or even the omnibus men of London are the unmarried daughters of the idle people living in the London suburbs. Without a vocation in life, devoid of aim or object in existence, there are no greater sufferers than the daughters of the middle class, who are too well off to work, too idle to excel in art or in music and too selfish to take in hand the welfare of their poorer fellow subjects, and to share with them the good things they enjoy in superfluity.

The excess of women over men in London is remarkable for the fact that whereas the husbands and the brothers work many if not most of the young women are idle. Many of them can never be married and have therefore no hope of escape from the vegetable lives they lead.

The type of elderly women whom fathers are well to do, and who are unwilling or unable to break down the barrier that divides them from the realities and the *rationalities of life, are often most miser*ably unhappy.—Mrs. Arnold White.

A Woman Who Was a Spy.

In the American Revolution the preservation of Washington's army, massed at Valley Forge, was due to the prompt action and the fearlessness of the Quakeress, Lydia Darrah. She played the part of a spy, incurring the penalty which is always meted out for such an offense. Listening at the keyhole of a door behind which the adjutant general, Howe, narrated the plan of a contemplated surprise, she obtained permission to leave the city at daybreak, ostensibly to go to mill, and then carried the tidings to Washington at White Marsh. When the British approached, with all caution and wariness, they found the enfeebled troops on the alert and ready for the attack. This, in view of the enemy's superior numbers, the British dared not risk, and they returned to Philadelphia without having fired a gun.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Need of Quiet Hours.

A paper recently read at a conference of women was on "Quiet Hours" and set forth the importance of "reflection as an element of true activity," urging the avoidance of the error of looking on action as the only form of work.

"We all need ripening hours," says the writer; "We cannot give out what we have not taken. We cannot comfort if we have not ourselves been comforted." This advice is specially pertinent to the busy women of the day; who in their *new found op*portunities have developed a zeal that is keeping them at almost ceaseless work. If such could realize that rest is another form of work, and often though a valuable preparation for activity, a double blessing would be gained for them.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Women and Her Dress.

Let a woman be as free to walk and go about in all weathers as a man, and you neither a shelter to her person and her slavery at the same time. She will find her feet going faster than pinched up lungs can supply breath for. She will find such inspiration in her new found freedom that she will strive for more and more.

Seeing is believing, and so long as woman looks on herself as inferior she makes her look she will be believed inferior. She can't know nor do nor be very much till she changes her clothes, for it's rowing up stream to all of this thing to spend with those about you believing you will fail.—Celia B. Whitehead.

Pernicious Literature.

Mothers, keep evil literature out of your boy's hands. Don't prohibit and scold, but watch for the first symptoms of a depraved taste in him for something better. Don't discuss sensational newspaper headings and the last murder case in his presence. Captain Jack Crawford says: "Many of the young men in the penitentiaries of the western states and territories assert unqualifiedly that they were brought to their present shame and disgrace through reading dime novels. They longed to be heroes or highwaymen or noted robbers, and their first attempt at crime invariably led to their imprisonment for a long term."

Children's Hats.

"The hair of children should never be shingled," says an authority, referring to the to and fro motion of the shears used by barbers in cutting the hair, "as that tears and roughens the hair." The hair of children, whether they be boys or girls, should be kept short until the seventh or eighth year, to the growing hair is a drain upon the nutrition of the body, and at this time of life all the nutritive forces should be expended in the growth of muscle and bone. The hair of a girl after she has reached her eighth year should be allowed to grow, as the less the hair is cut the softer and more beautiful it is.—New York Post.

How to Study Dressmaking.

One may become an expert dressmaker by buying or ordering from a high class costumer one very handsome dress and using it as a study. Every stitch in it means something, and there is therefore no unnecessary one and which is destructive of development of body, and thereby deadens mental capability.—Benjamin W. Richardson, M. D.

Tight Fitting Underwear.

Buy underwear judiciously and with regard to fit of your gown. In one article alone is seen the importance of this advice. The jersey corset cover clings to the figure like a piece of chamois, and yet its elasticity saves one's movements from anything like discomfort. It is strange more women do not buy this cover in place of the cotton and cambric shield that, unless it fits like a glove, is very much in the way.—Buffalo News.

Died For the Love of Her Country.

In all the brilliant examples of those who perished for love of country none takes precedence of Marie Jeanne Roland. Throughout her imprisonment, at the foot of the scaffold, under the very blade of the fatal knife, her quenchless spirit never faltered. She died as she had lived, an example for the faint hearted, an inspiration to those less resolute than herself.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The best bed for babies is an iron or brass crib. It, however, the mother prefers one in the form of a bassinet, it should be so arranged and in such a position that all any danger from its tumbling over can be guarded against.

After all, it is common sense, the appreciation that nature says how much to eat and what to wear, that has reformed an ailing and deformed woman into a beauty of the old Greek type.

Miss Alice Cavanaugh of Dawson county, Mon., superintends the county schools in an area of 30,000 square miles, and Miss Finnegan of Choteau county has an almost equally extensive territory.

Do not wear a hat or bonnet out of proportion to the head, no matter what the prevailing mode may be. The long, full face surmounted with a tiny hat or bonnet is ludicrous.

Remember that without physical health mental attainment is worthless. Let the children lead free, happy lives, which will strengthen both mind and body.

An Unnecessary Caution.

A man who was preparing a series of recipes for a cookery book engaged the services of a retired chef as a critic and to revise his work.

One day he submitted to the chef a recipe for lemon pie which ended with the directions, "Then sit on the stove and stir constantly."

The chef twirled his thumbs and said, "It strikes me that's rather a useless direction, for if you sit on the stove you're bound to stir constantly."—Spare Moments.

PERSONAL.

Mr. B. Fowders of Philadelphia, Pa., is visiting Mr. De Witt Frazee of Pence street.

Mr. David Krymer is confined to his home on Second street with a severe siege of the grip.

The Rev. Robert Lowry of this city has issued a service of scripture and song for Easter tide. It is entitled "The King Immortal," and is published by the Biglow & Main Co., New York.

Mr. John Dalziel, who gave one of his most popular talks, at the R. M. C. A. rooms, Thursday evening, has been secured by the Association for another talk, Thursday evening, March 30th.

Among the members of the graduating class of the Yale Divinity School appointed to speak at the graduating exercises of the Yale Theological Department May 17, is Lincoln B. Goodrich of this city.

Elder Hand of the First Church of Christ will endeavor to answer the question, "What Must I do to be Saved?" The faith of this church has never been fully understood by many and an opportunity is hereby offered any who are interested to hear of their belief.

A pleasant birthday party was tendered Miss Etta Blatz at her home on Somerset street last evening. About twenty-five of Miss Blatz's friends were present, well prepared to celebrate the event. Dancing was the main feature of the evening. Prof. A. Carpenter presided at the piano. A unique supper was served about eleven o'clock.

Mrs. Frank S. Wells of West Fourth street, who has for some time past been a sufferer with internal disease, died this morning. The trouble necessitated the undergoing of an operation, which was skillfully performed by Dr. Tuttle of New York yesterday. Although her condition was very critical, it was thought she would recover.

TOOK POSSESSION OF THE STAGE.

"Nick" Kelly Drives Out All the Passengers by his Abusive Language.

Yesterday afternoon, on complaint of the driver of the stage which plys between this city and Scotch Plains, "Nick" Kelly was arrested and lodged in the lockup. It appears that "Nick" had filled up with "Jersey lightning" at Scotch Plains and then started for this city. The passengers included a number of ladies. As the loaded stage and the heavier loaded man neared Plainfield the "fire-water" began to assert itself and "Nick" became so noisy and used such abusive language to the passengers, despite the driver's entreaties to be quiet, that they all left the stage at Netherwood avenue and walked the remainder of the way.

When arraigned in the city court this morning he plead guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct and was fined $3.

EDSON M. HUBBARD'S CASE.

He Claims there was a Conspiracy to Rob Him of his Property.

Judge Barrett of New York has appointed a receiver in supplementary proceedings against Edson M. Hubbard, whom the Board of Chosen Freeholders of this county is suing for his maintenance in the insane asylum at Morris Plains.

Hubbard, who was formerly a resident of Rahway, was an inmate of the Insane Asylum for four years, and his counsel makes affidavit that his incarceration was the result of a conspiracy to deprive him of his property. When released he was penniless, although when incarcerated he was worth between $40,000 and $50,000.

The New Devil's Auction To-night.

Charles H Yale's romantic spectacle, which will be staged in Music Hall tonight, has been presented in all the principal cities of the South, West and New England this season. It has made a great hit. The Cincinnati Inquirer said of it, in part: "Charles H. Yale presented his great spectacle 'The New Devil's Auction,' at Havlin's Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening. The house was packed to the doors at each performance. Mr. Yale well kept his promises. It was indeed a 'New' Devil's Auction from the rise to the fall of the curtain. There is nothing left of the old production but the slender thread of the legend of 'The Golden Branch,' which, however, is hardly recognizable amid the wonders of beautiful scenery, superb mechanical effects, gorgeous costumes, original ballad divertisements and novel specialties, which Mr. Yale has introduced."

Dr. Mabie at the First Baptist Church

A missionary meeting of unusual interest may be expected at the First Baptist church to-morrow. Rev. Dr. Mabie, one of the most elegant preachers of the denominations, and a recent traveller through the foreign mission stations in Asia, will describe the work of the missionaries and the character of the pagan people to whom they are ministering the gospel.

An appropriate musical programme will be rendered.

—"It makes no difference rain or shine in the White front building on Front street," says Mr. Edward White, "we are always busy selling goods and the reason is that we are always on the hustle on our inducements to offer to our customers." As usual Mr. White's new advertisement, in to-day, is worth reading.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The City's Side of the School Question as Explained by Mr. Marsh.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 10, 1893.
To the Committee on Laws and Ordinances:

GENTLEMEN—In compliance with your request of this date, the following opinion respecting the powers of the Plainfield Board of Education under the several statutes to which you have referred, is respectfully submitted.

As to the act of March 21, 1892, (P. L. 263) which it has been publicly intimated began for Plainfield a limit of $250,000 of school bonds and the possibility of $250,000 more in one year if the Mayor's bill becomes a law, it is enough to say that the 1892 act referred to does not give the Common Council any power to purchase a foot of land or to run the city in debt one dollar for lands, school buildings or anything else, except upon request of the Board of Education. The Common Council has not now, and never will have, any power whatever under that act unless the Board of Education should confer the power of its own volition, and this is true whether the Mayor's bill becomes a law or not. If the Board of Education should make a request of the Council to act under this law of 1892, and the Common Council should consent, the same law limits the expenses that may be incurred in any one instance to $40,000. But, as already shown, the Common Council cannot act at all under this law until they are asked to do so by the Board of Education, and the passage of House Bill 236 would in no way alter the fact. Under that law the school Board would have all the borrowing, but would be required in the first instance to submit the matter to the Common Council for approval.

The law under which the Board of Education since 1892 has borrowed money to buy land and build school houses and secure payment of the money so borrowed by mortgage, is another law of 1892, now P. L. page 265. That law fixes no limit to the amount of money which the Plainfield Board of Education may borrow. The law is a proviso, however, that not more than one school building with the necessary appliances and conveniences shall be authorized to be erected in any city in any one year. There are other limitations in the act, but the Board of Education is not exempt from their operation because of its charter. Whenever the Board desires to borrow is required to be secured by mortgage payable in less than ten years from the execution by the Board to issue of the mortgage. The money to pay the debt so incurred with interest is required to be levied or later to be put in the tax levy.

The statement has been made, without the slightest warrant, that the power of the Board of Education cannot order assessed more than one thousand dollars in any one year in payment of the indebtedness for my school building. I am clearly of the opinion that this is a mistake, and I think the source of the mistake is easily traced. The Plainfield School Law of 1887 which authorized the borrowing of $15,000, to build a school house, and the issue of bonds to pay the loan, required all interest and $1,000 of the principal to be included in each year's tax levy. When in 1889, the Legislature authorized the borrowing of $35,000 more for a similiar purpose, the act provided that the bonds thereby authorized should be payable in the same manner as provided by the act of 1887. So, when in 1875, the Legislature authorized the borrowing of $100,000 more to build another school house, the act provided that the bonds thereby authorized should be payable and to be redeemed as directed in the act of 1887. In the cases cited, the amount of principal required to be put in tax levy each year for each school set of bonds for the several buildings until the bonds debt should be paid. In this way, probably, the impression was created that indebtedness incurred for lands and school buildings under the general State law of 1892 was also required to be paid at the rate of one thousand dollars per year for each school building.

However the impression was created, there is no legal foundation for it. The general law of 1893 provided that money to pay the annual interest on the mortgages, and the money authorized to be raised for a sinking fund to pay off the principal of the mortgage, should be raised in the same manner as the money to pay current expenses of the public schools.

The act fixes no limit for Plainfield, either as to the total amount to be borrowed yearly, or as to the total amount to be raised in the tax levy yearly.

On behalf of the Mayor and Common Council, I stated before the House Committee in the presence of counsel for the Board of Education, that, assuming that the School Board was right in regarding the one-half of one per cent. limit for borrowing applicable to the amount to the current expenses only) there was no law anywhere to be found which put any limit on the amount to which the School Board could run Plainfield in debt for lands and school houses, and I challenge contradiction. No one took up the challenge. The Counsel for the School Board after a long time for preparation of an answer to the challenge consumed over twenty minutes in reading his carefully prepared typewritten brief before the Committee, and although he referred to all the laws which in his opinion had relation to the subject, he failed to deny the proposition stated. Three other lawyers have argued before this Committee against the proposed law; and none of them disputed the legal proposition referred to. See the argument for advocating the opinion which I have always held on this point, and which was originally rendered to the Board at the discharge of my official duty as Counsel to the Corporation.

It is also a mistake to suppose that the only bonds which have been issued in Plainfield for school purposes are those issued directly by the people. Special amendments to the School Board charter in 1887, 1889 and 1892, gave the power to the Board without requiring any vote of the people on the subject as all.

The bonds of the Board of Education has issued any bonds beyond those expressly authorized by its charter, I have to say that while it is true that for many borrowed for lands and school houses under the general law of 1892 the Board has issued bonds in the usual sense of the word, the Board has in fact with such borrowing simply issued its obligation for the full amount borrowed, and thatsuch bonds, principal and interest, are required to be paid by the taxpayers of the debt incurred is for all practical purposes the debt of the city, and the creditors, besides the ordinary remedies to enforce payment against the taxpayers, have the added security of a special lien upon the mortgaged lands and buildings.

It is a mistake to suppose that "the Board of Education can put no lien on a dollar's worth of taxable property." By the terms of the mortgage the Board of Education the whole amount of money legally demanded each year by the Board is secured by the taxes levied, and the Board May let a first and paramount lien on the property of taxpayers succeed to raise the money.

Whatever indebtedness the Board legally incurs by borrowing money with which to buy lands and erect school houses is a debt which the taxpayers of Plainfield are by law required to pay. The amount borrowed is indeed a lien on the property mortgaged, but for the amounts required annually for interest and principal of the debt, the property of every taxpayer is liable, and if any taxpayer's share of the debt is not promptly paid when due, his property may be seized, put up at public auction and sold to the highest bidder.

Respectfully submitted,
CRAIG A. MARSH,
Counsel to the Corporation.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

New Mr. Jennings Has His Issues.

TRENTON, March 11th—(Special).—The Supreme Court to-day granted a writ of certiorari removing all the proceedings and orders of the Bishop against the Rev. J. B. Jennings to the Supreme Court, and preventing any interference with his discharge of the functions of rector of Grace Church until that court shall dispose of the matter as law and justice may require.

It seems that many of the Episcopal ministers of Union county, being convinced that Mr. Jennings is a victim of persecution, have come to his assistance and retained Craig A. Marsh of Plainfield to take the whole matter to the courts if possible. A point was scored for Mr. Jennings in obtaining the writ, since the civil courts are always reluctant to take such matters out of the hands of the church authorities Mr. Jenning's friends now expect to see him "vindicated" and retained in his pulpit permanently.

Fell Into a Vat.

ORANGE, March 11—(Special).—William Jackson, conductor on a freight train of the Morris and Essex Railroad, met with a shocking accident this morning at South Orange which may result in his death.

He was in the act of signaling his engineer, and in the darkness made a misstep and fell into a vat. He was horribly scalded before being rescued by his fellow-trainmen.

There is little chance for his recovery.

No News of the Narsonic.

NEW YORK, March 11, (Special.)—The White Star line agents continue to hope for good news of the Narsonic from the Azores. They appear to be the only persons, however, who are at all sanguine that the overdue freighter is afloat.

The general opinion is that the Narsonic and her crew are at the bottom of the sea.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, March 11. (Special.)—For Eastern New York and New Jersey, fair weather on Sunday; warmer southwesterly winds on Sunday morning, probably warmer on Sunday evening, but colder on Monday morning.

Ice Causes Trouble in New Brunswick

NEW BRUNSWICK, March 11. (Special.)—Sixty feet more of the temporary bridge across the Raritan river washed away last night because of the ice and high water.

Interesting to Wheelmen.

As the days begin to lengthen so doth the smile on the face of the average wheelman lengthen in proportion; for this is a forcible reminder that the time is not far distant when the hum of the spokes and the "pop" of the pneumatic tire will be heard again as the "scorcher" assumes his monkey-on-a-stick attitude and "kicks" the pedals, determined that in the coming Spring he will beat his record or "bust." Seriously speaking it has been an unusually hard Winter for the average cyclist, and has not only stopped the "scorcher" in his hump-producing avocation (though fortunately he does not represent one-hundredth of the wheeling fraternity), but has likewise caused hundreds to chafe under the restraint of bad weather who wheel for recreation and pleasure and who care not for "records" so long as the day is fair and the roads good.—Trenton Times American.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Two weeks and a half after the death of James G. Blaine the New York senate found it out, passed resolutions of respect and took an afternoon off in honor of his memory.

It requires a month to "Harveyize" an armor plate for a naval vessel. By the new Harvey process for hardening steel plate the armor of our cruisers will be lighter and more nearly impenetrable than the old ways was. Our armor plate is now given up to be the best in the world. The new cruisers that receive it will be invincible.

Wisconsin is among the states wrestling with a joint resolution recommending a constitutional amendment for the election of presidents of the United States by the people at large, also recommending that the presidential term be changed to six years. There is a tendency to lengthen terms of elective officers. Gladstone provides that the members of the Irish legislative assembly shall serve five years. Our congressmen only serve two years, when all the worry and expense of an election must be gone over again. It is said that a member only becomes familiar with his duties and knows to his colleagues during his first term in congress and only after that has any chance at all to show what there is in him. Sometimes there isn't anything.

All Aboard For Jerusalem!

Strange indeed must that cry sound at the little town of Jaffa, the seaport of Jerusalem and the Holy Land. Jaffa is the ancient Joppa of the New Testament, and in a straight line is 31 miles northwest of Jerusalem. The railroad which has at length connected the two cities with bands of steel is, however, 53 miles long, winding part way through a huge waste of sand bank, part way running across fertile and beautiful valley land and again climbing rugged mountain heights. Oriental superstition would not, however, permit the station at the terminus of the road to be located in the city of Jerusalem itself, but required that it should be a mile away, whence the tourist takes a carriage to the Holy City. It will not be long, though, till that mile of distance is covered with houses and ginger ale shops and peanut stands if the railroad has its usual wakening effect on the bumble city. The road was built by a French company.

Since the dawn of history this ground over which the new road passes has been the scene of great events. Samson performed his exploits somewhere along this road, and it may interest Bible readers to know that the country is still full of foxes. From the Old Testament times to the New, thence to the conquest of the Saracen, then the campaign of Napoleon, the record of war and tremendous events goes on without a break. As important, as thrilling as any, is the story of the railroad train which at last shrieks across the ruin and desolation and wakens into life the sleeping centuries of the orient.

The Elmira System.

The best deeds are always done with the least fuss. This is why not much trumpeting has been heard about the so called Elmira prison system, which is quietly working a revolution and redemption in the penitentiaries of the country. Its underlying idea is not to punish a convict, but to keep him from doing any more harm till he learns to do good. Maryland and Pennsylvania have also taken up the system and are working it out in the most reformatories.

When a convict is sent to Elmira, he is first referred to a physician, who questions him as to his health, parentage, etc. Then he is passed on to the superintendent, who investigates his intellectual and moral training, habits and occupation. With this knowledge the officials set about their work. The prisoner is thoroughly cleaned up to his body and put to work. Thirty-two different trades are taught in the institution. When the prisoner steps out once more a free man, he has not only a trade, but also regular habits of work, both of which are worth more than a million dollars to him.

Further, while he was in prison he went to school. All the ordinary branches are taught in the elementary, while for those whose intellects are better cultivated than their moral natures there are higher classes in such branches as political economy, algebra, history and physical geography. A good library is attached. It is a fact that these prison inmates publish a paper regularly, all the work of which is done by themselves. Equal attention is bestowed on their moral testimony. Intricate and dull doctrinal sermons are preached, but the religious teaching is simple and ethical, dealing with such questions as every child can see the force of. In addition is a well equipped gymnasium is attached, and the men take physical culture in its most approved form. Attendance on all these means of development and culture is compulsory.

Finally, at the end of his term the prisoner receives a part of the money he earned during his imprisonment. While it lasted he gradually received more and more privileges as fast as it was proved that he could bear them. If, now, the system could go one step further and destroy that cruel prejudice against prisoners after their release, it would be perfect.

DEATH IN FLAMES

Boston Visited a Third Time By a Great Fire.

LOSS OF LIFE NOT KNOWN.

An Entire Block and Other Adjoining Buildings Consumed.

Magnificent Structures Reduced to Ashes. Scenes of Panic and Distress Never Before Witnessed by Boston Citizens—The Floors of the Ill Fated Buildings Were Sprinkled With People—Many Jumped From Windows to the Sidewalks—Heroic Work of the Firemen—Awful Stories Told by Eye Witnesses—A Chief Snatched From the Jaws of Death—List of the Killed and Injured.

BOSTON, March 11.—One of the most destructive fires in the history of Boston, next in magnitude to the famous one of Thanksgiving day, 1889, and in the same district, broke out shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and before it was placed under control, three hours later, had burned over more than a square, had reduced to ashes several of the magnificent new buildings recently completed on the territory burned over three and a half years ago, had consumed property, valued by a conservative estimate at $6,500,000, had been attended by scenes of panic and distress never before equaled in the memory of citizens now living and had destroyed several, perhaps many, human lives and mangled or maimed at least 30 persons, some of whom will die of their injuries. At 4:25 o'clock the alarm was rung in from box 39. It was soon followed by a second, and then a general alarm.

The Cause at Present Unknown.

The flames broke out in the toy department of Horace Partridge & Co., who occupied the fifth and sixth floors of the Ames building, corner of Essex and Lincoln streets, owned by F. L. Ames. The cause is at present unknown, but the start is described by those nearest it as resembling the bursting of a fire cracker.

The flames spread with incredible rapidity and in a very few moments the entire interior of the building was burning. There were many employees of the Partridge company at work at the time, and the other floors of the building were sprinkled with human beings. The usual avenues of escape were at once cut off, and then began a scramble for life which sickened beholders. The pale stricken inmates fled to windows and roof. Some escaped by sliding down the telegraph poles, others by leaping into blankets and nets. Several jumped to the pavement, six or eight stories, and were terribly mangled.

Fell Back Into the Caldron.

Others, how many cannot now be told, fell back into the caldron of flame or were overcome by the dense black smoke which suffocated all who did not speedily escape.

The entire fire department of the city was speedily on the scene. The departments of Somerville, Cambridge, Newton, Quincy and Brockton arrived later by train and what was required to be in readiness from more distant cities.

Fortunately further help was not needed. Vast crowds of people began at once to flock to the scene, and as a spirit of precaution Governor Russell speedily ordered two companies of militia under arms and proceeded to the fire in person, where he was soon joined by Mayor Matthews. The committee of the city council, appointed to investigate the causes of recent large fires, was in session at the city hall, but adjourned to the scene of the conflagration. The fire spread rapidly from building to building, and despite the heroic efforts of the entire system of Suffolk county was not controlled until the entire square bounded by Essex street on the north, Lincoln on the east, Kingston on the south and Kingston on the west had been leveled.

Covered by a Pall of Black Smoke.

The flames could be seen for one building north of Essex street extending along Columbia street, three more on the east side of Lincoln street, and one corner of the United States hotel, on Kingston street, which corner contained the Emergency hospital.

The conflagration as viewed from a distance was grand. A dense pall of black smoke covered that section of the city and as darkness came on this was lighted up by the flames, while occasional tongues of fire and burning embers shot up volcano-like into the stony mass.

The scene was awful. While the Ames building was burning there were repeated explosions like fireworks, mingled with the hoarse shouts of firemen, the clanging and puffing of engines, the crash of falling walls, the rumble from hurrying teams and the surging of the vast crowds, which soon gathered and rushed to and fro in everybody's way. The police service was admirable. The streets were promptly roped off and in the right sections. The wires were so saved in the way, and in many places lay in tangled masses.

Ready to Move Merchandise.

But the current it had been turned off. The employees of many large stores in the vicinity were on duty until the fire was under control, ready to move out goods if necessary. Jordan Marsh & Co. kept 2,000 men for that purpose. Many proprietors near-at the fire moved their most valuable merchandise, as did also several panicky householders. The three largest buildings burned—the Ames, Lincoln and Brown & Durrell—were of modern construction, and built in the most noncombustible style possible for mercantile use. The Brown Durrell had front walls of sandstone and rear walls of brick. The Ames and Lincoln were much like it.

Incoming trains from all directions were heavily loaded during the early evening, and probably over 50,000 outsiders helped to pack the streets in the vicinity while the fire was in progress.

A conservative estimate of the total loss is $6,500,000. The insurance will amount to about $4,000,000.

The principal buildings burned were as follows: Ames building, seven stories; Lincoln building, five stories; Lindlow building, six stories; Brown Durell building, seven stories; five story brick building, corner Columbia and Essex streets; United States hotel, slightly damaged; three small buildings, between the Ames building and the United States hotel.

Benjamin Pond and Mr. Rich, members of Shawmut No. 1, Somerville; injured by falling walls; Rich quite seriously.

Overhead Wire Saves a Life.

For the first time in Boston's fire history the overhead wire system has proved the means of saving a life. When the fire in the Brown Durrell building was at its height the town of a man, who subsequently proved to be District Chief Egan of East Boston, was seen at an eighth story window. He boldly seized one of the large insulated cables which contain a large number of electric wires and proceeded to cross to the opposite building hand over hand. He had gone but a few feet when it became apparent he could not last long, and greatly to the crowd's relief he threw both legs over the 3½-inch cable, which slightly wagged, and slowly and tediously made his way across the building. 119 Kingston street, to which the cable ran.

A large number of lifesaving nets, canvas and blankets were quickly realized, and firemen, police and bystanders vied with each other in holding them, while others hoarsely shouted to the imperilled man to drop.

To have done so seemed to court instant death. His white, agonized face could be seen as he slowly made his way over the cable. Several times the voice of the vast crowd was heard to cheer, which the poor being hanging there was lost. All at once the crowd broke into a cheer, which seemed to infuse new life into the flagging spirit of the fireman.

Snatched From the Jaws of Death.

He reached midway between the two buildings, and if he could only hang out a few minutes longer he would be saved. A very inch of the street below was now covered with nets. At this point the cloud of smoke cleared away and the man was recognized as Chief John F. Egan, who had only been out of the house a short time, where he had been confined with a broken collar bone and other injuries received by falling on the ice. A squad of men ran upon the building numbered 119 Kingston street, and slowly lowered the cable to which Egan was hanging.

At the same time hook and ladder No. 14 erected a ladder to meet the slowly descending man. The cable was played out slowly, and the exhausted man gradually came nearer terra firma. His body swung in close to the burning building, from which the employees were kept back by the heat, but two stories from the ground.

In a few seconds he swung into the arms of his comrades, released his hold, and, as he was carried from the scene, was truly snatched from the jaws of death. A shout of triumph and applause came forth from the throats of the vast assembly.

Stories of Eye Witnesses.

George M. McCallar, bookkeeper at the burned out store of Horace Partridge & Co., says: "I was standing at my desk balancing the days' accounts, when suddenly I was startled by the cry of fire in the building. As near as I can recollect five minutes elapsed between the cry of 'fire' and the arrival of tile engines, yet in that time the whole building seemed to be in one seething mass of flames. In the rush from the building the employees were knocked down and trampled upon. The pitiful appeals of the young girls, mingled with the shouts of the men, as they strove to pilot them to a place of safety, was one of the most exciting incidents in my life. I hope never to go through such a one again."

William A. Burrill of Ames, Chase & Co., says: "I first saw a man with his hair literally singed off his head rushing up the street to the nearest fire alarm box. I sprang to the door and saw a spectacle that appalled me. A torrent of flames were literally pouring out of the windows in the center front on the second floor of the Ames building. The people inside were throwing books out of the windows, and men and boys were picking them up.

The Sight Was Horrible.

"Very soon I came up on the parapet, way up above the street, I saw four men and one woman clinging to the stone work. There was considerable delay in getting a ladder up to them, owing to the density of the smoke. We watched the quartette as they clung for a few minutes only, while the crowd in the street stood in breathless silence. Then the four, one after another, jumped off. Down they came a height of fully six stories and struck solidly on the frozen ground. Oh, it was horrible, horrible. You should have heard the groan that went up from the throng in the street. Every one of the four was unconscious when reached. There could hardly be a whole bone in their bodies."

Mr. J. C. Young, located on the third floor of the Ames building, says: "There was first a puff at the end of the room, followed by the screaming of the girls. The room was filled with black smoke within a minute, driving everybody to the windows without looking around.

"Miss Erkson and two or three others of our girls jumped from the window before warning could be given, and we saw people in the streets trying to catch them. Miss Erkson was caught in a net. My son, H. C. Young, and F. H. Colby of Thomaston, Me., and myself made our way along the coping to a telegraph pole. I handed Miss Eldredt, an employee to Mr. Colby across the gap. My son followed with a boy employee, and Margie Love was then handed to the pole. All slid down safely. When I looked up the flames were pouring out of the window we had left. Falling glass hit us. The smoke was awful, and tongues of flame were reaching overhead, though it was not five minutes from the first intimation of fire till we reached the ground. Our escape resembles almost entirely a dream, but we had not time to grab them, though lying within 20 feet."

Francis E. Gallonpe says: "I was going down Summer street just as the fire started. I looked down Lincoln street and saw a sheet of flame shooting out half way across the street from the second story of the building in which the Woonsocket Rubber company is located.

Blankets Broke the Fall.

"One steamer had just arrived in front of the building, and the men were being stretched. I saw men, women and girls trying to get out from the upper stories. They were excited. I shouted to them: 'Don't jump. The ladders will be here in a minute.' But they were too frightened. One man jumped from the second story and caught a wire. His hung there till extricated, then dropped. I could not see whether the fall killed him or not. I saw another man jump to the telegraph pole near. He slid down without much injury. Several had horse blankets and balled to the frenzied crowd at the windows to drop, and they would catch them. A good many did this, and, though bruised, the blankets held in stout hands, broke the otherwise fatal force of their fall. One little girl, too timid to jump, was rescued by a man reaching out for her as his way down the telegraph pole.

A long step ladder was brought over, and, standing on the top of it the firemen reached up as far as they could and caught others in their arms. In a minute other apparatus came, and the ladders were put up to save the rest. But they were not in time to save one man in the third story. I saw him throwing out books, and he must have either jumped after them himself or have been overtaken by the flames."

A Fireman's Heroic Work.

Fireman O'Connor of Engine 7 stated to a reporter that his engine was the first at the scene of the conflagration, and he was sent to the second story of the Ames building to help save the employees of the Horace Partridge company. He said: "I have been in many a tight place, but what I have just seen I shall remember as long as I live. When I reached the second story and entered the room on the Lincoln street side the sight was most pitiful. Men, women and girls, frenzied with fear, were struggling to reach the windows to throw themselves into the arms. Taking one at a time I lowered them by the hands as far as I could and then dropped them into the nets spread for them below, at the same time fighting the smoke all back from the windows. The cries of the frightened creatures were heartrending, while the heroic efforts of all present, I mind and fought like demons. I think I succeeded in lowering some 25 or 30. I should say that there must have been at least 30 who never reached the ground alive, although it is impossible for any one to estimate the loss of life in the building."

Instead of the Conflagration.

Ida P. Richards, 55 years, living at 81 Common street, jumped from a third story building, 88 Lincoln street. The firemen caught her in a net, saving her life. She was taken to the hospital.

Daniel R. Murray will have his leg amputated in the morning. The operation was to have been performed at the Emergency hospital, but it was put off under the influence of ether, but the near approach of the flames made it impossible to operate and he was removed to the City hospital.

Thirty flames of the United States hotel offered the Firemen's Relief association $1,000 if they would stop the fire and save his building. They were too late.

Other Boston Conflagrations.

This is the third in the series of Boston's great fires. At 7 o'clock, Saturday evening, Nov. 9, 1872, a fire started and in 15 hours destroyed $80,000,000 worth of property and a dozen or more human lives. The fire broke out in the engine room of the toy goods house of Tileston, Baldwin & Davis, corner of Kingston and Summer streets. The flames swept across Summer street to Winthrop avenue, down Winthrop to Kingston and back to Summer street. Engines were hurried from Cambridge and other neighboring towns. The flames baffled such headway as to be beyond control and spread with furious force in every direction. By Monday they had reached the wharves and were licking up the shipping in the harbor.

*Not until 5 o'clock next day was the ap*palling progress of the conflagration checked. The district burned over was bounded by Summer, Federal, Broad, Center, Water, Washington and Bedford streets. The richest business part of the city. Nine hundred and thirty business houses and firms were burned out, and 60 dwellings and lodging houses. On Thanksgiving day, Nov. 28, 1889, another fire started, it is believed from an electric light wire in Brown & Durrell's business business block on the corner of Kingston and Bedford streets, a quarter of a mile away. A $5,000,000 conflagration was the result.

"I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel toward Hood's Sarsaparilla, for under God, I feel and know that to this medicine I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bleed, followed by nausea at the stomach, and later with shortness of breath, accompanied by severe pain. This gradually grew worse until three years ago. Physicians told me the trouble was

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly emaciated, had frequent nausea, fainting, and was confined the greater part of the time. Several physicians were right in saying my life was scarcely given. One day a friend called and left Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and for 5 or 6 days I was sicker than ever, but I kept on and gradually regained in flesh.

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the saffron hue left my skin, the bloating subsided, and I felt better all over. For the past two years my health has been quite good, and I have been able all the time to do the housework for my family. After what it has done for me I most heartily recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. Ogden Snyder, No. 10 Judson Street, Albany, N. Y.

DANGER FROM FLOODS.

The Ice Moving In the Susquehanna River.

HOUSES AND BARNS SWEPT AWAY.

The Situation at Mount Morris More Dangerous Than For Fifty Years—Rondout and Vicinity Flooded by Water—Farmers Ride on Rafts at Lockport.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 11.—The ice in the Susquehanna river broke up at an early hour, caused by yesterday's warm rain, and began to move down stream at a rapid pace. In about half an hour it suddenly gorged and now the stream is completely packed with solid ice for a distance of 40 miles. Near the town of Plymouth there is a bend in the river. Here the ice is piled 20 feet high.

At Port Blanchard the pupils in the public school had to flee for their lives. J. J. Donnelly, proprietor of the Port Blanchard hotel, took his family out of the second story windows.

Between Pittston and Wilkesbarre many outbuildings and barns were swept away. The bed of the Susquehanna is less than a quarter of a mile wide, but now in some places it is two miles wide.

No trains are running on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railway. A freight train tried to make its way from Scranton to Northumberland. The water on the track was so high that it covered the firebox, extinguishing the fire.

All traffic on the Reading railroad, which is on the east bank of the river, was suspended. In some places the water is four feet deep, and large blocks of ice are piled 20 feet high. The telegraph operator's office at Plainville was carried away by the flood. In this city the people living on River street, the most fashionable thoroughfare in the city, are greatly alarmed. They are only 150 feet from the west bank of the river.

People Moving Out at Rondout.

RONDOUT, N. Y., March 11.—This city and vicinity is flooded with water and hundreds of cellars are inundated. The lower floor of the Hudson River Furniture company's building is filled with water. The ice in the Rondout creek has broken and is now moving. The water is rapidly rising. People in the lower part of the village are moving out. At Rosendale the streets, in places, are flooded, and the bridge over the creek there is threatened with destruction.

The Chemung River Rising.

ELMIRA, N. Y., March 11.—The Chemung river has risen about 11 feet. The Erie railway bridge at Wellsburg was damaged last night to such an extent that trains were run via the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western between Elmira and Waverly. A number of bridges in Schuyler county were reported unsafe yesterday, and the probabilities are that a number have been carried away. Havana and Watkins are partly inundated.

Farmers on Rafts.

GOOD HEALTH

SOUND EYES.

How to Keep These Delicate Yet Much Enduring Organs In Health.

It has been very truly said that it is not so much what is done to the eyes as what is not done that produces the greatest effect. In other words, given a pair of eyes that are all right at the start, and it is a great deal easier, barring accidents, to preserve them, to prolong their period of greatest use and beauty, than it is to remedy defect allment or the result of misuse after it has been incurred. To this end Good House keeping specifies as follows some of the things not to do:

In the first place, the eyes should never be severely taxed when that can be avoided. This does not mean nonuse, for these very delicate servants are so marvelously and powerfully constructed that they will stand a great amount of hard work, if the conditions are favorable, without injury. Some of the most injurious practices are those connected with reading, especially the modern fine type and poorly printed newspapers.

Reading upon railroad trains or street cars is to be avoided if possible, since the vibration of the book or paper constantly breaks the focus and imposes a severe strain upon the optics. Reading by a low light, as at twilight, or with too strong a glare upon the paper, especially if reflected directly toward the eyes, are equally harmful. So is reading in bed or in any recumbent position where the matter must be held in a constrained manner and the eyes be twisted into unnatural positions to see the page.

The effect may not be immediate, and when it is noticed will generally be ascribed to anything else rather than the right cause, but in fact it is the continued and excessive strain which induces that feeling of weariness about the eyes, that dull headache just in the rear of the pupils, that heated feeling, which very readily becomes a chronic inflammation of low degree, most disagreeable to bear and ruinous to the clear and unspeakable glory of the perfect eye.

The same result is also reached by using the sight steadily while the person is physically or mentally exhausted and in need of complete repose. How often the remark is heard, "Let me look over the paper while I rest myself!" And this may even be done under the specially unfavorable condition above referred to, such as lying on a lounge or in a hammock, where the light and the position are wholly wrong. Better, much better, if the safety of the vision and the preservation of the organs of sight are of any value, to allow the mental or physical process of restoration to go on without diversion from book or paper.

The Art of Going to Bed.

According to an English physician, there is still something to learn in the matter of nursing. In hospitals, as in private practice, great errors are made in the choice of bedclothing for the sick, and particularly for the sick who are suffering from febrile affections. We have got rid of the heavy curtains around the bed; of the grand accumulator of dust and uncleanliness, the tester; of the heavy valance, which concealed the under part of the bed into a closet, a cupboard, in which all kinds of unwholesome and cumbrous articles lay concealed.

incoming sometimes excreted matter itself, and we have banished the carpet, which often, as a hard trodden, dust laden rag, made the floor beneath the bed persistently impure. This is all good, but the old feather beds, flock mattresses, heavy blankets, thick, impermeable and dense counterpanes still encumber many a patient, rendering ventilation of his body as impossible as in the days of our forefathers. The art of going to bed is one which has been studied and practiced for untold centuries; but, according to Dr. Richardson, people still "go to bed" in a very unwholesome and stupid fashion.

ETIQUETTE

CHRISTENINGS.

Pleasant Social Customs Popular In Connection With Them.

When children are to be christened at home, it is a growing custom to celebrate the event by giving some sort of social entertainment, the size and arrangement of which depends upon the taste and circumstances of the parents. If cards are to be invited, an authority upon manners and social usages advises that the invitations be sent out formally, as though for an afternoon reception. The usual hours selected are from 4 to 6 p. m. Upon a small table a silver or china bowl is placed, which is used as a font. Flowers in abundance are never in bad taste at a christening.

After the clergyman has performed the rite according to the formalities of his church congratulations are offered to the father and mother, and the child is petted and admired or removed to its own apartment, according to the desire or its aversion to society. Refreshments are offered as at any afternoon entertainment, and they are usually of a richer quality than are provided at an informal reception. Of course the customs of this pleasant occasion are varied according to the poetic or artistic fancies of the family, but should be always beautiful and cheerful.

Good Form and Fashion.

There is a most deal more difference between good form and fashion than most people imagine, and there are many who labor under the misapprehension that form is synonymous with style. The New York Tribune points out the distinction between the two in the fact that whereas good form involves perfect and correct taste, combined with a complete absence of exaggeration and affectation, fashion and style do not. The latter are often tainted by vulgarity and by the loudness of their appeals to the attention of the public, whereas good form implies quiet refinement and elegance, a lack of all ostentation and violent contrast and an adaptation of fashion to one's needs, ideas and appearance instead of any subservience thereto. When good form is allied to originality it becomes what the French call "chic."

ANTIQUARIAN DISCOVERIES.

Relics of That Mysterious Race Known as the American Mound Builders.

The skeleton of which an illustration is given was discovered in a mound upon a farm near Frankfort, O. Popular Science News says:

This mound was oval in shape, with diameters of 110 feet and 60 feet. Its original height was apparently about 10 feet. Several skeletons were found in this mound, but with one exception they were almost entirely decomposed and crumbled away into dust on exposure to the air. The one represented in the engraving was that of a man over 6 feet in height, and the size of the bones showed him to have possessed superior strength. Near the head were found five teeth of a bear and two of a panther. These were all perforated and doubtless formed a necklace or amulet. On the right side of the skeleton were found a plate and other articles of copper and a large number of shells.

The other skeletons found in this mound showed a remarkable diversity in the method of burial. The greater part of them were interred lying at length. Some, however, were placed in a contracted position, the knees being bent up toward the chin. Two among them had evidently been buried either before or after death. These different forms of sepulture may indicate burials at different ages or by different races, or, more likely, a difference in the rank of those buried.

Among other discoveries was one of the so-called "altars" of burnt clay, which are frequently found in the mounds. It was rectangular in form, with symmetrically rounded corners and measured 30 by 24 inches. In the center was an oval depression measuring 18 by 12 inches and 4 inches in depth. This depression contained ashes and fragments of human bones. Various objects have been found upon these altars, but all bear marks of the action of fire and were undoubtedly connected with religious or funeral rites.

All discoveries hitherto made throw but little light upon those mysterious people, whom for want of a better name we call the mound builders. While they are apparently distinct from the Indians who occupied the continent at the time of its discovery, they may have flourished in comparatively modern times, perhaps not many years before the coming of Columbus. Their civilization resembles in many respects that of the races of the bronze age in Europe, but with the notable exception that native copper was the only metal used by them.

Acoustical Phenomena.

A very pretty experiment in acoustics may be performed as follows: Take a thin and high sounding cut glass tumbler, fill it nearly full of water and place on its bottom, after drying them well, a dozen of equal branches cut from paper. Turn down at right angles the ends of the branches of the cross in order to prevent it from slipping down the glass.

If you now cause the glass to vibrate by rubbing some part of its exterior surface with your wet finger, as if you were going to make it sing, you will perceive the glass to emit a sound, but, more than this, you will notice the following phenomenon: If your finger rubs the glass under one of the branches of the paper cross, the latter will remain stationary, but if, on the contrary, you rub a part of the glass situated between the branches of the cross, the cross will be set to turn slowly, as if it obeyed some magical influence, and will not stop until the end of one of the branches arrives over the part rubbed by the finger. This you perceive that in moving the finger around the glass you make the cross turn as you please.

This experiment, simple though it is, demonstrates the existence of the points of least motion, which are called in acoustics "nodes" and of "ventral segments" of vibration. The nodes, where the branches of the cross stop, are the points in which the borders of the glass are at rest. The ventral segments, situated between the nodes, are the points in which the vibration of the borders is the most sensitive and on which the branches of the cross could not remain at rest.

Making Oil Out of Corn.

A Chicago sugar refining company is making an oil out of corn, after the corn has been converted into starch or glucose, so that nothing shall be wasted. It is said to be a soft, yellow liquid that resembles linseed oil in appearance. According to The Industrial World, the process of separating the oil from the corn was discovered by Dr. Arno Behr. It had been known for a long time that maize contained an oily property, but it remained for some one to turn the idea into account.

"There is no danger," says Dr. Behr, "of corn oil ever taking the place of linseed oil. In the first place, it will always be too scarce. The amount of oil contained in corn is only about 4 per cent of its total weight, and we find that we lose almost half of it in the process of extraction, so that we get a very small amount of oil after all. The assertion has been made that corn oil can be put to little more than it cannot be employed in making either soap or paint. The great value of linseed oil for paints is that it dries readily, and it has been asserted that the corn oil will not dry. Now, this is a mistake, and as a matter of fact corn oil can be used in making paint or varnish and also in soaps. It makes a splendid soft soap. That there are valuable uses to which it can be put is shown by the fact that there is a demand for it in foreign ports."

THE HOUSEHOLD

COOKING AN OMELET.

Small Secrets That Insure Success in a Popular Dish of the Lenten Season.

The reason, or at least one reason, why omelets are tough is that they are cooked too much. Eggs go on cooking for at least a couple of minutes after they are taken from the fire, so if your omelet is cooked "to perfection" when you remove it from the frying pan the chances are it will have toughened appreciably by the time it reaches the dining room. An omelet should be eaten the instant it is cooked, or it is spoiled. If your omelet has to wait, there is something that will at any rate keep it in fair condition, though if any gourmet detects you in the act he will hold you as anathema ever after. When you finish the omelet, add half a tablespoonful of milk for each egg. This will keep the omelet from drying. But, remember, if eaten fresh, a connoisseur would know you had been playing tricks.

An omelet should never be turned bottom up. Some cooks, as the eggs begin to set, work the mixture gently into the usual half moon shape with the fork with which they stirred the eggs at the first, but the French plan is, directly the eggs are cooked, but not completely set in the center, to fold it over in half and then put a plate over the pan and reverse the omelet into this. Some cooks fold the two edges over to meet in the center and then shift it on to the plate, as described above, but the second way is the most generally adopted. The top of the omelet, which when served is really the center, should never be quite set when it is turned, for, as said before, eggs cook for a minute or so when removed from the fire, so the omelet would toughen if both sides were cooked firm. It is this mistake which usually brings such discredit on cooks in the matter of omelets.

To insure success you must keep the omelet pan strictly for omelets only, having it very clean, dry and never allowing it to be washed, as if this is done the pan is certain to catch.. A copper or a fireproof china pan is best for cooking omelets, as it equalizes the heat better.

Needlework at the World's Fair.

Of peculiar interest to feminine visitors at the Chicago exhibition will be the exhibit of needlework by English ladies. The collection comprises portieres, bedspreads, tablecloths, dollies, chair backs, mantel borders, socks, stockings, tea cozies, etc., all worked in a variety of stitches, colors and styles. Most of it is solid embroidery, either satin stitch or filled in with various fancy stitches, thereby showing the amount of time and labor that has been spent on it.

A unique feature is a collection of British moths and butterflies. These have been cut out, padded and worked with floselle in shades and shapes so true to nature that at first sight they would deceive the ordinary observer as they are quite a work of art.

Among the exhibits there is a quantity of beautiful cushions of every variety of work. One especially attracting notice has a design of daffodils lightly grouped in bunches, tied with pale blue lovers' knots on a handsome white or cream silk foundation, finished off with a deep blue silk frill. This pretty design is by Princess Louise, marchioness of Lorne.

There are exquisite open work and embroidered silk doilies, handsome plush bon

How to Judge Cheese.

Dinner without cheese was once described by a noted gourmand as "a pretty woman wanting an eye," yet there are few household keepers who would not gladly transfer the responsibility of choosing this part of the menu to some other, preferably masculine, shoulders. To such the following words of wisdom, culled from the pages of a contemporary, may be welcome: "A cheese with an indication of goodness will stand squeeze on the shelf and will have an even colored, not mottled rind. The moment you press your finger tips on the rind you can begin to judge of the interior makeup of a cheese. If it yields readily to the pressure of the fingers and the rind breaks or does not spring back readily when the pressure is withdrawn, you have struck a soft article, caused by the slack cooling of the curd, a want of acid, or both. At best it will have an insipid flavor and will 'go off' as it ages.

"Cheese which feels so hard that you cannot press it on the rind is either sour, salted too heavily, cooked too much, skimmed or made from a mixture of all these complaints. A good cheese will be mellow to the touch, yet firm; its rind will be of an even tint, elastic and free from puffs, and the sample will show fine grain, close grained, buttery cheese of a nutty flavor."

When the Lamp Wick Will Not Turn.

Sometimes the lamp wick obstinately refuses to be turned up in its ordinary manner. It will seem firmly wedged at one side, while the other one runs up in a point, causing weariness and vexation of spirit. To overcome this depravity take a new wick, draw out a thread near the selvage, and the wick will be found quite tractable when introduced into the burner, the cogs will take it up properly, and it will appear in good form and give an even flame when lighted.

Petits Fours.

"Petits fours" are simply little fancy cakes, either iced or not. They can be made at home, but the easiest and most usual way is to get them at some good confectioner's, where one can find plenty of choice, for of the great thing almost petits fours is variety. They are rather troublesome to make, as they require knack and practice.

Disinfectant For Sinks and Closets.

Mix a large tablespoonful of copperas with a quart of boiling water. This solution is odorless and deodorizes instantly. It is cheap and has only the disadvantage of staining if scattered carelessly about.

BOROUGH ELECTION.

AN INTERESTING CONTEST IN WHICH THE REPUBLICANS EXPECT TO WIN.

The Two Tickets Compared.—The Republican Ticket Strong and Clean.—Be Sure and Vote Early.—So Doing Will Greatly Help.

The Borough election to-morrow promises to be a quiet but interesting one. The reports circulated through the borough by one irresponsible office seeker and also published by him in a Democratic newspaper have stimulated the Republicans into activity and the result cannot be doubtful.

The Democrats have made up this year an unfortunate ticket. It is not strong in any of its parts. On the contrary the Republican ticket is first-class throughout and will have no bolters.

It is doubtful if a stronger or cleaner ticket has been up for years than that which the Republicans will present to the voter of the borough to-morrow. Of the head of it, Mr. Honeyman for Mayor, no one has other than a good word to say. It is thoroughly well understood that his name is good only because it gives satisfaction to his party, and friends of good local government. He is "abreast of the times and equipped for the situation," says a reader of THE NEWS, "and he will make a Mayor who will give his attention to the interests of the whole borough."

Mr. Honeyman has stated, privately and publicly, that, if elected, he proposes to hear and examine into every request or complaint made to him, whether it refers to lights, gutters, health matters or anything else, and whether it is on Somerset street, or Mountain avenue, or Willow street or Netherwood avenue. He resides in North Plainfield and can be seen every day of the year. As everybody knows, his opponent is to be seen only in the evening and is often out of the borough for a week at a time.

A NEWS reporter saw Mr. Honeyman this morning to ask him about the report industriously circulated over Sunday that he was opposed to the electric road on Somerset street. "I understand that matter to be entirely settled," was his reply. "If it is not, let anyone who owns property along the line, or who possesses any stock in the road—if anybody in the borough does—come directly to me and ask me for my views on any specific question connected with it and he will obtain it forthwith. On dead questions I don't care to waste time. On any live question I am at my house or at my office opposite the Central Railroad station, ready to impart information as to where I stand at any hour. Those men you speak of who quote me against an electric road without having opened their lips to me on the subject, or four miles of sewerage in North Plainfield, when they have not taken the trouble to ascertain where I stand, may be good electioneering, but are not very candid men toward the community. A lie is a lie even when put out in the interest of pipe side in a political contest."

Robert M. Fountain, who is on the Republican ticket for Council, is a strong man and will, it is thought, pull more than his party vote. He is an every day, practical man of common sense, and everybody conceded his nomination.

Mr. Edwards, while new to politics, is morally clean, thoroughly sociable, and a business-like gentleman, who is in the real estate business and who will also, probably, run ahead of his ticket.

We urge upon all readers of the NEWS to vote the entire ticket at the head of this page and to vote it early in the morning. Get your vote in before nine o'clock, and the poll-workers will consider it a great favor.

The voters of the district on the North side of Somerset street will vote their borough ticket in Snengerbund Hall and their township ticket in Spencer's Hall. Go first to the one poll and then directly to the other.

The voters on the South side of Somerset street will vote their borough ticket at 18 Somerset street and their township ticket in Thorn's block.

ANOTHER ROBBERY.

$135 Stolen From a Safe in Mr. J. T. Vail's Office.

Mr. J. T. Vail's real estate office was entered some time during last night and $135 stolen from the safe.

An entrance was effected through the rear door. The key was pushed out of the lock in the inside, another inserted and the door unlocked.

The safe had been left unlocked, and the thief or thieves had but little difficulty in securing the money. It was only necessary to open a drawer in which the cash was kept. This was pried open.

Mr. Vail's son was in the office at four o'clock yesterday and it was between that time and seven o'clock this morning that the robbery was committed.

This burglary, like the one last week at the depot, must have been done by some one familiar with the place, as the entrance way in the rear of the office is not generally known.

The borough and township of North Plainfield election is to-morrow. Vote early! Vote the whole Republican ticket because it is the best in the field. Not one word has been said against it by any Democrat—except that the men on it are "too good for slaughter." This is high praise.

Let it Go at That.

Through the advice of his counsel, Messrs. Jackson & Codington, the case of the Treasurer vs. Councilman Sebring, was referred for the purpose of compromise to the Mayor and Corporation Counsel under section 11 of "An Ordinance to prescribe the duties of the council to corporation." The matter has been taken up by them and disposed of.

—The work of moving Engine Company No. 2's house, which has been sold by the city to Mr. George A. Babcock, began to-day. It will be placed near the brook, facing on the new street.

—The Park Club bowling team will go to Cranford Wednesday night to roll a game with the Cranford Club's team. On Friday night the Park Club and Union County Country Club teams will bowl.

PERSONAL.

The little son of Daniel Clawson of Brook avenue is quite sick with pneumonia.

Mr. Williams, clerk at Rice & Co.'s store in North Plainfield, spent Sunday with his family at White House.

Messrs. F. L. Lancaster and D. Brown of Newark were the guests of Mr. Henry Phillips of Grove street yesterday.

Allie Dunn died Friday night at her home, on Arlington avenue, of scarlet fever. She was buried Saturday afternoon.

Herman Terry, seven-year-old son of Noah Terry of Leland avenue, died Friday of scarlet fever, and was buried Saturday afternoon.

We have received the first issue of an illustrated monthly for home art study entitled The Art Student. The editor is Mr. Ernest Knauft.

Mr. Frederick H. Bryan of Hackettstown is spending a few days here as the guest of his brother-in-law, Mr. David D. Smalley of Manning avenue.

The Rev. H. M. Lowry of Port Jefferson, N. Y., son of the Rev. Robert Lowry of this city, has accepted a call to the First Baptist church at Rahway.

Mr. David C. Smalley, formerly of this city, but recently of Elizabeth, will remove with his family to Plainfield next week. Mr. Smalley will become a member of the well-known firm of Smalley Bros., the North avenue butchers.

Mr. A. C. La Boyteaux of this city addressed a large gathering of men in Association Hall, Trenton, yesterday afternoon, the occasion being a service of the Young Men's Christian Association. His theme was "Improving Present Opportunities."

It is not often that a Republican borough ticket is put up in North Plainfield, when the Democratic newspaper in this city does not jibe at the men on it. But not one line has appeared even intimating that Mr. Honeyman for Mayor, and Messrs. Fountain and Edwards for Council, are not first-class men. They are.

—Queen City Lodge, 326 I. O. of O. F., will confer the first degree on four candidates this evening.

CORRESPONDENCE.

DR. LEWIS' ADDRESS AGAINST THE BOARD OF EDUCATION BILL.

Before the Committee on Municipal Corporations—He Says the Bill is Fatally Defective and Radically Inconsistent.

To the Editor of The News:—The Rev. Dr. Lewis' address at Trenton, on the Board of Education bill, was as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

"There is one characteristic of this bill which ought to forbid its passage, if there were no other reason against it. It proposes to leave the entire work of managing and carrying forward the school system in Plainfield in the hands of the School Board, making them responsible for its success or failure and yet to cripple them in the fundamental part of furnishing the means by which their work must be done. It is as though the nation were to say to its commander-in-chief, 'you must raise, discipline, equip and operate an army equal to all possible needs, but you shall not have the power to determine how great, nor where your base of supplies shall be.' The bill is fatally defective and radically inconsistent to this particular. The State law requires the Board of Education to do certain things: to provide ample facilities for conducting its schools. In this the citizens of Plainfield heartily concur, and they do not wish to see their School Board hampered and thwarted at the initial and fundamental point, and by which they have been positively essential to the success of a system of schools of which they are so justly proud.

"Again the people of Plainfield feel a patriotic pride, as all good citizens of our State do, in the fact, that in our public schools we have a practical development of true communism, which is one of the best results of modern Christian civilization. In that system, the rich and comparatively rich, are compelled to make ample provisions for the education and culture of every child, black or white, poor or rich, thus fitting them for the higher duties of citizenship, of manhood and womanhood. Usually those who babble most about the injustice of taxing one man to educate the children of another, are those who pay little tax and care little for their children. The history of education in Europe and America shows that in no lar as universal education, free education for the masses has abounded, the strength, virtue and permanency of the State have been assured. The people of Plainfield rejoice to such support to all that is best for the State. A few gentlemen in this room represent large tax paying interests in Plainfield, and as such, they are here to oppose this bill. But the people of our city prefer to pay taxes for schools and school houses, through which to make citizens, than for jails, and more rigid citizens, such as constitute the State, rather than pay taxes to punish the criminals to which a system of schools which knows no taxation, ship and no objections, is kept and developed to ward manhood and nobility. Hence we do not want this bill which proposes to inject a permanently inconsistent system.

"It has been well said that we object to this bill because it introduces political interests into political channels. The evils of such a system are prominently apparent in the neighboring city of New York, where the most subordinate position of teacher, or janitor, depends on political push. Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, we pray you to keep Plainfield and other similar cities in New Jersey free from such evils, by allowing this bill, hastily conceived, and radically defective, to breath out its little span of life, within your committee-room."

Don't Wish to be Considered the Same Man.

To the Editor of The News:—Having been spoken to by a number of friends on the subject of to-morrow's election in the borough, I wish to state that I am not the Mr. Blackford who is a candidate for councilman.

LEWIS R. BLACKFORD.

Rectors Jennings' Salary.

Rector J. B. Jennings, of the Westfield (N. J.) Grace Protestant Episcopal church, having taken his case to the Supreme Court at Trenton and obtained a writ of certiorari removing all proceedings and entry of the Borough Council against him and preventing interference on the part of the vestrymen, he may experience some trouble in collecting $700 which the church owes him as salary.

Two vestrymen said yesterday, "This action takes the matter out of our hands entirely. We will do nothing. We can do nothing. Rector Jennings' year expires, April 3. We will not pay Rector Jennings' salary. He will have to sue for it. The matter will be referred by appeal to the Diocesan Convention, which will meet next May. When the Convention meets it will have before it the evidence sustained the Bishop in his order that Jennings must vacate the parish March 31st, and final.

"We used a meeting a few nights ago to notify Jennings that we would not pay, and demand the keys of the church. If he refused we would have locked a new set on the doors and then if he tried to gain an entrance by force the next Sunday we would have him arrested for disorderly conduct or for his arrest on charges of trespass and had him locked up."

Services were held at Grace church yesterday morning and afternoon. Rector Jennings officiated at both services. Less than twelve persons were present.

It was said yesterday that Bishop Scarborough would not recognize Grace church as an Episcopal church if the courts sustained Rector Jennings.

Thieves at Evona.

The "drop a cent in the slot and ascertain your weight" machine, at the Evona station, was broken open last night and its contents taken. It was found on the railroad track this morning, about a hundred yards from the station.

BREVITIES.

—At their regular meeting to-morrow night the Plainfield Bicycle Club will elect officers.

—Don't forget the Y. M. C. A. lectures at the First Baptist church. For particulars see advertisement in another column.

—To-night Plainfield Lodge, I. O. O. F., will hold their regular meeting. Four candidates are expected to take the first degree.

—Plainfield was treated to a bit of Spring weather to-day. The mercury climbed well up toward the Summer heat mark on the thermometer at noon.

—Who paid for the three kegs of beer used at the Democratic Headquarters on Somerset street Friday night, to influence votes of certain ones to vote for Mayor Saunders?

—Tramps effected an entrance into the Bound Brook public school recently and helped themselves to the scholars' dinners. They also stole two or three dinner pails and escaped.

—John Morscadi, who has eluded the police since last Thursday, was arrested last night in the city on warrant for disturbance at a Salvation Army meeting. Judge Quinton imposed a three dollar fine this morning.

—In accepting the invitation to lecture in Plainfield, Mr. Ham says: "I make no concealment of the fact that lecturing on like a subject as Christian Science is of love with me. I shall give you a general discussion on mental training; the principles of it, its effect upon character, with some special reference to the first manual training step—the kindergarten." Those that Mr. Ham's lecture are now on sale at drug stores, price 25 cents.

—New York business men residing in North Plainfield should vote before going into the city to-morrow morning. The polls are open at seven o'clock. Your vote, gentlemen, should be for Mayor Honeyman, and for Council for Fountain and Edwards for Council. You will be a business administration of affairs if you elect them. Not one of them is pledged to any scheme, private or otherwise. Imagine those three if you don't know them. Ask any of the following men, for instance, what they think of the candidates; you probably know some, or all, of them: Dr. E. K. Carroll, Messrs. Charles W. McCutcheon, (Senator) Dupee, Henry A. McGee, ex-Mayor Place, ex-Mayor Cooley, J. R. Arnold, L. R. Wickham, Councilman Hoffham, George D. Hallock, E. A. Hegeman, Jr., E. A. Overton, Dr. J. H. Carman, and numerous other prominent citizens like them. Go to-night and see one of them—they know the ticket through and through. You need not vote in the dark.

"Aye, but science's the thing!"

Half the people are foolish enough to suppose that H-O is a package of ordinary oats partially cut or rolled, and nothing more. There is as much difference between H-O and ordinary oatmeal as between cake and dough. H-O is a strictly scientific preparation, retaining the valuable and rejecting the undesirable properties of the most nourishing cereal known.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Arizona and New Mexico.

The governors of both these splendid territories present in The North American Review their respective claims to be admitted as states into the Union. The presentation is so clear and forcible in each case that, after reading them, one is constrained to ask, "Why are not New Mexico and Arizona admitted to statehood?" The closing thrust of Governor John N. Irwin of Arizona is driven home as follows: "More ignorance is naturalized, more crime is sworn into citizenship and more unfitness made into voters in New York and Chicago every year than there is in the entire Mexican vote of Arizona."

The qualifications for statehood are these, according to Governor Irwin: A people intelligent enough, a population numerous enough and financial strength and resources enough to sustain a state government. These requisites are possessed by both territories. By the census of 1890 New Mexico had a population of 153,076, not counting Indians. This is 13,000 more than Delaware has at present, and three times as many as Nevada, New Mexico has at present not less than 180,000 inhabitants. The assessed value of property in 1891 was $45,329,563. Further, Governor L. Bradford Prince of New Mexico tells us that this territory has greater natural resources, and a greater variety of them, than any state now in the Union. She has all the vegetable and mineral productiveness of California, and almost limitless beds of anthracite and bituminous coal besides.

Both the territories have good public school systems supported entirely by voluntary taxation, since until they are admitted as states no public school land grants can be made to them by congress. Three times enabling acts have been before congress to make a state of New Mexico, and once the act passed both houses and only failed for want of time, for the senate to concur in a slight amendment. New Mexico has been a territory 43 years this 1893.

Arizona "undoubtedly now contains more than 70,000 people," the census giving her 59,620 in 1890. Women vote at school elections. Her mines produced $9,700,000 in ore last year, and she has $8,000,000 worth of live stock and over 1,000 miles of railway. The soil produces all that grows in the northern states and the semitropical fruits besides.

The Government Gold Reserve Fund.

Matthew Marshall recapitulates the history of the $100,000,000 gold fund in the United States treasury as follows in the New York Sun:

The facts, and it cannot be too strongly impressed upon the public mind, that this whole matter of acquiring and maintaining a reserve fund in gold for the redemption of legal tenders is not a compliance with any act of congress, but is purely a matter of the treasury department, originating with Secretary Sherman, and handed down by him to his successors. Mr. Sherman had in 1879 practically nullified the resumption act of 1875 by ordering the release of the redeemed legal tenders, Mr. Sherman justified it whenever forced to by saying as good as could by accumulating a fund of gold which should show to the world that if gold should be demanded for them it could be obtained.

The amount of this fund he arbitrarily fixed at 40 per cent of the $346,000,000 legal tenders which were outstanding on Jan. 1, 1879, or say $140,000,000, and he actually had at that date this amount of gold in the treasury vaults. He procured $95,000,000 of it by selling bonds, and the rest he saved out of the surplus customs revenue, which then had to be paid in gold. His successors continued his policy, and thus this so called reserve fund in process of time came to be accepted as a permanent institution, and to be spoken of as such. In 1882 a section was inserted in the act for retiring the silver dollars of the national banks, in which the fund created by Mr. Sherman is described as being reserved for the redemption of the legal tenders, and in which a provision was made that whenever the fund falls below $100,000,000 no more gold shall be taken on storage for private owners and certificates issued for it.

The purpose of this provision is to guard against the acquisition of private gold in the treasury vaults and its sudden withdrawal for speculative purposes, but it does not direct what shall be done to replenish the reserve when it is less than $100,000,000, and much less does it authorize any sale of bonds. In 1886 Secretary Manning was induced to convert this limit of $100,000,000, below which the reserved gold was not to fall if thereafter stagging the issue of gold certificates, into an authoritative requirement to keep $100,000,000 gold on hand as a reserve, and to declare it from the cash in the treasury available for general purposes. The practice he adopted has been kept up ever since.

Her coming visit to us during the World's fair makes her especially interesting just now. Not many persons belonging to the reigning families of Europe will honor themselves by coming to our great show. Infanta Eulalie is said to be suffering from incipient consumption. It is quite as likely, however, that she is suffering from a stupid husband. Prince Antoine, her husband, is not more brilliant or agreeable than the average of the Orleans family.

He lost the case because the carriage company proved that at the time of the accident he was looking out of the window at some girls.

AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON

Senate Committees Will Be Appointed Soon.

THE OFFICE SEEKERS IN A SHIVER.

Many Have Started Home Leaving Hope Behind—New York, New Jersey and Connecticut Are Modest—An Hawaiian Commission Probable.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Today's session of the senate will be confined mainly to the reception of nominations from the president. Within a day or two following, however, the committees will be appointed and the body will be in thorough working order, so far as the business for which it is called together is concerned. Reports of committees upon the nominations will begin to come in immediately, and the senate will be occupied with them until the end of the special session.

Aside from this business is the consideration of the local questions involved in the appointment of the senators by the governors of Montana, Wyoming and Washington. The members of the committee on privileges and elections have already been devoting their attention to the study of precedents and the law affecting such appointments, and will doubtless be ready to make reports soon after the credentials are taken up.

It happens that the decision of the questions involved in these cases can be made without affecting the political complexion of the senate, and it is the intention on both sides of the chamber to endeavor to consider the cases purely on their merits and without respect to political considerations, and thus establish a precedent that will be likely to stand hereafter. As the points involved are many and the question itself is complex, it is expected that a debate will ensue in the senate upon the presentation of the report of the committee that may occupy several weeks.

The Office Seeking Army.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The president is represented as being much wearied with the never ending stream of men who want office. In a measure he knew what to expect, having had something of an experience eight years ago. But then it was not a circumstance to what he gets now. They came then in hundreds; now they come in thousands. This great army of office seekers, some fifty thousand strong, is all of a shiver. Mr. Cleveland has again served notice on all those who held office under him four years ago that they need not expect reinstatement, and that the fact that a man had served before would be regarded as ample ground for a refusal to appoint again. The president is reported to have intimated that he had precious little use for the persistent and chronic office seeker. Many in this list have started back home within the past 24 hours, but others still linger in the hope that their cases may fall within the "distinguished exceptions" to Mr. Cleveland's rule.

Three Modest States.

Thus far the states of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut have been singularly backward in urging candidates for office. The explanation of New York's backwardness probably lies in the belief of the machine people that they will get nothing, while Tammany is diffident and the antisnappers fear to seem too voracious. The only important office New Jersey wants is the Grecian mission for ex-Representative Wilcox, who personally has taken no hand in pushing his case.

It was rumored that ex-Representative McAdoo of New Jersey had been offered the assistant secretaryship of the navy. Mr. A. Peshine Smith is actively making them as good as could by accumulating a fund of gold which should show to the world that if gold should be demanded for them it could be obtained.

The amount of this fund he arbitrarily fixed at 40 per cent of the $346,000,000 legal tenders which were outstanding on Jan. 1, 1879, or say $140,000,000, and he actually had at that date this amount of gold in the treasury vaults. He procured $95,000,000 of it by selling bonds, and the rest he saved out of the surplus customs revenue, which then had to be paid in gold. His successors continued his policy, and thus this so called reserve fund in process of time came to be accepted as a permanent institution, and to be spoken of as such. In 1882 a section was inserted in the act for retiring the silver dollars of the national banks, in which the fund created by Mr. Sherman is described as being reserved for the redemption of the legal tenders, and in which a provision was made that whenever the fund falls below $100,000,000 no more gold shall be taken on storage for private owners and certificates issued for it.

The purpose of this provision is to guard against the acquisition of private gold in the treasury vaults and its sudden withdrawal for speculative purposes, but it does not direct what shall be done to replenish the reserve when it is less than $100,000,000, and much less does it authorize any sale of bonds. In 1886 Secretary Manning was induced to convert this limit of $100,000,000, below which the reserved gold was not to fall if thereafter stagging the issue of gold certificates, into an authoritative requirement to keep $100,000,000 gold on hand as a reserve, and to declare it from the cash in the treasury available for general purposes. The practice he adopted has been kept up ever since.

The Infanta Eulalie, daughter of ex-Queen Isabella, is the best beloved of all members of the Spanish royal family. Her coming visit to us during the World's fair makes her especially interesting just now. Not many persons belonging to the reigning families of Europe will honor themselves by coming to our great show. Infanta Eulalie is said to be suffering from incipient consumption. It is quite as likely, however, that she is suffering from a stupid husband. Prince Antoine, her husband, is not more brilliant or agreeable than the average of the Orleans family.

The old saw about a woman's being at the bottom of every calamity was curiously illustrated in a lawsuit at Wilmington, Del., the other day. A carriage manufacturer sued a receiver for the loss of three of his fingers, which were cut off while he was at work. He lost the case because the carriage company proved that at the time of the accident he was looking out of the window at some girls.

The longest cannon ever forged in America was completed lately at the Bethlehem iron works. The double 6-inch gun tube is 42 feet long and required 300 tons of iron for its material. It is claimed that it is the finest piece of gun forging that has been accomplished at all. Good for our country!

assistant secretary of the navy. It is believed that ex-Secretary Blackburn's mission to Great Britain will go in at an early day, although his friends here say he has declined it. It is still believed that Frederick E. Coudert will go as minister to France. It is asserted with a good deal of positiveness that ex-Congressman C. C. Matson of Indiana or ex-Congressman Albert Willis of Louisville will be nominated as commissioner of internal revenue.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The Post says: The assertion that editors are not generally to be recognized by the new administration is true. Mr. Cleveland believes that his predecessor suffered through the charge of having subsidized the press, and he does not intend to run the same gauntlet. The decision is also to be made particularly applicable to newspaper men who desire to be postmasters in their towns. Mr. Cleveland holds to the principle that in small towns all the utterances of the newspaper of which he is editor will be regarded as the views of the administration, while on the other hand all praise of Mr. Cleveland's act will be discounted because it emanate from the recipient of official favor. Therefore Mr. Bissell does not propose to appoint any editors to postmasterships, and the president will observe the same rule in disposing of the higher offices.

Not to Seat Appointed Senators.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 13.—A Democrat of prominence in this city has announced that he was in receipt of a letter from Senator Gorman of Maryland stating that the Democratic senate would not seat any senator appointed by the governor.

Mechanics Not to Be Disturbed.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Secretary Herbert has decided not to make any radical changes among the mechanics of the navy yard because of politics, and would follow the practice of his predecessor in this respect.

Results For a Treasury Position.

BOSTON, March 13.—The Herald states on the authority of Assistant Secretary Quincy that there is no doubt whatever that Mr. Charles S. Hamlin will be made assistant secretary of the treasury.

Collector Edmunds Resigns.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., March 13.—United States Customs Collector George B. Edmunds has sent in his resignation to President Cleveland.

A RECEIVERSHIP IMPOSSIBLE.

So Say the Reading's Friends In Regard to New England.

BOSTON, March 13.—Friends of the Reading management claim that a gigantic effort is being made to depress New England stock in order that the control may pass from the hands of Reading's friends, but that this effort will be unsuccessful. The net floating debt on Dec. 31, 1892, was only $870,354, as against $426,366 on Dec. 31, 1891, the reduction during the year having been $556,012. The Parsons' management, which succeeded that of Mr. Corbin in the first quarter of 1892, was hampered in its financial management by the purchase last autumn of the majority of stock by the McLeod interest. A reduction in the amount of floating debt, although small, was therefore very encouraging. The floating debt includes the $470,910 interest accrued to Dec. 31, 1892. Against the interest is held $282,050 cash, $203,305 due from agents and conductors, and $226,503 due from companies and individuals. These facts show that a receivership is impossible.

Looks With Favor on Buffalo.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 13.—In an interview with Mr. Corbett said, in answer to a question relating to the offer made by the Buffalo Athletic club to give $75,000 for the Mitchell-Corbett contest: "Although the Missouri legislature prohibits us negotiating with other clubs but the Coney Island, Crescent City or Olympic Athletic clubs, I would say that in case the club in Buffalo Athletic club to become one of the competitors for the fight. I like Buffalo, have always been treated well by the athletic clubs there. Mitchell, I believe, has more friends in Buffalo than he has anywhere in the country and I suppose he will interpose no objection to fighting there."

Beckwith Not to Be Seated.

CHEYENNE, Wy., March 13.—Reliable advices from Wyoming Democrats in Washington are to the effect that Governor A. C. Beckwith, will not be seated. Both the law and the president are against him and likewise public sentiment. It is claimed here by those high in the councils of Wyoming Democrats that Governor Osborne will be advised to call an extra session of the legislature of electing a successor to Senator Warren.

Boxing Not to Be Prohibited.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The possibility of any action being taken in the immediate future by the Brooklyn police authorities in regard to the boxing exhibitions held occasionally at Coney Island is very improbable. Assistant District Attorney Clark of Brooklyn said: "Regarding the prohibition of prize fighting glove contests in Kings county, no steps have been taken by this office, and none are at all likely to be taken."

Five Weeks More at Albany.

ALBANY, March 13.—The Democratic leaders are of opinion that but five weeks of legislative sessions remain to pass before final adjournment, and it would seem to those who are familiar with legislative procedure and the importance of the legislation which is to be acted upon during the remainder of the session, that both houses can well complete its work in that time.

Two Aged Ladies Found Nearly Dead.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 13.—Mrs. Moses Miller, 68 years old, and Mrs. Ann Julian, 60 years old, two well to do sisters, living in a fine house, owned by Mrs. Miller, on Court avenue, White Plains, were found in bed almost dead from gas asphyxiation. Recovery is doubtful.

Youthful Gambler Stabbed.

JERSEY CITY, March 13.—William Doerr, 13 years old, and several other boys, among whom was Alexander McGriff, 11 years old, quarreled over a game of "craps," and Doerr stabbed McGriff in the left breast, inflicting a wound which will probably prove fatal.

Chicago Switchmen Will Not Strike.

CHICAGO, March 13.—Chicago switchmen will remain at work for the present at least. This decision was reached at a meeting of the grievance committee Every one of the 32 Chicago roads was represented and a majority of the members present voted against ordering a strike.

Lake Schoolcraft Dead.

CINCINNATI, March 13.—At 11 o'clock last night Lake Schoolcraft, the famous basso, died. He was a member of the Russell Comedy company and played at the Walnut Street theater last night.

RISING OF THE WATERS.

A General Alarm Turned In at Ionia, Mich.

UNEASINESS IN PORT DEPOSIT, MD.

The Passaic River Rapidly Rising—A Bridge Among Those About to Go—Ice Gorge in the Mohawk Valley—The Reservoir at Troy In Danger—Damage Elsewhere.

IONIA, Mich., March 13.—Never before in the history of Ionia has Grand river been so high as the present time, and the water is still rising. A general alarm has been turned in—a warning that the danger point had been reached—and great crowds of men flocked to the scene to do what they could to protect the flooded property.

The capital wagon works plant is now practically surrounded by the flood, the basement and lower floors being inundated. The furniture factory plant is in almost as bad shape, and all that can be seen of the fair grounds is the upper portion of the buildings. Most of Ionia's manufacturing concerns are located on what are known as the "flats," which have heretofore been considered safe ground. The bed of the river lies at least half a mile away, but the whole country for miles is now but a raging, rushing torrent. The latest news is that points are all in place, but are in great danger.

The bridges on the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee road are in imminent danger. In the meantime men were engaged to weight them down, and tons of sandbags were piled on them. Trains on the Detroit, Lansing and Northern are in confusion. The bridge at Portland gave way last night, and passengers must be carried round the washout and loaded on other trains.

There is no ice in the river now to speak of, but the current carries large trees and debris of every description down with terrific force, and whatever is in its wake must go.

A force of men will be kept at work all night, and every effort is being made to keep the waters under control a few hours longer, when it is hoped the greatest danger will have been averted. The water rose here in less than 36 hours, a thing never before known for Grand river.

It is just reported that the lower Milwaukee Railroad bridge is in great danger. The water is undermining the piers, and it is now feared the bridge will go out. A freight train which attempted to cross was obliged to back off and the bridge is condemned.

Streets and Houses Flooded.

PORT DEPOSIT, Md., March 13.—A night of anxiety was followed by a day of flooded streets and houses All yesterday the people of the little Maryland town watched the muddy waters of the Susquehanna as they swept by, and hourly expected the river to overflow its banks and find a channel for itself through their streets. An ice jam at Conowingo, four miles above Port Deposit, was holding in check a great volume of waters. The breaking of this gorge was expected, and during the night and hundreds of people thronged the banks of the river and watched and waited for the coming torrents.

At last the strange gave way, and the flood, let loose, swept down, leaping the banks and spreading through Port Deposit. Many of the inhabitants did not know whether or not their dwellings would be carried away and themselves drowned, but when the water had reached the height of 20 feet above the ordinary level it ceased to rise. Today the flood has remained at the same height, and outhouses and everything not securely fixed have been swept off.

ROCHESTER, March 13.—The water in the Genesee river continues to rise slowly. The greatest damage yet reported occurred at Charlotte Harbor, where the ice tore several large vessels from their moorings and carried them down to Lake Ontario.

Two fishing vessels, valued at $3,000 each, are lost. The large steamers City of Rochester and Island Chief lodged under the Bonns. Westerns and Ogdensburg railway bridge, and were recovered in a damaged condition.

Reports received here from villages along the flooded Genesee valley say that the water, instead of receding, has increased in volume. At Mount Morris 50 families have been driven from their homes, and the damages are placed at $50,000.

Troy's Reservoir In Danger.

TROY, N. Y., March 13.—The heaviest rain have so swelled the volume of water in the city reservoir that heroic measures were resorted to to save the city from destruction. The strain on the reservoir banks was so great that it was feared they would give way and let millions of gallons of water down upon the town. The floodgates were opened, and a torrent of water and ice rushed down the side hill. Much damage resulted, but no lives were lost. A bridge at Millville was swept away by the gorge. Jan Poestenkill. The river at this point has overflowed the docks and has risen 30 inches since 6 o'clock and is still rising. Merchants along the river front are moving out their goods.

The Passaic Rising Rapidly.

PATERSON, N. J., March 13.—The Passaic river is rising rapidly, and the people in the lowlands near its bank, between the Straight Road bridge and Dundee Island park, expect to see their premises submerged. There is no danger of an ice gorge, as the stream is open from Paterson to Little Falls.

General Thaw In the Valley.

FONDA, N. Y., March 13.—There is a general thaw in the Mohawk valley, the small streams are greatly swollen and the river is high. In some places in the valley the cellars are filled with water. The country roads are in a bad condition and some are impassable.

An Ice Gorge In the Mohawk.

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y., March 13.—There is an ice gorge in the Mohawk river below Palatine bridge The ice is still firm above the bridge and over two feet thick. The water has been rising steadily all day, and the lowlands are flooded.

Two Persons Drowned.

MIDLAND, Mich., March 13.—Fred Laisure and sister-in-law, Mrs. Hattie Sullivan, were drowned here. They attempted to cross a road which was covered with water and their carriage upset, with the result that both perished.

The Hudson Rising at Albany.

ALBANY, March 13.—The water in the Hudson is rising rapidly and is now over the docks. The rise has been over three feet. At midnight the ice broke and is going out. Thus far there has been no great damage.

Husband and Wife Both Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla

Catarrh, Kidney Complaint, Heart Failure, Liver Troubles.

"I think it my duty to voluntarily tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for myself and wife. Last spring my wife was in a very bad way with kidney complaint; felt and could hardly get around the house. She began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in one week she was improving. When she had taken but three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was proved of that dreadful disease, An Aching Back, and Hood's Sarsaparilla Pills relieved and cured Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness and Liver Complaint. Suffered no inconvenience from at night, nor get any rest through the day. As soon as I lay down, my heart would beat so hard that I would have to get up. I had very severe pains in the small of my back and limbs. I felt tired all the time. I took three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has done me more good than all the medicine I have taken in the last two years. I am now able to do my housework, which before I could not do. I am glad to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla, for we think there is no medicine like it." HENRY C. and MARY E. FIVE LOST THEIR LIVES.

The Injured in Boston's Fire Are All Doing Well but One.

BOSTON, March 13.—The death roll of Boston's latest great fire now numbers five. The body of Charles T. Odiorne, the traveling salesman of Redpath Brothers, is probably in the ruins. A thorough search has been made in the hospitals and morgues, but no trace of him can be found. Just as the warning cry was raised Mr. Odiorne was seen to leave the fourth story, where he was engaged, and it is probable that in his descent of the stairway the sudden burst of flames cut off his escape.

L. G. Buck, who, with Harry Turner, a fellow employee of the Jaquith company, were reported missing, has turned up all right. He says Turner and himself were on the fifth floor of the building when the fire broke out, and when the smoke had nearly suffocated them he (Buck) jumped from the window into a network of wires about 10 feet below, calling on Turner to follow him. Turner seemed afraid, and he hesitated until he was overcome by the smoke and fell back into the room, and that was the last Buck saw of him. His body has since been found in the ruins.

With the exception of Miss Margaret Flynn, Charles J. Wellsworth and Theodore Crocker, who are in a critical condition, the score of injured are doing well.

SHOT COMING FROM CHURCH.

The Assailant Then Puts an End to His Own Existence.

QUINCY, Mass., March 13.—Unrequited love and jealousy were the cause of a probable murder and suicide here. Mary Victoria Lalave, a comely lass of 18 years, had been to 8 o'clock mass at St. John's church and was returning home unattended. When she reached the corner of Hancock and Elm streets Joseph Massey, who had been waiting for her, followed her down Elm street toward her home. He was seen to step up near her, and without any warning drew a revolver and fire three shots in rapid succession, which were followed by a heartrending scream from the girl. The whole affair came so suddenly upon the eyewitnesses that they were for a moment apparently paralyzed and paid no attention to Massey, who did not stop to see the result, but turned and walked leisurely away.

Several men started for him, but before he could be overtaken he placed the revolver, which he still held in his hand, to his head and fired, the ball entering just above and back of the right ear. Without a word he fell over on a bank of snow and expired in about 10 minutes.

Meanwhile willing hands took the girl tenderly in their arms and carried her to her home, where doctors made an examination. They found that all three shots had taken effect. She will probably die.

The End of the Strike Near.

NEW YORK, March 13.—J. M. Ashley, Jr., vice president of the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Lake Michigan railroad, received a dispatch to the effect that the United States court has decided that all railroads in the territory of the Ann Arbor road must accept freight from the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Lake Michigan, and that an order to that effect would be issued by the court tomorrow morning. Another telegram stated that the strikers, through Chief Arthur, were willing to declare the strike off if the railroad officials would meet their employees as individuals and listen to their grievances.

The Sheriff Guarded the Church.

SWEDESBORO, N. J., March 13.—The majority of the parishioners of St. Joseph's church responded to the call of Father Leahy, appointed in place of Father Treacy, who was removed by Mgr. Satolli, and assembled in Towells hall at 10 o'clock, where he gave them a full explanation of affairs and also read the letters of the apostolic delegate, Satolli and Bishop O'Farrell. Father Treacy celebrated mass at the house of Miss Julia Monahan to about one-third of his former congregation. Deputy Sheriff H. C. Garrison stood guard over the church.

James W. Hyatt Dead.

NORWALK, Conn., March 13.—James William Hyatt, ex-United States treasurer, died of a complication of Bright's disease, gout and other diseases at his residence here shortly after 3 o'clock after a long and painful illness, aged 55 years. Mr. Hyatt was born in Norwalk, receiving his education in the common schools. In 1887 President Cleveland appointed him United States treasurer to fill out the unexpired term of Conrad Jordan, who resigned.

Perhaps Knows More Than She Told.

FORT PLAINS, March 13.—The murder of Henry Crouse is still the theme of much discussion in the Mohawk valley. The arrest of two men and their release gives additional interest to the mystery. By many the story told by the murdered man's wife is regarded as singular, and there is a growing belief that she knows more of the murder than she has thus far told.

Great Anxiety In Paris.

PARIS, March 13.—The ministers are awaiting with intense anxiety the event of M. Bourgeois' appearance in the witness stand in the Panama trial today. The excitement has not been exceeded since the beginning of the Panama disclosures. It is thought that only good luck can save the Ribot ministry.

Mr. Carter Confident.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Charles L. Carter of the Hawaiian annexation commission, who has been in Washington lately, spent Sunday in New York. He said he was not a bit discouraged by the withdrawal of the treaty, and was confident that the negotiations now in progress would result in annexation.

Narrowly Escaped Suffocation.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., March 13.—Six little girls, whose ages range from 7 to 10, narrowly escaped suffocation by coal gas while attending the Sunday school of the Congregational church in Mittineague, just across the Connecticut river from Springfield.

Mr. Platt Will Retire.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt has confirmed the report that he is soon to step out of the presidency of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company. Henry De Bardeleben will be elected president at the annual meeting of the company.

Mount Vernon Without Water.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., March 13.—The water main which supplies this town with water from its reservoir at Pelhamville, N. Y., broke last night, and as a result the supply of water is shut off. In case of a fire the fire department would be helpless.

Only One Remains.

DANBURY, Conn., March 13.—Captain Charles W. Lamb is dead. His death leaves our only surviving male member of the historical religious sect known as the Sandemanians, which was very powerful in the United States years ago.

NOW COMES MERRY WAR

Race Track Men Fighting Each Other In Jersey.

TO MAKE IT WARM FOR THOMPSON.

A New Track Will Be Constructed Within a Mile of Thompson's at Gloucester. Open Charges of Deception Made by the Enraged Guttenburg Managers.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The antiwinter racing bill, which was passed by the New Jersey legislature Saturday, has aroused the ire of the Guttenburg people particularly. They believe that they see the board of control's hand behind the movement. In fact they think that this body caused the passage of the bill as a direct blow at them.

Guttenburg will now declare war on William J. Thompson and the race tracks governed by the board of control in New Jersey as a retaliatory measure. Racing will be continued on the hilltop track until Dec. 1. There will be no intermission, as usual, during the summer. A clash of the dates with Monmouth park, Elizabeth and Linden is expected.

Gloucester to Have a Competitor.

A new track will be built within a mile of Thompson's track at Gloucester. This will mean another clash of dates. An effort will also be made to move the indictment now pending against Thompson in the Camden county court. Such was the edict that the Guttenburg managers declared would be the result of the antiwinter racing bill. A conference was held in Hoboken. Ex-Mayor Foster of Camden asked the managers to invest in the new track to be built near Gloucester. They readily consented.

The managers openly charge that they have been deceived. They say that they were enticed into a scheme to legalize racing in New Jersey, and after they had carried out their part of the programme and when the racing bills became laws they were given the cold shoulder and a bitter pill to swallow without any apparent reason.

WRECK OF THE WELLS CITY.

Ten Thousand People Visit the Scene Near Seabright, N. J.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., March 13.—Fully 10,000 people were at the scene of the wrecked steamer Wells City of Bristol, which went ashore here in a heavy fog between Seabright and Long Branch, and which lies in a good position about 150 yards from the beach.

When the vessel struck, about 7 o'clock, the sea was running very high and pounding hard against the broadside of the vessel. The last man to leave the steamer was Captain Savage. He was taken off by life savers from stations 3 and 4, which are located near where the boat came ashore. Nearly every member of the crew when taken off was in an exhausted condition.

The continual lurching of the vessel caused the breeches buoy line to slacken at times, and the men on the line experienced considerable difficulty in landing the crew. As the men were taken off they were sent to the engine house at Seabright, where they were cared for by the people of the town.

The vessel has been driven a little further ashore from the spot where she struck, and she lies broadside on in about 12 feet of water. The sand is forming about the vessel, and she is gradually settling down.

An Unknown Young Woman Suicides.

NEW YORK, March 13.—A beautiful young woman shot and killed herself after taking a dose of laudanum in room No. 203 of the Coleman House, between 4 and 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She had taken every precaution to render the identification of her body difficult or impossible, for the police were unable to discover any marks upon her clothing or even a scrap of paper that would serve to throw light upon her name, origin or residence. She presented herself at the Coleman House office at about 11 o'clock on Saturday night. She asked for a room and registered as "Mrs. F. Carter, St. Louis, Mo."

Another Postoffice Thief.

BUFFALO, March 13.—Another thief has been discovered in the Buffalo postoffice. He was arrested last night. Only a week ago Charles Kustus, a letter carrier, was caught in the act of opening letters and abstracting money. The latest robber is William Edgar Hoffman, superintendent of the money order department. He is charged with conveying to his own use $6,000 within the period of three months.

Tore Up Bibles In a Church.

NEWARK, N. J., March 13.—George Gardner and John Oliver, 15-year-old boys, were arrested here last night for an act of vandalism. They forced their way into the Park Presbyterian church, tore a lot of Bibles into fragments, spilled ink over the carpets and smashed the glass doors in the church library.

ORANGE, N. J., March 13.—The athletic committee of the Orange Athletic club has, under the management of Dr. T. H. Gray, about completed arrangements for a baseball team for the coming season.

"Oh, dear! What funny stuff!"

"Great Cæsar! What's this?"

FASHIONS

The Spring Hat Is Beautiful.

The new spring hat may be classified as a gay and frivolous creation of chip in green or blue or heliotrope. Sometimes it is of straw, with strands of many colors interwoven like the felt braiding worn through the winter, or it may be of leghorn in the old "flat" shape, the brim drooping in becoming curves and big roses lying luxuriantly in beds of fine and filmy lace on the crown. One hat there is with an inch high crown of leghorn braid and a shirred crepe de chine brim of blue caught up on one side to make a nestling place for a handful of pink buds against the hair.

FRIVOLOUS CREATIONS.

Another feature of the spring hat is the drooping lace festooned about its brim. It has feathers, too—not the erect and self confident grenadier guards we have worn, but softly curling, shyly conscious baby tips, with roses playing at hide and go seek in and out of their soft plumes. The spring hat is demure; therefore it will bear close watching. It is likely to surprise us with mischievous propensities for deep laid schemes to startle, cunning devices to astound. It promises eccentricities galore and coquetries irresistible. After all, it is interesting if it isn't becoming, and has a sweet, appealing grace in its coyness and quaintness that will conquer its critics and disarm its disparagers.

Our Young Folks

KITEFLYING IN CHINA.

It Is a Pastime For Old Men, Who Make and Fly Most Ingenious Kites.

Some of the amusements of the children in America and Europe are in China the pastimes of grownup people, and there old men may often be seen flying kites while the children look on.

In the matter of kiteflying, however, there is some excuse for the elders taking an interest in the game, as in this they excel all other nations. Their kites are in geniously constructed of a thin, tough kind of paper and slips of split bamboo. With these materials they make kites of every conceivable form, dragons and birds being the favorites, but some are in the shape of men and insects, especially dragon flies. The kites are pierced with holes covered with vibrating cards; so, as the kite goes up, the air whistling through them makes a loud humming noise.

At a certain season of the year when the weather is favorable for kiteflying hundreds of people take part in this amusement. Some of them are big boys, but they mostly are grownup men, and among them may be seen old gentlemen, with gray beards and huge goggle spectacles, earnestly engaged in managing their kites, which they send up to a surprising height. The chief fun for the younger men is to try to bring down each other's kites either by entangling them or by dividing the string. Meanwhile the children look on and solemnly discuss the merits of the kites and the skill of their owners.

He Helped Himself.

"Help yourself, help yourself, little boy, do! Don't wait for others to wait upon you." Grandma was holding her afternoon chat, Knitting and rocking away as she sat.

"Look at the birds, how they build their own nests;

Watch the brown bees always toiling their best.

Put your own hands to the plow if you'd thrive,

Don't waste your moments in wishing, but strive."

Up in her face looked a mischievous elf, "Don't forget, darling," said she; "help yourself."

Afternoon shadows grew drowsy and deep; Grandma was tranquilly folded in sleep; Nothing was heard but the old farmhouse clock

Plodding along with its warning tick tock.

White Animals.

An English nobleman has an interesting place which he calls the White Farm because only white animals are kept there. A white collie guards the entrance, and among the denizens are ravens, owls, Persian cats, mice, Asiatic goats, zebras, jackdaws, Java doves, turkeys, Aylesbury ducks, cockatoos, lambs, pigeons, pigs, deer, minks, draft horses—all white, happy and healthy. Although this white farm is only a hobby with its owner, there are occasions in which white animals are held in great respect. Everybody has heard of the sacred white elephant of Burmah and Siam and the honors that are paid to it. An albino bear is said to be worshiped by the Ainu or hairy folk of Japan, and white horses have always played a prominent part in public processions and joyous pageants of many countries.

The Useful Needle.

"How little notice is ever taken of you in the world!" said a Pin to a Needle. "You are always about your work, slipping in and out so softly, but never stopping to be praised. When a pretty dress is finished, who thinks of the needle that sewed it? Even the holes which you make are so small that they close up directly behind you."

"I'm content to be useful," said the Needle. "I do not ask to be praised. I do not remain in my work, it is true, but I leave behind me a thread which shows that my course has not been in vain.

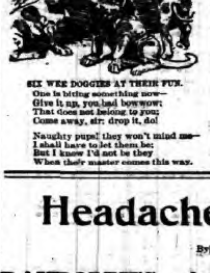
"My name, and my place, and my tomb all forgotten.

The brief race of life well and patiently run. So let me pass away, peacefully, silently, Only remembered by what I have done."

In Mischief.

If you want a game to see,
Come and take a peep with me—
Six wee doggies at their fun,
Full of mischief every one.

What can they be all about?
Something naughty, I've no doubt;
Tumbling into ball and pan,
Scrambling over stool and can.



SIX WEE DOGGIES AT THEIR FUN.

One is biting something now—
Give it up, you bad bow-wow!
That does not belong to you;
Come away, str: drop it, do!

Naughty pups! they won't mind me—
I shall have to let them be;
But I know I'd not be they
When their master comes this way.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

THE MILLENNIUM.

The Chief Basis of the Millennium Idea in Judaism and Its Christianity.

The idea of the millennium, literally a thousand years time, says Thorne in "Fragments of Facts," originated probably in the Messianic expectation of the Jews, but more remotely, it has been conjectured, in the Zoroastrian doctrine of the final triumph of Ormuzd over Ahriman, and was connected by the Christians with the second coming of Christ. The chief basis of the millennium idea in Judaism as well as in Christianity, however, is the ardent hope for a visible divine rule upon earth and the identification of the church with that of which it is merely a symbol.

In the Mosaic account of creation we find the primitive ground for making the victorious era of the church last 1,000 years. By the prophetical interpretation of the fourth verse of the ninetieth psalm it was supposed that a day of God was arithmetically equal to 1,000 years; hence the six days of creation were understood to indicate that the earth would pass through 6,000 years of labor and suffering, to be followed by a seventh day—that is, 1,000 years of rest and happiness. In the book of Revelation this view is presented. Still the rabbinical traditions differ widely among themselves as to the duration of the happy period.

During the civil and religious wars in France and England the belief in millennialism was prevalent. The fifth monarchy men of Cromwell's time were millenarians of the most exaggerated and dangerous sort. Their peculiar tenet was that the millennium had come, and they were the saints who were to inherit the earth. Great eagerness and not a little ingenuity have been exhibited by many persons in fixing a date for the commencement of the millennium. The celebrated theologian, Johann Albrecht Bengel, asserted, from a study of the prophecies, that the millennium would begin in 1836. This date was long popular. Swedenborg held that the last judgment took place in 1757, and that the new church, "the New Jerusalem," as his followers designate themselves—in other words, the millennium era—then began.

In America considerable agitation was excited by the preaching of one William Miller, who fixed the second advent of Christ about 1843. Of late years the most noted millennarian was Dr. John Cummings of England, who originally placed the end of the present dispensation in 1920 or 1867, but as the time drew near without any millennial symptoms he was understood to have modified his views considerably and came to the belief that the beginning of the millennium will not differ so much after all from the years immediately preceding it as people commonly suppose.

The German "Nixy."

The "nixy" of Germany has by some been supposed to be possible to "Old Nick." But this is not probable, since St. Nicholas has been the patron saint of sailors for many centuries. It was during the time of the crusades that a special mission was to the Holy Land was in great peril, and St. Nicholas assuaged the tempest by his prayers. Since then he has been supposed to be the protector of mariners, even as Neptune was in ancient times.

The German "nixy," says All the Year Round, was no doubt a later form of the old Norse water god, Nikka. You meet with him again in another form in Nekkan, the scallion. The "nixy" along the Baltic coast was once, however, much feared by the fishermen. It was the same spirit which appears as the kelpie in Scotland—a water demon causing sudden floods to carry away the unwary. Generally speaking, the elementalities may be considered as descendants of the nalads of ancient times, and as somewhat resembling the Russian rusalka, or witch that lures people to the depths. A Russian peasant, it is said, is so afraid of the water spirits that he will not bathe without a cross round his neck, nor feed a stream or lake without first signing the cross on the water with a scythe or knife. In some parts these water spirits are supposed to be the lamented souls of children, and the "kind" of the monster is always being increased by the sudden souls of those who drown themselves.

Curious Bibles.

Curious Bibles are certain editions of the Scriptures which are distinguished by peculiar styles of typography or some strange choice of words by the translators. Among the more famous of these is the Breeches Bible, printed in 1560, in which occurs, "Then the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed figge tree leaves together and made themselves breeches." Genesis iii, 7.

The Printer's Bible printed in 1801 gained its name from "Blessed are the placemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." Matthew v, 9. The Treacle Bible was due to the choice of the word treacle in place of balm. "Is there no treacle in Gilead?"

In the Vinegar Bible "The Parable of the Vineyard," instead of "The Parable of the Vineyard," appears in the chapter heading to Luke xx. In the Dutch version of the authorized version which was published in 1717.

Black Eyed Susan.

The popular ballad of a century or more ago, familiarly known as "Black Eyed Susan," was written by John Gay. In this ballad "Sweet Will-iam," a sailor, bids farewell to the disconsolate Susan, with the black eyes. He assures her

Change as ye list, ye winds! my heart shall be
The faithful compass that still points to thee.

As the ballad proceeds and the black eyes are drowned in tears William beseechingly cries:

Let not my pretty Susan mourn;
William shall to his dear return.

The English Derby.

The Derby was first run on May 4, 1780. It was then a dash of a mile and was won by Sir Charles Bunbury's Diomed, by Florizel. In 1750 he was imported into the United States, and to him can be traced nearly all of which it is merely a symbol.

In 1798 the distance was increased to a mile and a half, and the weights raised to 115 pounds for colts and 112 for fillies. The present course was first used in 1873. In this the weights were raised to 126 pounds for colts and 121 pounds for fillies.

Red Letter Day.

This expression, meaning a fortunate or auspicious day, arises from the ancient custom of marking holidays on calendars in red ink. In the church calendars the saints' days still continue red letter days, the name being always printed in ink of that color. In this practice of the Romish church the designations of these days are in red, as is also the rubric, which is so called from the

An Inauspicious Start.

The man, whoever he was, who coined the epithet "pink of propriety" must have known our family physician, Dr. Curtius. Fastidious and dainty in externals, he is no less so in all that pertains to the real man. More fallible people he can bear with as a stranger to human mistakes and foibles, and some who respect his skill fear to expose to him their weaknesses of body and soul. Imagine, then, the relish with which a mischance of his is enjoyed.

The other morning, after a particularly hard night, Dr. Curtius was roused prematurely by repeated calls from his telephone. Everybody knows the innate malicious ness of telephones, especially at seasons when "central" is sleepy or has important business on hand. This time the instrument exhibited total depravity, and it was only after a prolonged series of vain efforts that the doctor succeeded in communicating with his patients. When, therefore, he came down to breakfast, his overtaxed nerves were still tingling, but he controlled himself, and sitting down in his place bowed his head to ask the customary blessing. An exclamation of horror from his wife cut short the petition. He had begun the solemn and devout formula with "Hello!"—Harper's Bazar

The Height of Admiration.

A young girl, not remarkably proficient on the parlor organ, had been playing a quickstep to a small company of friends.

Some one praised her playing, and she modestly disclaimed merit, saying:

"I wouldn't play before folks, but pa said I must if he bought me an organ. I shall play better some time," she ended with an air of feeling pretty well satisfied, after all, with her recent performance.

"You do beautifully," remarked an old lady, evidently intending to be complimentary. "Why, most persons who couldn't play better'n you wouldn't pay as all."—Youth's Companion.

NEWSBOY WALLIBALD

ACCUSED OF THE NORTH AVENUE ROBBERIES.

It is Believed He Committed the North Avenue Robberies—He Disappeared from Home Last Week—Drove through Here Yesterday.

The several robberies in Plainfield within the last few days have created a ripple of excitement. They were committed very slyly, yet in such a manner as to convince all concerned of one thing, at least, and that was that the thief was not unacquainted in his field of operation. The robbery of the North avenue station was done in such a way and at such a time as to completely baffle all search of a clue. But it was only for a short time, however, as it soon became known that the Union News Company, whose stand is at the station, was robbed of $68 by one of the company's newsboys, Fred. Willibald, 17 years old.

His disappearance on the same day that the office of the Central Railroad Company was robbed leads to the belief that he did it. And that belief is strengthened by the fact that as he was always around the depot he knew Mr. Nelson's habits, and knew that at just such a time every morning he was absent for a few moments. He being a newsboy would not attract unusual attention among the passengers in and around the depot, so that he might easily enter the place and rob it unnoticed.

Young Willibald, Mr. Vail's son says, had often been in their office, and he must have noticed that their safe was unlocked. The combination lock is arranged in such a manner that an unexperienced person would surely lock it, the moment it was touched, and in attempting to open it would have locked it. This, together with the fact that Willibald was often present when the safe door was opened by Mr. Vail or his son, points strongly toward him as the thief.

The police have been on the lookout for the young man ever since it became known that he robbed the News Company, but without success.

But weep twelve and one o'clock yesterday he drove through Plainfield in company with another young man. None of the police saw him, but one of the hackmen at the North avenue depot saw him, and started in pursuit. The hackmen's horse, having a much heavier wagon to pull, was no match for Willibald's horse, and the chase was given up.

Chief Grant was informed, and told that the youthful pair had driven in the direction of Milburn. The chief immediately went in search of them, and after driving all around the country in that direction he returned unrewarded.

It now appears that Willibald goes disguised most of the time, having bought a black moustache at Jules Boutes on Second street.

A BOY; HOT POKER; WOOD BOX.

The Combination Nearly Cause the Burning of a House.

Last evening a young son of William Cortright of West Fifth street came near causing the burning of his father's house. Mr. Cortright, who recently fell and broke his leg at Cranford, is confined to his bed. Last evening Mr. Bacon *stopped in to see him and remained un*til eleven o'clock. As he started to leave for home Mr. Cortright said that he smelled something burning, and asked Mr. Bacon if he would investigate and if anything was on fire. Mr. Bacon did so. In the kitchen he discovered the wood box and the mantle piece in a blaze. It took twelve pails of water to extinguish the flames.

Mr. Cartright's son had raked the fire, placed the red hot poker in the wood box and then left for bed. The hot iron had ignited the wood.

They say it is Understood.

The Press of last night had an article, ambiguously worded, but intended to convey the idea that Mayor Gilbert was a traitor to his party, respecting certain sentiments about Mayor Saunders, which it is safe to say Mayor Gilbert never uttered. Since it was by his advice and urging that Mr. Honeyman consented to run, Mayor Gilbert giving it as his opinion that Mr. Honeyman was sure to be elected.

At the Boys' Club.

A good time was had at the Boys' Club last night. Miss Mary Lewis furnished the instrumental music. The lantern used was kindly loaned by Secretary Manning of the Y. M. C. A., the curtain by Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, and the slides by Mrs. J. D. Spicer, Messrs. Hervey Doane, and H. G. Morse. There were about 175 boys present.

In Justice Nash's Court.

In Justice Nash's court the following cases are to be tried:

Roberts vs. Drayton, on contract, returnable March 20th.

Long vs. Moore, on contract, returnable March 20th.

Randolph vs. Fine, landlord and tenant, returnable March 20th.

—Spring is surely here—the Park avenue road bed is being scraped.

THE JOURNAL LEAGUE CONTEST.

Only Three More Weeks Remain of this Popular Series.

The Journal League bowling contest for the season of 1892-3 is drawing to its close after one of the most successful and interesting series of game ever bowled in this county.

But three more weeks remain of this popular series of contests and the closing games will be watched even more closely than the preceding ones have been.

The Y. M. C. A. now hold the lead. The Field Club have a grip on second place, and the Arthur Kulls are third.

Fourth place is held by the Alcyones. A space of some width divides the first half of the teams from the second half, but the Crescents of this city while standing in fifth place, have a pin average third in the list. This club has been unfortunate, losing high score games by just a few points. They deserve a higher place in the League.

The C. Y. M. I. of this city, Pioneers and Roselles bring up the end, but a single game separating the former two.

The following is the team averages:

	Won.	Lost.	Per Cent.
Y. M. C. I. A.	12	0	1000
E. F. C.	10	2	833
Arthur Kull	9	4	692
Alcyone	6	5	545
Crescent	4	8	308
C. Y. M. I.	3	9	250
Pioneer	3	10	231

A FREE CIRCUS.

In which a Grocer and His Horse Alone Exhibit.

A horse belonging to a Plainfield grocer became frightened at the electric cars on Peace street last evening, and started to tear everything in its vicinity in pieces. It commenced by rearing up on its hind legs, and wildly beat the air, like a trained bear, with its front ones.

Finding this to be of no avail the animal reversed its tactics and sent its hind legs flying in close proximity to the driver's head. This was more than that individual could stand, and so he quickly extricated out of the wagon and caught the brute by the bridle. Not satisfied yet, the horse viciously grabbed the man's hand with its teeth and bit him. Dog-cather Frisbie went to the rescue and after tying the horse so it could not kick any more the grocer proceeded on his way.

BICYCLE CLUB OFFICERS.

The "Patriarch" Elected President at Last Night's Meeting.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club held a regular meeting in their club house on Sycamore street, last evening. The principal business of the evening was the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President—T. S. Burr.
Vice President—A. A. Tilney.
Secretary—M. W. Daboll.
Treasurer—J. W. Sandford, Jr.
Captain—F. L. C. Martin.
Board of Directors—K. W. Murray, G. P. Mellick and T. Rushmore.

The Board of Trustees also includes all of the officers.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. George B. Polhemus of Duer street is spending a week with her parents at Jersey City.

The subject of Dr. Hurlbut's mid-week sermon, in Vincent chapel, to-morrow evening, will be "The Christian Octave."

Organist Smith of the First Presbyterian church was called to Newark last Friday by the death of his father. Mr. Andrew G. Carpenter of Broadway filled his position at both services Sunday. Several of the congregation complimented him at the conclusion on having played so well without practice on a new organ.

Manual Training and the Public School.

Mr. Chas. H. Ham, in his book on manual training says:

"The civilized boy in school is taught many theories, but is not required to put any of them in practice, hence he enters upon the serious duties of life unprepared to discharge any of them. It may be said that he is in real danger of the penitentiary until he learns a profession or a trade. The fact that the skilled workman is far more likely than the common laborer to keep out of the penitentiary is a powerful argument in favor of joining manual training to the mental exercises of our common schools."

Conference of the M. E. Church.

The fifty-seventh annual session of the New Jersey Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will convene tomorrow, in the M. E. church at Mt. Holly. Bishop John M. Walden, D. D., LL.D., will preside. The session will open at nine o'clock, and the Bishop will conduct the devotional exercises, and, assisted by the Presiding Elders, will administer the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Devotional exercises will be held at 8.30 each morning during the Conference.

Still Another Robbery.

A grocery store on Liberty street was broken into by burglars Sunday night and the money drawer rifled.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE WAR AS HISTORY.

The Interesting Lecture Course to be Given by the Y. M. C. A.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—It has taken a long time for our civil war to pass out of politics to the domain of history, but it is possible now to study it from its clearly defined sources to its results in a genuine spirit of historic equity, and to review a just rather than a blind homage to the memory of those, who, in an exalted or humble sphere, helped to solve the question of national perpetuity a generation ago.

The three lectures advertised to be given at the First Baptist church in behalf of the Y. M. C. A. building fund on the evening March 16th, March 23d, and April 4th, respectively, will afford 'our citizens a rare opportunity to pursue their studies in this field while incidentally contributing to an object in which all are interested.

The first of these lectures by General Wager Swayne, the eminent soldier and jurist, is entitled "An anti-slavery sketch" but the subject matter in its breadth, would fairly justify the title of "The history of the rise and fall of slavery in America."

The second, by the veteran General O. O. Howard, will hold up to view one of the grandest, perhaps the most symmetrical of the military figures of the war, in the person of General George H. Thomas, the mightly Virginian who possessing to an equal degree the chivalry and pride of State which animated his great comrade, Robert E. Lee, saw with clear vision the path of soldierly duty in the crisis of the lives of both.

The third, by "Sergeant Charles Ezra Sprague" who is better known to New Yorkers as the author and accomplished president of the Union Dime Savings Bank, has for his subject "Canteen and Cartridge Box, or Life in the Ranks," and the lectures fitly illustrated in his own person the fine class of material which helped to make the rank and file of a great army which was so often better than its Commander.

Whoever listen to one of the three lectures, will feel that he is amply repaid for the loss of the course and that the other two are in the nature of a rich gratuity. D.

TO STIR UP NEW BRUNSWICK.

Mr. F. L. C. Martin to Open a Branch Store There.

The rushing business at the Wheelmen's Headquarters, on Park avenue, has prompted the proprietor, Mr. Frank L. C. Martin, on learning that there was room for improvement in his line in the city of New Brunswick, to open a branch store in that city.

He has secured for that purpose the store corner of Church and George streets, in the Savings Bank building, where he will open on next Monday, with a new and select stock of wheelmen's goods as has never been seen there before. It will be the only place of the kind in that city.

Mr. Martin has secured as manager for his branch store, a gentleman well and favorably known to the wheelmen fraternity of the State—Mr. Kelsey Wyckoff of Bayonne.

An Old Family Remedy for Malaria.

In some cases quinine does not effect a cure for malaria. Here is an old family remedy which effects a cure, even where quinine fails: Take fifteen cents worth of equal parts of frankincense and myrrh, well-powdered. (It comes in lumps.) Put the latter in a flannel bag and suspend it around the neck, so that the bag will rest next to the skin at the pit of the stomach, and permit it to remain there until cured. It solidifies during the night, so that it is necessary every morning to roll the bag between the hands a little to soften it.

There is a choking sensation the first two days as if one had eaten dry food and had no liquid to drink with it. There is a difficulty in swallowing. This is a peculiarity of the strong perfume. The after effects are most delightful, and the cure is permanent, says Mr. John Goodwin of North Plainfield, who has tried it on his wife's recommendation, it having been used in her father's and grandfather's families with satisfactory results for many years, and by friends.

A Cold Wave Coming East.

Zero temperature returned in the Northwest yesterday with the formation of a big "cold wave," which will dispel the illusion that the present Spring weather in the Atlantic States has come to stay.

The full effect of the Wintry wave now covering Manitoba and all adjacent regions will not be felt in this section. But it is advancing in a southeasterly direction, and will probably lower the temperature considerably below freezing in and north of Virginia on Wednesday night.

The development of this large wave is a strong indication that Winter is not yet over in those parts of America lying north of the thirty-fifth parallel.

The Salvation Army.

A large meeting is anticipated at the Salvation Army barracks to-night. It will be led by Adjt. and Mrs. Hunter reinforced by about thirty of the New Brunswick warriors. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Chester D. Ely of Paterson will be the United States Marshal for New Jersey. The term of the present marshal expires next Monday.

$750,000 is the annual income of W. J. Thomas, the "Duke of Gloucester." He is said to be the richest negro in America.

The first election since the borough of Asbury Park was reincorporated is being held to-day and a lively fight is being waged for the offices. A Republican ticket and an Independent ticket are in the field.

North Clinton street, East Orange, was recently converted into a miniature lake by the flowing of the river, the water being about three feet deep. A young colt attached to an express wagon, slipped and fell and became entangled in the harness in such a manner that his head was held under water. Before he could be extricated he had drowned.

Senate bill No 265, which was introduced in the New Jersey Legislature by Senator M. T. Barrett, of Newark, and provides for the election of one major for each of the three battalions of the New Jersey National Guard, and declares and allows the State troops to conform to the United States Army tactics, became a law on Saturday.

Rev. Patrick Corrigan, the pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Grace, Hoboken, has ordered from the altars he preached about the defeat of the Parochial School bill and put the blame on Catholic members for voting for the bill firmly. He said: "I would rather deal with Protestants than with Catholics. They are afraid because they are Catholics. This bill is not a Catholic measure. Any denomination may avail itself of it."

TO FIGHT RACE TRACK LICENSES AT THE POLLS.

Among Linden Township Democrats the race track element is predominant. The scheme of the race-track crowd is to insure the election of a subservient number of candidates to license the Linden track. The board consists of eight committeemen. A combination ticket has been prepared. If it wins there will be enough members to grant a license to the Linden track. The antirace track people have put in the field a Linden Township citizens' ticket made up of William H. Pedrick, Sandford Clark, John S. Spining, J. Hampton Eddy and W. H. Donaldson. This is a strong ticket and nothing but the liberal use of money by the race-track men can beat it. Union meeting of all the churches was held Sunday night at the Presbyterian church, Roselle. The speakers called upon the independent and law-abiding citizens opposed to being subjected to the reign of race track gamblers to rally to the support of the citizens' ticket. The election takes place to-day.

An old fishing scow, which has been lying out doors all winter, and was as much the fixtures as could carry, was stolen from a resident of Dunellen avenue Sunday night.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Electricity has been successfully used to put to sleep a person who was suffering the tortures of neuralgia. A physician has also been able to produce local anæsthesia by means of electricity to the extent of opening a felon on a patient's finger without pain to him.

In the college news we find it reported that at a certain famous New England institution the Photographic society is making a desperate final struggle for existence, while one more attempt is to be made to resurrect the dead Society of Electrical Engineering. We are glad to observe, however, that the football team is in splendid trim, with perfect organization, and that the athletic club of the institution is all ready for the running high jump and the class team races.

The London Illustrated News declares that young Englishmen read nothing but accounts of prize fights and sporting events; that it is humiliating in the extreme to contrast them with young Americans, who, according to this authority, are well up in modern literature and familiar with the best of current poetry and fiction. This is gratifying to our national vanity. Still, in the interests of strict truth, it must be confessed that, so far as familiarity with present day literature goes, even American youths don't know enough to hurt them. They read the sporting page of the newspaper with much more interest than the literary page.

Common Schooling.

It has been found that of alleged stenographers and typewriters not more than one-third who offer their services to a deluded public know how to spell or write good English. A merchant not long since advertised for an entry clerk. He had 30 applications for the place. He examined 28 of them in common fractions in arithmetic and found only five who knew anything about it. Nearly all the applicants had been educated in the public schools. So are nearly all the typewriters.

The pupil of the country district school knows more about the common English branches than the city pupil. It is because the city schools attempt too much and turn out pupils who know nothing thoroughly. They will have to retrace their steps, give up fads in education and come down to just plain hardpan. The admirable kindergarten training educates the child's eye, ear and hand. Then might come simply reading, writing, arithmetic, geography and the history of the United States. Every pupil should be made able, above all, to compose good English and read and write the English language correctly. Then train the pupil's manners and morals. If to this is added some knowledge of music and drawing where there is time for it, the public school pupil who must go to work at the age of 14 has all the learning he can take in.

Progress in Fruit Culture.

There is a certain little machine which is more important than even the political machine and a hundred times as useful. Instead of producing harmful results it destroys things that are harmful. It is the spraying machine, about which Professor C. M. Weed writes in The Popular Science Monthly. "It consists essentially of a force pump and spray nozzle connected with a reservoir," and its use is to destroy insects and fungous growths that damage crops and fruits.

Ten years ago we heard much of the ravages of the chinch bug in grain crops. Whole fields were ruined, and the farmer was left with no means of paying that mortgage. Plum orchards were worthless, likewise pear orchards, and apples were eaten by the coddling moth before man could set his teeth into them. In many cases plum and pear trees of choice variety and hundreds of acres of vineyards were cut down and the ground put under cultivation in potatoes, squashes or some thoroughly unsatisfactory crop.

Then some genius invented the spraying machine, and a revolution in fruit and grain culture began, which is robbing man's microscopic agricultural enemies of all their terrors. We believe it is unfortunately not an American invention, but a French one, although we are just as glad to have it. Its use saves to our farmers and fruit growers half a billion dollars a year, and we owe the knowledge of it to our national and state agricultural departments. Through their faithful experimenting and reporting the insect pests and blight, rot and mildew which attack vegetation promise soon to vanish into the past. This is one of the things science has done for farming.

There are two kinds of destroyers of vegetation, one insect, the other vegetable, consisting of various kinds of fungous growths. The spores fly through the air, fasten upon the stems and leaves of grapes or fruits, or sometimes the fruit itself, and suck the life out. Grain crops and garden vegetables are sprayed with a kerosene emulsion. Orchard fruits are sprayed chiefly with arsenic preparations, london purple and paris green. It has been demonstrated over and again that not a trace of the poison adheres to the fruit, while it annihilates the insect or vegetable pest. For vineyards a preparation of the salts of copper is used, and so successfully that grape growers of the lake region smile once more. Mighty is the nozzle!

A LAUGHABLE INCIDENT.

Mr. Kirby of Kentucky Didn't Know the President.

THE EDITOR STILL HAS A CHANCE.

The Princess Visits Mr. Cleveland—Postmaster General Bissell Denies a Rumor.

Proceedings In the Senate—Thousands of Applications by Mail—Capital News.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—A humorous incident marked the president's reception. Representative Breckinridge of Kentucky brought up to the White House an old friend of his, Professor Maurice Kirby, for the purpose of introducing the latter to the president. Professor Kirby is a little hard of hearing, as it appears. Mr. Breckinridge presented Professor Kirby, and as the latter took Mr. Cleveland's hand he said, "What is the name?"

Everybody within earshot laughed and Mr. Cleveland smiled. The situation was explained to the old Kentuckian, who said that he had thought the president was much larger than he really is, an idea obtained from pictures.

A delegation of five Missouri representatives—Messrs. Dockery, DeArmond, Cobb, Barnes and Morgan—called upon Mr. Cleveland in reference to the report that no newspaper editors would receive federal office. They were soon assured that there was no foundation for the report, at least as far as the White House is concerned.

Still a Chance For Newspaper Men.

When the delegation emerged from the White House Mr. Dockery declared, "There is no truth in the report." The ex-Missourian president had assured Mr. Dockery that he had never intimated any intention to discriminate against editors in the distribution of patronage. The editors, he said, would take their chance with the rest.

The Missouri delegation was detained to run down the story, and called on Postmaster General Bissell, who is said to have made a statement that he would not give postoffices to those engaged in business. That gentleman announced that he had never circulated such a report. It is explained in the postoffice department that the story might have originated from a remark made by Mr. Bissell that all editors and business men assuming office would have to attend to the duties of their offices and not allow the task to devolve upon deputies, and this applied to first class postoffices, not to fourth class ones.

Proceedings In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The senate discussed for nearly an hour the resolution offered last week by Mr. Manderson (Rep., Neb.), intended to limit the action of the senate in the present extraordinary session to executive matters or to matters not requiring co-operation on the part of the house. Mr. Gorman (Dem., Md.), favored such policy, but preferred to have it take the form of unanimous consent rather than of a resolution. Objection to unanimous consent came from the Democratic side of the chamber, and the most strenuous opposition to the resolution came also from that side, and the question finally went over without any decision.

Many People Want Postoffices.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—There was a notable decrease in the number of visitors at the postoffice department. Postmaster General Bissell received all that came, but his invariable response to appeals has been that all applications must take their usual course. It is expected that Mr. Maxwell, who has been nominated for the position of fourth assistant postmaster general, will arrive here Thursday, and that he will at once take up the matter of postoffice appointments. These applications are now coming in at the rate of about 1,000 a day and it is probable that in a short time this number will be increased to 1,500 per day.

Ex-Senator Dawes Honored.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Ex-Senator Henry L. Dawes, whose continuous service of 36 years as representative of Massachusetts in the national congress, was partly divided between the upper and lower branches, ended on the 4th inst. by his voluntary retirement from the senate, when by his former associates by a dinner at the Arlington. It was tendered him by members of the senate irrespective of party. Prominent men in both parties responded to toasts, and the occasion was one of great honor to Mr. Dawes. The ex-senator and family left Washington for Pittsfield, Mass., their old home.

Gold Still Being Offered.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The treasury department continues to receive offers of gold from the west in exchange for small notes, for which there is a present and increasing demand. Several of the offers of gold had to be temporarily declined, as it was found that the gold was of light weight, and steps have to be offered it made up the deficiency in weight the government could not accept it.

Secretary Smith Systematizing Matters.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—At the interior department, as in the other departments, there was a falling off in the number of callers. Secretary Smith sees all who call and gives each, as much of his time as he can spare. He is just now devoting much of his attention to systematizing matters, and insists upon knowing the details of the work.

Kaiulani Visits Mr. Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—President and Mrs. Cleveland accorded a special reception to Princess Kaiulani, the meeting taking place in the blue parlor. The princess was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Davies, their daughter and a lady friend. The call was merely of a social nature and lasted probably a quarter of an hour.

Only Two Applications For This Place.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The president has accepted the resignation of Francis Hendricks as collector of customs at the port of New York. The only applications on file for the position are those of William A. Purdee of New York city and Mr. McClelland of Albany.

Mr. Quincy on the Ground.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Mr. Josiah Quincy, the newly appointed first assistant secretary of state, has returned to Washington from Boston. He will enter upon the discharge of his duties as soon as he is confirmed.

Ten Clerks Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Secretary Carlisle has dismissed 10 temporary clerks employed in the second auditor's office. The reduction of force was rendered necessary by the exhaustion of the appropriations.

THE CALIFORNIA CAPITAL.

The Legislature Was In Earnest, and So Is San Jose.

SACRAMENTO, March 14.—The assembly refused to reconsider the vote whereby the constitutional amendment removing the state capital from Sacramento to San Jose was adopted. The amendment has already been adopted by the senate and now goes to the people to be voted upon. The adoption of the measure by the legislature was a surprise to the whole state, as the question has not been mentioned this session. The prime cause for the action was an article in the Sacramento Bee, noting the whole front of the paper being this heading in large type, "Thank God, the Session Now Is Almost Over." Another heading was, "The Session Nearing the Tick of Its Doom," and "Sacramentans Should All Be Joyful." At first the adoption of the amendment removing the capital was regarded as a joke, but San Jose took it earnest and quickly agreed to raise $1,000,000 to build a new capitol, besides donating 10 acres for the site.

BLAINE'S FINAL RESTING PLACE.

A Proposition to Remove the Remains to the City of Augusta, Me.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Acting under the terms of a resolution adopted by the legislature of Maine, Governor Cleaves has written to Mrs. James G. Blaine, requesting permission for the removal of the remains to the remains of her late husband from Oak Hill cemetery to Augusta. At the time the resolution was adopted by the legislature it was understood that the people of the state would provide a monument to mark Mr. Blaine's final resting place in case the effort to secure the removal of the remains was successful.

Mrs. Blaine has not made any reply to the request of the governor. Whatever may be the decision in the matter, it is not believed it will not indicate a change of residence for Mrs. Blaine. She will continue to make her home in Washington, but desires to find a smaller and more retired house than the big, red mansion she now occupies.

Shot Down In a Court Room.

NASHVILLE, March 14.—In the criminal court room Tom Jones shot and mortally wounded Joe Winters, who was on trial for the murder of Jones' father. Two shots intended for Winters struck John Thorp in the throat and shoulder, seriously if not fatally wounding him. Winters and a brother assaulted Jones' father some months ago, calling him to his door and shooting him dead. The Winters' were being tried, and, being desperadoes, had their gang here to back them. The quarrel was forced on young Jones by Winters, who tried to bluff him from testifying. The court was in session at the time and Jones gave himself up to Judge Anderson.

Two Men Killed, One Injured.

HARTFORD, March 14.—A locomotive of the Philadelphia, Reading and New England railroad exploded at St. Elmo, N. Y., a village one mile west of Moosup bridge. George A. Shufeldt, fireman of this city and Horace Lambert, brakeman of Bangor, N. Y., were instantly killed and the engineer, James Flanigan of this city was fatally injured.

The Boomers Are Alarmed.

GUTHRIE, O. T., March 14.—Cherokee strip agitators have just discovered that should the Cherokees decide not to accept the terms of the sixty bill passed by congress that the strip cannot be opened by the president. This has caused a great commotion among them, and a delegation will at once go to Tallequah to work with the Indian council.

Placed In Solitary Cells.

BOSTON, March 14.—Forty of the ringleaders in the state prison disturbance have been placed in solitary confinement this morning. The other desperate convicts were being led out of their cells to the solitary cells, their fellow convicts attempted to renew the pandemonium, but they were quickly put under subjection.

Mr. Gladstone Seriously Ill.

LONDON, March 14.—Mr. Gladstone is confined to bed with a cold. He has considerable fever, which is increasing, and he suffers from oppression of the lungs. WORK OF AN ICE GORGE

Extensive Damage In Rondout Creek Below Eddyville.

FIFTY CANALBOATS SWEPT AWAY.

Editor's Exhibit For the World's Fair Practically Destroyed — Prospects Are Brighter In the Northwest — The Mohawk River Continues to Rise.

RONDOUT, N. Y., March 14.—The ice gorge in Rondout creek below Eddyville gave way and let a tremendous volume of water down the creek. The steamboats of the Cornell Steamboat company and about fifty canalboats were swept into the river and driven helplessly down stream. Many of them were badly damaged. The steamers Pittston and Adriatic, valued at $18,000, were so badly stove in that it is feared they will sink. A number of the canalboats were crushed like eggshells and sank in the creek. Since Saturday the water above the ice dam has been backing up and Eddyville has been inundated. The rain Saturday night caused the water to rise fully eight feet, and thousands of dollars' damage has resulted. There were 18,000 barrels of cement stored in the Lawrence Cement company's mill, valued at over $20,000. These are a total loss. The boats in the river are surrounded by tightly wedged ice.

Many People Had Narrow Escapes.

Many people on the boats had narrow escapes, but no loss of life is reported. When the boats were swept into the river many on board became terror stricken and could be seen wringing their hands. The greatest excitement prevailed among the large crowd which had gathered on the dock.

It is thought that the loss to the Cornell fleet will be about $60,000, though no accurate estimate can at present be made.

There is no insurance. Thirty of the canalboats were loaded with ice, valued at $5,000, partially insured. The loss to the Delaware and Hudson Canal company will exceed $5,000. The ferryboat Transport, which made her first trip yesterday, was caught in the flood and is now in a helpless condition, being wedged in between many other boats. She had several passengers on board when the flood struck her, and considerable excitement prevailed. They managed to escape, however, by jumping on floating ice and making their way to Rymer Ice dock. The feat was a daring one. Only two of the Cornell steamboats had steam up when the flood occurred, and these had all they could do to manage themselves.

Better Prospects In the Northwest.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Reports from the flooded districts in the north west indicate that the weather is generally turning colder, which will have the effect of checking the rise in the streams. At Grand Rapids the river is higher by 6 inches in 24 hours, and most of the factories have been obliged to shut down. Reports are not feared of great damage in the adjacent agricultural districts. Along the upper Mississippi, too, the ice is running out, and much loss has been occasioned at Sioux City, Ia., Hannibal, Mo., and other points where boats have been swept from their moorings, carried away and other damage done.

Edison Exhibits Destroyed.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., March 14.—A mile south of the city the foundation of the Central road has been washed away, stopping all traffic between this city and Albany on the main line. All the exhibits which the Edison company were preparing for the World's fair are practically destroyed by the water. The loss is estimated at over $500,000. Traffic on the D. and H. railroad is at a stand-still, owing to the undermining of the road bed in the Mohawk district. The ice in the river opposite the city has just broken up and is passing rapidly out.

Mohawk River Continues to Rise.

FONDA, N. Y., March 14.—The ice in the Mohawk river from this village west is still intact and the water continues to rise. All Canajoharie and Fort Plain the people who live on the lowlands have vacated their homes and moved to higher ground. Central Railroad passenger trains from the west are being run over the West Shore in consequences of the tracks being washed out near Schenectady.

Heavy Losses In Albany.

ALBANY, March 14.—The bridges leading to piers and warehouses through the water is receding. The cellars of downtown houses are flooded and many merchants sustain losses from water through damage to goods stored in lower floors. The loss in this city is estimated at $60,000, of which $35,000 is credited to goods in bond in the custom house.

The Grand River a Mile Wide.

GRAND RAPIDS, March 14.—The Grand river is rising at the rate of two inches an hour and was 16 feet 8 inches above low water mark at last reports. The major portion of south Grand Rapids, which is built on the flats, is inundated, and persons were removed from the houses in boats. At this point the river is a mile wide. The loss will be heavy.

The Wisdom Receding at Troy.

TROY, N. Y., March 14.—The Hudson river continued to rise until a point 23½ feet above the low water mark was reached. Since then the water has been receding and no more trouble is anticipated. At Waterford a number of buildings on the banks of the Mohawk were demolished.

Her Name Was Alice Cozzens.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The beautiful young girl who committed suicide in the Coleman House was identified as Miss Alice Cozzens of 240 West One Hundred and Thirty-sixth street. The cause of the mad act is still shrouded in mystery.

Mrs. Leonie Cozzens, the mother of the dead girl, who since the identification of the body has been hysterical, attempted to take her own life last night.

Fall River Sports Lost on the Fight.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 14.—A brutal dog fight occurred last night across the Rhode Island line between Fall River and Boston dogs. The fight lasted one hour and twenty-eight minutes and was won by Boston. About 200 sports witnessed the affair, and local sports lost a great deal of money on it.

Still Another Jersey Race Track.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 14.—The township committee of Gloucester township have granted a 5-year license, at a fee of $1 per year, to Frank Hoyt, owner of the Cloverdale Racing park. Michael Daly of New York and William Macklin of Gloucester are the announced backers of the enterprise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Restored Health and Strength

"Last winter I had the Grip and was quite sick. After I began to get better, being weak and run down, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and having it recommended highly, I must say that I was more than pleased with it. I received my health completely in a short time and think than before I was sick. I feel sure that this is due to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In the package of Sarsaparilla when I opened it I found a sample box of Hood's Pills. I was surprised and delighted to find how well they agreed with me, no griping and no weakening afterward. I have tried many other kinds of pills, but

A MIRACLE INDEED.

This Man's Life Would Appear to Be Under a Lucky Star.

ORANGE, N. J., March 14.—John Vogele, a farmer, living at South Orange, was driving down the Walker road, one of the steepest in the Orange mountains, with a load of cordwood. While descending the steepest part of the hill the breeching strap broke, and the horse dashed down the incline at a frightful pace. After running some distance the horse swerved, precipitating the wagon in a deep gully. Farmer Vogele was thrown headlong and struck with tremendous force. The cordwood piled on top of him, the wagon on the cordwood and the horse on the heap.

The mishap had been witnessed by several men, who hurried to the scene and quickly removed the mass of wreckage. It was thought that the unfortunate farmer would be found crushed to death, but he was not even seriously injured, though sustaining several ugly cuts. His escape from instant death is considered little short of a miracle.

TERRIBLE WRECK NEAR ONEIDA.

Three Men Killed In a Collision Between Two Oil Trains.

UTICA, N. Y., March 14.—A horrible accident occurred on the Ontario and Western railroad within a few miles of Oneida. An oil train parted on an up grade, and the rear part collided with another oil train that was following. The crash was terrific, and the engine and four cars were wrecked and burned. The flames from the burning oil illuminated the country for miles. Engineer Michael Donohue of Oswego, Fireman Martin Dalrymple of Oswego, and Head Brakeman Burke of Norwich were instantly killed, and their bodies terribly burned. The engineer was thrown 75 feet. Donohue and Dalrymple leave families.

Bright Prospects For Baseball.

BUFFALO, March 14.—Baseball promises to have a very successful inning this season if the enthusiasm manifested at the Eastern league meeting held at the Iroquois hotel can be taken as a criterion. DENIED BY BOURGEOIS.

The Ex-Minister Contradicts Mme. Cottu's Testimony.

INTENSE INTEREST MANIFESTED.

The Principal Witness Says the Charges Against Him Are Simply Infamous Falsehoods—President Carnot's Malignation Talked Of—The Government Sustained.

PARIS, March 14.—The approaches to the palais de justice were thronged by excited crowds. There has not been such excitement in Paris since the beginning of the Panama scandal. The testimony to be given by M. Bourgeois, late minister of justice, was the principal cause of the intense interest manifested. M. Bourgeois emphatically repudiated all the insinuations contained in the evidence of Mme. Cottu, whose testimony a day or two ago had implicated him in the Panama scandal and because of which he had resigned from the cabinet. He denied having authorized anybody to act in his behalf. He said that he had only permitted Mme. Cottu to see her husband from motives of humanity.

"I never heard anything," exclaimed M. Bourgeois, "of the interviews between Mme. Cottu and M. Soinourg until the statements were made in court. The insinuations are simply infamous falsehoods. I never gave any order calculated to induce the officers of justice to shirk their duty or to do anything contrary to law."

Judge Desjardins—Mme. Cottu has not said anything against you.

M. Bourgeois—I read the report of the trial and therefore I am here to deny the insinuations.

Defended by the Advocate General.

The Advocate General—If the personal character of M. Bourgeois had been called in question without my being able to defend it, I who perhaps owe my place here to him, should not have hesitated to resign.

M. Bourgeois resumed: "I do not know what his new maneuver means. I do not even wish to know, but I feel it may prejudice the disclosure of the truth and give rise to the idea that justice is not free. In leaving my office to protest, I wished to say that I would not allow the accused to become accusers, nor the minister of justice himself to become accused."

M. Barboux said: "I do not forget that M. Bourgeois was only recently the minister of justice, and I ask him respectfully to say what maneuvers he alludes to."

M. Bourgeois—I do not know, but I am conscious of them.

M. Barboux—Nobody here doubted the sincerity of Mme. Cottu's evidence.

De Lesseps and Bourgeois Face to Face.

Charles de Lesseps here arose, and in a bold manner, in tones that rang through the courtroom, he uttered: "M. Bourgeois attacked me a little while ago. Well, monsieur, here I am face to face with you. What have you to say to me?"

De Lesseps folded his arms and looked defiantly at Bourgeois, while a violent uproar among the audience greeted this audien ebullition on the part of the leading defendant.

The audience calmed down and M. Bourgeois proceeded to reply in deliberate language to M. Barboux. "I have not," he said, "to discuss the truth of what M. Barboux chooses to say, but I affirm in portion the evidence in which I was called in question. M. Soinourg was not aware of the facts. His statement did not dispose of the charges against me. Therefore I am here to rebut them. The whole affair is the result of a maneuver, the authors of which I do not know."

With this M. Bourgeois retired from the witness stand and Mme. Cottu was recalled.

Mme. Cottu Recalled.

She declared that Goliard had told her he would go and see M. Bourgeois in regard to her.

M. Goliard followed Mme. Cottu on the stand, and confirmed her statement to the effect that he had told her he would see M. Bourgeois. "But," he added, "nobody authorized me to say so."

M. Bourgeois arose and exclaimed, If any one knows that I acted contrary to the dictates of honor, let him speak.

At three words the uproar in the audience was renewed, many, as was evident from their murmurs and exclamations, taking part with M. Bourgeois and others with his accusers. Judge Desjardins concluded that the most effective way to allay the excitement was to suspend the hearing, and he gave an order to that effect. It took some time, however, for the excitement to subside.

President Carnot's resignation is talked of by some, but it is believed that M. Clemenceau's effective will not have this effect, although it has turned public opinion a little in his favor.

The French Government Sustained.

PARIS, March 14.—The chamber of deputies, by a vote of 297 to 228, has declared its confidence in and voted to support the government. The vote was taken after an exciting debate, in which M. Ribot, the premier and M. Bourgeois, late minister of justice, took a leading part as speakers in defense of the course pursued by the government in reference to the prosecution of the Panama canal defendants.

End of a Water Famine.

BUFFALO MEANS BUSINESS.

She Is Out In Earnest For the Corbett-Mitchell Fight.

BUFFALO, March 14.—A meeting of the gentlemen interested in giving a boxing contest in Buffalo next December, the equal of which has never been known in ring history, was held here. The meeting was called to consider the advisability of offering a purse sufficiently large to bring the Corbett-Mitchell boxing match for the world's championship to this city and to make preliminary arrangements.

J. J. Griffin of the Buffalo Athletic club said that the movement will not locate Buffalo a slugging town, but will bring thousands of people to Buffalo, and will benefit business concerns in the city. It was decided that if necessary the syndicate would bid as high as $75,000 for the match. The syndicate, however, believes $50,000 will get the match.

It is the intention of the promoters to give an athletic carnival and not a prize fight. There will be boxing, wrestling and many other kinds of athletic sports.

HELD HIS FEET IN THE FIRE.

Burglars Torture a Man In a Horrible Manner In Kentucky.

BURKESVILLE, Ky., March 14.—On Leatherwood creek, Cumberland county, robbers were guilty of horrible deeds. Three men entered the home of Thomas Bryant, who does not believe in banks, and after gagging the family proceeded to compel Bryant to tell where his money was hidden. They fired pistols close to his head, choked him, burned him with hot coals and finally struck his feet in the fire, holding them there until burned to a crisp. This conquered Bryant, who told where the money was. The robbers got $1,500 and then went on three of Bryant's horses. Bryant will die.

$20,000 Asked For Breach of Promise.

CLEVELAND, March 14.—Miss Ida Anderson of St. Clairsville, O., has sued Dr. James Hobson, a prominent physician of this city, for $20,000 damages for breach of promise.

Threatened Strike In Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., March 14.—The street car drivers and conductors of this city will probably go on a strike in a few days against the system by which they are being paid.

Ordered the Boycott Lifted.

TOLEDO, March 14.—The boycott on the Ann Arbor was ordered lifted pending a conference with the officials of the company, who have consented to listen to the men.

Tailor Gowns.

Tailor gowns for spring are made in mixed tweeds for hog-hacking in all the newer colors. The strictly made tailor gown has a habit bodice, an all round basque, either single or double breasted, with flap seams in the back, the fronts cut away to show a vest of one of the new wool plaids, or the dotted wools in which the colors of the tweed or sacking are repeated. The revers collar may match the facing of corded silk or satin, or merely of the material. All the edges are stitched once or twice. The sleeves are very large topped, but still of coat shape. Horn buttons with eyes match the prevailing color of the fabric.

The skirt clears the ground all around, is gathered at the top and flares out to measure four yards at the foot. The shape of the gores depends on the width of the material. Harper's Bazar, authority for the foregoing, says: "A favorite pattern for double width stuffs has a broad front breadth sloped toward the top, a narrow gore each side and a broad back breadth sloped on each side instead of down the middle. This, called the English bell skirt, flares outward all around instead of being close in front, with merely the sloping back seam of the French gored skirt. It is lined throughout with silk, and when made with the habit bodice is trimmed with rows of braid or of corded ribbon of graduated widths.

Fashionable Jacket Bodice.

This bodice, to be worn with a dinner gown, is a three-quarters jacket, close fitting at the back and loose in front. It is of old gold plush, edged with narrow lace, which is also carried around the muslin puffings of the short sleeves, finished off with a deep flounce.

A DINNER JACKET.

Folds of muslin and a Medici collar partly fill up the square opening of the garment, the bewitching open agate buckle nestly covered at will with a guimpe. The band and bows are of satin ribbon, and the blouse is cream silk.

Fancies and Fashions In Dress.

Among the many new adjuncts to dress are smart little capes of short velvet for the arm or wear, tied at the neck with broad satin ribbons. They are ornamental, but of little use for a wrap, for they do not even cover the shoulders.

Some people have a positive mania for fat. They wear it on their bonnets, on their dresses and on their cloaks.

Petunia is a fascinating new color, gauze of a confection of black crepon is adorned with three rows of petunia velvet ribbon. It has petunia velvet sleeves and a belt of the same.

Entire bodices of lace and ribbon in empire style are a convenient addition to the wardrobe. They are to be worn with different skirts, as fancy dictates.

One fashion authority confidently predicts the return of polonaises.

Exaggeration.

John Fitzgerald is a hard headed, matter of fact boy who has just entered the high school. If you talk with him, you must be careful how you express yourself.

The other evening his father was reading aloud a book of travels. The author was describing a Christmas which he passed in Australia.

"It was a rather gloomy day," he wrote. "We had a good dinner and did our best to be merry, but it was hard to feel very jolly. We were 10,000 miles from home, you know."

"What's that?" interrupted Master John. "Ten thousand miles from home? Impossible! Why, the maximum diameter of the earth is only 8,000 miles."—Youth's Companion.

Unto my dowsy bed.

I've got a knife, ar virgun, too,
And books that I can read:
I gave unto the little poor,
Which is not needed.

But still I am unhappy quite
Throughout these wintry days;
The reason for my sadness is
I cannot coast both ways.

DIPLOMATIC WOMEN.

FASHIONABLE DRESSMAKERS WHO HOODWINK AND FLATTER.

Oily Methods of a Swell Dressmaking House in the Metropolis—Women Trade on the Foibles of Their Sex—A Business That Simply Coins Money.

The only women who ever grow really rich and powerful in trade are fashionable modistes in big cities. Women do some things by halves. Many of the fortunes as milliners, shopkeepers and principals of smart boarding schools. But by dressmaking alone are vast sums of money accumulated. At this present moment not less than a dozen modistes makers flourish in New York who reckon their earnings by the hundreds of thousands, and without exception the heads of these wealthy establishments were from the ranks. Each and every one was a poor seamstress in her time, worked for small wages and owes her ultimate success to indomitable pluck and shrewdness. There is no business in which competition is fiercer, and none that offers such opportunities and rewards for genuine talent.

Of course with so many competent rivals in the field it requires a level head and lots of sagacity to succeed. In this respect one particularly modish firm is the envy and despair of the entire profession. The partners are two middle aged, gray haired ladies, and every year sees them very nearly double their income. They achieve it by diplomacy that leaves all of their antagonists miles behind.

Their latest stroke of legitimate cunning was practiced upon St. Louis. By personal inquiry and the aid of the social register they identified the leader of the beau monde in that place, and to her a suave confidential letter was written. In terms of subtly deferential flattery she was informed that the fame of her exalted position had reached New York. Naturally every fashionable firm was eagerly seeking her patronage.

After the preamble had paid due court to her high estate in Missouri, it lingered to say that, being forced to fill large orders for gowns in San Francisco, they would esteem it an honor to stop for a single day in St. Louis and offer madame an opportunity of inspecting the latest Parisian importations. But they were respectfully forced to impose one condition, which was that madame would keep their arrival a profound secret and under no circumstances breathe a word of this radical departure from the established usages of the house. They added that of course this restriction did not apply to madame's own family and closest personal friends, but the whole transaction was to be considered strictly confidential.

The result of this wily move might be easily foreseen. An accomplished forewoman, with several vogue assistants, arrived from New York, engaged luxurious rooms at the hotel and sent a card to their correspondent. That morning a perfect mob of rich women thronged their parlors and were treated to a magnificent exhibition of French gowns, wraps and bonnets. But, with the exception of one dozen costumes, everything was marked "Sold" or addressed to San Francisco. The 12 high priced frocks were snapped up in livelier time than it takes to tell, and loud clamors for more were heard on all sides. The smiling forewoman shook her head, and even looked doubtful when orders for duplicates were thrust upon her. She urged the congested state of the work at home, but would do her best and intercede for [illegible] who were so kind and complimentary to her employers. The ultimate outcome of this clever move was a net profit of $15,000 to that firm from St. Louis alone during the following spring.

A vivid, but imposing mansion on Murray hill occupied by these clever modistes implies a practical lesson in the potency of wit and flummery discreetly combined. When a customer drives up to the stately entrance, a liveried footman assists her to alight and then holds open the heavy plate glass vestibule doors. Apparently he is the sole masculine element in the place, for no sooner does she enter the wide, lofty hall, carpeted through in crimson, than two or four well dressed women come forward. Two half grown maids, bell girls evidently, sit about in crisp skirts and smart caps and aprons, ready to run errands at a moment's notice. All about are evidences of luxury and wealth. Hothouse flowers bloom everywhere, and cheerful wood fires burn in wide open chimney fireplaces. One of the reception committee takes the visitor in hand, and in five minutes the artless woman is convinced the clever move was a net profit of $15,000 to that firm from St. Louis alone during the following spring.

All these long waisted, admirably groomed young persons know her by name, a dozen anxious inquiries are made for her health. They are sure months have elapsed since her last visit, during which time she has certainly grown slimmer or thinner, as the case and her aspirations warrant. After one of the small waiting maids has been dispatched and hidden, with great empressment, to say that Mrs. Jones is willing to be fitted," the flattered visitor is conducted into a cozy lounging room. Here she is relieved of her wraps, is settled in a big armchair, has a hassock thrust under her feet, and tea is offered her, together with the latest magazines or a dish of harmless gossip. If in advance of her appointment, she is never suffered to be spurned, for the deferential but loquacious attendant talks cleverly and is a genius at listening to personalities, no matter how dull. Accounts of Maud's toothache, the butler's impertinence or Mr. Jones' ill temper apparently thrill her with interest, and when the bell girl begs madame to pass in the fitting room she has absolutely to tear herself away.

However, one fails to appreciate the triumph of the system until a gown is to be tried on. Here more bows and smiles and sugar coated inquiries await the visitor. Her basted lining is produced, and just as she is about to slip it on the woman begs a thousand pardons, envelops madame's bare shoulders in a fleecy wrap and taps the bell sharply. She then explains that the senior member of the firm, Mme. A., made it a special point to be called when Mrs. Jones was to be fitted.

"She says the lines of your figure are a poem," adds the adroit flatterer, "and it is an inspiration to watch you try on a gown." By this time Mme. A. has appeared in a trailing robe of scarlet crepe de chine, bringing with her a perfume of violets. She is an elegant, consummation of the methods that dominate her establishment, all suavity and smartness. She talks entertainingly as the work progresses, then breaks off to advise a slight lowering of the waist line, warns the fitters to remember they are handling the handsomest figure in New York city, and she (Mme. A.) will permit no carelessness or marring of its symmetry. To prevent tedium she orders a number of Parisian novelties to be shaken free of their tissue paper and sachet cases, catches up a sumptuous golden brown velvet, holds it near her customer's rosy cheek and is filled with speechless admiration at its becomingness.—New York Sun.

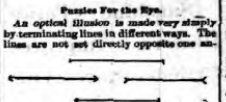
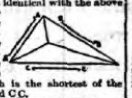
Puzzles For the Eye.

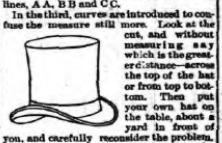
An optical illusion is made very simply by terminating lines in different ways. The lines are not set directly opposite one another, but if they were the vision would be deceived. The reader will find it of interest first to judge the length of the lines and then to measure them.



A puzzle almost identical with the above was printed a year or two ago in some of the trade journals. The puzzle is of course to determine by the eye alone which is the shortest of the lines, A A, B B and C C.



In the third, curves are introduced to confuse the measure still more. Look at the cut, and without measuring say which is the greatest distance across the top of the hat or from top to bottom. Then put your own hat on the table, about a yard in front of you, and carefully reconsider the problem. When you have made up your mind, take a foot rule and measure the hat both ways. —Youth's Companion.



Young Tad Lincoln.

Of all the children who have lived in the White House none has been the object of greater affection from the American people than Tad, the favorite son of President Lincoln, whose early death was the greatest sorrow of his father's life. Tad won the good will of everybody by his ready sympathy with all classes and conditions of people. One story of him is to the effect that he once noticed a wounded soldier hanging about the gates of the executive mansion, hoping to see the president, to whom access was denied, is having been given out that no soldiers were to be discharged on any account. This veteran believed that he would not recover and was anxious to see his family before he died. Tad saw him, and on learning what was the matter led him into the executive mansion. They were stopped by a sentinel at the door of the president's office, but Tad shouted in his loudest boyish voice:

"Father, let me and my friend in!"

Mr. Lincoln never could deny Tad anything, even when he was most busy, and the boy entered the room leading the crippled soldier by the use of Anti-Fire. Four hungry pussy cats I wish that you could see
The great big bowl of bread and milk I give them there
I eat it in their sight, which means, you know, the bait,
And they hurry and they scurry just the moment that I call.
But I have to hold big Green Eyes, or he would eat it all.

Four frisky pussy cats; oh! they have such fun
Racing and chasing as soon as supper's done.
They run around the parlor and up and down the stairs,
They clamber up the curtains and hide beneath the chairs,
And sometimes they get angry, and Green Eyes even swears.

Four sleepy pussy cats lying on the rug,
Cuddled up together so cozy and snug,
Fun and frolic over, too tired now to stir,
The firelight is shining on their soft and silky fur,
And you'd think they were a cushion if you didn't hear them purr.

Questions For Mamma.

A little girl was just learning to read. One day, after running her book, she suddenly looked up with this peculiar question. "Mamma, what does 'hen' backed up to 'w' spell, and what does 'ho' hitched on to 'w' spell?" It required some thinking to discover she meant "when" and "who."—New York Tribune.

The Other Side.

The more a girl knows the more interesting she becomes and the greater power in the world. To this truism may be added what is said to be a fact—that three-fourths of the graduating class of a leading college become self supporting at once. This is very well, and one is inclined to think of the immense advance over the condition of girls 30 years ago. But a writer in The Congregationalist gives the other side:

I am old fashioned enough to believe that a daughter's first duty is to her parents, and when I see college girls at the end of their course go careering all over the country without the slightest concern about home duties, then I feel they are making a mistake.

Now with Mr. B——'s family. Their only daughter was away from them for four years, and they looked forward to her graduation when they could enjoy her society again. But no, Miss Elizabeth felt that the comparative idleness which her home offered could not satisfy her, and she left home and has now a fair degree of success in her chosen profession, but her parents are growing old alone.

I know of another where the eldest daughter has left her mother with the care of five children because she preferred to be a manuscript reader in a magazine office. It seems to me that a girl ought to thoroughly master for a career she should be further instructed that is to not always necessary for her to go outside of her own town to find it.

Moreover, many of these girls are taking positions they do not need, and that should be filled by young women who really need the money.

It is a case for the judgment of the father and mother, and the college-girl ought to remember it.

Extravagance In Women.

The ability of women to save money is doubted by some skeptics of the other sex. Their disposition is supposed to be in the direction of spending rather than saving, and perhaps some of the harsher critics speak from unpleasant experience. Woman is by nature endowed with a love of pretty things, not for personal adornment alone, but also for the beautifying of her home. A picture, a statuette, a vase of a bat" or a sparkling jewel will not necessarily bring more joy to her heart than a set of linen, a fine blanket or a chromo pad. These, with emery boards, a box of nose line, for healing the soreness occasioned by the loosened cuticule, and one of rosebuds, for slight use, are a proper outfit.—New York Letter.

A Labor of Love.

An agency of direction has been established in Buffalo which is most worthy of imitation, as it is a benevolent scheme which offers free choice of information given and is not so hopelessly entangled in red tape as to defeat its usefulness. There are many young women coming into the city to enter schools or business offices, refined, intelligent gentlewomen, who object to institutions and dislike the discomforts of boarding houses, where are to many refined housewives who would shrink from "keeping boarders," and yet would be glad to eke out small incomes and produce by their cooking for her family by letting her spare rooms to just this class of girls, who could come in as one of the family.

The fundamental object of the society was to enable such people together for the mutual benefit of each, but the idea has broadened to embrace a list of alphabets, schools, and rooms, a cabinet directory, etc., and still, despite the amount of labor involved, it continues to be a labor of love.—New York Sun.

Still More Interesting at the 5 and 10c. Store!

Look at our 50c. window—goods there worth a dollar marked down to 50c., such as china cuspidors, wash bowls and pitchers, large mirrors, wash stands, fine cutlery, some waste baskets, large toys, etc., one dollar goods for fifty cents. We are agents for the Improved Light Running W. C. Rotary, without doubt at the top of the heap, for it stands alone in point of excellence, being the only machine with a lock and chain stitch by using either shuttle or looper, wondrously fine, all other improvements thrown in. The best is the cheapest, and if you take another now, you don't get the best; two machines for the price of one; call and see the only sewing machine up to date; liberal allowances for old machines, as I payments easy. Many machines sold as the Light Running W. C. Rotary, by dishonest agents, are cheap, and for other reasons. The Smith Premier Typewriter is the only typewriter up to date, fifteen improvements over other machines. These are taking the place of all others. The Government has paid $100 for the W. C. Rotary, largest order ever given. Call and see these modern machines, and don't forget Royal Tooth Powder, at 10c.

Maud Muller In Winter.

Maud Muller on a winter day
Went out upon the snowy sleigh.

Beneath her high heeled number six
Were a foot of fair and four hot bricks.

Staging she slede, and her merry sice
Shook the snow all off the tree.

"Wait till the clouds roll by!" she bowled,
And as she passed the people scowled.

On her dexter side sat a fresh young dude
With hearts entire! pleasure as they sweetly slide.

But her bowling died, and a vague distress
And a quart of snow filled the back of her dress.

For the reins were held in a careless hand,
And the basest drum in a parade's band.

Went boom, boom, boom! And one cold day
A tandem left with an upturned sleigh.

Alas, for the dudal three cheers for the sleighs!
And hurrah for the chestnuts that ran away!

The saddest words at her father's door
Were these, "You needn't come back no more."

The livery bill when he hied him thence
Was seventeen dollars and fifty cents.

THE LOCAL ELECTIONS.

NORTH PLAINFIELD REPUBLICANS LOSE.

Mayor Saunders Re-elected According to Custom with Good Officials. The Township Republican bar the Borough Democratic.

Former Dunn predicted a storm yesterday. There was somewhat of a storm in the Borough of North Plainfield. The weather was scowling all day, and the storm came at night, but not just exactly as predicted. There was a drenching rain from the heavens, but good Republicans never object to the blessings from above, and rain is one of them—that is when it rains right. The trouble was from the other place—of course we don't mean—well, never mind. It was a rain of Democratic votes, helped by stay-at-home Republicans, that is supposed to have done the business. All the Park candidates were elected. The others weren't in it—that is not in it enough to win.

The Democrats worked with the same energy as usual, and as far as work went their work was fully offset by the Republicans who usually have the brunt of the work at every election, and they were out lacking in their efforts at least to get the Republican vote out.

The Democrats had some tickets headed "Republican ticket," with all the names of the Democratic candidates instead of the Republican. They managed to work off a good many of these on unsuspecting Republicans, who supposed they were voting the Republican ticket.

They also claim that they induced many Republicans who would have voted against Mayor Saunders to stay at home, and to prove that their boast in this respect is true point to the number who failed to vote. Of course we can not believe any honest Republican would do such a thing. Still they can see by their failure to vote the share that are cast upon them by the Democrats.

In Mayor Saunders' own district—the second—of 439 voters registered, only 327 voted, and, as the Democrats got out their full vote, the natural inference is that even three-fourths of the stay-at-homes would have elected his opponent.

This is not referred to for any purpose of disparaging Mayor Saunder's victory. He appeared to have got a bigger majority than he got before, despite the above opposition and well-known opposition of many of his own neighbors even.

It was admitted generally, all through the campaign, that he had made a good mayor. The Republican candidate for mayor himself took occasion to say that much before reluctantly accepting the nomination against him. He further expressed it as his opinion that no candidate ought to be run against Mr. Saunders. Under some circumstances this might do, but as it is now the Democrats will have a majority for the next two years, since if the Republicans next year elect every one on their ticket they will still be in the minority. That and the support of so many leading residents of the Park, of all parties, will, they had much to do in influencing Mr. Honeyman to accept, although feeling that he was not well enough known, because of the brief time he has resided in the borough, to have any chance of success, without the united support of the party. This he clearly did not get.

When the borough was first organized, seven years ago, Lawyer John Van Winkle, Democrat, was elected, and a year later was re-elected. Then came Dr. Cooley, Republican, who was re-elected, as was also his successor Lawyer Charles Pace, Republican. And now Mr. Saunders is served the same way. This shows that in town, whether Republicans or Democrats the borough has been fortunate in having worthy men in the office, and have shown their appreciation—on the face of the returns at least—Mr. Saunders being no exception.

We congratulate him, and hope (as we believe he will) fully justify the expectations of his friends.

The Republican ticket won, as the returns show, even with all the set backs, but the candidates got left. Did the bogus Republican tickets defeat the candidates? Judge for yourself.

There was a row at the First District township polling place, through the attempt of the Democratic Judge of Election Bodine to throw out a number of Republican tickets because in some of the tickets the printing showed the rough. This manifest unfairness and to use a stronger term—raised such a storm of indignation from all present that Bodine finally saw the way to avoid more serious consequences.

Republicans Win at Fanwood.

The Republicans of Fanwood Township elected all but two of their candidates yesterday. The Republicans polled 168 votes and the Democrats 116.

Of the seventeen offices to be filled the Republicans elected their candidates to fifteen of them.

For Constable.

Clark's majority, 3.

The two candidates for pound-keepers received about the full vote and were elected.

The defeat of L. W. Miller, Republican, for the township committee, by 5 votes, was not a Democratic victory, but was due to dissatisfaction among the Republicans. Mr. L. W. Miller has held the office for fifteen years and a change was desired.

George A. Clark, the Democratic constable-elect had 3 majority. He was born and "brought up" in the town, and was very popular. His opponent has only lived in the township a year and was not generally known.

$1000 was voted for roads and $850 for support of the poor. The Township Committee was authorized by a majority of 38 to contract for water supply, not to exceed $1000. They were also authorized by 45 majority to contract for electric lighting to the extent of $1000.

The lighting circuit will be completed from Fanwood, through Scotch Plains, to Terrill road.

Water hydrants will be supplied for fire purposes.

THE VICTIM OF A "JOKE."

Patrick McClymont's Face Blackened with Axle Grease.

Patrick McClymon, sixteen years old and a cripple, was the subject of a "joke" at the hands of John Morecraft and Merton Holmes, yesterday afternoon. The latter held the little fellow, at the rear of French's mill, while Morecraft plastered his face with black axle grease. McClymont presented a most hideous and ridiculous appearance, and his best friends could not have recognized him, except for his lameness. When released he went in search of an officer. He met Policeman Flanagan who took him to City Judge Coddington's office, and had a warrant sworn out for the arrest of both Morecraft and Holmes.

Brady, first vice-president and chairman devotional committee; John McLaughlin, second vice-president and chairman invitation and reception committee; Monroe Probasco, third vice-president and chairman look out committee; Harold Sertell, fourth vice-president and chairman sociable committee; Miss Ida Yates, fifth vice-president and chairman visitation committee; Clarence Johnson, secretary and treasurer.

The entertainment consisted of cornet solos, vocal solos and refreshments.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Tyler's Address.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The following is the address of Mr. Mason W. Tyler before the Committee of Municipal Corporations, February 28th:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

"I appear before you as a citizen of Plainfield since 1870. I have been twice a member of the Common Council and served one term upon the Board of Education, so that I profess to have a familiarity with both of these departments of our city government. I came to Plainfield from Massachusetts, the State where educational institutions are particularly appreciated and where, I think, they have attained the highest development. One of the inducements that led me to select Plainfield as my home and place of residence, was the reputation of her public schools. I heard of the public schools of the State of New Jersey and made up my mind that that was the place I wanted to identify myself with. Plainfield public schools stand to-day as a monument to the intelligence and wisdom and public spirit of Dr. Charles H. Stillman. He appreciated the value to a community of a public school system, well founded, conducted upon liberal principles and inspired by the activity and spirit of this age of rapid growth of and thirst for knowledge, and devoted his life to building such an institution for the city of Plainfield. It is a veneer able institution to day; it ante-dates the birth of the city by twenty years. It has had a most honorable and useful career. Our best citizens have served upon the Board; have given to it all the aid and encouragement within their power; the teachers and the pupils alike have always had an honorable pride in its history. Its commencement occasions, at the end of each year, are the fete days par excellence of the city. No other occasion draws such a crowd; no other gathering of our citizens excites such interest and enthusiasm. The school has made a record for itself among the best schools of the country. When Mr. Rockefellow's great and wealthy Chicago University wanted a head for its ladies' department, they selected the lady, who, for more than ten years, presided over our public schools. And I notice, by a recent report, that two of the graduates of Plainfield public schools in a competition in which they met the graduates of such schools as St. Paul's at Concord, N. H., Phillips Academy at Andover, Exeter Academy and Williston Seminary at Easthampton, Mass., had received awards from the different colleges, especially commending the preparation received by these young men at the hands of the Plainfield public school above that of their competitors. The good Book says, 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' Dr. Stillman could hardly hope to have the value of his work approved by greater or better results. And yet, after all these years of honor and success, a bill has been introduced into this Legislature which proposes radically to change the institution through which this success has been attained. In effect, the proposition is to put the Board of Education of the city of Plainfield under guardianship. Under the guardianship of the Common Council. It is not to be allowed to spend over a thousand dollars for school houses or lands upon which to erect school houses without the consent and approval of the Common Council. That is the measure that is before the Legislature now, but I fear that it is simply an entering wedge, and while to-day, it is proposed to subordinate the Board of Education to the Common Council only in one particular, to-morrow, if this succeeds, it will be stripped of all its discretionary powers in reference to that most vital of all questions, the amount and, perhaps, the expenditure of your money for educational purposes. Better wipe out the Board of Education altogether, and put the schools into the hands of the Common Council, than thus to deprive it of its powers of sustaining itself in carrying on its work. This scheme of dividing responsibility, between two Boards, is essentially vicious. An effective administration of any department wants to be under a single head of a Board animated by but one purpose or object. The responsibility and the power must be both centralized. Such is the teaching of all our experiments in local self-government.

"The Boards in the city of New York and Brooklyn, where the powers and responsibilities are divided between two parties, or two opposing factions, have always been the most corrupt and inefficient Boards in that most corrupt city. The only way of accomplishing anything through dual control is by one party or faction with the other. We do not want to introduce any such temptation into Plainfield city politics. On the other hand, the whole tendency of modern enterprise and success is in the direction of specialties. To attain highest results in the profession or in manufactures, you have got to use and employ persons whose energies are all directed to one single point, or to the accomplishment of one single operation. This is the idea that underlies the Board of Education. It is a body of gentlemen selected especially to superintend the educational department of our city government. There is no politics in it; there ought to be none. The problem is to see that all the children of our community receive the most and the best education that their circumstances will permit, with the least expense to people that will thoroughly accomplish the work. It is a large problem, large enough to require the undivided attention of any body of men, and a body especially selected and charged with that responsibility, and endowed with the power to carry it out, is the only instrumentality, so far as we believe, that will accomplish adequate results.

"We humbly ask that you permit the Board of Education of the city of Plainfield to continue the good work that it has heretofore accomplished."

A BELIEVER IN OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Worthy of a Good Audience.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I note with much pleasure that Hon. Charles H. Ham is to lecture in Plainfield upon the Kindergarten and Manual Training. He was one of the speakers upon this theme in a series of conferences in New York under the auspices of our Friends' Committee on Education and greatly interested his hearers. He has made a special study of the subject and is well worthy of the best audience Plainfield can give him.

THOUGHT SUMMER HAD COME.

A Billy Goat Takes an Outing up Front Street.

A billy goat took advantage of the mild, Spring like weather yesterday, and left its old haunts along the railroad tracks and sauntered up Front street, greatly to the consternation of the gentler sex who happened to be passing along that thoroughfare at the time, for whom "billy" seemed to be partial, taking great delight in following them around. One lady, when she saw she was being shadowed, hurried in a hallway opposite Park avenue. The goat meandered on up Front street toward the post office, where it ran amuck with a mail carrier, who, with the help of three of his comrades, succeeded in capturing the wanderer. It was taken to the rear of French's mill and given its liberty.

The Boston Post, of Feb. 21, 1893, says of the next attraction at Music Hall: Bad weather did not keep a large crowd from attending the Howard bat performance, and they saw as good a burlesque show as has been on the boards of that house this season. The Rentz-Stanley Company has the distinction of being the foremost in their line, and if generous applause and roars of laughter go for anything, then the efforts of the several members were of high order. Harry Lee, Will H. Edwards, Harry Morris and Goldie and St. Clair got the lion's share of the praise, and the latter are a clever trio of ladies. The Rentz-Stanley Company is the kind of show to make a decided hit.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Right Way to Learn a Language.

The new way and the true way to learn a language is undoubtedly that devised by M. Gouin, a Frenchman. Briefly, it is by sound, just as a child learns its mother tongue. No printed words, books or writing are allowed. A sound or word is repeated over and again in the pupil's hearing till he masters it and can recognize and speak it himself at any time. Gestures representing certain actions are made, and the names and description of the act given in conversation, very simple at first, then more complicated. Each sound, each word describing the action, is imprinted lastingly on the pupil's memory by the sound, always by the sound. The moment he hears it he knows what it means and can make it. After he has mastered all the language necessary to enable him to use the common speech of a country, he is allowed to learn to read it.

W. T. Stead of The Review of Reviews gave the new system a thorough trial with his own children in learning French. The claim of M. Gouin that by this sound method a language can be learned so as to be spoken with ease in six months was fully sustained. Undoubtedly this method of learning modern languages will presently be used in all schools. It must be. Other branches of learning must be acquired by sound in the future as well, or the children in two or three generations more will be blind.

It is a good indication that Great Britain and Venezuela will at last settle by arbitration the boundary question, which has been a source of irritation ever since the English established themselves in British Guiana. For six years past Venezuela has been trying to have the boundary between her and British Guiana settled by arbitration, Lord Prime Minister Salisbury refusing. Now, however, that he has been relegated to elegant retirement Venezuela has asked for arbitration again, and under the Gladstone government will get it. She invoked the influence of the United States to aid her in obtaining arbitration and got the good word of our government in her behalf. The two points in dispute are the mouths of the Orinoco and the Venezuela gold mining district of Caratal, adjoining Demerara, British Guiana.

Chinese Farmers In America.

A colony of Chinese farmers has been started on Long Island, near Brooklyn. The main portion of their crops consists of mysterious and uncanny vegetable products that supply the populous Chinese settlement in New York city with whatever corresponds to the beans pumpkins and cabbages of their native land. These mysterious vegetables are eagerly snapped up by Chinese laundry men and opium joint and restaurant keepers. The pioneer Chinaman farmer made a clear profit of $1,000 in three years and skipped with it to the Flowery Kingdom, leaving a small army of imitators to continue the business which they are making exceedingly profitable. They are no credit or addition to the country. They live in miserable board shanties on the midst of their vegetable gardens of an acre or two during the spring and summer. In the fall, after the crops are gathered, they leave the huts and go to New York to live in idleness and mad Chinese gayety till spring opens.

They manage, however, to give several lessons to American truck farmers. One is that they get at least twice as much money off a given area of ground as the best of our gardeners can. They have a dexterous skill, foresight and genius for hard work that has never been seen even among the German gardeners. They can get in some cases four crops in a season off the not too generous Long Island soil. How they do it is a mystery. The Chinese capacity for downright hard work, great exertion and pegging away early and late is not equaled among the people of any other race.

A professor of rhetoric in a certain college used to give always this advice to his departing senior class: "Never write to an album and never go security for anybody." The whole country is sympathizing with the brilliant but hapless governor of Ohio for not taking the last part of this wise advice. Every dollar of Governor McKinley's money would not now be swept away, and not only his money, but his wife's inheritance from her father. How could a man who could frame a tariff bill that passed both houses of congress and became law indorse for any man living to the amount of $100,000 without inquiring into the matter? The man who has faith in a friend to the point of risking for him all his money has just a little too much faith for this world. Besides a man who will ask another to indorse for him is not that man's friend. He is his worst enemy. There is only one safe rule about going security or lending money. Think first whether you can afford to lose that money altogether. If you can, then put your head in your pocket and make a present of the sum to your needy friend, for that will be what it will amount to.

The Indian Territory produces a fine quality of wheat as well as of corn, oats and cotton, thus uniting the vegetation of both north and south. Fruit grows abundantly. Moreover, Oklahoma and the Indian Territory have together already a larger population than some of the western states.

SENATE'S COMMITTEES.

The List Given Out by the Democratic Caucus.

A FEW OF THE MANY APPLICANTS.

Civil Service Examinations Canceled Because of the Lack of Funds—The Cabinet Considers the Hawaiian Question—In Honor of Italy's King.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The Democratic caucus finished its labors, so far as the reorganization of the committees of the senate are concerned. There was a prevailing sentiment in favor of a speedy reorganization of the clerical and executive force of the senate. It will be seen that the committee provided chairmanships for Senators Peffer and Kyle, the Populist members, and permitted Mr. Stewart to retain the chairmanship of the committee on mines and mining, which he held under the Republican organization. There was some debate over this action and some opposition, but the influence of the committee prevailed and the silver senator from Nevada will not be disturbed. Either upon the standing or select committees places were found for all the new Democratic senators. The Republicans are given 11 committees, just as many as they gave the Democrats. The chairmen of the majority committees are:

England Stands Aloof In Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Mail from Honolulu to the annexation commissioners states that Mr. Wodehouse, the English consul general at Honolulu, had not called upon the members of the provisional government, nor extended to them any of the usual courtesies. The reception given to Captain Wilkes of the United States steamship Boston was the largest social affair ever held in Honolulu. The affair was given under the auspices of the provisional government and leading citizens. The officers of the British steamer Garnett, who had been invited, did not attend the reception. A member of the provisional government states that there is no truth in the report that a coolness has existed among members of the cabinet, but that everything was progressing harmoniously.

A Petition From the Boomers.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Secretary Smith received a telegram from Arkansas City, Kan., strongly urging that the Cherokee strip be opened to settlement at the earliest possible moment, and stating that great destitution existed among three people. The secretary replied that it was impossible at this time to say when the strip would be opened, because certain preliminaries required by the act providing for the opening of the strip must first be complied with; that the president appreciated the situation and sympathized with the people, but that they must wait in patience until executive action opening the strip could be had.

A Few of the Applicants.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Some of the applications for appointment to positions in the interior department have been made as follows:

For Commissioner of Patents—Benton J. Hall, Iowa; Albert H. Walker, Connecticut; Robert Mason, District of Columbia; John S. Seymour, Connecticut.

For Commissioner of Pensions—Isaac S. Catlin, New York; Harmon H. Hart, New York; Levi Maish, Pennsylvania; S. K. Sloan, Pennsylvania.

For Commissioner of the General Land Office—B. F. Winger, Pennsylvania; Thomas R. Shaw, Ohio; C. H. Mansur, Missouri.

Civil Service Examinations Canceled.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The civil service commission canceled all examinations scheduled to be held between March 21 and June 30 in the states of Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, New York, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho and Wyoming, and the examinations scheduled for Pittsburg, Garden City, Kan., Grand Junction, Colo., and Salt Lake City. The cancelations of these dates was made necessary by the failure of congress to appropriate sufficient money to pay the traveling expenses of the examiners.

Free Gold In the Treasury Increasing.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The free gold in the treasury has been built up until it stands to-day at more than $5,000,000. Several offers were received from western points aggregating $200,000. Secretary Carlisle is accepting these offers as fast as he can supply small treasury notes for them. Only the most advantageous offers are accepted. The treasury department is also accumulating gold in the ordinary course of business, because of the high rate paid in New York for money.

The Hawaiian Commission Dissolved.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The cabinet at its session discussed the matter of the appointment of a commission to visit Hawaii. Ex-Representative Blount of Georgia was favorably considered as one of the commissioners, and he was in the cabinet room during part of the meeting.

In Honor of Italy's King.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The anniversary of the birth of the king of Italy was celebrated by Baron Fava, the Italian minister. He gave a diplomatic dinner in honor of the event.

Secretary Herbert Leaves Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Secretary Herbert of the navy department left for New York to be present at a dinner to be given by the Hamilton club to Ex-Secretary Tracy.

Baltimore a Immigrant Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Secretary Carlisle has appointed W. H. Rieky commissioner of immigration at the port of Baltimore.

THE FLOODS IN MICHIGAN.

The Water Has subsided at Some Places and Rises in Others.

DETROIT, March 15.—The high water in some of the rivers in Michigan has subsided, while in others it is still doing considerable damage.

At Grand Rapids the water is past the highest point in 43 years and is still rapidly rising. One hundred houses on the west side are surrounded by water. Children go to school in boats, and 50 families or more have been taken out on rafts. Above Marine City the Belle river is rising rapidly and great damage is threatened. Reed's factory in Midland is closed down. At Cowell a large number of stores and other business places are flooded and several mills have closed.

In Ionia county the total loss to farmers and others is estimated at $80,000. A levee breaks at Keshkit Ia., causing heavy damage.

The Kalamazoo river has risen at Kalamazoo, and all the streams running into it are higher than for many years. Railroad tracks in that town are inundated and more than 100 dwellings are surrounded by water.

Floods In Jersey City.

NEW YORK, March 15.—That portion of Jersey City known as West Bergen and located on the west slope of the hill, down by the Hackensack river, is practically out of communication with the outside world. The predicament is caused by the water draining down the hill into East Side avenue, and at the present time the avenue is like a lake. Consequently the basements are flooded run, and the only solution for the West Bergen residents is the Central railroad.

Miles of Lowlands Under Water.

SYRACUSE, March 15.—The water in Onondaga creek has swelled to a river, overflowing its banks. Miles of lowlands south of the city are under water and many homes are isolated. Onondaga lake is very high and much damage is being done.

Crushed by a Body of Ice.

MIDDLETOWN, March 15.—While the ferryboat Goodspeed was crossing the river at East Haddam she was struck by a heavy body of ice and crushed. She sank in 15 feet of water. All passengers aboard escaped.

Editor's Loss Overestimated.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., March 15.—The loss that has been reported as sustained by the Edison General Electric company has been overestimated. It will not exceed $75,000.

PROSPECTS FOR WHEAT.

Indications Vary In Different Localities In the West.

CHICAGO, March 15.—Reports from the principal wheat growing states show that in Illinois the appearances are decidedly against a full crop, but it is probable that a few weeks will improve the outlook. Judging by present appearances, almost half of the reports indicate a condition 20 per cent below an average.

In Indiana the general condition is reported at fair, which means a little below an average.

The condition in Ohio is much ahead of that in Illinois and Indiana. More than half of the correspondents report the outlook as good and that the crop appears to have come through the winter in fine shape.

In Michigan the condition is similar to that in Ohio, half of the counties reporting the outlook as good.

Kentucky's general condition is fair. It has been damaged in some counties by drouth and freezing.

In Missouri the condition is hardly fair. Only one-fourth report the condition as a full average. Generally speaking, the early sown fields are good. Late sown fields are of doubtful condition.

In Kansas and Nebraska the condition is late to germ, while in Iowa the condition is nearly an average.

In Wisconsin the snow came early and kept the plant covered all winter. In some places where the snow has melted the condition appears to be fair.

Said He Had Found Noah's Ark.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 15.—Father J. J. Nouri, the Armenian priest, who a few months ago created a sensation by a minute description of his alleged discovery of Noah's ark on the summit of Mount Ararat, was declared insane and committed to Napa asylum. Nouri is a Syrian, a priest of the Russian church, who has traveled widely in the Orient. He told, with apparent reluctance, his story of the ascent of Ararat and of his finding the ark shrouded with snow, and advanced the theory that the decaying process had been arrested by the extreme cold of the atmosphere at that elevation. Nouri has latterly betrayed great mental weakness, and is constantly talking about the ark.

Rhode Island's Democratic Ticket.

PROVIDENCE, March 15.—A conference of the Democratic party leaders was held here, at which the following state ticket for the April election was practically agreed upon: Governor, David S. Baker, Jr., North Kingston; lieutenant governor, Dalton E. Young, Newport; secretary of state, John J. Heffernan, Woonsocket; attorney general, Clarence T. Aldrich, Providence, brother of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich; general treasurer, Oliver Thomas Spencer of Warwick or John C. Perry of South Kingston. The Republicans have not yet agreed upon their ticket.

It Is Too Early For Ducks.

CANTON, Ills., March 15.—Ex-President Benjamin Harrison and party have arrived at Liverpool, a small village on the Illinois river, on a hunting expedition. They expect to remain in the vicinity for several days. The hunters have not met with very good success, as it is rather too early for ducks on the river.

Typhus Fever In Peekskill.

SEVEN PEOPLE BURNED

Caught Between Two Prairie Fires In Kansas.

A TRENCH FAILED TO SAVE THEM.

They Were Out Feeding Their Stock, and Made For an Open Space on Seeing the Fire, but the Flames Overtook and Burned Them to Death.

SALINA, Kan., March 15.—Only meagre reports can be secured from the prairie fires which have been raging in western Kansas for the past two days. The latest news received from Russell county was that seven persons were caught between two fires and perished. Their names are: William Bailey, Dave Hutchinson, Albert Moore, A. McDonald, Mrs. Lefevre and two unknown.

Bailey was fearfully burned about the abdomen and breast, and died in awful agony.

The men were all farmers and were out feeding their stock. The prairie fire had been discerned approaching in the distance, and the unfortunates had made for an open space, where they hoped they might be enabled to fight off the torrent of fire.

A Trench Failed to Save Them.

Quickly getting to work, they cleared the ground for several yards around them and as best they could dug a trench around the space.

Their efforts, however, were futile for as the enemy approached the wind arose and changing just as it reached their frail cordon whirled around in one awful torrent, and lapped the poor victims' lives out before they had hardly realized their danger. The bodies were found, all but Bailey having died apparently soon after being struck by the gale of fire. Reports of damage with loss of life are rife, but confirmation of them is impossible.

TO SUE SPAIN FOR DAMAGES.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The American Female Baseball club, composed of nine young women and Joseph Bruckner, the manager of the team, have brought suit for damages against the Spanish government.

The party has returned to this city from Havana, and Manager Bruckner tells a story of rough treatment at the hands of a Cuban mob. Bruckner says the Cubans not only attacked the women and tore off their clothing, but that they tore down the American flag which the club carried and destroyed it.

The riot took place at Almendares, Cuba, March 5, where the female baseballists were playing the Cuban Baseball club. Manager Bruckner says a crowd of 10,000 people had assembled to see the game, and that $5,000 in money, representing the gate receipts, was stolen.

Astor's Fine Hotel Opened.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The opening of W. W. Astor's magnificent hotel, the Waldorf, was a royal affair. The first night of the building's public recognition was devoted to the cause of charity, a concert being given in the main restaurant for the benefit of St. Mary's Free Hospital for Children, under the directorship of Walter Damrosch. Kate McNearney, 25 years old, the wardrobe woman of the hotel, fell down the elevator shaft from the eleventh story to the cellar while Mrs. Astor's charity ball was in progress. Miss McNearney stepped from the elevator on the eleventh floor, but her dress got entangled with the elevator door and before it could be disentangled the machine shot upward before the guard had been closed. The woman fell backward down the shaft to the cellar. She was instantly killed.

Champion Corbett's Latest Talk.

GALESBURG, Ills., March 15.—In an interview Champion Corbett said: "I think that Mitchell proposes to fight. His money is up and if he fails to show he means business, I will certainly claim the forfeit. If Jackson wishes to fight me seven months after I meet Mitchell, the original proposition is still before him to accept. As for the proposition of the Buffalo club, I am perfectly willing to have my fight with Mitchell take place in Buffalo, and suggest that the name of that club be added to the list mentioned in the articles of agreement." Corbett also said he had decided that he should train for the fight on the farm of Will J. Davis at Willowdale, not far from Chicago.

A Contrast.

"That new bewch of yours, Mrs. Minks, is," said her candid friend, Mrs. Simmons, "if you don't mind my saying so, is the ugliest thing I ever saw."

"I know it," replied the brave little woman cheerfully. "I wear it because my husband gave it to me for a Christmas present."

And Mr. Minks, listening in the room adjoining, remembered that he had given away to chronic loafers and office bores, with slighting and contemptuous remarks, the box of cigars his wife had presented him Christmas day, and he went out to the coal shed and kicked himself.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW WALL PAPERS.

PANELED WALLS AND CEILINGS OF THE LOUIS XIV PERIOD.

Cartridge Papers Are No Longer Made. Satin Stripes Have Taken Their Place, and They Are Marvelous Imitations of the Real Cloth—Cheap and Pretty.

The woman whose measure of bliss will this year outweigh that of the owner of a new Easter bonnet is she whose house requires new wall papers. If you would spend a delightful hour, and if you have even so much of an excuse as the purchase of paper for a doll's house, pay a visit to the warerooms of some large paper dealer. It will not require the slightest exercise of your imagination to "dream that you dwell in marble halls." In fact, as you sit before the Gobelin tapestries, the Louis XIV and the Marie Antoinette papers, you may fancy yourself a veritable queen within the stately tapestried walls of your palace.

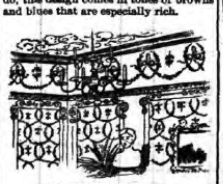
The tendency in all fine work is in the direction of the paneled walls and ceilings of the Louis XIV period, especially for parlors, halls, reception rooms and stately dining rooms. To this end the wattean and colonial papers have such special borders printed to match as will enable the purchaser to have them applied in panels should he so desire. Each paper has two friezes, a 9 and an 18-inch frieze, adapting them to either low or high ceilings.

It is a noticeable that cartridge papers are no longer manufactured, which those who cling to a good thing because it is good and not merely because it is fashionable may feel like regretting. Satin stripes have taken their place, and it must be confessed that since the aim of all the wall paper manufacturers is to imitate some fabric or other these do look marvelously like a satin striped silk. They are used on narrow bedrooms and also in low ceiled rooms.

The embossed papers imitating mail cloth, canvas and other materials are a new departure and simply wonderful.

It is only of late years, the New York Recorder declares, that manufacturers have learned that it is worth while to cater to the tastes of people who unfortunately combine artistic instincts with the most limited purses. In consequence of this, if you are condemned to buy a cheap paper you may find one as artistic in coloring and in design as if you paid several dollars a roll, although of course the texture must be wanting. Neither are you obliged to contend your self with a narrow border of a few inches; you will now find the wide friezes in all the cheap papers. You may widen your narrow walls and you may raise your low ceilings until you are almost ready to affirm that it is not such a bitter lot to be poor after all. One way of producing the effect of a high ceiling is to use a narrow frieze, setting it nine inches down from the ceiling and bringing the ceiling paper down to meet it.

For 15 cents a roll you may buy a Moorish paper for your hall in an artistic blending of gray, blue and purples, the metallic colorings bringing out the high lights beautifully. For a hall that requires darkening, as many country halls do, this design comes in tones of browns and blues that are especially rich.



THE COLONIAL DESIGN.

There is positively no longer any excuse for the glaringly vulgar or sickly, dyspeptic papers with which the so called "decorators" hang the walls of apartments houses to the utter despair of the occupants.

Mending Linen.

When threads are drawn in new table linen to keep the hems straight, don't throw away the drawn threads. Instead wind them carefully on empty spools. When your tablecloths or napkins begin to grow thin, nothing will darn the worn places so well or so strongly as the new drawn threads.

Use For Old Newspapers.

Old newspapers will put the finishing touch to newly cleaned silver, knives, forks and tinware better than anything else. Stoves that have not been polished for some time take on a beautiful luster when rubbed with slightly greased newspaper. Windows, mirrors and lamp chimneys are made brilliant when rubbed with a newspaper.

Egg Stains.

To remove egg stains from spoons rub the spots well with salt.

The Right Kind of Rustle.

It is a suggestion to women purchasing silk for silk petticoats that the "full rustle" material be asked for. It is manufactured, it seems, in two grades—"full rustle" and "half rustle"—and such daughters of Eve as delight in the continued fron-fron of their petticoats must ask for and get the "full rustle" brand.

SOUTH AMERICAN ABORIGINES.

They Will Pose For the Populace at the World's Fair.

Almost every variety of every race of man will be represented at Chicago by living specimens, and the few exceptions will be shown in life size models. The Indians of South America will form a specially interesting group, and, most of all, those of Terra del Fuego. The Fuegeans, notwithstanding the frightful of the atmosphere, go almost naked, wearing no clothes save the skin of some animal hung over the windward side of the body. The men, though only averaging about 5 feet in height, are enormously powerful, and the women are as strong muscularly as their husbands. One accomplishment possessed by these remarkable people is an amazing skill in the throwing of stones. They fling them with both hands and with such force and accuracy as to render them most formidable antagonists in a fight. They are also the most skillful "bolas" slingers in the world, rivaling in the dexterous use of that instrument the old time Balearic islanders.

Diamond Exhibit at the Fair.

Chief Skiff of the department of mines and mining at the Chicago World's fair has devised a unique display. Ten thousand carats' weight of South African diamonds will be washed out of South African dirt by Kaffirs, who will appear in the dress worn by them in their work at home. Sailing ships are to be loaded at the nearest port with the diamondiferous earth from the Kimberley mines, and of course the expense of transportation will be enormous, but the "boart" and other by-products will be valuable.

CHIEF SKIFF.

Nearly all of the diamonds taken out of this dirt will be cut right on the spot. A large jewelry firm will erect a diamond cutting plant, perfect in every respect, and their best workmen will be employed. Since diamonds were discovered in South Africa in 1867 nine tons of the precious stone, representing when cut a money ...lue of $700,000,000, have been taken from these mines. The business is now practically monopolized by a large company, which regulates the output by the demand, thus maintaining the high prices which have prevailed for several years.

A Fine Fish Exhibit.

Chief Collins of the fish and fisheries department of the World's fair is in receipt of a very fine loan exhibit from the private personal effects of the late Reuben Wood of Syracuse. The original owner was an angler of national reputation. In 1853 he visited London as a member of the United States commission and participated in several contests with the famous anglers from different parts of Europe and succeeded in carrying off first honors.

Space Allotment at the World's Fair.

Of the total 8,642,812 square feet available for all exhibits at the World's fair 1,419,517 has been assigned to foreign and 1,787,280 to domestic applicants. Concessions absorb 211,465 square feet, and only 214,476 square feet remain unassigned in all departments. No figures are given from the live stock department because space is not assigned by area in that exhibit.

Spanish Building at the Fair.

The Spanish building at the Columbian exposition will attract unusual attention because it is a reproduction of the famous La Lonja at Valencia, which structure is almost exactly contemporary with the discovery of America. In 1482 the silk merchants of Valencia negotiated with Don Pedro Compte, a famous architect of that day, for the erection of a building to serve as a central mart for their trade, and 10 years later it was completed. For three centuries the silk exchange was held in it. Don Enrique Dupuy du Lome, Spanish minister at Washington, is a native of Valencia, and by him La Lonja was selected as a model.

Royalty at the World's Fair.

Those who were cast down over the refusal of the Prince of Wales to visit America this year will be pleased to learn that the mikado of Japan has promised to send his oldest son, the crown prince, to represent him at the World's fair. And so at least one running mate for the sultan of Johore will be provided.

CHILDREN'S TASTES.

Give Them as Much Freedom In Matters of Dress as Possible.

The old fashioned idea that there was something sinful in pretty clothes, or that one was pandering to vanity and folly in consulting the taste in matters of dress, has passed away. There is no possible harm in allowing a little girl who has ideas of her own to have considerable freedom in the choice of her belongings. She should be guided, of course, by the means at hand and by the judgment of older people as to the utility of what she chooses. But it is a cruelty to compel her to wear anything which she instinctively dislikes as old fashioned and ugly when it is just as easy to get her something that will please her fancy and in which she will never feel ill at ease.

The proverbial case of manner of the dweller of the city may be, after all, suggests the New York Tribune, but a consciousness of appearing well, while the awkwardness of his country brother may just as naturally be due to a consciousness of ill fitting attire. The vanity, which originally meant city bred has in its natural sequence come to mean a tranquil and polished demeanor. Now, if you wish to make a little girl awkward, dress her against her own protests in clumsy attire. Not all the teachers of department can overcome the shyness that will be bred of her young impressions. No wise person can fail to appreciate the value of ease and polish of manner. It takes years sometimes to overcome the self consciousness which begins in childhood as the result of this kind of petty household tyranny, which utterly overlooks the individuality and tastes of the child and consults only the convenience of the moment.

Let the little daughters and sons of the house have rooms of their own as soon as they are able to take proper care of them. Let them be consulted in the furnishing of the room. Yield something, where it is not inconsistent with economy, to their tastes, so that the room may be their very own. Let them bring their friends there. Do not buy clothes for any girl of an age to have tastes of her own without consulting her. Even boys sometimes have decided ideas in the matter of dress, though they are proverbially more indifferent than girls. The daughters and sons in such a home usually find home the sweetest place.

An Old Waist Made New.

If you have an old fashioned, plain cloth basque, it may be made into a thing of beauty and fashion by a little ingenuity. Cut off the ends below the waist, so that it may be worn with a belt. About two inches from the buttoning line on each side in front cut the cloth away from its lining and insert a full vest of crepe of a contrasting color. Line the little jacket formed by the cloth and let it fall loosely in the zouave form. Make big puffs of silk the same shade as the cloth, to extend to the elbow, and have a tight cuff below. A folded belt of the silk, with a rosette, finishes the waist, and it is very dainty.

A Dress For $25.50.

This charming costume is a combination of French serge (old blue) and striped black and white bengaline, the latter being used only as leg o' mutton sleeves. The collar and belt are of jet passementerie, and a scarf of lace crosses a vest of black velvet, and passing under the belt hangs a little over the hips. The skirt is almost plain, having a bias flounce of six inches in depth, with velvet piping the top.

The material required, according to the New York Recorder, is as follows:

Five yards French serge, 75 cents	$3 75
Three yards bengaline, $1.25	3 75
One yard of jet passementerie, $6.50	6 50
Two yards lace (scarf), $1.25	2 50
Lining, etc., $2	2 00
Dressmaker, two days, at $2.50 per day	7 00
Total	$25 50

Sensible Suggestions.

It is a suggestion to have the table at which one sews at night spread with a light color, if it must have a dark one, a sheet of white paper may be used over it. A needle can be threaded with much greater ease if held over a white surface.

To Conceal a Deformity.

Women who contemplate a return to the crinoline will do well to recall that, like many another fashion, it had its origin in an effort to conceal a deformity of figure in a high personage.

Fillet of Beef.

Take 1 short fillet, 6 tablespoonfuls of melted butter and the juice of a lemon. Trim the fillet and cut into slices ½ inch thick. Place them in a pan with the warmed butter and leave them one hour after squeezing over them the juice of a lemon. Then dip in flour and place in the double boiler. Broil for six minutes over a hot fire. Serve placed around the base of a mound of mashed potatoes, with hollandaise sauce poured around the dish.

Crust In the Teakettle.

A clean oyster shell kept in a teakettle in which hard water is constantly boiled will prevent the crust which will otherwise gather on the inside of the vessel.

A Sermon to Measure.

Dr. X——— is an eloquent preacher, but he belongs to the old fashioned school and finds it difficult to adapt himself to the modern fashion of short discourses. It is a standing joke in his family that after writing a sermon he has to cut it up into a series of discourses.

On one occasion he received a note from a well known clerical brother asking if he would deliver a sermon upon some special church festival. The doctor replied that he had just completed a sermon upon the "Golden Calf," which seemed to him appropriate.

The answer of the committee, as sent by telegram by the brother clergyman, who knew Dr. X——— intimately and was acquainted with his peculiarities and with his ability to take a joke, read as follows:

"Golden Calf just what is wanted. A free quarter is all that will be needed."—Youth's Companion.

Not a Case for Bitterness.

"Yes," she said musingly, "that woman won from me the only admirer I ever had. It was twenty-five years ago."

"And you have never forgiven her?"

"Forgiven her!" echoed the gentle old lady, passing her hand over her silvery locks. "I have never ceased to compassionate her. He became night editor of a daily paper about the time they were married, and the poor, dear girl hasn't really got acquainted with him even yet."—Chicago Tribune.

OUR MAYOR'S VIEW OF IT

REPORT SUBMITTED TO THE LEGISLATURE.

Various Reasons Given why the Board of Education Should be, in a Measure, one With the Common Council.

Mayor Gilbert's argument before the Assembly Committee in favor of restricting the powers of the Board of Education.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I appreciate fully the fact that to every important public question there are two debatable sides, and therefore I am not surprised that the gentlemen who appear in opposition to this measure should present arguments. I am surprised, however, that any one should appear before you to oppose it without a good logical reason for his opposition to the measure.

The language of the bill is clear and explicit. It expresses in unmistakable terms its logical purpose—there is no ambiguity about it—so that a child of three years old could, if it were put to a poll, direct, unerring one proposition to give to a common council through its chosen agents the power governing body—the body which represents it in the affairs of the city which can be readily reached and made to conform to the will of the people, the power to fix a limitation to the indebtedness that may be created against that community.

It is simply this and nothing more. The city which I represent is confronted with what may be called a Frankenstein—the Board of Education with reference to its power to create public indebtedness is clothed with greater power than your Common Council. Under the various laws which govern it, the Board is authorized to raise by taxation each and every year for the current expenses of our schools, in addition to the amount appropriated by the State, one half of one per cent of the taxable valuation of our real and personal property. It is also authorized to borrow such further sum as in the judgement of the Board may be required for the purchase of lots for school sites and the erection of school buildings. There is no limitation whatever upon the amount that may be borrowed, the only limitation being that not more than one school house shall be built in any one year. Whether this power is exercised wisely or unwisely by the Board, our people have no voice in the matter.

During the entire period of our corporate existence, our common council has, by the provisions of our charter, been prohibited from borrowing money for any purpose whatever, except in anticipation of taxes, without the consent of the people. This restriction has been modified to a limited extent by the general legislation of recent years.

That our Board of Education, a body composed of five men, three of whom constitute a quorum, should have greater power in this respect than our common council, the power to create public indebtedness without reference to public opinion, is to my mind wholly inconsistent in principle.

We have built school houses quite freely during the past few years, our educational system is being fully developed, and we think our present equipment should serve us for some years without any considerable outlay. We think that our school system, it stands second to none in the State; we admit all its excellencies, and the Board of Education, of which I am a member, has always had the good fortune to control a majority of its body. Nothing can be truthfully said in praise of our school system or of the management of the same that it will not bear us out in. But that is not the question at issue; our contention is that our school Board should no longer have the power to run us in debt without our consent, that our common council should have a voice in the matter. Now why should this proposition call forth any opposition? I have heard it said that the passage of this bill will impair the efficiency of the Board. It was stated that it would impair its efficiency? It makes no change in the construction of the Board—it does not interfere with the management in any way—the power of the Board to raise by taxation each year for the support of the schools one half of one per cent on our taxable valuation in addition to the amount appropriated by the State will still remain. The only change contemplated by the bill is the provision requiring the Board to obtain the consent of the Common Council before purchasing lands and erecting additional school houses. In other words, the Board must not run the city in debt without the consent of the common council.

It has also been stated that the passage of this bill will introduce politics into the School Board. This statement is not borne out by facts. no change in the mode of electing trustees—no change in the method of appointment of trustees—no change in the political complexion of the Board. One trustee will be elected each year as now, and the dominant political party will make as strenuous efforts as now to elect its candidate. In this respect will the absolute control and management of the schools by the Board be changed or impaired. The only change in the law the Board is it will not be through the agency of the proposed law. ALL THAT THIS LAW ALSO TO ACCOMPLISH, IS THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE PRINCIPLE THAT THE BOARD OF EDUCATION SHALL NO LONGER BE EMPOWERED TO RUN US IN DEBT WITHOUT OUR CONSENT.

It is also claimed that the School Board is fast as truly a representative body as the Common Council, and that it is not so. We elect seven councilmen one year and four the next—but one school trustee is elected each year to serve for five years. We can change the entire complexion of the Common Council in two years—it will require five years to make a similar change in the School Board. The argument, however, is less than this is the fact that the Common Council is the recognized financial board of the city, and that the law claimed that which it acts was approved by the people while the law which empowers the School Board to create indebtedness was secured without the knowledge or consent of the people.

Mr. Chairman, we advocate the passage of this bill because we believe it to be right, and in the interest of the people, and now that an amendment has been proposed to the bill which, if taking effect it shall be submitted to a vote of the people, I cannot see how any fair minded man can logically oppose it,

The Roselle Casinos Out-Bowled by the C. Y. M. I.

The Roselle Casinos fell easy victims to the C. Y. M. I.'s last night. They were outbowled at every stage of the game, and at the end were 156 pins in the lurch. The game was played on the alleys of the C. Y. M. I., and was witnessed by a good attendance of members. The following is the score:

ROBBED BY TRAMPS.

Thomas Curran Held up by Two Knights of the Road.

Thomas Curran was held up by two tramps at Netherwood and robbed about ten o'clock last night. Curran, who is in the employ of Liveryman Seguine, had been at work at Mr. Seguine's Netherwood stables all day, and started for the depot at that place to take the train for home. On his way he had to pass by a strip of woods in which the tramps were biding. They sprang out upon Curran, knocking him down and robbing him. They then ran off.

WON THE WHOLE THREE.

Park Club Bowlers Again Defeat Cranford.

The last of a series of three games was bowled last night, between the Park and Cranford Clubs, on the latter's alleys. The two previous games were won by the Park Club team, making a third game unnecessary, but the Cranford bowlers wanted one out of the series, if possible, so the Park Club were asked to play the final game. They did so, with the result that they now have three victories to their credit against Cranford, instead of two. The score:

The M. E. Conference.

The fifty-seventh session of the New Jersey annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church convened in the First M. E. church, at Mount Holly, yesterday, Bishop John M. Walden presiding. Rev. G. B. Wight, Secretary, was absent, having been ill with typhoid fever. Rev. Joseph L. Roe was chosen Secretary, Rev. John H. Sowell Statistician and Rev. H. G. Williams Conference Treasurer. Very little was done besides the organization. Rev. G. W. Gray, D. D. Washington (D. D.) University, made an eloquent appeal to the members in behalf of the institution, with which he is connected. Bishop Walden called special attention to the praise service to be held in the morning, and spoke earnestly on the subject of prayer, saying that if any place really needed praying for that place was New Jersey.

The defendants were charged in the complaint with breaking windows with snow balls and of shooting their neighbors' chickens. After reprimanding them, the judge suspended sentence, on the prisoners agreeing to pay for the damages.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Stillman Replies to Mr. Marsh.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The Corporation Counsel in his recent letter to your columns on the school question stated:

"That there was no law anywhere to be found which put any limit on the amount to which the School Board could run Plainfield in debt for lands and school houses" and on this he challenged contradiction. In doing this he simply begs the question and states what is true only on the surface.

The only authority given the School Board for running the city in debt for these purposes is found in the law of 1882, page 250, which he cites so frequently. This act reads, "that if in the judgement of the Board of Education, etc., it shall at any time be deemed necessary or expedient to provide additional school accomodations for the benefit of those entitled to attend the public schools they are authorized to borrow for the purpose of purchasing lands and the erection of suitable school buildings and providing such school buildings with suitable school appliances and conveniences, and to secure the payment of the money borrowed, by mortgage, covering the land purchased and the building or buildings erected thereon."

Thus it, the necessity must exist before the Board can use their authority and such authority can only be used as the occasion demands. The opinion of the Corporation Counsel should therefore be modified by stating that the School Board can run the city in debt for only such school buildings as are a necessity. This is a very different thing from a power to run the city in debt to any limit. They can only run the city in debt for such schools as are absolutely required.

Then again, the law carries its own limitation. The money borrowed must be on the credit of the school building to be erected. It cannot be obtained by a call on the tax levy, and the amount could not exceed from one half to two-thirds of the value of the particular school building erected, as no individual or corporation would lend a greater sum on such security, for no one will loan more than they can hope to realize should they have to foreclose and sell the property at sheriff's sale.

The opinion of the Corporation Counsel should again be modified. It should now read, that the School Board can borrow from the city to build for such schools and lands only as may be needed and to an amount limited to the amount that they can borrow by mortgage on the credit of the school to be erected.

In a nut-shell the entire powers of the School Board was to call on this point to obtaining funds for school purposes and buildings, are as follows:

1. Halt of one per cent of the taxable valuation, to be used for general school purposes.

2. Power to purchase lands and erect school houses thereon, when the necessity arises, and to borrow money therefore by mortgage on the particular school being erected, the amount of such mortgage being limited to one half or at the most two thirds of the value of such school building.

3. Money to pay interest on the mortgages.

4. To provide for a sinking fund to pay the principal of the mortgages.

The law of 1882 provides that the funds to pay these last items must be raised in the same manner as the money to pay the current expenses of the school.

Certainly it would be a wide stretch of the imagination to extend this part of the law relating to "sinking funds" the interpretation that it meant the power to expend an unlimited sum for schools and lands, for the word "sinking fund" by its usual and general meaning, defines its own limitation, viz: a small sum laid by each year, for a certain purpose; in this case, to pay the principal of the mortgages.

The special laws of the legislature which heretofore gave the School Board their authority to bond to provide funds for building school houses, viz: the acts of 1797, etc., to which Mr. Marsh referred, and which long since fulfilled their object, the school houses, for which they were designed, having long since been built, in each case provided for a sinking fund of one thousand dollars on each school, viz: that two bonds of five hundred dollars each, on each school should be paid each year; and it probably is from this that the present Board have considered such a sum as the proper amount for them to lay by for this purpose on each school which they may have erected under the law of 1882. Certainly should they exceed this sum much, it would not be a sinking fund, technically considered, and they would bring themselves without the provisions of this law.

The powers of the School Board in this matter were defined and laid down for them in an opinion written about two years ago, by the late Chancellor Williamson, one of the greatest authorities in such matters, that this State has ever had.

The position taken by the School Board on this question, as published by them in the Corporation Counsel's opinion to the public and which they have long followed, was on this opinion, which is now in their safe. The writer of this article has not been able to see this opinion, nor does he know what it contains, but he feels sure that it will be found to bear out his own view of this not very complex matter. WM. M. STILLMAN.

—The members of the High School Lyceum will hold a mock trial to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock, in Assembly Hall. Harry C. Runyon will be the presiding judge. Members and friends of the Lyceum are invited to be present.

YESTERDAY'S SHOOT.

Charles Smith of this City Gets Fifth Money.

The grounds of the Union Gun Club are situated at Springfield, in a hollow just under the shadow of the Orange Mountains.

Yesterday there took place on the grounds one of the best attended and best contested trap shoots that has been held in New Jersey for several years, and the conditions were all in favor of the birds.

The conditions of the sweep were twenty-five live birds per man, $20 entry, the purse being divided into five moneys. The boundary was fifty-yards, and all shot at twenty-eight yards rise.

There were twenty-one entries.

The shoot started at 10 a. m., T. H. Keller of this city, being referee, and Mr. Allen of Irvington official scorer. The birds were what may be termed a fair lot, and were greatly helped by the wind.

On the fifth round there were twelve men with clean scores; on the tenth round this number was reduced to seven; on the fifteenth round to five; on the twentieth to three; and when the race was ended J. B. Crane and H. E. Buck-walter were alone with 95 kills each, and they divided first money.

Second money went to Hollis, Chas. Hoffman and Hill, who "grassed" 94 each; third was divided on 93 killed each, by Rogers, Kiefer, W. H. Wolstencroft, J. L. Smith, Fox and Cubberly; fourth went to Mowder, Morfey, and Swirlein, each of whom killed 92, while "Dutchy" Smith alone took fifth on 91 killed. J. Wolstencroft, 12; Castle, 12; Allen, 15; Lindsley, 11, and Sandbrook, 10, were all shut out. Nief Apgar of this city, was also present.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Clinton V. Angon of East Third street is lying dangerously ill.

Mr. David L. Abbott of East Front street is ill at his home with consumption.

Mrs. William J. Luckey of West Second street addressed a Methodist meeting at Westfield last night.

Mr. Ezra Clum, a former employee of Mr. L. J. Denton, the Hillside Avenue florist, is now in Dover, N. J.

Mrs. J. H. Searing of Madison avenue is spending a fortnight with the family of J. M. C. Marsh, at Westfield.

Mr. Peter Wooden of Somerset street slipped and fell recently, and on account of his advanced age, it brought on a slight illness from which he is still suffering.

Mr. George Bogart of East Second street, formerly an employee at the Scott Press Works in this city, has secured a position in the D. L. & W. R. R. car shop at Dover, N. J.

The first debating contest ever held between Princeton and Yale took place last evening at eight o'clock in the Second Presbyterian church at Princeton. Chancellor Alexander T. McGill of New Jersey, presided and introduced the contestants, each of whom was allowed ten minutes to advance his arguments and a second speech of six minutes in which to refute the advanced by his opponents. The question for debate was: "Resolved, That the peaceful annexation of Canada would be beneficial to the United States." Princeton supported the affirmative and Yale the negative. The debaters were: Yale—J. I. Chamberlain, W. E. Leeper and W. E. Thomas. Princeton—Donald McCall, J. F. Ewing and McCready Sykes of Scotch Plains, who closed the argument for Princeton and Yale respectively, the decision and showing that the affirmative view was unshaken. He referred to the annexation of Alaska, which he said was the poorest part of Canada, and said that the annexation of further portions would not more seriously affect the country than the annexation of that small country. In closing, he scouted the idea that we should have any fear of adding to our number a million and a half of French Canadians.

Amusements.

The announcement that the Heinz-Stanly Company was to appear at Waldmann's Theatre last night was sufficient to crowd the house. The company, always a good one, has been improved by the addition of a number of new people since the visit to Newark. The programme contains fun of every sort and in large quantities. The bevy of girls are the leading feature of the entertainment are numerous and appear in brilliant costumes, forming an attractive sight. A burlesque entitled "Columbus or the Discovery of Columbus," introduces the entire company. Among the old favorites are Harry Lewis, Goldie and St. Clair, Lottie Elliott, Mabel Narbe and O'Brien Sisters. "Sweet Jessie," the above company appears at Music Hall, Friday night.

The Plainfield Amusement Company.

The Plainfield Amusement Company filed articles of incorporation yesterday at Elizabeth with the clerk of Union County. The incorporators and stockholders are Charles W. Reed, James A. Demarest, and Thomas H. Keller. The company's capital is $5,000, and its objects are to foster and promote athletic sports, chiefly baseball and bicycling, and also to engage in theatricals.

Stormy Weather Coming.

After to-day the "cold wave" will be slowly displaced from the Atlantic States by the advance of a decided storm now developing in Northern Texas, Colorado and Kansas. This storm is getting ready to move eastward, and will probably travel far enough in this direction to give the Atlantic seaboard snow and rain on Saturday next.

Theatrical Notes.

The fiftieth and final performance of "On Probation" for the present season will be given at the Star Theatre on Saturday night. The concluding performance will be celebrated with a souvenir. The memento are bon-bon dishes, imported from Japan. They are very pretty, tastefully decorated, and altogether not likely to be ornaments for a day, but keepsakes for all time. On the inside of the cover is a portrait of Mr. Crane.

The succeeding production, Miss Martha Morton's new play, "Brother John," has been in active rehearsal during the past fortnight, and a smooth and perfect performance is promised for the opening night. Great preparations have been made for the production, and the play will be elaborately staged.

The team is composed of the following men: Beidenwolf, '93; Grant, Dear and Hughes, '94; McCall, Hendrickson and Kelly-man, '95; Turner, Brown and Hall, '96. The trip this year will be more extensive than any heretofore taken, and quite a number of exhibitions will be given. EDITORIAL NOTES

As to Land Ownership.

Professor Alfred Russell Wallace shows to advantage the goodness of his heart if not the greatness of his head in his paper in The Arena entitled "The Social Quagmire and the Way Out." By the social quagmire Professor Wallace means the wide extremes of wealth and poverty between which civilized peoples now flounder. The rule in all countries is "increase of wealth with increase of want." Fifty years ago there was practically no real pauperism in the United States. Since 1840 our wealth has increased tenfold, our population not quite fourfold. This ought to bring greater ease, comfort and leisure to all the people. It has not done so. While our population as a whole has increased less than fourfold, our pauper population has increased ninefold.

In 1840 we had practically neither millionaires nor paupers. Now we have over 4,000 millionaires and hundreds of thousands of paupers. The wealth that should have gone to add to the comfort of the whole people is being gathered in the hands of the few, enabling them to live in a luxury that not even Solomon knew anything about.

These are the facts in our case, and there is no gainsaying them. The evil is on the increase; that all must admit. Unless something is done to check it thoughtful persons believe it will end in the rising of an overwhelming army of paupers and discontents who will some day crush out in a desperate struggle the millionaires and overthrow the republic. Undoubtedly many of the rich themselves would be glad to see America's wealth more equalized.

Professor Wallace, following the wake of Henry George, believes it is land monopoly that has caused the discrepancy. He would have the land revert to the government and be let out by it to those persons only who will occupy and till it. He says it is largely the great bonanza farms of the west that have come into competition with the small farmer and destroyed him. This point is, however, not quite clear to others than Professor Wallace. As one remedy the professor would have laws made either abolishing the heirship in the land inheritance, or, if not that, at least prohibiting any heirs other than direct ones from inheriting land. Lands included in the prohibition would then gradually revert to the government, which could lease them out at small rent proportioned to their value to actual tillers and occupiers.

Whatever we may think of Professor Wallace's remedies, it is clearly against public policy for our country to be divided into two classes—millionaires and paupers.

Eskimo Divorce Methods.

They are in advance even of Dakota ideas. The marriage ceremony itself is very simple among our Eskimo fellow men. All that is necessary is for the young couple to make up their minds and then walk away together. The bride goes to the house of the groom. It is not the custom for him to hang around his father-in-law's mansion and be supported. As Eskimo ideas go, the husband is fairly good to his wife, regarding her with more affection than one would expect from human beings so low in the social scale. An Eskimo father is fonder of his children, too, than our civilized fathers sometimes are of theirs. In some respects indeed the heathen Eskimo is a much kinder and better family man than the husbands and fathers of the most ignorant classes found in the slums of civilized cities are.

It is in the matter of divorce, however, that the Eskimo idea is unique. If a Greenland husband is at outs with his wife and tired of seeing her around, he simply says to her: "Get out. I don't want you in my hut any more." She gets out accordingly, taking her best sealskins with her, and goes back to her own relatives. If, on the other hand, she is tired of him, she says only: "I am going to leave you. I never want to see you again." Then she gets up and goes, and that is all there is of it. This method has the advantage of simplicity at any rate, also that of saving lawyers' fees.

The attempt has been made by Rev. Dr. Sheldon Jackson, agent of education in Alaska, to acclimatize the reindeer in that territory, making this animal to the Alaskans what it now is to the Laplanders, furnishing them food, clothing and means of transportation. The attempt has been partially successful. Dr. Jackson reports that the population of Alaska is increasing, and that the natives have begun to provide for the future—that is to say, their future in this world, which the agent regards as the first step toward civilization. A new industry, reindeer raising, is added to the live stock interests of Alaska. The natives can by means of this useful animal now travel from place to place in winter.

In view of recent legislation in favor of horse racing and horse racing men in New Jersey, the Philadelphia Public Ledger predicts that at the next election in that state a number of eminent statesmen will find their careers cut off untimely.

This is from Secretary Carlisle of the treasury: "I find that I have got more friends in Kentucky than I ever dreamed a man could have, and a quarter thing about it is that many of them claim to have made me what I am."

MR. BLOUNT AS AN ENVOY

He Has Started For the Hawaiian Islands.

SHIFTING THINGS IN THE SENATE.

List of Republican Chairmanships—Secretary Carlisle Will Follow a Precedent—A Reduction of the Force In Mr. Morton's Department.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Mr. Blount is now on his way to Hawaii. He will proceed at once to Honolulu. Mr. Blount constitutes the entire commission and no other member will be appointed.

At first it was thought that three commissioners would be appointed, but the cabinet decided to send only one representative, and that a special envoy instead of a commission would serve the purpose better than a commission.

Mr. Blount has all along occupied a conservative position on the subject of annexation of Hawaii ever since it was first broached by a secret commission from the islands last winter. He is credited with having a suspicion that the United States officials might have encouraged the revolution and thereby put themselves in a position to be accused of having taken a part in the establishment of the government with which they were now asked to treat.

Mr. Blount, it is believed, will investigate the questions of how the overthrow of Liliuokalani's government was accomplished, whether or not the provisional government really represents the popular sentiment of the islands and whether or not the annexation of the islands is desirable as a business matter.

The Administration's Position.

While settling these questions, it is further asserted that Mr. Blount will inform the provisional government that the United States will not aid in maintaining it against any but foreign aggression. It will not sustain it against any other forms of government the people of the islands may see fit to substitute for it.

It is said that the administration early received information which was deemed to be reliable that the overthrow of Queen Liliuokalani and the establishment of a provisional government were the result of a plan formulated by the sugar producing interests of the islands, and which were furthered to that end by the minister. Having this information the withdrawal of the treaty and the appointment of an envoy to investigate the situation were determined on.

Mr. Cleveland's Callers.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—From early morning until the afternoon Mr. Cleveland was kept busy receiving visitors. Among his callers were a delegation of Episcopal ministers. Their mission was in reference to the Chinese exclusion law. The law, they said, was extremely harsh, and worked injury to American interests in China. Mr. Cleveland told the delegation that he was to a great extent powerless in the matter, because he was bound to carry out the law, but he promised to do what he could.

When the president passed into the public hallway the waiting room had become so crowded that there was scarcely standing room in it. Many went away without seeing the president.

More fortunate was Representative McCreary of Kentucky, who presented his candidate for the internal revenue collectorship in his district—Thomas Bell of Harrodsburg. Senator Irby of South Carolina came with Judge Earle, ex attorney general of South Carolina, who wants the district attorneyship for his state.

Major Daniel M. Ransdell, marshal for the District of Columbia, and one of General Harrison's most intimate friends, had a pleasant chat with the president, in which he tendered his resignation informally.

Mr. Cleveland asked Mr. Ransdell about Mr. Harrison's southern and western tour and said it must have been a delightful trip. He also spoke pleasantly of his personal relations with General Harrison, of whom he spoke in the highest terms, and added that his predecessor's duck hunting expeditions were very sensible and healthful recreations.

General Shifting In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The open session of the senate was comprised within the space of half an hour. Meeting at noon and disposing of some morning business, an executive session was ordered, and while in executive session a recess was taken, so as to give time to the Republican caucus to complete its party assignments to committee places. When the senate reassembled, Mr. Gorman, acting for the Democratic majority, offered a resolution declaring the constitution of the standing and select committees, and that resolution was agreed to.

With the adoption of the resolution the Democrats became possessed of that important branch of the senate. Immediately after a general shifting of members began. All Republicans who have not been fortunate enough to get minor chairmanships will go to the Matthy House and occupy the rooms the Democrats have occupied for several years.

Presidential Appointments.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Among the appointments sent to the senate by the president were those of William McAdoo of New Jersey to be assistant secretary of the navy and Edward B. Whitney of New York to be assistant attorney general. The former is well known through his prominence in congressional matters. He is an Irishman by birth and a strong and effective speaker. The latter was an active member of the antisweater organization. Robert B. Brown who was appointed to be postmaster at Menaffee, Pa., in addition to being one of the first appointees to a postoffice, one of the oldest brokers the rule said to have been laid down by the postoffice department that newspapers must absolutely not be appointed to office. Mr. Brown is the owner and editor of The Messenger, published at Menaffee.

Republican Chairmanships.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The Republican caucus finally agreed upon the chairmanships as follows:

Mr. Sherman of Ohio was awarded the conference committee; engrossed bills, Mr. Allison of Iowa; judiciary, Edmunds, Mr. Jones of Nevada; private land claims, Mr. Hale of Maine; committee to investigate the condition of the Potomac river in front of Washington, Mr. Frye of Maine; woman suffrage, Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts; additional accommodations for the library of congress, Mr. Merrill of Vermont; five civilized tribes of Indians, Mr. Teller of Colorado; improvement of the Mississippi river, Mr. Platt of Connecticut; corporations in the District of Columbia, Mr. Aldrich of Rhode Island; judiciary claims, Mr. Cameron of Pennsylvania; claims of citizens of United States against the government of Nicaragua, Mr. Hawley of Connecticut.

Says Congress Was Not Responsible.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—It is denied at the Capitol that congress is responsible for the necessity of a suspension of civil service examinations in certain states because of a failure of appropriations to meet expenses of examiners. Representative Sayers says the house of representatives was not asked for any deficiency appropriations. Therefore Mr. Sayers holds that the committee and not congress is responsible in the matter.

Carlisle Will Follow a Precedent.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Secretary Carlisle says: "It has been the uniform custom for many years to regard the lighthouse establishment as a nonpartisan service. It is my intention to continue that custom. No light keeper will be disturbed by me merely because of his political opinions.

Rear Admiral Harmony Retires.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Rear Admiral David B. Harmony has been relieved from command of the Asiatic station and ordered home. Some time ago he applied for retirement under the 40 years' service law, and his request was granted.

Secretary Morton to Reduce His Force.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Secretary Morton has announced that several positions are not essential to the success of his department and will shortly notify the incumbents that their places are vacant. They will not be filled.

Gresham's Private Secretary.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Mr. Kenesaw M. Landis of Chicago was appointed private secretary to the secretary of state. Mr. Landis is a young lawyer of Chicago, and is an intimate friend of Judge Gresham's family of long standing.

PERHAPS ANOTHER RECEIVER.

Property of the New England Road Attached at Hartford.

HARTFORD, March 16.—What is considered here to be a movement looking toward placing the New York and New England railroad in the hands of a receiver, was made by Judge Fenton and Sheriff Tomlinson of New Haven and deputies, who went to East Hartford and attached the property of the company at the carshops and round house there, acting in the suit at the instigation of Stickney, Cunningham & Co., a Pennsylvania concern, with offices in New York, which has a large bill for coal against the company. The attachment is for $100,000.

On the arrival of the deputies at the yards Engineer Burridge was ordered to engine from the engine house. Sheriff Tomlinson informed him that if he did not run the engine back to the house he should put him under arrest. The engine was returned to the house. Master Mechanic Humstone ordered all engines into the roundhouse and telegraphed to Superintendent Hammond for instructions. Fifteen engines were put in the roundhouse. The force of 200 men stopped work and left the yards. The officers attached all the cars belonging to the New York and New England Railroad company. The officers are endeavoring to find parties to receipt to the sheriff for the amount of the attachment.

President McLeod says of the affair: "The books of the auditor showed that there is due Messrs. Stickney, Cunningham & Co. the sum of $62,327, for which no demand has ever been made upon the company, so far as I am able to learn. I am convinced that this is but another effort of persons interested in opposing on roads to cripple the public service of this company by the use of unwarrantable attacks upon it. The report of President Parsons for the past year shows such unjust indiscrimination and efforts to injure this property in behalf of rival railroad interests that I am constrained to believe that a most gigantic conspiracy against the road's interests has been set on foot."

Lawmaking In Connecticut.

HARTFORD, March 16.—The senate passed the bill appropriating $75,000 for a state normal school at Willimantic and the act authorizing the city of New London to appoint park commissioners and issue $50,000 park bonds. The house repealed the antipass act of 1880, under which the state has already paid about $200,000 to the railroads for transportation of members to and from the capital during sessions.

An Editor Horsewhipped.

NEW YORK, March 16.—One week ago Miss Mary Hemmings, the pretty sister-in-law of Victor L. Beningfield, editor of the Flatbush Press, bought a white handled dogwhip and made the threat that she would chastise George White, an editorial writer on the Flatbush Supervisor. Last night she whipped White for half a block. White had printed an objectionable article in which she was mentioned.

The Central's Capital Stock Increased.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The directors of the New York Central railroad have decided to increase the capital stock of that company from $60,629,000 to $100,000,000. The increase is said to have been resolved for the purpose of paying about $11,000,000 for the recently purchased New York and Northern.

PIRATES EXTERMINATED

The Awful Vengeance of Chinese Villagers.

HEARTS OFFERED UP AS INCENSE.

Sixty Men Were Shot Down In Their Own Junks, and Two Were Tortured to a Manner Almost Indescribable—Vengeance For the Murder of a Patriarch's Sons.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.—The following news was received by the steamship City of Rio de Janeiro, which has arrived from Yokohama.

On Jan. 15 last two piratical crafts ran into one of the numerous inlets in the vicinity of the city of Shahpu, called Pan-Tsa, for shelter. Some of the pirates landed ostensibly for the purpose of making purchases, but most likely to see if any business could be done in their particular calling. The ruffians thought they and their junks were sufficiently disguised and that they could allay suspicions concerning their real calling. But as Fan-Ta had suffered repeatedly from depredations of the numerous sea pirates along the coast of Chekiang, and had lost sons of their number at their hands, it happened that some of the pirates who landed were recognized by the inhabitants of the village, who, however, held their tongues while the pirates were in sight.

The Alarm Blustily Given.

No sooner had the men returned to their junks than the alarm was silently given, and the principal men of the village immediately called upon two brothers who were officers high up in one of the regiments garrisoning Ningpo. The brothers were asked to lead a body of their fellow villagers who had determined to wreak vengeance upon the pirates. Accordingly 300 well armed villagers surprised the freebooters during a raging storm. The two piratical junks were surrounded.

In a minute the two junks swarmed with the villagers, who amid the shouts of their comrades on the shore burst open the hatches and decks of the cabins and poured a stream of bullets upon the 60 or 70 pirates who were huddled together on the lower deck.

Being taken by surprise, hardly any resistance was made. All of the pirates but two were almost hacked into pieces by the exasperated villagers. These two pirates were saved to be made away with in a different manner.

It seemed that among the many villagers who had been killed by the pirates on other occasions there was a son of the patriarch of the village.

Plunged Knives Into Their Breasts.

At daylight on the two pirates, escorted by the whole community, were led to the young man's grave, and after being secured to stakes two of the nearest relatives of the dead man plunged their knives into the breasts of the pirates, and ripping open their bodies extracted their hearts, which were then put on a plate and placed on the table, upon which were lighted candles and incense burning.

While all this was going on the funeral rites for the dead were performed. Then in the morning, were gathered beside the grave, crying and calling out to the spirits of the dead to receive the sacrifice that was being offered.

The offerings were then left at the grave at the end of the ghastly ceremonies, and the villagers proceeded to the vessels, the bodies overboard into the sea.

The plunder from the junks—gold, silver, silken robes and valuable goods—was equally divided among the families who had previously suffered at the hands of the pirates, and as a finale, the junks were towed into the shore and set on fire and burned to the water's edge.

Liver and Kidneys

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and for five weeks I subsisted on milk toast. I was badly discouraged and had no more color than a sheet-iron stove. I took Sarsaparilla, and before I had used one bottle I felt better, and I took seven bottles by it. Before I had finished the first bottle I noticed that I felt better, and from then on the symptoms of bad health disappeared, the color began to return to my face, and I began to feel stronger. After I had taken three bottles I could eat anything without distressing me, and I felt so hungry that I had to eat 5 times a day. I have now fully recovered, thanks to

BOOMERS INVADE THE STRIP.

The Soldiers Apparently Cannot Keep the Home Seekers Out.

GUTHRIE, O. T., March 16.—The Cherokee strip is being invaded by boomers, hundreds of them were seen there encamped along the line of the Santa Fe road. A troop of cavalry have been stationed about 25 miles south of Kansas City, which is 75 miles from the Kansas line. Movers are halted at this point and ordered to move on. The grass through the strip has been burned, and hardship to settlers with their stock is apparent. There is every evidence that an invasion of the Cherokee outlet is threatened, and the opinion is general that the soldiers cannot keep the home seekers out. Men with their wives and children, with some stock, intend to invade the promised land, and from indications it seems that if the land is not thrown open to settlement trouble is inevitable.

A Countess Attacked.

MADRID, March 16.—The Countess Gomar narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of a trusted manservant. A maidservant ran to the assistance of the countess, and the infuriated man wounded both the maid and her mistress. Then he turned his revolver against himself and fired with fatal result. The countess and maid may recover.

A Suicide Eaten by Crows.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., March 16.—The body of Stephen Brush was found hanging from a tree near this village. He had evidently committed suicide. Crows had eaten much of the flesh from his bones, and it was the great number of these birds flying about the tree that led to the discovery of the body.

A GHASTLY DISCOVERY.

Eight Human Bodies Found Packed In Barrels.

SHIPPED AS HOUSEHOLD GOODS.

It Is Not Known Whether They Were Subjects For Medical Colleges or the Victims of Criminality—The Man Who Shipped Them Has Disappeared.

LOUISVILLE, March 16.—Eight human bodies packed in four barrels was the ghastly discovery made by a freight handler of the Newport News and Mississippi Valley freight depot. Five of them were the remains of men and the other three of women. Whether there is any criminality attached to the matter or whether the bodies were intended for dissection by medical students is not known.

Yesterday a young man appeared at the depot and stated that he desired to ship a quantity of household goods to Big Clifty, Ky. He gave his name as W. T. Owens, and from his appearance the clerk took him to be a professional man. He returned two hours later with an express wagon containing the household goods he had mentioned during his previous visit. Among other things were four ordinary barrels. That was the last seen of the man, though nothing more was thought of the matter until the contents of the barrels were discovered by one of the clerks.

The Freight Handlers' Discovery.

One of the freight handlers began moving one of the barrels, and had moved two of them when they discovered what they were handling. The third barrel was placed upon a truck, and while it was being rolled across the floor one of the pieces of head of the barrel broke out.

This loosened the entire head, and when the men attempted to upend the barrel it broke, and the head, shoulders and arms of a human body rolled half way out of the barrel.

On the arrival of the officers an examination of the barrels was made, and all of them were found to contain human bodies. Some of these bodies had been cut to pieces and the bones protruded through the flesh. This made the officers believe the barrels had been packed in the dead-room of some medical college for the purpose of dissection.

It has been suggested that the stranger is a dealer in that kind of ghoulish goods, and being unable to dispose of the bodies he intended to ship them where he could hold them without fear of discovery. Big Clifty is 68 miles from Louisville.

A VISTA OF STYLES.

Two Graceful and Conservative House Gowns Illustrated and Described.

The fate of the revived monstrosities of 60 years ago still trembles in the balance. Comparatively few, women have as yet worn the distorted frocks and coal scuttle bonnets. At the present moment the suggestion of that dreadful garment, the crinoline, is by no means received with unanimous approval. As reported by a shrewd interviewer, M. Gaston Worth of Paris knows nothing of the revival of crinoline, spread abroad as

STATE BUILDINGS AT THE FAIR.

How Indiana, West Virginia, Rhode Island and Florida Will Be Represented.

There is always something left undone at the opening of such a gigantic affair as the Chicago World's fair, but it is encouraging to learn that all the state buildings will be completed in good time, and that each is typical of the state it represents.

WEST VIRGINIA BUILDING.

Among the latest states to do her work on the grounds is West Virginia, but she has done the appropriate thing by putting up a headquarters for her citizens of the cottage style, and which, with its porches and windows, suggests reminiscences of both the south and the mountains. As the case with most of the state buildings, it will be fitted for social purposes and a gathering place for the state's people rather than for an exposition, and any visitor from West Virginia will be welcome.

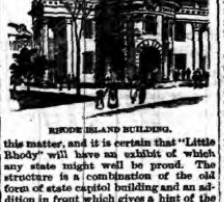
Oddly enough, Hayti was the first to complete her building, and Australia was the first to get her exhibition on the grounds. Of the states, Indiana has indulged in rather a stately style of architecture, but her Columbian home is a fitting tribute from a great state to a great event. Hypercritical critics say that they see nothing in the building to suggest the state, but Indiana proudly replies in the language of A. Ward as to his statue: "It looks like Sir Edmond Head-ay other man. That's the beanty of the statoot."

INDIANA BUILDING.

Florida has taken for the model of its World's fair building Fort Marion, the old Spanish fortress at St. Augustine, one of the oldest and most picturesque relics in the United States. The state building is an exact reproduction of the old fortress. It was originally Fort San Marco, was begun in 1565, or very near that time, and built by the labor of Indian slaves. On the American occupation it was repaired and named Fort Marion.

FLORIDA BUILDING.

Rhode Island, though the smallest state in the Union, will have a large and very imposing building at Chicago. Its exhibit will necessarily consist largely of manufactures, but as the state was one of the original 13 there will be a great many relics of great interest to students of early American history. The people have come forward generously in this matter, and it is certain that "Little Rhody" will have an exhibit of which any state might well be proud. The structure is a combination of the old form of state capitol building and an old dition in front which gives a hint of the famous round towers and old mill at Newport.



RHODE ISLAND BUILDING.

From a Jellyfish to a Whale.

The fish exhibit at the World's fair will be one of the most complete at the great exposition, and for a very good reason, as Uncle Sam will furnish it. United States Fish Commissioner McDonald says that 26 stations located along the coast of the United States had for some time been under instructions to gather representatives of all the species of sea creatures in their vicinity. Commissioner McDonald will begin making preparations at once to haul salt water from the Atlantic, with which the aquarium will be supplied. Captain J. W. Collins, assistant United States fish commissioner and chief of the World's fair department of fish and fisheries, will have a representative of everything that lives in the ocean, from a jellyfish to a whale. It will be difficult, Chief Collins says, to secure the whale, but he intends having a small one. He will secure also a shark or two. In all there will be several thousand specimens.

PERPETUAL YOUTH.

How Women Can Retain Their Youthful Beauty by Care.

A woman who at forty is always taken for twenty-eight tells the New York Sun how she preserved her youthfulness since she was eighteen. She says:

I have never eaten a sweetmeat, tasted a drop of wine or let ice water pass my lips. Linen sheets, candles and hot baths I avoid like the pestilence. I eat the simplest food, exercise enormously and have discovered the preservative properties of grease. Like all things really worth having, one pays a heavy price to hold youth beyond the allotted time. If you think my red lips, high color and smooth skin are easily come by, you are mistaken.

My breakfast, always eaten in bed, consists of weak tea, a soft egg and thin, very dry toast. At luncheon I take plenty of cold meat, a fresh salad, one or two vegetables and some simple pudding. Consequently my digestion is never out of order, my complexion is unsurpassingly clear and every night I sleep eight hours out of the twenty-four in dreamless repose. Before retiring at night I plunge my feet and legs up to the knees in cold water to draw the blood from my head and keep the extremities warm. Then I am thoroughly kneaded from head to foot in massage fashion. The greasing process follows, for I use pounds and pounds of lubricating ointment in the course of a year.

The only absolutely safe unguent is old fashioned mutton suet, refined and slightly perfumed. This should be applied from neck to heels with the hand, and gently rubbed in so as not to stick or shine, but leave a soft, satiny surface. Under the knees and arms an extra quantity is required; also on the joints, such as elbows and ankles, to prevent the least stiffness and keep the body supple. I always sleep between blankets that absorb every particle of moisture the body throws out, and next morning, after a tepid bath, when used in place of soap is used, and brisk rub down with a crash towel, my skin is as pink and white as an infant's.

There is nothing more, I think, except to insist upon horseback riding, at least a 3-mile walk every day, dancing whenever you can get it, and not less than two hours spent in the open air. Sleep in a cold room with ample covering.

No Finishing Shoes.

New shoes can be worn with as much ease as old ones if they are stuffed to the shape of the foot with cloth or paper and then completely sponged with hot water. Or if they pinch in some particular spot a cloth wet with hot water and laid across the place will cause immediate and lasting relief.

Prune Pudding.

Soak one pound of prunes over night. In the morning remove the stones, put the prunes in a porcelain lined kettle with sufficient water to prevent burning, cover the kettle and cook slowly on the back part of the stove until the prunes are perfectly tender: this will take about an hour; then add a cup of sugar and stand aside to cool; when cold press through a colander, or if you have a "heroine" beater a few revolutions will reduce them to a smooth pulp.

Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth; add them to the prunes. Have a quarter of a box of gelatin soaked for half an hour in half a cup of cold water; stand this over the fire until the gelatin is dissolved; stir into the prunes with the whites of the eggs; turn into a mold and stand away to harden. When ready to serve turn it onto a pretty dish and pour around it a custard made from a pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and the yolks of three eggs. This custard may be very delicately flavored with bitter almond, but be careful to add only a few drops or you will destroy the flavor of the prunes.

Most Becoming.

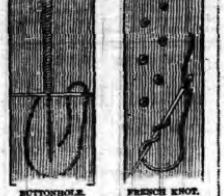
The enormous sleeves of shaded velvet are lined in cloth or stuff gowns and tend to give an air of elaboration to what may be really a very simple costume.

A Tablecloth Autograph.

In Vienna the latest form of the autograph craze requires the guests at dinner to write their names in pencil upon the tablecloth. This is more popular than the autograph cushion as we have it here in America. The original writing is worked over in colored silk and a permanent trophy is secured.

Two Fancy Stitches.

Following are illustrations of some of the different stitches which every woman should understand, and, as each one is important in its own field, should be practiced until it can be worked with perfect accuracy. Many ladies imagine that it is impossible to learn from illustrated lessons; to some it may be more difficult than to others, but to none is it impossible. Looking at the illustrations of a stitch is not going to master it.



BUTTONHOLE. FRENCH KNOT.

One must arm one's self with needle, silk and a piece of cloth, and by a little application of one's energy the puzzle will soon give up its mystery. If the first attempt is not a success try again and again until the stitch comes out places of cloth looks like the one in the illustration. There is not a stitch described in this article that cannot be mastered without further aid if a little perseverance and patience are practiced.

ROSE OF THE NIGHT

A Garb of Refinement and Simplicity in Waitress Effect.

While the use of color is seldom seen in the underwear of a refined woman, and colored silk underwear is a thing to be abhorred, a little delicate line of color is sometimes embroidered on the edge of the lawn ruffles that trim nightgowns and other garments. All the fine nightgowns are made of nainsook and other sheer cottons. Ladies who do not feel the need of economizing in their laundry bills do not use silk in any way, but prefer garments which may be easily and frequently renewed, for there is no concealing the fact that the much talked of silk garments, which have never found much favor among women of refined taste, were introduced chiefly "for the sparing" of laundry bills.

The picturesque pattern of nightgown here illustrated is of the simplest shape, falling full from the neckband, back and front, though gathered into a wattean effect by a cluster of tucks below the neckband at the back. The material of the gown is of the finest nainsook, and it falls into soft folds. The gown is pointed in front, and is trimmed around the neck with a wide double ruffle of the material, which is embroidered in the palest blue in a tiny Greek key design on the edge.

This fichulike arrangement forms a pointed collar at the back, crosses in front, as shown by the illustration, and is tied at the back by sash ribbons of blue. The full French sleeves are finished with soft ruffles, edged with Greek key pattern and bows of ribbon. Such a gown is sometimes embroidered with pale yellow or pale pink, and finished with delicate ribbons in the same color.

Economical Cake Icing.

An icing for cake that is popular among French and German cooks and that is economical because it calls for no eggs is made from a half pound of powdered sugar, a tablespoonful of boiling water, the grated yellow rind of an orange and enough orange juice to moisten it. Put the sugar in a bowl, then add the rind, pour the water and lastly the juice, and use at once.

Virginia Eggnog.

To make one gallon of eggnog take one dozen eggs; separate the whites and the yolks very carefully. Beat each until it becomes as light as practicable. Add one pound of pulverized white sugar to the yolks and mix thoroughly. Then add one quart of cognac brandy and a half pint of Jamaica rum, pouring them in a small stream while stirring actively. Add half a gallon of rich milk. Then add not less than three-fourths of the bulk of the whites and incorporate thoroughly. The remainder of the whites should be put upon the surface merely as an ornament. A large portion of the whites of the eggs should always be mixed with the compound to render it light and wholesome.

Threads of Promise.

She had fitted, been engaged
Half a score of times and raged
Over every handsome man that crossed her life
Till at length a poor old fellow,
Who was wrinkled, rich and yellow,
Asked this modern maid if she would be his wife.

But she led him such a dance
That he, quite unused to prance
Like a bear upon a rope at the behest
Of a girl whose sole desire
Was to try and make him buy her
Costly presents, one day left her like the rest.

Straightway she commenced pretending
In the courts, and when the pleadings
Had been settled, why, her lawyer "up and Left her."
Of her pain to heal the smart
Of a maiden's broken heart,
And the jury gave her twenty thousand dollars.
—James G. Burnett.

Cold Ham.

In a small family a large cold boiled ham after several appearances is apt to lead to aggressive criticism. In harmony with that sympathetic attitude which should always be maintained toward the gentler sex, we offer a suggestion which may soften some of the asperities of domestic life. Cut in slices the remains of the offending ham. Place in a stewpan a can of tomatoes, a few stalks of celery and two onions. Boil these until the product is sufficiently soft; then press it through a sieve. Thicken to a proper consistency with a generous lump of butter rubbed in some cornstarch. When this now clear starch is boiling put in the slices of ham, being careful not to break them. When they are thoroughly heated serve with the sauce in the same dish.

Veils All the Time.

The face veil is now a sine qua non of every woman's street, church, reception and theater toilet. They are worn indeed to the table at luncheons, slipped up during the actual eating process, to be lowered when the finger bowls appear. The vagaries in these flimsy face coverings are legion, almost every shade known being represented, with the fabric running the gamut of plain, dotted, jetted and even jeweled. The new reddish purple is the latest caprice, and is as unbecoming as its color would suggest. Oculists have grown weary of warning women against these veils, strapped close to the eyes and worn so continuously, and now confine their efforts to repairing, so far as possible, the damage which they work.

Not In the Country.

There are many places in Ireland to which are attached legends wherein his satanic majesty figures. The Devil's gap, the Devil's bowl and many others might be mentioned. A bright story of Irish wit is told in this connection by an exchange.

One day an English tourist was being shown the sights by a guide. The "gap" and the "bowl" had been visited, and the tourist remarked:

"What an amount of land the devil possesses in Ireland! He must be an important personage in your country."

"Whisht, there," said the guide promptly, "an yer honor's right; but, like the rest iv the landlords, he's an absentee."—Youth's Companion.

"You're very wise," retorted the toastmaster, "your state couldn't accommodate the extra syllable."—Harvard Lampoon.

GEN. SWAYNE'S LECTURE

HIS SUBJECT ENTITLED AN ANTI-SLAVERY SKETCH.

Full of Interesting Statistics and Anecdotes not Generally Known Among the Present Generation,—Winfield Scott Post, Leal's Cadets, and a Large Audience Present.

Shortly before eight o'clock last evening a detachment of Leal's Cadets escorted their new flag and the Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R. to the First Baptist church to hear Major-General Wager Swayne lecture. The forward pews of the church were occupied by the military men, and the rest of the audience comfortably filled the large church.

General Swayne spoke in a clear voice and gave many statistics about slavery. He had lived many years in the land of slavery, and his father had kept slaves. He had always been interested in anti-slavery, and told many pathetic anecdotes, many of which occurred under his observation.

He said that before the revolution, South Carolina passed laws prohibiting slavery and the importation of slaves. Between 1700 and 1808 the Virginia legislature passed twenty-two separate and distinct enactments prohibiting slavery, but the royal disallowments became forcive laws. They were sent to the King of England praying for relief from the Virginians imploring his approval that the inhuman traffic—by which only a few subjects were benefited—to the detriment of the community at large, might be prohibited. The king in a communication told the governor to give no attention to the enactments nor do anything to make slavery tenure difficult under pain of royal displeasure. For many years slavery was approved by the crowned nobility and they were financially interested in the traffic. A corporation of England had a monopoly in the slave trade between 1620 and 1700 and 140,000 slaves were sent out in those twenty years. William and Mary destroyed the monopoly and gave every English subject the right to enter the slave trade. Queen Anne derived a revenue of 33 per cent. on the slave business done during her reign. The Duke of York was president of the largest slavery incorporation then in existence. Slavery was fastened upon the thirteen colonies and the evil so encouraged took fruit.

New Jersey, to encourage settlement, offered 150 acres as bounty to everyone who would make their home in this State. For every adult slave the settler brought the bounty was 75 acres, and for each child slave of twelve years or under the bounty was 25 acres.

Slavery was profitable. A man married for a period of fifty years, having begun life with two slaves, was able to give to his children and grand children many slaves and land, for the slaves too had multiplied and their life labor had been all profit to the master.

The hate we see was not promulgated by the majority of the slave-holders of the Southern States. It was a politicians, war. The wave of sectional quarrel even among the soldiers of the North and South, for whenever they met under a flag of truce, or otherwise, there was a mutual exchange of good fellowship.

General Swayne mentioned many prominent Confederate officers who acted nobly and did all in their power to bring about peace, and were always friendly with him whenever opportunity permitted. He told several anecdotes in connection therewith.

Continuing, he said: "Both sides displayed courage, and courage in the highest degree. The standard of valor or truth is so large that we cannot all see it alike because of different points of view.

In 1804 New Jersey set free all slaves born in this State. The same feeling existed in other Northern States, but dissensions also arose and matters made but little headway.

General Washington, in his will freed all his slaves, and so did many other great men.

In 1856 a prominent member of the House of Representatives openly and succesively chastised a member, and produce the name of a single American prominent in the Revolutionary War who was not the opponent of slavery. Then the growth of the Southern States was retarded and violence and crime abounded.

THE INFLUENCE OF A MOTHER'S SMILE.

Here is one of many good anecdotes which the general told:

Secretary Stanton, when a book clerk in a country store in Ohio, was kindly treated by a lady who, unknown to him, became an eye-witness to an act of cruelty to a slave woman. When the lady married she freed all her slaves. They followed her to Ohio and she educated them and others. She was nursed and waited on by them out of love, and they grieved greatly when she died. Long years after this Mr. Stanton was a prominent man and in public matters very domineering, he was as an indulgent boy to the dead lady's son.

The young man, puzzled, asked why it was, and Secretary Stanton said, "I remember your mother's smile."

Many very interesting statistics in reference to slave laws, fugitives, public opinion and the differentiates were given by the General but limited space will not permit their publication.

A U. S. law to prohibit the importation of slaves from Africa, from, and after the year 1808, was extended in 1818, to the united votes of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut, against the votes of Virginia and other Southern states.

In the Spring of 1783, the officers of Washington's army in Newburgh, N. Y., would not receive the back pay of eight years which was due them conceived the idea of establishing a State in the north-west and went so far as to prepare a constitution in which slavery was to be totally excluded. The State, now Ohio, was to be forever one of the United States, and the government should receive the desired grant of land. 135 of the officers were from Massachusetts, thirty-six from Connecticut, one from New York and the balance from various parts of the Union. General Swayne advised any Plainfielders to look up the records of the Revolutionary army to hunt up the record as some of that land may belong to them.

On the first Sunday after Fort Sumter was fired upon at the beginning of the late war, a prominent clergyman in Amherst preached a patriotic sermon which so aroused the young men in the congregation that they formed a military company before leaving the church. The first to sign his name was the son of the president of Amherst College, and the second was Col. Mason W. Tyler, the minister's son, who is now living in Plainfield. At the mention of Col. Tyler's name the audience loudly applauded.

The lecture was preceded by a musical selection on the organ by Mr. Wm. Mac Clymont.

A HANDSOME SILK FLAG

PRESENTED TO THE LEAL CADET CORPS BY MAJOR D. W. D. MILLER.

The Cadets Give a Full Dress Drill in the Crescent Rink Before a Host of Admiring Friends—The Maneuvers well Executed.

The Leal Cadet Corps gave a full dress drill in the Crescent Rink yesterday in the presence of a large number of admiring friends.

Under the command of Captain Edwards, they formed in the hallway at 4.30 o'clock at the beat of drum, and formed again afterward in the center of the rink at the beat of "assembly." A detachment, consisting of Color Sergeant, First Lieutenant and eight cadets were then detailed to the house of Maj. D. W. D. Miller on La Grande avenue to obtain the flag which was to be presented to the corps.

In the corps drill they responded to the orders of "right forward, fours right," "on left into line," "fours about" and "fours left about" with alacrity and skill.

The corps was then divided into two platoons, the first platoon being commanded by Lieut. Bull and the second by Lieut. Lowe, and the same maneuvers were repeated at "double time."

The drill was reviewed by Major-General Wager Swayne.

The handsome silk flag was then presented by Major Williams with an appropriate and eulogistic speech and responded to by Lieut. Bull for the cadets. The ceremony was a very imposing feature of the afternoon and was followed by three rousing cheers by the cadets for the flag and three more for Major Miller and the Leal cadets.

"hicka-hicka-hoo-ra, hicka-hicka-hoo-ra, Leal's."

The flag is of the finest silk, about 6x8 feet in size, bordered with red fringe, the pole being of heavy oak and having a gilded eagle with wide spread wings as a head piece. It was purchased with contributions by friends of the cadets.

The cadets then went through the manual of arms with soldierlike regularity and precision, the command of "squad lead," "ready," "take," etc., caused a frightened gasp among the many young ladies present who nevertheless admired the manner in which the cadets obeyed.

When their drill was ended the cadet corps marched to the hallway where they received and then formed lines on each side while the audience passed out between the ranks.

In every detail it will be the largest of its ordinary, but nothing about the building serves better to show the massiveness than the roof. The roof is composed of "I" shaped steel beams, built into immense trusses. These beams are bolted together as a truss and each truss is then raised to its position and at available of 170 feet is placed on top of the beam by an immense two-part traveling derrick. The roof weighs over 1,000 tons and is capable of supporting a freight train of 40 loaded cars.

ARSENIC IN THE FEED.

The Horses, Cow, and Chickens of a Farmer Poisoned.

Charles Duffield, a farmer living near Somerville, met up early yesterday morning, and, as is his custom, went out to the barn to feed his stock before getting his own breakfast. He went to the feed barrel, which is kept in a corner of the room, and, with a four-quart measure, filled his cows, horses, young colt, and fifty chickens their morning meal. Then he went to his breakfast. Half an hour later, on going to the barn, he found two of his horses dead and one cow dying. The colt was on the barn floor lifeless, while all the chickens lay cold and stiff in death. An empty paper that had apparently contained powder of some kind was found beside the feed barrel, and aroused Duffield's suspicions. He took some of the feed to Somerville and had it analyzed. Traces of arsenic were found. Duffield says that to his knowledge he has not an enemy in the world.

"MANUAL TRAINING."

THE HON. CHARLES H. HAM'S LECTURE AT ALL SOULS' CHURCH.

An Interesting Discourse Delivered before a Large and Appreciative Audience A Strong Appeal for the Kindergarten.

Hon. Chas. H. Ham's lecture, at All Souls' church, Park avenue, last evening, was well attended, and was listened to with interest throughout. His subject was the "Kindergarten and Manual Training," which was very ably discoursed. It was in substance as follows:

Manual training I would say is the tyranny of tradition. Those who look forward are but a handful to those who look behind. The child must learn from the schoolmaster, because the schoolmaster of the future we must look to for the development of manual training. There are two things which should be held sacred—man and labor, and the getting of education should be coupled with labor, and the place to begin is the kindergarten—the garden of little children, and the starting point of all activity. For a human being is most active from birth to the age of twelve years. Therefore the education of the kindergarten is the education of the eyes of men despite little children and civilization. Who says that they may test the alphabet, and if asked what was the world would answer a globe of paste board.

The kindergarten—the garden of children—woman alone is fitted to take charge of, as is a mother for children young in years, and she can understand them better. Oftentimes a schoolmaster says a child is indolent and does not learn. This could be done away with by manual training. Let a child learn to use the fingers it is learning about, and let it touch the objects about which it is studying, and a child will be all activity. Better learn not than learn wrong, and the kindergarten is the place to start the child on the right path. This is the time to banish all theories that a child is indolent. Just give them a trusting teacher and you will have a strong, safe pupil. Such a teacher woman makes. The mass of men should stop to think what an important matter it is that not one child should grow up ignorant, because this is an age of education and science when things will be done that have never been seen nor thought of.

The time is coming when labor will be the reigning law, and we must learn to do by doing. Put clearly the objects before the pupils that they may be in touch with them. Never teach words without things. The trouble with some of our studies is that they are mere puzzles to the pupils. Pupils should touch the objects they are studying about. We want active children, not parrots. It is the duty to work with the hands as the mechanic and the brain is active too. The touch of the hand is the master touch. Men who do nothing but think are of the opinion that the elegant life, fine clothes and such things are for them, while the rags are for the laborers. Without labor the elegant houses and the handsome clothes could not be made. It is the men who labor that put together the things that the men who think invent.

Again I say women are the best teachers of children. They are less selfish than men and teach unselfishness. They must no longer be denied the rights to keep step with the times. They are helping to shape America's destiny. Four-fifths of the teachers to-day are women. The kintergarten is the highest but the chief agency of the public schools. American wives, the character builders for education, preside.

The majority of the children of the poorer class can only go to school three months in the year, and then they go to work to add their scant earnings to support the family. This leads to ignorance, poverty and crime. If idle society men who are endowed with riches would pay for each child in the United States from 12 to 15 years, from 15 to 17, $125, from 17 to 19, $200; all could stay in school and be educated. The act of work is one of the main things to be taught. Idleness is the hideous wrong thing.

Prof. Mazzoo, principal of the Plainfield public schools, followed with a strong appeal for the kintergarten.

Says it is "Pocket Pistol Law."

A NEWS reporter saw the corporation counsel this morning and asked him whether he had read Senator Stillman's letter respecting the powers of the Board of Education.

"Yes," said Mr. Mead, "I read it with considerable interest."

"Do you propose answering it?"

"No, I do not think Mr. Stillman refers me to not a letter to the newspapers, but as official opinion called for by the Law Abiding Citizens' Council. There are two able lawyers on this committee, one practicing in Newark, and the other in Jersey City. These lawyers think that no reply is called for."

"Have your official opinions ever been questioned?"

"Oh yes, once, a little over a year ago."

"What happened then?"

"The city paid ex-Chancellor Runyon several hundred dollars and got his opinion."

"Did he overrule you?"

"No, he concurred in my opinion in every respect."

"But did you notice that Mr. Stillman says that the Board of Education have no opinion on the subject from the late ex-Chancellor Williamson?"

"Why, I can tell you what that opinion holds? He says that it is locked up in the School Board's safe, and by the terms of the lease is private, but whether before or after this enactment of the law of 1893 which he is talking about, he does not say and he winks up by admitting that he does not know which it is. Oh, he's a cunning fox. Lawyers have a name for the oiling of opinions that are locked up or hidden away. They call it "secret plaster."

"You think that the late ex-Chancellor Williamson did not furnish the law which is laid down in Mr. Stillman's public letter?"

"Yes, and I will stake my reputation on it. Senator Stillman undoubtedly led the School Board to believe that what they wanted was the opinion of Williamson to put the responsibility on ex-Chancellor Williamson is, from a legal standpoint, a fraud on the memory of the grand lawyer."

Fraternal.

Mr. James T. Pierson, school trustee, returns his thanks (the response he gives being that the accident on the Central had rendered him an invalid) and the Westfield Leader for "voicing the general sentiment" in suggesting the name of the janitor of the Westfield Leader for the vacancy.

MURDERED BY A CAPTAIN.

An Early Morning Tragedy on a Coal Barge.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 17, (Special.)—Capt. Jacob K. Dundure, of Reading, Pa., commander of a coal barge now moored at Pier 4, Elizabethport, this morning shot and killed a man on his barge. Dundure is a gray haired man 73 years of of age. He surrendered himself to the police.

He said the man he had killed was Noah Cross, aged 45, another coal barge captain. His boat, the Coal Chunker No. 16, was also moored at the Elizabethport coal docks.

Cross came over on his boat about midnight and entered his cabin. Cross was drunk and starting him a blow with his fist left the cabin.

Cross came back again and Dundure thinking he meant robbery then fired two shots from his revolver to frighten Cross.

He afterward found that Cross was dead. Capt. Dundure was locked up in a cell to await the action of Coroner Hatfield. Cross had been shot through the heart. As far as known there were no witnesses to the killing.

Cross, the murdered man, also hailed from Reading, Pa. Capt. Dundure is a rough, typical boatman, and Cross is not the first man he has killed. In 1851 he shot and killed a man at Schuylkill, Pa. It is said that he has always been known as a hot headed man, who would use his pistol at the slightest provocation.

Not much is known about Cross in Elizabethport, except that he ran a coal barge between that port and Pennsylvania ports.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Sometimes the most disastrous thing that can happen to a political party is to have full swing in everything. The same is true likewise of individuals.

There will be 235 members in the house of representatives of the Fifty-third congress, and the Democrats will have a majority of 80 over all the combined other parties.

Stocks go up and business becomes brisker usually after the adjournment of a congress. It is not that congress often does anything very bad in its financially legislative moods, but the business world somehow cannot help remembering the tremendous harm it might do.

The London Daily Chronicle says that Mr. Cleveland is an exception to the common run of presidents in that he dares in his inaugural to address the American people in words other than those of "sprawling flattery." "Sprawling flattery" is a phrase almost good enough to be put alongside of that lately coined by the editor of The Globe-Democrat. "Enthusiasm of profanity" is Mack's phrase, and he applied it to the expression of certain politicians over an appointment they did not like.

Robert Bonner insists that the $5,000 to be offered to the owner of any horse that can trot within 2:05 has not been earned by Nancy Hanks. The offer was made in 1891 and was to remain open two years. Until Nancy Hanks trots to the old fashioned sulky before which Maud S and Sunol made their records Mr. Bonner claims that a true test has not been met. Mr. Bonner has made the condition that the track must be one of the old grand circuit tracks also. Malcolm Forbes has thus far declined to accede to the terms, to the general disappointment. Everybody would like to see what Nancy can do with the old fashioned track and sulky.

It is notable that the French critic and academician, H. A. Taine, died of the same complication of diseases that carried off Emerson—kidney trouble first, then pulmonary affection. M. Taine was the first man who reduced literary criticism to scientific principles. It was left for him, a Frenchman, to tell the English people scientifically more about themselves and their own literature than they had ever known before. The individual who has not carefully read Taine's history of English literature has as yet something seriously lacking to his education and at the same time so great a pleasure in store that he is to be envied. But Taine did not admire Milton's "Paradise Lost." He declared the poet had brooded on this work so many years that by the time he had leisure to write it he was elderly, and the enthusiasm that inspired its inception had all gone, leaving it a great work, to be sure, and thoroughly respectable and conventional, but tiresome.

At Jamesburg, N. J., died, not long since, Harrison W. Crosby, aged seventy-eight. Few persons knew Mr. Crosby, even by name, yet he ought to be more famous than Napoleon Bonaparte, for he was benefactor of the whole human race. A discovery of his while he was steward of Lafayette college, in 1847, added fully 100 per cent. to the quality and variety of human food, and made it possible for ship captains to fight off scurvy. By means of his idea, Lieutenant Peary, in the awful arctic night, was able, if still alive, to have a Christmas dinner approaching in variety and palatableness those in civilized lands. In brief, Harrison Crosby invented the process for sealing tomatoes and other vegetables in tin cans, so they would come out fresh and in prime condition. To appreciate what this discovery means, it is only necessary to think of the vast establishments for canning meats and vegetables, and of the great condensed milk industry, all made possible through the happy idea of the tin tomato can, saying nothing of the goat and tin plate industry.

The Conditions of Success.

W. D. Howells, the novelist, scarcely ever accepts any social invitations. If he goes out of an evening his next day's work is ruined. He has chosen what he will have and is paying the cost. Literary success was his choice. To have it in full measure he pays the price of giving up nearly all of what the world calls social enjoyment. Every writer, every really successful journalist, must do the same.

As with writing, so with every other calling. There are so many things and such beautiful pursuits to attract us hither and thither in this age that most of us scatter our abilities over a dozen or twenty different lines, wearing ourselves out and achieving nothing worthy in any of them. We end by being utterly dissatisfied with ourselves.

There is only one way to gain success. That is to survey carefully the field of human endeavor, choose the path you like best or the one that circumstances indicate to you and stick to it. Give up every other path, however flowery, and concentrate all your energies on the road you have chosen. Have a fad to relax your weariness, but do not let it interfere with your business. Social pleasures must be in a large measure given up for the accomplishment of almost any important and really worthy aim, but do not mind. You have set out to win success.

NEWS FOR THE BOOMERS

Getting Ready to Open Up the Cherokee Strip.

MANY ACRES FOR THE SETTLERS

Gossip About the Senate's Reorganization—Senators Hill and Murphy Will Not Attempt to Prevent Confirmations—Commissioner Eaton Retires From Office.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Active preparations are being made by Secretary Smith for opening the Cherokee strip, under the provisions of the Indian appropriation act ratifying the agreement with the Cherokees. The ceded tract contains 8,144,627 acres, for which the government agrees to pay $8,595,736, of which amount the sum of $265,736 is to be paid at once, and the remainder, $8,330,000 in five equal annual installments, beginning March 4, 1895, the deferred payments to bear 4 per cent annual interest. It, however, the Indians so desire, they may realize at once on the sale of their lands, as authority is given them to issue a loan for the full amount pledging the principal and interest due from the government. The preliminaries to be observed prior to opening the outlet to settlement by proclamation of the president will consume considerable time.

Allotments For the Indians.

Seventy allotments are to be made to Indians who were bona fide residents of the strip prior to November, 1891, and engaged in farming, and who have not elected to settlement under the provisions of the act to organize Oklahoma territory. These allotments are to be confined by the secretary of the interior before the strip can be opened, and a list of them published for the protection of the settlers. Rules and regulations governing the occupation and settlement must be prescribed and published 30 days before the issuance of the president's proclamation. Settlers are required to pay $2.50 per acre for the best land and $1.25 per acre for the remainder, with 4 per cent interest from date of entry to date of final payment. The act provides for school reservations and such other reservations as the president may determine.

Will the Democrats Reorganize?

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The session of the senate was very brief and unimportant. Immediately after adjournment the Democratic caucus committee resumed its sitting and took up the matter of the reorganization of the elective officers of the senate. Whether the Democrats intend to reorganize or not is the interesting question. It is an open secret that a number of Republican senators favor an organized opposition to any attempt to reorganize the elective officers at this time, and that the Republicans have notified the Democrats that such an attempt would be very distasteful to them. This is accepted as a declaration that the Republicans will oppose such reorganization, the precedents of the body being against a reorganization at an extra session of the senate.

If the Democrats, therefore, attempt to reorganize at this session it is almost certain that the Republicans will show fight and prevent the consummation of the plan, if it be within their power. The feeling seems to be steadily growing that ex-Representative Wilson of North Carolina will be the secretary of the senate and Colonel Richard Bright of Indiana the sergeant-at-arms.

Hill and Murphy Not Combative.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Senator Murphy was asked if the report was true that he would attempt to prevent the confirmation of President Cleveland's New York appointments.

"There is no truth in it whatever," replied the senator.

"How about the confirmation of Robert E. Maxwell and Edward B. Whitney?"

"The New York senators will do nothing to delay confirmation. On the contrary, they will aid in having them confirmed."

The Case of Senator Roach.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—There has been talk to the effect that the published charges against Senator Roach of North Dakota might be the subject of inquiry by the senate. There would be some political advantage for the Republicans if they could have Mr. Roach unseated, for there would be a chance that the North Dokota legislature when it meets again might choose a Republican.

Lightweight Gold Made Good.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The treasury department has found that much of the gold offered it, in addition to that from Denver, was lightweight as a result of abrasion or "sweating." In all instances the lightweight has been made good or the gold has been accepted at its actual weight.

UNREST AND AGITATION.

Every Railroad in the Country May Be Tied Up by Employes.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Rumors are again current of unrest and agitation in railroad labor circles. It is said that all the employes of an extensive western system have made a demand for a general increase of wages. The switchmen, notwithstanding their professions of acquiescence in the decision of their employers not to grant an increase at the present time, are holding secret meetings. It is believed that in view of the active preparations made by the railroads to fill the places of men who determined to go out, the switchmen thought it best to hoodwink the railroad officials and wait for a more opportune time to strike.

It is now said that the switchmen intend to wait until after the World's fair is in full running order, and, then without the slightest warning, stop every wheel in the country. That the situation is considered serious by the railroads is evidenced by a meeting of the general managers in the Rookery building. They made no move to adjourn, but remain still disturbed in all their employees, and say the association of general managers which was formed some weeks ago to take unified action against demands that might be presented by their employees, will not be dissolved for some time to come.

GREAT FLOODS IN AUSTRALIA.

Damage to the Extent of $15,000,000 Done Around the City of Brisbane.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—The Australian papers, which arrived on the steamer Miranda, print graphic details of great floods at Brisbane and suburbs. In that city and its suburbs the damage done by the floods is estimated at $15,000,000. The Bremer river rose 30 feet. Hundreds were drowned in a mine at Ipswich and four persons in one family were drowned. Splintered by the torrent, houses were whirled away like straws, and destitution became widespread and general.

The fine railway bridge by which the main southern railway line crossed the river, and which cost over $50,000, was carried away with a tremendous crash. The damage done was so enormous and the destitution so great that the government has taken steps to relieve the suffering.

New England's Troubles Settled.

HARTFORD, March 17.—The trouble growing out of the attachment by Stickney, Conyngham & Co. of the New England railroad stock was settled and the cars were released from attachment. Some trouble arose over the transfer of the money from the New England road people to the agents of the coal firm, and before a settlement could be arrived at it was past banking hours, and it became necessary to have Attorney Webb go to Boston where he was met by a representative of the New England road, who put in his hands a cashier's check for $45,000, which is more than the balance due on the account.

Action of the Bar Association.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 17.—The Fall River Bar association held a special meeting and entered in the grave charges preferred against Judge Blaisdell by Special Justice Lincoln, who has resigned. The association adopted a resolution of thanks to Mr. Lincoln for his impartial judgments in the past and regretting the occurrence which impelled him to retire. The members of the bar present then waited away at appeal asking for a respite. The president has devoted much time to the case, and his decision is final.

BUT ONE HOPE REMAINS

That Is an Appeal to the Governor of New York.

A NEW TRIAL FOR HARRIS DENIED.

The Condemned Prisoner of Helen Potts Takes the Adverse Decision Coolly and Says He Is Very Happy, Though He Has to Die—His Lawyers to Ask Pardon.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Carlyle W. Harris is not entitled to a new trial, and in accordance with this decision rendered by Recorder Smyth the young medical student will be arraigned in the court of general sessions and for the second time will hear the recorder pronounce the death sentence on him. Harris has no further appeal except to the governor for executive clemency.

There was no precedent for the scene in the court of general sessions yesterday when the recorder's decision was delivered. The widespread interest in the fate of the young man was illustrated by the clamor of 500 people for admission as soon as the door of Part II was opened.

Few of them got by the doorkeeper. The crowd increased, and the corridors of the court room were filled. Cops by one favored ones were admitted to the court room until it was filled, and yet the crowd outside seemed to be larger. And it stayed hour after hour until a few minutes before 1:30 o'clock Court Clerk Carroll forced his way into the building with a roll of paper in his hand. He was known to have been at the recorder's office. He was recognized by the crowd, which swarmed to him to know the decision. "The motion is denied," he called back.

The Word Passed Back and Forth.

Instantly the word went back and forth through the crowd. It was passed out into the street. Every one within gunshot heard almost in a moment. Joe Moss of Howe & Hummel's firm was in the court room waiting to carry the news to his office, where the mother of Harris was waiting to hear it. He dashed out and up the street the instant that Clerk Carroll gave the news. Yet with all his swiftness the fact that the motion had been denied got to the office before him.

The decision of Recorder Smyth contained 13,000 words. In summing up the document he says:

"A careful examination of all the facts and circumstances established upon the trial of this case, as well as of the additional facts which have been presented upon this motion by way of newly discovered evidence, leads to the conclusion that if the defendant had produced the so called newly discovered evidence, or so much of such evidence as has been legally admitted upon the trial, it would not have changed the verdict, which was rendered against him."

After a few moments the recorder's decision was brought to Harris in the Tombs by Lawyer Moss. When the lawyer approached Harris all the prisoner said coolly:

"Well, I'm sorry."

The lawyer nodded his head. Harris' face paled, but he did not flinch a bit. After a few moments he added calmly:

Harris Says He Is Contented.

"Well, I rest content, provided all the world knows that I was convicted on that evidence."

Mrs. Harris, the faithful mother of the condemned man, heard the news when she entered the warden's office of the Tombs. She took it quietly, saying, "It is just what I expected."

Mrs. Harris after being thoroughly searched by the matron was admitted to the cell of her son. Mrs. Harris remained talking with her son for nearly half an hour. When she left Harris was interviewed by a reporter, and the condemned man said:

"I am very happy, even if I have to die. The community has learned from the affidavits of witnesses that there was no motive other than to tell that my unfortunate wife was addicted to the use of a drug, an accidental overdose of which was the cause of her death. It is not a question of life with me; I have a consciousness of my own innocence, and I believe the American people believe I am innocent."

Lawyer Howe, counsel of Harris' counsel, when he heard of the decision, said: "The next and only step for us to take is to make an application to Governor Flower for Carlyle Harris' pardon on the ground that he is an innocent man, notwithstanding Recorder Smyth's adverse decision. There can be no appeal taken from the recorder's decision."

District Attorney Nicoll announced that Harris would be arraigned before Recorder Smyth on Monday for sentence.

Summary of the Case.

The preliminaries in the trial of Harris were begun before Recorder Smyth on Jan. 14, 1892, and the trial began on Jan. 16. The prosecution was conducted by District Attorney Wellman, who undertook to prove that on Feb. 1, 1891, Harris gave a quantity of deadly pills to his wife, Helen N. Potts, then a student in the Comstock school on West Fortieth street, with murderous intent. The exact cause of death was reviewed minutely and searchingly. The motive for the killing was given as an endeavor by Harris to prevent the fact of their marriage becoming known. After a long and tedious trial the jury after a long session returned a verdict of murder in the first degree.

An appeal was taken and a motion for a new trial was carried to the supreme court and the court of appeals, both of which affirmed the decision. Howe & Hummel then gathered a mass of affidavits to prove that Miss Potts, an habitual morphine eater, had died from an overdose, self administered, and demanded a new trial.

Deaf for a Year
Caused by
Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attempt it, but no improvement was apparent. I noticed Hood's Sarsaparilla so much, I was induced to give it a trial under the care of a physician, who in some one suggested that possibly Hood's Sarsaparilla would help me. I had taken it but a few weeks when my hearing was restored. I kept on till I had taken three bottles, at the end of which time I can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case, and cordially recommend

Hood's Sarsaparilla

SOLDIERS MAKING ARRESTS.

As a Result the World He Cherokee Settlers Are Feeling Ugly.

GUTHRIE, O. T., March 17.—Soldiers are arresting all the boomers found on the strip and escorting them to the lines. In all cases where they find them attempting to settle they burn their tents or houses. Along Black Bear creek they found quite a colony, and were obliged to place some of the settlers under restraint when they burned their houses and tents. Hunting parties found on the strip are also placed under arrest and their arms and ammunition confiscated by the troops. Along the line a regular patrol has been established, and no trespassers or boomers are allowed to enter the strip unless they have a pass from a United States commissioner. This has caused the crowds along the line to feel ugly toward the soldiers, and several open ruptures have taken place, but none of serious proportions or results.

The Rush to the Strip.

TOPEKA, March 17.—The uncertainty about the time of the opening of the Cherokee strip has not had the effect of diminishing the rush to the border. As spring has advanced the tide of travel has increased, and the Santa Fe and Rock Island trains are crowded.

New Jersey Methodists.

MOUNT HOLLY, March 17.—At the New Jersey Methodist Episcopal conference a resolution was offered in which the race track legislation was strongly denounced, and also asked for the appointment of a committee to request the governor not to sign the bill which reduces the penalty for keeping disorderly houses. Dr. J. M. Buckley urged that partisan politics should be kept out of the pulpit, but that the race track legislation should be scored. J. M. Freeman reported a membership of 2,870,000. Rev. Dr. J. O. Peck advocated independence in pulpit utterances, regardless of the wishes of the wealthy parishioners.

Crushing the Highbinders.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—The many crimes of the highbinders have aroused the police to the fact that some desperate remedy must be adopted. Murders and assaults are common occurrences in the Chinese quarters, and, all other methods of suppression having failed, the officers now invade the haunts of the criminals and severely club all Chinamen suspected of being highbinders. This method has had the effect of lowering the crime in the estimation of the better grade, who now look upon the highbinders as less dangerous and as being shorn somewhat of their power.

Capital Punishment In Connecticut.

HARTFORD, March 17.—The house debated the question of abolishing capital punishment. The majority of the judiciary committee reported unfavorably on the bill to abolish hanging for murder, but a minority report favored the measure. The adverse majority report was adopted. The house passed a bill requiring all hangings to be at the state prison at Weathersfield.

Gardner Gets a Stay.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Charles W. Gardner, former agent for Dr. Parkhurst's society, who was convicted of attempted extortion and sentenced to two years' imprisonment, has obtained a certificate of reasonable doubt, which acts as a stay of execution of the sentence pending an appeal.

Three Blocks Burning in Oswego.

OSWEGO, N. Y., March 17.—A fire is raging in the 4-story block in West First, between Bridge and Cayuga streets, occupied by C. H. Tanner & Co., hardware merchants, and H. C. Harp & Co., boots and shoes. The Jones block and Klock block are also burning.

THE ROYALISTS ELATED

News From America Seemed to Be In Their Favor.

STATE OF THINGS IN HONOLULU.

Minister Stevens Still Believes Annexation Will Come and Does Not Feel Depressed. Secret Meetings Held by Antiannexationists and Royalists.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 17.—The steamer Alameda has arrived from Sydney, via Honolulu, bringing advices from the latter place up to March 9.

With the exception of Minister Stevens and a few other Americans, the friends of annexation were considerably depressed when the steamer Belgia arrived at Honolulu bringing news that the treaty of annexation had not reached a vote in the United States senate. The royalists were correspondingly elated.

Minister Stevens is of the opinion that a popular vote on the question of annexation taken in the islands would be useless, for with the exception of the rowdy element and a few interested persons of prominence, there is no strong feeling against annexation. President Dole says he has no reason to believe that annexation will not come, even though it be deferred. The present unsettled state of affairs is not only manifesting an effect on the commercial lines in Honolulu, but is strengthening the royalists in their opposition.

Secret Meetings of Royalists.

A number of secret meetings have been held, at which various measures for the bettering of their position have been discussed. So far as known no threats of violence or a resort to arms have been made; but it has been proposed that representations should be made to the English government in view of the apparent antipathy to action by the United States.

The Hawaiian Civil Rights league has been formed. It is said to be an anti-American organization, made up of royalists and others contrived to delay annexation and if possible prevent it altogether. The natives do not take kindly to the league, and it is stated that they propose to form a new league of their own.

Thurston and Castle of the Hawaiian annexation commission will leave soon for Chicago by circuitous routes in order to fulfill several engagements made on the general subject of their mission to this country. Mr. Thurston will speak at Sorwalk, Conn., and to the students of Cornell university at Ithaca, N. Y. Castle has engaged engagements with the Franklin club, New York city; Puritan church, Brooklyn, and the literary societies of Oberlin (O.) college.

Blount May Have Assistance.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—There were a few developments in the Hawaiian matter. An official of the state department who knows inadvertently let it slip that ex-Congressman Blount will have the assistance of other commissioners in conducting the investigation of Hawaiian matters. Who the other commissioners are or when and where they will join Mr. Blount continues to be a mystery hard to be solved from this end of the line.

Mr. Blount's Progress.

AN ELECTROSCOPE.

An Improvised Instrument For Discovering the Presence of Electricity.

Bend a piece of straight wire at right angles into the form shown in the illustration. Place the upper horizontal branch on the border or brim of a glass, and over this place a little tin cover or a metal plate. The vertical branch must not touch the glass, and the lower horizontal branch should have a little band of tin, folded in two, straddled on it.

A HOMEMADE ELECTROSCOPE.

If now you rub a glass stick or a stick of sealing wax with a woolen cloth and bring either of these close to the metal covering, you will immediately see the two branches of the tin band start violently away from each other, just as it takes place in the well known apparatus of the physicist's laboratory, the electrometer or electroscope.

A French writer, who devised the ingenious arrangement just described, says that this improvised electroscope will not only enable one to discover if a body is electrified or not, but it will tell with what kind of electricity, positive or negative, the body is charged.

Bring close to the metal plate, for example, a sheet of very dry paper which has been electrified by rubbing it vigorously with a brush, and while the bent band or leaves of our electroscope start apart under the influence of this paper touch the metal plate or covering with your finger. The leaves fall back, but if you take away your finger and then the sheet of paper they diverge again. Now the apparatus is charged with electricity of a different nature from that of the paper. In order to discover what kind of electricity this is bring slowly up to the plate the stick of glass rubbed with woolen cloth. Now we shall see the divergence of the leaves increase, which indicates that the electricity of our electroscope is the same as that of the glass—that is, positive, so that our sheet of paper was charged with different electricity—that is, negative. On the other hand, if the divergence had diminished, we should have concluded that the body to be investigated was charged with positive electricity.

Precious Stones In the United States.

Up to the present time there has been very little mining for precious or semi-precious stones in the United States, and then only at irregular periods. It has been carried on during the past few years at Paris, Me.; near Los Cerrilles, N. M.; in Alexander county, N. C., from 1881 until 1888, and on the Missouri river, near Helena, Mont., since the beginning of 1890. The topaz and garnets have been frequently found as a byproduct in the mining of mica, especially in Virginia and North Carolina. Some gems, such as the chlorastrolites, thomsonites and agates of Lake Superior are gathered on the beaches, where they have fallen from rock which has gradually disintegrated by weathering and wave action. Mr. George F. Kunz, in his recent report on the mineral industries in the United States, says that a very limited number of diamonds have been found in the United States. They are met with in well defined districts of California, North Carolina, Georgia and recently in Wisconsin, but up to the present time the discoveries have been rare and purely accidental. Their occurrence is chiefly confined to a belt of country lying along the east flank of the southern Alleghanies from Virginia to Georgia, and another along the western bases of the Sierra Nevada and the Cascade ranges, in northern California and southern Oregon. The corundum gems, sapphire, ruby, oriental emerald, etc., have been found in only two states, North Carolina and Montana, and then never in fine gems. Tourmaline has been found for the past 60 years at Mount Mica, Paris, Me., in magnificent crystals, which have furnished some gems rivaling any ever found.

An Aid In the Grouping of Colors.

The points of the triangle show the three great primaries from which all other colors are produced. Diametrically opposite these are placed their perfect contrasting colors. The points on the circle situated midway between the primary and secondary colors show the middle tones, or half colors, with their true contrasts directly opposite. To better show the use of the chart we will take the upper point, yellow. In opposition to it we find purple, its contrast, and the same with the other primaries. The half way color, between the primary yellow and the secondary orange, which is yellow-orange, finds its perfect contrast on the opposite side of the circle, which is blue-purple, and so on all around the circle.

A COLOR CHART.

To show the use of the chart as a determiner of harmony we will take as an example purple. The dots marked on the line toward the center, white, denote the various tones of purple produced by its admixture with white. Any of these tones form a harmony with pure purple. Moving along the circle on each side of the purple we find the harmonies decreasing as we leave it until we reach its most imperfect tones, blue-green and red-orange. Continuing the round of the circle, we approach its contrasting colors, gradually getting more pleasing, until we reach its perfect contrast in the primary yellow.

A study of this chart, originally presented by The Decorator and Furnisher, will greatly assist the decorator in the grouping of colors, and it will be useful if kept as a reference

One Defect.

Dr. W. G. Anderson of Yale university gymnasium is an enthusiast on the physical training of boys by gymnastic exercise and has given considerable attention to the various methods employed. The accompanying illustration is taken from an article written by Dr. Anderson, and together with the comments thereon will prove interesting to boy readers and will serve as well to warn them against a very bad habit.

This lad's side view is quite satisfactory. The chest is full and prominent, and the body erect. He is the "champion" all round gymnast of his class and has the following first records: Broad jumping, pole climbing (16-foot ceiling, 10 seconds), rope climbing (same height, 7⅗ seconds), "chinning" himself 16 times and "pushing" seven times. Now, look at the back view of the same boy and see how a beautiful figure can be deformed by resting the weight on one leg. As he is young he can easily be cured, one way being to make him stand properly. In the picture both legs are straight, but see how the right shoulder hangs down.

The measurements of this boy are: Height, 35½ inches; chest, 23, 29, 31 inches; expansion, 6 inches. This is wonderful, but the little chap has caught the "knack" of it. He can throw the chest way in, and one would think he was dying of consumption when he exhales. His right forearm is 8½ inches; right upper arm, 10¼ inches; waist, 20 inches; right calf, 13½ inches; right thigh, 17¼ inches. The left arm is a little smaller than the right. He is 12 years. This fad belongs to one of the best boys' schools in New York city. They have regular class work in the gymnasium. The records spoken of are kept and can be safely made without bad results or interference with lessons.

Training of Turkish Boys.

Little Turks are trained to be soldiers, every inch of them. A little Turk eats whatever is given him, obeys without a murmur, works like a horse at whatever task is set before him, walks till he drops down, draws water for his own home, chops down wood, takes care of his own horse and sleeps on the ground without even giving the matter a single thought. He is even taught how to thin without moving a muscle of his face to show that he does not like such hard work. What about the little boys in civilized countries who pout because they have to go on errands and who refuse to eat porridge for breakfast?—Kansas City Times.

Names of Japanese Girls.

Many of those pretty and suggestive little words that serve as names for Japanese girls are an charming in English as in Japanese, for it is not uncommon for a Jap girl to bear the name of a flower. On the other hand, however, many girls in Japan bear the name of some homely domestic utensil, as frying pan or dustbrush. Doubtless this results from the custom common among the Japanese of naming a child for the first object that strikes the father's eye after the little one has come into the world. —New York Sun.

A Wire "Punch."

Children will find great amusement in constructing the figure of "Punch" seated in a chair, as shown in the illustration. It must be made out of a single piece of wire. Try it.

Astonishing News.

Out on the doorstep the wrightest morning,
Bright hair for the little heads only adorning,
His eyes ablaze with excitement and joy,
The wee little will-of-the-wisp of a boy!
I was going by as straight as you choose
When he hailed me with the astonishing news:
"Oh, sir, did you hear 'bout our baby up states,
A'bout say teeth and just two or three rafters?
Her eyes are shut up so just can't look from,
But I opened one, and that was blue.
She's only just Her till we name her a name,
Cashus, didn't you see, mister, she's only just came!
She's most too teenty to tickle and touch,
But I squeezed her very gentle, just such!
Her nose is pug—but it might be pugger;
If you'll scuse me now, I'll go in and hug her."

The Friendship of Married Men.

When a man tells you that he would like you to know his mother or his sister and takes the opportunity to present you to them, you can always trust him. You can believe in him as a man, and you can feel that he pays you a respectful compliment, for if there are any women on earth that a man does respect it is those in his home circle. I have been "out" three years now, and do you know one thing is getting worse and worse: there are so many men, young married men, who never speak of their wives.

Unless you have a very general acquaintance socially you find yourself many times receiving quite married attention from one more educated gallantin, than accidentally discover that he has been married some time. It may not amount to much one way or the other, but who wants to be placed in a position of that kind? I am posing so that if I do not know exactly who a man is and all about him, and he is paying me the slightest attention or making any impression on the listener, I immediately inquire about him. Then I can gauge things in my own way. Not that I am particular about confining my society to unmarried men. I'm not.

I like to talk and to dance with married men—they are much nicer than many young men. They are not afraid of you. A young man, or an unmarried one, if you are pleasantly polite to him, is quite apt to think you have some matrimonial design on him. A married man will go in for a good time and if he is honest he will be a real good friend to you, give you lots of advice and sort of be a brother to you. Of course you must be on just as good terms with his wife, however. Married men and their wives are really the best friends a young girl can have outside of her own family. And every girl after a year or so of rushing through society finds that out.—Teresa Dean in Chicago Inter Ocean.

The woman of today fairly bristles with pins. Not the common, everyday affairs of bone or white metal that are sold by the thousand, and among the most useful articles that have ever been made. Not indeed!

Even at every available place in her toilet are the oldest, the quaintest and the most artistic of jeweled ornaments.

Some of them are set with precious gems, others are in plain gold, still others in enameled gold, and there are hundreds of dainty devices in silver that are used to fasten laces and ribbons and gauzes and liberty scarfs and bonnet strings and belts —in fact, everything that can be pinned on has these attractive little ornaments to hold them in place.

There is no end to the fanciful devices in brooches, and the quainter the design the better it is liked. The woman fastens the lace at her throat with a lizard set studded and emeralds, with rubies for his eyes.

Still another wears a dragon fly with a diamond body, emerald head, ruby eyes and wings of pearl.

In the round brooches that are still asserting themselves is one which has a cluster of tiny pearls surrounding a large solitaire diamond.—Boston Herald.

Gifts For a Baby.

A gift for a baby is a haul of ribbon to keep him in his carriage or high chair. It should be of some delicately tinted satin ribbon, daintily embroidered with flowers in their natural colors. It is lined with silk of corresponding color and interlined with cotton flannel. The ends are finished with a full rosette of narrow ribbon, which Sauce the Hostess Likes.

Sauce the listening of two ribbon ends designed to tie the band in place. For every day use golden brown or some similar darker color may be substituted for delicate tints.

A lovely gift for the baby is a white china silk comforter. It requires two breadths of silk of good width, and the very nicest cotton one can get for the filling. Once in a while finish the edge by turning in the silk, baste it carefully, then put on a soft, white lace 3 inches wide. Put it on quite full, especially the corners. Sew it on overhand.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Kitchen Necessities.

There should be special cloths for lamps, windows, paint, floors and stoves. For these latter the worn and otherwise useless lamp and floor cloths are desirable. When these cloths are of little value for their legitimate purpose, they should be thrown into a dish of strong soda water and boiled for half an hour, when they may be rinsed and put up to dry. They are then useful for rubbing the stove, the hearth or the grates, after which they still may do service in kindling the fire.

Old muslin may be first used as window cloths, then go through the various stages of paint, lamp and stove cloths just as well as not. Instead of this we often see the hearth and grates rubbed with bits of snowy white muslin or cambric, caught up in a hurry, because there is neither system nor economy about the house.—New York Ledger.

Care of the Hair.

Long hair should never be shampooed more than once a month. Some people think that by brushing and curling well for the hair a shampoo once a year is sufficient, but few people, especially those whose hair is naturally oily, believe in this advice. Brushing stimulates the growth of the hair and makes it glossy and soft. It also stops the hair from falling out and is the best tonic for the scalp. For shampoo nothing is any better than plenty of tar soap and hot water. It is better than castile even and makes a fine soft lather. A little borax or a tablespoonful of ammonia in the water is also good for oily hair, but too much of either turns the hair gray. Any head of hair, no matter how coarse or thin, can be greatly improved by proper care and attention.—Buffalo News.

A Writer Who Blames Women.

A well known man writer who describes woman as a study in "tears and talons" and a most "cleverly cruel animal" chivalrously lays all the blame of her baseness upon man's broad shoulders. "Among women," he says, "centuries of seeing man's selection pass them by for some more favored maiden has implanted a peculiar spite. From unremembered times the fortunate have not forborne from casting back on their unsuccessful sisters the eye of triumph and the chuckle of contempt. Ages of this founded a fresh cruelty, and there was gradually arrayed, both against man and woman, the hatred of the mutated, the hatred of the too little loved, the cruelty of the plain and the cruelty of the beautiful."

A Woman Bank President.

A lady who enjoys the unique distinction of being the only woman president of a national bank in the United States is Mrs. Annie Moore of Mount Pleasant, Tex., who probably is the youngest bank president in the country. This bank was operated for some time as a private concern, with Mrs. Moore at the head, and so capably had she proved herself that the vote to keep her in command was unanimous.

SCOTCH PLAINS FIRES.

ANOTHER OF INCENDIARY ORIGIN EARLY THIS MORNING.

A Blacksmith and Wheelwright Shop, Owned by Robert Murphy, and Occupied by William Trainor and Andrew Ryno, Burned to the Ground.

The residents of Scotch Plains are up in arms over the incendiary fires in their village during the last three months. Last night ex-Constable Hezekiah Hand was deputized as constable by the Town Committee. A constable was elected at the recent election but he has not yet been sworn in.

The action of the Town Committee last night, in making Mr. Hand a deputy, was caused by the rumors afloat that another fire was imminent, as Lawrence Wallace, who was arrested Feb. 14, charged with being the Scotch Plains fire bug, had been acting in rather a suspicious manner. He, in company with William Messler, was seen to enter a saloon at a late hour by Mr. Hand, who "shadowed" them when they came out. He followed the men until finally about one o'clock this morning, they entered the fire company's house. Wallace is a member of the company.

Mr. Hand then went home and prepared to retire, but before he had finished undressing an alarm of fire was given. He hurried out of the house and down the street, when he ran across Messler, whom he compelled to go with him.

The fire proved to be a blacksmith and wheelwright shop, owned by Robert Murphy, and occupied by Wm. Trainor and Andrew J. Ryno, as blacksmith and wheelwright, respectively. It was burned to the ground. The fire company did good service, and by hard work succeeding in saving Mr. Allen's barn, which adjoined the burned building.

Mr. Murphy's loss is estimated at $3,000. The loss of Messrs. Trainor and Ryno is placed at $800.

Several wagons that were in the shop, awaiting repairs, were burned. Among them was a coal wagon belonging to Mr. Johnson of that place.

Messler was placed under arrest, brought to this city and lodged in the lockup. He is not charged with setting the building on fire, but with knowing who did do it.

Mr. Trainor says he met Wallace and Messler early in the evening and that they became involved in an argument over politics, in which they got mad and he thinks the men took this method of revenge.

LATER.

Wallace was arrested to-day, taken before Justice Nash, and charged with setting fire to the blacksmith shop. He was committed to the county jail until next Friday, when he will be given a hearing. Messler was admitted to bail as a witness.

No. 1's engine, No. 2's hose wagon and the Hook and Ladder Company responded promptly. The flames were subdued with a fire extinguisher, by one of the firemen. The damage was slight.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The petition of the World's W. C. T. U., for the protection of the home, addressed to the Governments of the world, beseeches each ruler "to raise the standard of the law that of the licensed morals"—to strip away the safeguards and sanction of the State from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect the homes of the people by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which he (or her) governments "abide." This petition has lately received hearty endorsement from the International Missionary Union, composed of missionaries from many lands, and the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at the annual meeting held in the city of New York. These with endorsements from churches, missionary societies, peace and other moral associations, the Salvation Army, Good Templars, Y. M. C. A. and other bodies, aggregate millions who have thus said we desire the complete banishment of intoxicant, opium and other narcotics, and with the W. C. T. U. appeal to the rulers of nations to exercise all power in them invested to accomplish the deliverance. We therefore most earnestly request that all these will unite with us in prayer, that as leading Christian women, in the presentation of this petition shall face to face with rulers, pleading for the protection of their homes, the Spirit of the Lord will move upon royal hearts to grant their request.

They Believe in Good Newspapers.

At Vincent chapel last evening under the auspices of the Epworth League, there was a debate on the following:

Resolved:—That the distribution of the newspapers has been a benefit to the people."

On the affirmative side were Oscar Campbell and Charles Angleman.

On the negative side were Arthur Krom and Clarence Smith.

The debate was very interesting throughout, and although all admitted that Messrs. Krom and Smith made some excellent points the vote was over whelmingly, almost unanimously, for the affirmative.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Defeat in North Plainfield and How it was Accomplished.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The last election in the borough of North Plainfield was one in which the Republicans had a right to expect. The more it is studied, in fact, the more it is clear that somewhere, a careful, concealed effort was made by some one or two, or at least a small coterie of Republicans, to achieve the glorious result effected at the distribution among their friends of Republican tickets, with pasters over the names of the nominee for mayor and that of E. M. Fountain for Council.

An examination of the official returns, supplemented by the reports of the party workers, shows that this defection was in the First District. The Republican votes polled there were 210. Of these Mr. Honeyman received 179, a loss of 31, which were given to Saunders. Mr. Fountain received 157 votes, a loss of 23. There were thus 23 Republicans voting against both Mr. Honeyman and Mr. Fountian, and 8 more who voted against Mr. Honeyman but supported the rest of the ticket.

It so happens that the eight Republicans who, as personal friends of the Mayor, voted for him in preference to his opponent, were known in advance as his supporters and are so known now. They stated openly their personal preference in supporting him. They crossed out the candidate's name on the Republican ticket and substituted that of the Democratic candidate. This was honest voting and nobody objects to the method of it.

But the 23, who voted both against Mr. Honeyman and Mr. Fountain, each voted pasted tickets; i. e., tickets carefully prepared in advance, and skilled to accomplish the definite end of electing Saunders, Howell and Edwards, a Democratic ticket in which, evidently, Mr. Edwards figured only because of his location and not because he was a party to, or had knowledge of the matter. These 23 votes were alike; were in one district; six exactly the same men; are said to have been all pasters.

Who connived at this? Who fixed the pasters? What influence induced as many as 23 voters secretly to go to the polls with these fixed tickets and deposit them? The Democrats did not, because there are not 23 Republicans in that district who would receive from their friends pasted tickets. Perhaps 2 or 3 three did or would, all others applied to would spurn the proffer and report the facts. Who would they consent to give the Council over to Democratic hands simply because of a preference for Mayor Saunders. They had no preference against Fountain and it could not run exactly parallel with a preference for Saunders.

There was a deep plot somewhere. It was quiet, secret, among some partic ular class. For some 23 voters to connive involves the knowledge of at least seven men. Who laid it?

I am only a voter. Editor and don't care personally who is Mayor, Saunders or Honeyman, but I do want to see fair play and no treachery. I authorize you to give $5 to any person who will give the requisite information to the News, or to the Republican Committee of this the borough, which will lead to the exposure of the perpetrators of such corrupt fight on our ticket. We Republicans of North Plainfield expect to fight our battles openly on sound principles and by honest party warfare and if we have traitors in camp we propose to drum them out. A REPUBLICAN VOTER.

The Patriarch on the Bi-club Show.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS: I have been asked whether the entertainment of next Tuesday night, at Music Hall, under the auspices of the Bicycle Club, will be suitable for ladies? "SURE!" I suppose the question has arisen from the fact that the club's entertainments of late have been "Smokers" or "Staggerquetter"; but even they would be "suitable for ladies" if the ladies do not object to the fragrance of the Havana.

Did you ever attend a Plainfield Bicycle Club "smoker?" Why, it is so playfully innocent, so perfectly correct, so truly good that even the smoke rises heavenward!

But, to return to Tuesday night. It will be "suitable for ladies," and it will be enjoyed by them, as they have always appreciated the development of the manly form which is secured by physical exercise. The Princeton Gymnastic Team is made up of men with such forms.

A recently defunct nobleman (noble by name, at least,) boasted of the great infusion he made on the feminine heart by means of his seemingly finely developed figure; but a post mort. examination showed this figure to be more of a figure than a fact. It consisted largely of "padding;" three inches on either breast and many other parts of his anatomy in proportion.

The Princeton team, however, is not built that way. They will bring their "manly forms" with them and not leave them hanging up in the lockers of the Princeton "Gym."

The members of the Mandolin Club are equally athletic; but on Tuesday evening, they will content themselves (and please their audience) by discoursing sweet sounds.

The Gymnastic team and the Mandolin Club are the best organizations of their kinds that Princeton has ever had.

"Suitable for ladies?" Why, our own handsome Captain Martin says is any citizeness is dissatisfied he will refund her money and hand her Ladies' Columbia for the latest pattern.—"C. J."

The truth is that the entertainment, gymnastic and musical, will be suitable for everyone; and the individual who neglects the opportunity and see and hear it will miss one of the thing which help to make life worth living. "Don't miss it!" PATRIARCH.

The Journal Bowling Trophy.

The beautiful silver trophy, which is to be the prize of the champion team in the Journal Bowling League when the series is ended, will probably be finished and ready for exhibition early next week.

It is an elaborate and handsome vase, of unique design, standing about twenty-two inches high without the mahogany case. On the top is the figure of a bowler, the ball poised in his hands, just ready for delivery. On the body of the vase or urn are engravings which make it still further characteristic.

It will probably be exhibited in Plainfield, Westfield, Roselle and in other localities which are represented by bowling teams in the league.

A SURPRISE FOR SALOON MEN.

A Law Supposed to be in Their Interest Said to be Against Them.

Senator Daly's law, to save saloon keepers from indictment for maintaining disorderly houses when their offence is merely selling liquor illegally, would appear to be a most remarkable piece of legislation. The act does not take effect until July 4. Lawyers who have scanned the measure say that under it saloon keepers may escape indictment for maintaining disorderly houses, but the punishment for the illegal sale of liquor is made much heavier.

The penalty for selling spirituous liquors unlawfully has been $10 for each and every offence, and for unlawfully selling vinous and malt liquors, $50. So that it would appear that in enacting the Daly law, instead of mitigating the punishment, as it was understood the bill was designed to do, its authors have attached the severer punishment to the milder offence of a single sale of liquor unlawfully. The old laws for unlawful selling will be noticed, provided only for a fine. The Daly act not only makes the person convicted liable to a heavier fine, but also to imprisonment.

John T. Kelly is "McFee of Dublin."

For Monday night the manager of Music Hall announces the engagement of the Irish comedian, John T. Kelly, in his latest farce-comedy, "McFee of Dublin." And in addition Mr. Demarest says: "The name of John T. Kelly is too well known locally to require comment. Mr. Kelly enjoys much popularity from his former appearance in this city. A farce with a plot is certainly a novelty, yet the author of "McFee of Dublin" claims a plot for this piece. The leading character, assumed by Mr. Kelly, is that of Roger O'Mara, an Irish servant in the employ of Lord Gladstone McFee, of Dublin, Ireland. The nobleman falls in love with Adelaide Wagner, an American opera queen. She sails to America and he determines to follow her. He purchases a villa adjoining the country seat of the fair singer, on the Hudson River. Roger O'Mara, the servant, precedes his noble master to this country in order to make preparations for his lordship's coming. Lord McFee engages in a duel a short time before his departure for America, in which he severely wounds his adversary and is arrested and detained on account of the delay. Roger O'Mara, the servant, hearing his master's misfortune, determines to enjoy a little aristocracy on his own account. He presents himself as the real lord and furnishes no end of fun by his humorous conception of the social duties of an Irish lord. He makes love violently to the woman he supposes to be Adelaide, the opera singer, but who is in reality none other than Molly, her maid servant, who has impersonated her mistress in the latter's absence. The two mistake each without knowledge of the other's identity, make violent love and produce no end of fun by the laughable complications which their novel ideas of social duties create. The happiness of the merry twain is severely fractured by the arrival of the real lord and the real opera queen, who complete their love affair and are married.

In Mr. Kelly's company are such well known artists as Florrie West and Adelaide Randall."

An Actor's Goods Attached.

Long before daylight Monday morning four heavily loaded trucks that men had been working all night to load left the house at Netherwood occupied by Harry Gaynett, the actor. A few hours later Butcher Woodruff, of Westfield, learned that the goods and chattels of his former customer were en route for New York city. Mr. Woodruff hated to see the goods go away, as he had been to the house so often with meat that the furniture had become dear to him, and in an hour he was on the way to Jersey City with a regular attachment for it. The vans were stopped as they were about to go on the ferry boat. Mrs. Gaynett was notified of the state of affairs and the case was placed before a Justice of the Peace in Jersey City. Mrs. Gaynett refused to pay Mr. Woodruff's claim and the Justice directed the constable to take the goods back to Union county and they were returned to Westfield Wednesday in charge of a constable. Thursday two more attachments were placed on the goods by merchants who had bills owing them, and it is rumored that more claims are to come.

The Atlantic Coast Storm.

The storm skirting the coast yesterday is now probably moving northward.

Its influence in this section will not be prolonged, and the prospects for clearing conditions in this section and for a fair Sunday are good.

But as the depression progresses it will throw up a rough sea off the New Jersey and South Long Island coasts.

"Squire" Abingdon Dead.

NEW ORLEANS, March 18. (Special.)—Squire Abingdon, the noted English sporting man and backer of Charley Mitchell in his proposed match with James J. Corbett, died at the St. Charles Hotel in this city at 8.30 this morning of pneumonia.

Squire Abingdon's real name was Geo. A. Baird, and he was one of the best and best-known all round sporting men in England.

He was the "crack" gentleman jockey of Great Britain, having ridden against the best men of England, Ireland and Scotland. The love of horses was, indeed, pre-eminent with him, and it was only within a few years past that pugilism began to divide his attention with racing.

He was a rich ironmaster with an income of about $750,000 a year.

A finished writer bewails the fact that the south this year will get $16,800,000 less for her cotton crop than she did last year, thereby cutting down the sum of our exports by that amount. But this is no loss really. The wise southern farmers planted 2,000,000 acres less in cotton than they did last year. The place of the $16,800,000 for export is taken by the 67,500,000 worth of sugar, rice, wheat, corn and garden vegetables. Much of this the southern farmer will consume at home in place of articles which he formerly bought. There is no loss here; there is a large gain.

The boomers on the Kansas border of the Cherokee strip will have a good time dancing to warm their toes while they await the opening of the strip. They could get a homestead with less trouble by staying where they were and working and laying up money. Then they could step in and buy outright, cheap, one of the claims that disgusted boomers will be leaving in about a year after settlement.

Bishop Potter, of the Episcopal church, and Cardinal Gibbons, of the Roman Catholic church, both advocate the opening of the World's fair on Sunday under proper restrictions.

It is no flattery to say pleasant things when they are true. Always make it a point to say them.

NEWS AT WASHINGTON

Speculation as to the Coming Appointments.

THE STEADY PRESSURE ABATING.

Lucky Ones Appointed by Attorney General Olney—Olney's First Work—Secretary Gresham speaks Concerning the Russian Treaty—Other Capital Gossip.

WASHINGTON March 18.—It is probable that next week will see a number of new appointments of importance in the departments. The cabinet officers are in a good measure relieved from the steady pressure to which they have been subjected since March 7, and are now making rules which will give them time to consider the affairs of their respective offices. The secretary of the treasury has announced that on Mondays hereafter he will deny himself to all visitors. This day will be given to the consideration of applications and the determination of indictments. The first change to be made will likely be the auditorship.

The president makes the appointments, and he will consult with the official family each night until the great majority of the changes have been made.

The assistant secretaries of the treasury will be selected with a view to their experience in public life and ability as lawyers. The assistants in the other departments will be chosen on like grounds whenever a lawyer is deemed necessary. The secretary of the interior has requested the resignation of all the chiefs of division in the land office, and when the new incumbents places are disposed of these and like positions in all the departments will receive attention.

Joshua Jump Presents His Claims.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The president disposed of his visitors in short order, with the exception of Edward S. Whitney of New York, nominated to be assistant attorney general, who had a rather lengthy conference with Mr. Cleveland.

Among other visitors were J. C. Donnally of Wichita, Kas., and James Quinlan, of Waukegan, Ills., who came with Senator Palmer to press their respective claims for United States marshal for the northern Illinois district, and for postmaster at Waukegan. With Representative Bynum was S. W. Ralston of Lebanon, Ind., a candidate for the internal revenue collectorship for the Seventh district. Mr. Bynum also presented the name of Joshua Jump of Terre Haute, who wants the internal revenue collectorship of the Terre Haute district. Representative Martin of Indiana introduced Jervine Beall of Peru, who is after the Havana consulate.

Appointments by the Attorney General.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Attorney General Olney has made the following appointments in the department of justice:

W. C. Endicott, Jr., of Massachusetts, private secretary to the attorney general, vice Mr. Arnoux, resigned.

Frank Strong of Arkansas, general agent of the department of justice, vice E. C. Foster, resigned.

Mr. Endicott is a son of W. C. Endicott, secretary of war in Mr. Cleveland's first cabinet.

Mr. Strong held the same position to which he is now appointed under Attorney General Garland.

Mr. Gresham on the Russian Treaty.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Secretary Gresham said, in regard to the protest of prominent citizens of New York against the consummation of the extradition treaty with Russia, that he has never heard of the withdrawal of a treaty by either party to it after it has been ratified and pending exchange of ratifications. This is the position the Russian extradition now occupies. It has been ratified by the senate of the United States, and the exchange certificates of ratification is expected to take place in St. Petersburg within a very short time.

Orders to Mr. Blount.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Hawaiian matters were again discussed at the cabinet meeting. The result took the form of two typewritten pages of additional instructions to Commissioner Blount. Their nature can only be a matter of speculation, for the injunction of secrecy placed by the president upon the cabinet deliberations seems to have been renewed with additional emphasis.

A Distinguished Guest on the Way.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The Duke of Veragua of Spain, Columbus' descendant, accompanied by an extensive suite, is expected to arrive in New York on the steamer New York. NEW YORK'S TAX LAWS.

The Legislative Joint Taxation Committee Reports and Submits Six Bills.

ALBANY, March 18.—The joint taxation committee, which was appointed by the last legislature to investigate the operations of the state tax laws, submitted its final report to both houses of the legislature. The committee submitted six bills with the report, which were regularly introduced in each house. The bills embrace the recommendations contained in the report.

The committee concludes its report as follows: The sum at present raised by general tax for state purposes from fixed causes must continue to decline. The extinguishment of the state debt, decreased by deficiencies of the state canals, completion of the Chicago exposition, completion of the capitol and other causes promise a speedy reduction in the amount so needed to be raised. In the meantime the additions from the more efficient administration and natural increase under the laws and the development of these proposed for state revenues will speedily climb to a point where they will meet and pass the demands upon the state.

Concerning the succession tax, the conclusions arrived at by the committee are to favor the incorporation into the present law of a progressive or graded tax to include estates in estates of over $50,000 in the direct line and to abolish exemptions on all amounts over $10,000. The committee believes that the direct revenues of the state will, if their suggestions are enacted, start with an annual increase in the state revenues of more than $4,000,000.

Monterey Is All Right.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—Henry T. Scott, manager of the Union Iron works was seen by a reporter in reference to the statement published in a New York paper of this morning to the effect that the new defense vessel Monterey, now at Mare Island navy yard, had stranded her boilers during her trial trip and is therefore unfit for service in her present condition. Mr. Scott denied the statement emphatically and characterized it as absurd. He said that the story boils of the boilers had burst, and the paper asserts, the whole ship would have gone.

Answer of the Chinese Six Companies.

JULES FERRY'S DEATH.

Suddenly Carried Off by Affection of the Heart.

SKETCH OF THE DEAD STATESMAN.

Excitement Caused in Rome by the Explosion of a Bomb at the Residence of United States Minister Potter—Italy's Government Expresses Regrets.

PARIS, March 18.—The news of the death of M. Ferry astounded the city. No other event since Gambetta's death has made such a deep impression. Only three evenings ago he was at the opera, and the day before his death he presided over the senate. Hundreds of politicians called at the house and inscribed their names in the visitors' book. The extra editions got out immediately after the announcement of the death sold everywhere in enormous numbers.

Last week M. Ferry resigned the presidency of The Estafette newspaper and the presidency of the National Republican association that he might devote himself entirely to his duties in the senate. The general feeling is that although his election to the presidency of the senate was contrary to the wishes of M. Gernot and M. Ribot, his death is a serious loss to the government. In the case of another cabinet crisis he, in his official capacity, would have been the first man to whom M. Carnot would have been bound to turn for advice. It was with such an event in view that M. Ferry's supporters in the senate compelled his election.

The Cause of Death.

M. Ferry's death was caused by heart disease. The affection of the heart from which he suffered was due to the effects of a bullet striking a rib near the base of the heart as the latter was attacked by Auberdin in 1887. He was seized with spasms early in the morning, and despite every effort made by the physicians who were hastily summoned the convulsions continued to grow in violence. His struggle for breath toward the end became agonizing, and the physicians injected morphia to relieve him. After a few unintelligible words he fell into a state of coma, which ended in death. He died in the armchair in which for years he has done all his writing and reading. All the members of his family and Mme. Picquet were beside him to the last. His last few minutes were apparently painless.

Sketch of His Career.

Jules Francois Camille Ferry was born at Saint Die, in the Vosges, and was admitted to the bar in 1854. He was one of the active opponents of the empire, and was one of the convicted in the famous political trial of the "72" in 1864. In 1869 he was elected to the legislative council. He took his seat among the members of the left. He voted against the declaration of war with Prussia, and at the revolution of September 4, 1870, Gambetta called a member of the government of the national defense. When the communal insurrection broke out in March, 1870, Ferry risked his life to suppress it. When elected a representative of the department of Vosges in February, 1871, he resigned as a member of the government of national defense.

After the second siege and the entry of the troops into Paris M. Thiers nominated Ferry prefect of the Seine, but owing to powerful clerical opposition Ferry resigned 10 days later. Subsequently it was reported that M. Ferry would be sent as minister to Washington, but he appointed was never officially announced, and Ferry was sent as minister to Athens. After the resignation of Marshal MacMahon as president in 1879 M. Ferry was appointed by President Grevy minister of public instruction and fine arts.

His Educational Bill.

His education bill, prohibiting members of unauthorized religious communities, meaning especially the Jesuits, from teaching or managing schools, caused much controversy. Finally the bill was twice defeated in the senate, the proscription of the Jesuits was proclaimed and their expulsion carried out. Three members of the ministry, however, resigned, and after some delay M. Ferry formed a cabinet. On Nov. 10, 1881, the Ferry cabinet resigned on account of attacks made upon the policy of the ministry in regard to the expedition to Tunis.

In 1883 M. Ferry was again called upon to form a cabinet, and he started upon a policy of colonial expansion, which proved very costly to France. This colonial policy resulted in his overthrow in 1884. In 1885 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the presidency of the republic, and in December of the same year he narrowly escaped assassination by a madman named Aubertin. In December, 1890, M. Ferry was elected senator. The Panama canal scandal, which broke down so many public men, caused many to turn their eyes again toward M. Ferry, who was unsmirched by the development, and upon the retirement of M. Le Royer from the presidency of the senate last month M. Ferry was elected president.

Bomb In Minister Potter's Residence.

ROME, March 18.—In the early morning hours a bomb was exploded in the Ancient Mattei palace, the residence of United States Minister William Potter of Pennsylvania, and which was engaged by Mr. Potter in December last as his official residence during his term of service. The explosion of the bomb did but slight damage to the building, and nobody was injured. A similar outrage was perpetrated in the same building in 1892.

Mr. Potter called at the foreign office later in the day and told Signor Brin, minister of foreign affairs, that he was convinced that the explosion was not intended to injure him or to affront the United States government. He expressed his regret that such an unbecoming incident had occured and assured Signor Brin of the sympathy of the United States government and his willingness to let the affair pass unnoticed.

Signor Brin thanked him for his visit, and two hours later returned the call to inform him that the Italian government felt the deepest regret on account of the inconvenience caused to him and his family by the explosion.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon of Piqua, O., says the Physicians are Astonished, and look at her like one

Raised from the Dead

Long and Terrible Illness from Blood Poisoning

Completely Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and since severe abscess broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 120 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment as almost like one raised from the dead."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

HOOD'S PILLS should be in every family medicine chest. Once used, always preferred.

HAVOC IN A CHINA SHOP.

A Washington Woman Smashes Costly Brica-a-brac Right and Left.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Mrs. Kimon Nicolaides, the wife of the proprietor of a fashionable brica-brac store on A street, with a branch at Saratoga, turned that establishment into destruction. The affair caused much excitement, as it occurred at a time when that thoroughfare was crowded with ladies.

The first intimation that any one had was when the front windows fell with a crash on the pavement. A crowd at once collected, and the first on the scene found Mrs. Nicolaides in the window with a large pole which she had used in destroying everything within her reach. She then jumped from the window and went through the aisles of the store, smashing all the cases and everything in them.

The store was immediately closed and police officers stationed outside of it. Mr. Nicolaides disappeared after the trouble. Jealousy on the wife's part is assigned as the reason of the outbreak.

A Straw For Revs. Briggs and Smith.

CINCINNATI, March 18.—The ballot of the Presbyterian ministers on the Briggs and Smith heresy cases and on the doctrine of Biblical inerrancy, inaugurated some time ago by a Cincinnati paper, is practically complete. Professors Briggs and Smith are overwhelmingly defeated by a majority equal to that in the last Presbyterian general assembly at Portland. The Bible is also indorsed as a book practically without error, and containing the true message of God to man. Higher criticism as explained by Professor Briggs is condemned as destructive and as an aid to infidelity.

The Company Wants Notification.

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—Richard C. McMurtrie, appearing for the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, presented a petition in the United States circuit court. The petition states that the Pennsylvania company is one of the defendants in the suit of Thomas C. Platt of New York, and that the court, therefore, make an order that the company be given opportunity to be heard in regard to all applications or orders referring any matter to the master or involving expenditure of money by receivers. Judge Dallas announced that the company should be given the notice desired.

Nonunionists Threaten to Strike.

PITTSBURG, March 18.—The management of the Etna iron works, Frankstown, has served notice of reduction in all departments. The nonunionists are decidedly indignant and threaten to quit work.

BIG RIVAL FOR CARNEGIE

Eastern Capitalists Forming a Powerful Syndicate.

AN EMISSARY STARTS FOR EUROPE.

To Be Devoted to the Manufacture of Iron and Steel of Light and Heavy Grades and to Compete With Carnegie In the Making of Armor Plate.

PITTSBURG, March 18.—A powerful syndicate, in which several Pittsburgers are interested, as well as some eastern capitalists, is being formed to engage in an enterprise which will rival in magnitude the combined Carnegie interests. An emissary has just been sent to Europe to continue negotiations with the projectors on the other side of the ocean, most of whom are English.

The plans have progressed so far that the promoters are now engaged in negotiations for a site and have examined several locations for the town and plant, any one of which may be selected if sufficient inducements are offered by the land owners. One of the sites looked at is at a point above Monongahela City.

To Compete With Carnegie.

The plant will be devoted to the manufacture of iron and steel of light and heavy grades, including structural work, and it is said that the syndicate even proposes to compete with the Carnegies in the making of armor plate. There will be blast furnaces, rolling mills and all that appertains to them, of course. An immense foundry and other works, and millions of dollars, it is said, are to be invested. One of the persons concerned in the scheme is Robert McClain of the Low Pressure Gas company.

He is decidedly reticent, and his only betrayal of himself and associates was an inadvertent admission of the fact that the syndicate had sent a man to Europe. He said that he did not know how soon the syndicate's representative would return, but that he would be absent but a few weeks.

"We don't care particularly where the plant is located," he added. "It all depends on the inducements offered in the way of cheap fuel and plenty of it, concession of land and shipping rates and facilities."

Now a Pig Iron Trust.

CINCINNATI, March 18.—Ten of the largest iron and steel pipe foundries of the south and west formed a combination here with a capital of $25,000,000. The combination will control all the cheap pig iron in the south and west, and eastern foundries which depend on this class of iron must close up. The price of iron pipe will be increased $4 to $6 per ton.

Increase In Immigration.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The Ellis island officers are looking for a big influx of immigrants within the next three months. They say immigration to this port this spring will exceed that of last spring by many thousands.

No Hope For a One Fare Rate.

CHICAGO, March 18.—At a meeting of railroad men the opinion was strongly against a 1-fare rate to the World's fair, and any hope that any such tariff will be adopted is gone.

SQUIRE ABINGTON DYING.

Mitchell's Backer Lying at Death's Door In New Orleans.

BUFFALO, March 18.—"Fight in Buffalo!" said Charley Mitchell to a reporter. "No, my dear boy, there isn't a place on the face of the earth where I'd rather fight than Buffalo."

Mitchell arrived here from the west. When he registered at a hotel the clerk handed him a telegram. It was from the valet of his friend "Squire" Abington at New Orleans, and read:

"Mr. Abington is strictly dying. Three physicians at consultation over him. You had better come immediately."

Mitchell was very much distressed over the bad news and later talked of but little else than his sick friend.

"I'm feeling pretty blue," said Mitchell, "for I have a dear friend I have on earth dying, and I am not with him. Squire Abington is my backer. He is an English gentleman who has no end of money. He came over with me, and I am afraid that I will have to go back without him. He is a sportsman and has a lively interest in everything in the line of sport. He is well known in England and the news of his illness will be regretted there."

GOOD HEALTH

MODERN DISEASES.

Lawn Tennis Arm, Housemaid's Knee, Dentist's Leg and Telephonic Tintinnatus.

The "lawn" tennis arm, like the "housemaid's knee" and the "dentist's leg," are all described as "occupation diseases." The continuous use of the telephone is said to cause a buzzing noise in the ears of many people, accompanied by an intense nervous irritability. This illness, which seems destined to last, has already received the name of "telephonic tintinnatus." Its victims are intolerant of the faintest din and will sometimes develop serious inflammation of the tympanum. We might mention also among modern diseases the erythema developed in the skin of the face of those who are much subjected to the rays of the electric light or who are in the habit of working powerful electric batteries. Photographers suffer from various maladies, such as chronic acid poisoning, and the poisonous effects of phenol compounds are often observed in those whose lives are devoted to dyeing and to the manufacture of coal tar colors. All these affections of the human being were quite unknown less than half a century ago, says Popular Science News.

Causes of Consumption.

Dr. James Wood of Brooklyn states that, according to the latest authorities, consumption is dependent upon three factors: First, decreased vitality, antagonizing powers, or what you will. This is well known, as well as in what manner it is induced or transmitted. Second, an active inflammatory condition. This may be pneumonia, bronchitis, laryngitis or the like. Third, the presence of the bacillus tuberculosis. Without these three there can be no consumption. It is the usual thing in the examination in the deadhouse to find evidences in the lungs that the subject had at some time a commencing consumption, but the vitality had been so great that nature had encapsuled the infected part with tissue of high vitality and the condition became innocuous. The fatality from tuberculosis, then, is dependent on a decreased vitality, and we can look to a proper kind of diet and a consequent increase in the general antagonizing power of the body for the remedy.

Electric Medication.

One of the new features of electric medication is the introduction of drugs into the human body through the skin. The Industrial World tells that this is done by placing solutions of any drug upon a sponge, which is made the positive pole and placed against the skin. When the current is turned on, the drug is actually driven through the skin into the tissues. The application is not painful. Time ago a needle has been driven in over a painful nerve, and neuralgia has been relieved by it. Many other drugs have been used in this way. This property of electricity is known as cataphoresis. Operations have been performed after anaesthetizing the skin and subjacent tissues cataphorically.

The Healthful Apple.

German analysts say the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. The scientists tell us that the apple is "chemically compresed of vegetable fiber, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyll, malic acid, gallic acid, lime and much water." In olden times a roasted apple was considered the best thing a consumptive could eat, or that a consumptive could have when needing something to tempt the failing appetite.

Points For People In Search of Culture and Polish.

The following notes gleaned from Harper's Bazar consist of practical advice to correspondents and are adapted to the wants of every day:

A young widow wears English crape trimmings on dresses and capes. There is no prescribed time for wearing the crape veil over the face. It is an unwholesome fashion that should be abandoned soon. The milliner draping the crape to hang at the back and providing a thin veil for the face. A black border is added to cards and stationery. The husband's first name may be retained if the widow chooses and indeed is now preferred to the old plan of using her own name.

Fin de siecle literally means the end of the century, but its accepted meaning is "up to date." This means style.

Cards need not be sent to the "at home." If you attend, you will leave two of Mr. Smith's cards and one of your own. A subsequent call is not necessary. Cards are sent to teas (where you do not attend) during the specified reception hours. Yes; send an acceptance for a wedding reception.

The invitation should read: "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith request the pleasure of your company Tuesday evening, January tenth, at eight o'clock. Dancing at nine." Introduce your guests on opportunity occurs. Plain white stationery is always good style. Stamp with the address if you choose.

You should always give your hand to callers in your own house. Ask them to call again if you want them, certainly.

It is not necessary to acknowledge a card of condolence, but it is polite to do so by a note of thanks. An invitation to a church wedding needs no answer. Mourning dress for a mother is worn a year; visits are not paid during the first six months.

Many women prefer to walk without taking a man's arm. You should certainly thank him for his trouble in escorting you home.

Leave three cards, one for each lady. Leave cards whenever paying a formal call. It is better in the use of cards to err on the side of too many than too few.

You should make a call on the hostess within a week after attending her dinner party.

The seats of honor at a dinner are at the right of host or hostess.

It is more gracious to allow your glass to be filled than to refuse wine; you need not drink it, of course. Serve your coffee after dessert. Mark your books with the name only. "Mary J. Smith."

The hostess enters the dining room last.

Soup, coffee and desserts are served by the hostess where the service is from the table.

The wedding cake is put up in small boxes furnished by the caterer and is taken away by the guests; it is not sent out. The groom's card should read, "Dr. John Smith," the bride's, "Mrs. John Smith."

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

MESMERISM.

First Announced as a Subtle Fluid Diffused by the Planets.

Mesmerism was first brought into notice by Frederick Anton Mesmer, a German physician, in 1766, when he published a thesis on "The Influence of the Planets on the Human Body," claiming that the heavenly bodies diffused through the universe a subtle fluid which acts on the nervous system of animated beings, and he further stated that he regarded the new force, which, he said, could be exerted by one living organism upon another, as a means of alleviating or curing disease. In 1778 he left Vienna for Paris, where he gained numerous proselytes and much money. His discovery was fostered by Dr. d'Elson, physician to the king's brother, and in 1784 the French government ordered the medical faculty of Paris to investigate the matter. A committee was appointed, who subsequently reported that "the violent effects which are observed in the public practice of magnetism are due to the manipulations, to the excitement of the imagination which leads us to repeat anything which produces an impression upon the senses." Ten years later—1784—Mesmer's popularity had so far declined that he left Paris and retired to Switzerland, where he spent the balance of his life. Mesmerism excited much attention again in 1845, when Miss Harriet Martineau and others announced their belief in it.

Peculiar Virtues of Menthol.

There are peculiar virtues possessed by menthol, and in fact the drug itself is comparatively a new discovery in America, but the Chinese and Japanese have made use of it for a long time. It is a white crystalline substance deposited from oil of peppermint and is obtained by freezing and thawing the oil a number of times, the crystals being deposited during the congealing process. These crystals melt at 97 degrees Fahrenheit, are slightly soluble in water and entirely soluble in ether and the volatile oils. In the manufacture of menthol the Japanese oil is generally used, as it yields the crystals more richly than the others. The drug is used for external application and often gives much relief in cases of headache. The effect produced is mainly a sensation of intense cold, caused by the rapid evaporation of the thin coating of the substance which is left on the skin when the menthol pencil has been rubbed over it.

An Early Cremationist.

In St. George's burial ground in the Uxbridge road, England, is a monument, bearing date 1703, erected to the memory of Honoretta Pratt, who ordered that her body should be burned. It stands near the back of the chapel. On it are four columns supporting a canopy, under which is an urn with snakes twined around it. The inscription on one side of it reads thus: "This worthy woman, believing that the vapours arising from graves in the churchyards of populous Citys must prove hurtful to the inhabitants, and resolving to extend to future times as far as she was able that charity and benevolence which distinguished her thro' life, ordered that her body should be burnt in hope that others would follow the example—a thing too hastily censured by those who did not inquire the motive."

The Bifurcated Nether Garment.

A woman fashion writer asserts that by patient and accredited research carried on by one woman it has been proved, for the gratification of all women, that the bifurcated nether garment supposed to be specially distinctive of the masculine toilet rightly belongs to the feminine dress. The women of Judah, it seems, were the first wearers of the garment in bifurcated form, and man, seeing that the convenience and comfort of this article of dress, evolved by the superior intelligence of woman, appropriated it to himself, but in so doing spoiled his womankind to encumber their limbs with flowing robes, which render it impossible for them to cope with man in the usual avocations.

Liberty Bell at the World's Fair.

The famous old Liberty bell during the World's fair is located on the right side of the main entrance in the Pennsylvania state building. It is suspended from the ceiling of the second story floor so that persons on the main floor can stand under and look up at the bell. At a point about halfway of the bell's height there is a balcony, and visitors can have a close inspection of the bell, though they will not be able to get within two of the railing around the balcony.

Women in Chili.

A writer in Lippincott's affirms that Chili is the woman's Utopia. It is the only country in the world in which women are possessed of full political rights. Every woman over 21 can vote on all questions. The street cars are all conducted by women too. The native women have not good opportunities for education, but they are said to be capable of fair mental ability. In manner they are modest and dignified, in person small and delicate.

Sevres Ware.

Sevres ware was first produced in France in 1695, and during the past two centuries it has occupied a high rank of honor among the many wares of France. The Sevres of today is not materially different from the Sevres of a century ago, except as to decorations, which have during the past few years acquired a greater degree of excellence, the result of higher artistic attainments among the designers and decorators.

Origin of the Pawnbroker's Sign.

It is generally held that the three golden balls used by pawnbrokers as a sign were adopted from the armorial bearings of the Medici family of Italy by the Lombard merchants, among whom were several representatives of that family. This sign was used in London in very early times by some of those merchants who had emigrated from Italy and established the first money lending establishments in England.

Four Classes of Men.

An Arabic philosopher has classed men into four kinds:

He who knows not, and knows not that he knows not. He is a fool; shun him.

He who knows not, and knows that he knows not. He is simple; teach him.

He who knows, and knows not he knows. He is asleep; wake him.

He who knows, and knows he knows. He is wise; follow him.

The Seasons.

The seasons, nominally and according to the equinoxes, are as follows: Spring, March 20, at 3 a. m.; summer, June 22, 11 p. m.; autumn, Sept. 23, 2 p. m.; winter, Dec. 21, 8 a. m.

STORIES ABOUT BEARS.

A Black Bear and a Brown Bear That Liked to Play With Children.

Some bears are very fond of play. It is said that, taking advantage of this weakness, hunters sometimes tie logs of wood in the trees so that they will swing freely. The bears find them and sit for hours swinging them back and forth. While thus employed they become easy prey to the hunters. A story is told of a little girl who was lost for several hours and who was finally found in the pen of a tame black bear. In looking at the bear she had fallen into the pen, and the bear evidently thought she had come to play with him. Instead of tearing her to pieces, as he easily could have done, he took her in his arms, almost tenderly as her own mamma could have done. The story may be true, for the black bear is of a playful disposition, except when it is attacked or teased either by fear or hunger. The same is true of the brown bear.

TOO FOND OF PLAY.

Another incident of the same nature is vouched for as having really occurred by the author of a book on Siberia: Two children, one 4 and the other 6 years of age, had wandered away from their home. After a little time they were missed by their parents, who at once set out in search of them. To their horror they found their children engaged in play with a large brown bear, and they were all having a jolly time. One of the children was feeding his great shaggy playmate with fruit, while the other had climbed on his back and was having a ride. The mother screamed on seeing the apparent danger of her children, upon which the little fellow slid off his back, and the bear trotted away into the woods.

Fine Feathers Do Not Make Fine Birds.

She was a lady with pins in her hair
On a funny old Japanese fan;
He was a proud bit of Chinese ware
In the shape of a mandarin man.

She blushed when she saw him appear on the shelf,
For she thought of her shabby old frock.
She said, "Oh! I know he will scorn an old fan,
As he comes of a very proud stock."

The mandarin sneered as he took a front place,
But his pride met a fall when he found
That the fan was dispatched to a very grand show,
For her beauty and age were renowned.

So we'll leave him alone on his shelf, while he thinks,
With a large diminution of pride,
"It is not the feathers that make the fine birds,
But the worth of the bird that's inside."

A Very Dull Animal.

Probably no animal in the world spends more of its life among trees than the sloth, which is a native of the tropical forests of South America. It lives among the trees, feeds on their leaves and sleeps suspended from a bough or huddled up at the point where the branch meets the trunk. It does not walk along the branches, but clings from them back downward. Fairly active by night, it spends its day in sleep, and having little need to cultivate intelligence is one of the dullest of creatures. Its chief enemy is the snake, which is enabled to attack it in its own quarters. When it has stripped one tree of its foliage, it moves on to the next by seizing an adjoining branch, but should this not be possible it must perforce come to the ground, on which it walks most clumsily, and climbs afresh.

The Road to Curtain Town.

What is the road that small feet go
Every night when the sun is low?
All through the shadows they take their way
To a charming city unseen by day.
Over the country-by dale and down,
All the way into Curtain Town!

Firelight palace is left behind,
Tender castle no eyes may find;
By sleepy nurse and Playtime end,
Through Drowsy dingle we needs must wend.
The skies are gray and the land is brown
All the way into Curtain Town!

BY SLEEPY HOLLOW AND PILLOW HILL.

Far away through the dark of night
The wander city shines fair and white;
The river of dreams, all hushed and still,
Runs in silence by Pillow hill;
Fairy people of odd renown
Smile and beckon from Curtain Town!

Come, dear dollies, the lights are low,
But surely this is the road to go!
All through the shadows the pathway lies,
But we should find it with half shut eyes
As we follow the route of nurse's gown
All the way into Curtain Town!

Not Enough For the Money.

An amusing incident, illustrating the craving among a certain order of pig, goes for strong dramatic fare, occurred the other night at a northern theater. Three solemn looking seamen presented themselves at the pay box, and handed over the money to take the name of the piece.

"Kindred Souls," by Milton Rays," was the reply.

"How many murders are there in it?" asked one of the men.

"Not a single murder," responded the money taker.

"No murder!" exclaimed the man, with surprise. "Then, is there a suicide?"

"No."

The sailor turned to his companions, and after holding a brief conference with them remarked to the money taker:

"All right, mister; we'll not go in tonight."—Million.

What Did It?

The printer was kicking because somebody was at his case rank and had got things into all sorts of confusion.

"I'd like to know," he said, with more or less profanity, "who has been doing this?"

"Circumstances," suggested the foreman solemnly.

"Circumstances, nothing!" snorted the printer. "It's some son of a shooting stick I'd like to shoot. Circumstances hasn't got anything to do with it."

The foreman laid his hand on his shoulder kindly.

"You seem to forget," he said in faraway tones, "that circumstances alter cases," and the printer bowed his head and wept.—Detroit Free Press.

WHY RUTH WAS GREAT.

REV. MR. RICHARDSON SAYS "SHE LOVED HER MOTHER-IN-LAW."

That was the Title of His Sermon in the Park Avenue Baptist Church Last Evening.—A Lovable Woman, and a Shining Example.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park avenue Baptist church, delivered a sermon last night on "Unselfishness the basis of nobility of character." The text was Ruth 1: 4—"And they lifted up their voices and wept again. And Orpah kissed her mother in-law, but Ruth clave unto her." The speaker said that art and literature have always represented Ruth as a very beautiful woman, but that nowhere in the Scriptures is it said of her, as of Sarah, that she was "exceedingly fair." The world has presumed to call Ruth beautiful on account of the unclouded shining of her character. Living for others is the principle which gives true nobility to the individual. The world is to-day yearning for multiplied Ruths. A woman may be the thought for others though she moves in the highest social sphere. Anywhere the multitude will make room for a Ruth. She is safe from insult, for even the common and lowly are ready to kiss her shadow as she passes by. But the arrogant and selfish Cleopatras and flashhipses of society—they who make millinery, and dress goods, and germans, the sole object of life, all the while deaf to the cries of aching hearts, they are a burden to the great weary world. Read the protest in the constantly decreasing number of marriages in the middle and upper classes of society! Read the demand for a newer and nobler womanhood in the universal love and respect given to any modern Ruth who goes singing of newer hopes and aspirations to the disconsolate.

Selfishness in a man is a low, mean trait, but in a woman of whom so much nobility is expected, it is lamentable. When any woman comes to regard herself as the centre of all attention, and the object of all care, then her sympathies for others quickly shrivel with heart coldness; and in the home where she lives, there is frequent bitterness. In many homes fond parents are perpetuating the very methods of education which have developed the stupendous failure of modern civilization on social lines. They slave themselves that their daughter may be a lady; she is taught to consider any occupation beneath the dignity of a lady. Consequently, there goes out into the world a woman who measures everything by the possible effect it may have upon her personal comfort. Do you wonder that under such circumstances the daughter becomes a selfish wife and cold hearted mother—a woman who leaves the care of her children to servants; who will not pay the cost of making home bright and attractive—consequently, her husband goes to the club, she goes to the theatre, and the boys go to the bad. Like Naomi's Ruth, live for others. Have a song for your loved ones. Uproot selfishness and cultivate gentleness and your very flesh and blood may become angelic."

Will she Sue the Company.

It is said that a suit is about to be brought against the North Plainfield Electric Light Company by the widow of John Ferguson, the lineman, who received fatal injuries by falling from a pole, on Somerset street, recently.

She says that as the superintendent failed to notify the engineer that her husband was repairing a break the company is directly responsible for his death.

Dr. Probasco, who examined Ferguson's body for signs of electricity, says that there were no marks that would indicate that he had come in contact with a live wire.

An accident insurance company of New York, which is pecuniarily interested in the matter, is endeavoring to find a record of Mrs. Ferguson's marriage, but thus far has been unable to do so.

His Subject "Punishment."

Rector J. B. Jennings, of Grace Protestant Episcopal church, Westfield, who appealed to the Supreme Court of the State for assistance in making a fight against his parishioners, of the entire vestry, preached twice yesterday.

At the morning service his topic was "Punishment," and he spoke at length on sin, guilt and the certainty of punishment for evil doing.

STABBED THREE TIMES.

JAMES DONAVAN'S MURDEROUS ASSAULT ON A DRUNKEN MAN.

When Sentenced this Morning he Threatened to Kill the Man when he Gets Out of Jail—A Stare Charge Made Against Him.

At about half-past ten o'clock Saturday night West Front street was the scene of a stabbing affray, which might have ended in murder, if Policeman Frederickson had not made his appearance at the right time.

A drunken man was walking along the street. He had a bottle of whisky in his overcoat pocket, the upper part of which was plainly visible.

A party of boys saw the protruding portion of the bottle, and they immediately determined to possess it. They followed the man and endeavored to snatch the bottle from his pocket. Their attempts proved futile. Although drunk the man was able to keep the boys from taking the whiskey. In keeping them off he struck one of their number, named James Donavan in the face. This so angered Donavan that he drew a knife and stabbed the man three times. The first time in the shoulder, the second in the arm and the third in the face, directly under the eye. A half-inch higher up would have gouged his eye out. As it was he received a cut which will mark him for life.

The cries of "Police! Police!" quickly brought Policeman Frederickson to the scene and young Donavan ran down the street. The officer gave chase and finally succeeded in catching him. He was placed in the lockup and the subject of the stab wounds was taken to a doctor and his injuries attended to.

When arraigned before Judge Coddington this morning, Donavan plead guilty and was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail.

As he was being taken to his cell he said he would finish his job when he got out, and instead of inflicting flesh wounds he would kill him.

A State charge was afterwards sworn to against Donavan, and he will probably be indicted as he deserves.

"A VIOLATION OF PUBLIC DECENCY."

Pastor Schenck Denounces the Proposed Harris Mass Meeting.

The Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached a sermon last evening on "The Problem of Murder." In his discourse he denounced the mass-meeting which is to be held in Cooper Union, New York, for the purpose of awakening public sympathy in behalf of Carlyle Harris.

"Carlyle Harris, a former resident of this city," said Dr. Schenck, "is now under sentence of death for a cruel and deliberate murder. The proposed meeting would be a violation of public decency and an attempt to pry over again by an ignorant jury what an intelligent jury had already decided. Sympathy has nothing to do with the case. The evidence was clearly against him and he should be punished for his crime."

PERSONAL.

Mr. Robert B. Dunham of East Sixth street is ill with the grip.

Mr. George Sauns of this city is ill at his parent's home, in Trenton, with diphtheria.

The funeral of Mrs. Charles Francisco took place this afternoon from her late residence, on West Second street, at one o'clock.

Mr. Richard Garretteon of New York, formerly of this city, conducted the services at the W. C. T. U. rooms, on Broadway, yesterday afternoon.

Jane Maynard, aged 76 years, died Saturday. The funeral services will be held at the residence of Joel R. Walley, 22 Elm place, to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Rudolph Hering, M. Am. Soc. C. E., formerly of this city, delivered a lecture March 16 before the students of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y., on the subject, "Designing Sewerage Systems."

Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Gibbon, nee Fawcett, returned from their honeymoon last Friday, and are staying at the home of the bride's mother on Grove street. They will sail for Ireland, their future home, Wednesday.

The Ancient Order of Hiberians of this city has now 60 members, and is steadily on the increase. John F. Sheban is president, E. Ryan vice-president, P. Casey treasurer, and M. J. Nugent secretary of the Plainfield Branch.

Mr. David Dunham, a cousin of Mr. Robert B. Dunham of East Sixth street, died at his home in Somerset county last Thursday afternoon, at the age of 89. During the early part of this month he was stricken with paralysis, from which he never rallied. Mr. Dunham was the last of a long generation who lived on the Dunham homestead at Larger Cross Roads, in Bedminster township. He was born September 25, 1804, and has always lived in one place. The Dunham homestead is one of the possessions of the family for nearly two hundred years, and is a well known landmark in the vicinity where it is located.

An Important Decision.

Vice Chancellor Pitney has rendered a decision of importance to a number of persons in this vicinity. The suit hinged on the question as to whether a mortgage held by an Insurance company or builders' liens should have precedence. An insurance company sold several lots for $250 each. They also loaned the buyer $500 at the time to build houses on the lots. As soon as a house was completed the owner would procure $750 more and take a mortgage for $1,500. The mechanics and the persons who furnished the material for the houses not being paid, they filed liens against the building, and the result was the suit in question. The decision handed down by the mechanics' liens took precedence over the mortgage, with the exception of the $250, the value of the lot.

Quoted from the Rev. Dr. Lewis.

Concerning his recent sermon on gambling the Rev. Mr. Cadwell says:

"My whole sermon was an attack against 'gambling and the race track question,' and the only reference what ever I made to card playing was the playing of cards for money, and even then in a quotation from a recent sermon by my old friend, Rev. Dr. Lewis of Plainfield, as follows. 'But most important, in circles represented here to-day, are the preparation which is made for gambling and the development of gamblers, by card playing for money in the home or on the train, and other games of chance which obtain in social circles; and sometimes be it said with shame and sorrow at church fairs and charity enterprises."

Hackman Flynn in Trouble.

A warrant was issued this afternoon by Justice Nash for the arrest of Hackman Flynn, who, is charged with taking "Smokestack Jack" to Low's Hotel, Scotch Plains, Saturday night, and after getting him drunk, robbing him of $40. Proprietor Low caught Flynn in the act. He was knocked down with the butt of the hackman's whip. Flynn was in Plainfield yesterday, but now that he is wanted, cannot be found.

A Rival of the "One Horse Shay."

A vehicle, which for antiquity might be classed as a rival to the "one horse shay," collapsed on Front street this noon. The occupants, two men, were thrown out, but not injured, owing, no doubt to the gentleness of their steed, which stopped, as soon as the accident happened, as if glad to get a rest.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Still Objecting.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The communication published by you on Saturday in reference to the North Plainfield borough election hit the nail on the head. If with a professed united party and clean candidates—and not a Republican could object to the candidates a number of Republican voters could secretly circulate pasted tickets in order to elect two Democrats to office and find 25 or more reputable men to vote them, and the reason for it is to be kept unknown, we might as well abandon party organization. We shall never run less objectionable men in our borough, and if these could not win, who can?

What is even worse than what your correspondent stated, is, that the strike extended also to the township ticket and only failed of effect by a few votes. It did defeat the overseer of the poor; it almost defeated the town clerk (than whom no better official was ever in office in North Plainfield) and it is safe to say that so far as the borough vote went it did defeat the township Republican ticket.

I will add my mite to a fund to dig out and to smoke out the fellows who concocted this scheme to disrupt the party and to play into the hands of the Democratic leaders.

A NORTH PLAINFIELDER.

Plainfielders Visit the Pope Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Frank L. C. Martin, the genial proprietor of the Wheelmen's Headquarters on Park avenue, and agent for the renowned Columbia bicycles, gave two of his employees a treat last week that they say they will never forget. It was a trip to Hartford, Conn., and a visit through the large works of the Pope Manufacturing Company, where the famous Columbia is built. The following is a description of the trip by one of the party:

"Taking the 6.50 train from Plainfield and the nine o'clock train from the Grand Central depot we reached Hartford at one p. m., then taking a carriage we drove to the capitol building, passing under the big arch, the pride of Hartford. Next we went to the Pope Manufacturing Company's works, where we were kindly received by the vice-president of the company who deputised Mr. Seeley to show us over the plant, which covers 25 acres of ground, after which we visited the rubber factory, a mile from the main building, where the rubber from the raw state is manipulated until it comes out solid, cushion or pneumatic tires. One could spend a month there and be filled with interest all the time. Returning we caught the 12.19 train for Plainfield, very tired but knowing more about how each part of a bicycle is made and put together than we could learn in a life time without making such a visit."

Lawyer Van Ness's Bail Forfeited.

After six adjournments at the request of counsel for Public Prosecutor Van Ness, who is charged with forgery, was taken up in the Tombs Police Court, New York, Saturday. Van Ness did not appear and his bail bond of $2,000 was declared forfeited. Mrs. Mary Jones of 208 Ninth avenue, who went on the bond, was notified, and a bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Van Ness. He lives in this city, and his extradition will be asked for.

The charge against Van Ness grew out of a dispute between Dykeman and James Waldron, brothers, over an estate valued at about $70,000, left them by an aunt. James sued his brother for $1,000, which he claimed was due him. Van Ness was the lawyer for James.

Van Ness, it is charged, inserted the words "or John B. Van Ness, attorney," in making out the $1,000 note payable to James Waldron, and collected the money. Since then the brothers have become reconciled, and both joined in prosecuting the lawyer.

Amusements.

John T. Kelly, the popular Irish comedian, comes to Music Hall, to-night when he will appear in a new comedy, written by Charles T. Vincent and Mr. Kelly, entitled "McFee of Dublin." It is said of Mr. Kelly that he is always funny. "Years ago," the manager says, "when he was making a name as an Irish comedian by means of a vaudeville monologue, he was funny; and to day, in a play built for a piece called 'All at Sea,' Eccentricity," he continues to be funny. His brogue is broad and delightful, and he is such a good comedian that he could make almost anything go. His new comedy gives him better opportunities than anything in which he has ever been seen in here. It tells how Roger O'Mara impersonates Lord Dublin, and gets into any amount of trouble in consequence."

May Possibly be Extended to Plainfield.

The sale of the Raritan River Railroad was confirmed yesterday by a director of the Pennsylvania company in New Jersey Central was also after the prize, but negotiations fell through. Each road has for years been busily engaged in the other's territory. The Pennsylvania will soon build an extension of the Raritan road to Sound Brook, and does possibly on to Plainfield.

The fight is on between the two roads and the prospects are good for several surprising moves on the part of either. The price paid was $1,000,000. Before its new property in Middlesex county is ridiculously high, but the Pennsylvania did it as much as to block the designs of the Central as to acquire the property for its own use.

State News.

The Union Gun Club of Springfield, N. J., held its first shoot of the season to-day, beginning at 11 a. m. In the main event of the day, a handicap at 25 shots at thirty keystone targets, one-half known and the other from unknown angles. There was also a series of ten and fifteen target sweeps.

The post office at Yardville, near Trenton, was robbed early yesterday, and $60 and a large number of postage stamps were stolen. The grist mill at Yardville was also broken into and some money taken.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Harris to Die About May 8.

NEW YORK, March 20, (Special.)—Recorder Smyth fixed the execution of Carlyle Harris in the electric chair at Sing Sing Prison the week beginning Monday, May 8. Before re-sentencing Harris Chief Clerk Carroll asked the statutory question: "Carlyle W. Harris, what have you now to say why the sentence of the court be not pronounced against you."

Harris, placing his hands on the mahogany railing before him, addressed the court. He spoke in a tone inaudible to those who sat behind him. He spoke slowly and earnestly, but in a tone so low, indeed, that the Recorder and Judge Martine, who had taken a place beside him on the Bench, found it an effort to hear his words.

In the course of his preliminary remarks he asked that he be given a few days in which to settle up his earthly affairs, as he realized that death had fixed its relentless grasp upon him. He said he would like time to dictate the story of his life to a biographer to be compiled for sale for the benefit of his stricken and impoverished mother.

The rest of his speech was but a repeat of the story so familiar. Several times his remarks were against the personal character of witnesses. He seemed relieved that the matter was settled.

Two of the Narooic's Boats Found.

BRIXEN, March 20, (Special.)—The British steamer Cormorant, Capt. Wilson, from Fernandina Feb. 10, arrived at this port to-day.

She reports that at two o'clock on the morning of March 4, when in latitude 42 north, longitude 46 west, she passed a lifeboat, painted white, bearing the name Naronic. The boat was floating keel upward.

At 9 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day another lifeboat from the Naronic was passed.

This boat gave evidence of having encountered heavy weather.

The men aboard of the lifeboat had been lashed together and attached to the painter and then thrown overboard as a sea anchor to keep the boat's head up to the wind and sea.

Judging from appearances neither of the boats has been long adrift. The position of the drifting boats was about south west of Sable Island, on the banks of Newfoundland.

There is a chance that the occupants of the boats were picked up by a passing vessel.

A dispatch from Liverpool says that the Naronic vessel found had been recently occupied.

That the Naronic is now at the bottom of the sea cannot be disputed.

283 Siberian Convicts Die While Going Into Exile.

LONDON, March 20 (Special).—St. Petersburg dispatches give details of a terrible loss of life among a large band of convicts who were marching to exile in Siberia. There were 374 persons, men, women and children in the party, many of them being people of education and refinement who had been sentenced for political offenses.

They were caught in a terrible snow storm six hours after leaving Tomsk, Western Siberia, and being chained together. The weaker ones succumbed from exhaustion and cold, and were abandoned by the Cossack guards, who drove the survivors on to shelter.

283 convicts died. Sixty-two of them were political prisoners.

Eight Miners Killed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Work of Congress.

The short session of the Fifty-second congress signalized itself quite as much by the important laws it did not pass as by those which it did enact. It did nothing for or against silver, failed after a desperate fight to pass the antioption bill and left the Nicaragua canal out in the cold for the third time.

Of the acts that became laws the principal are the following: The automatic car coupler bill, the Chinese exclusion and registry act, the act restricting immigration and the national quarantine bill. One of the most popular of the laws passed by the congress that has just expired was that permitting the ocean steamers New York and Paris to fly the United States flag. The congress at its first session enacted a much needed law pensioning army nurses. If this law had been in existence before the death of Walt Whitman, the old poet would have been that much better off in his last days.

The law concerning national quarantine simply enlarges the authority of the marine hospital service so that it will have power to take all needed precautions against an invasion of cholera next summer. Its authority is made paramount to that of the various state quarantine commissions.

Freight trains, under the new law pertaining to them, must use the automatic car coupler.

The last important law passed was that restricting immigration. Under this act it will be almost as hard for a steerage passenger to get over to America, as to get into heaven. In view of the threatened visitation of cholera, however, and of the actual and present evils of unrestricted immigration, the new law is none too severe. Europe has only herself to thank for it. If she had not made it a practice for the last half century of pouring upon us crime, pauperism, illiteracy and disease, merely to get rid of it herself, then this law would never have been passed.

Under the new immigration act the masters and surgeons of vessels at the port of departure shall make affidavit that all the immigrants they bring to us are eligible as good citizens. In addition to this the immigrants are subjected to a second rigid inspection at the port of entry by United States officials, and if they do not pass muster here may be sent back by the time the steamer is ready to come to us have been put through the following examination at the port of departure the undesirable immigrants will be fairly well weeded out:

The emigrant must state the full name, full age and sex, whether married or single, the calling or occupation, whether able to read or write, the nationality, the last residence, the request for landing in the United States, the final destination, if any, beyond the import of landing; whether having a ticket through to such final destination, whether the emigrant has paid his own passage or whether it has been paid by other persons or by any corporation, society, municipality or government; whether in possession of money, and if so whether upward of $30, and how much if $30 or less; whether going to join a relative, and if so what relative, and his name and address; whether ever before in the United States, and if so when and where.

It must also be stated whether ever in prison or almshouse or supported by charity; whether a polygamist, whether under contract (express or implied) to perform labor in the United States, and what is the emigrant's condition of health, mentally and physically, and whether deformed or crippled, and if so from what cause.

A bill is before a state legislature prohibiting the imprisonment of children under 16 years of age with adults. The imprisonment of children under 16 years old at all ought to be prohibited. It is monstrous, almost fit to rank in barbarity along with the system which has allowed boys of 16 years to be executed according to the law which hangs murderers. The children have in some cases gone to a gallows as to a picnic, without the faintest realization of what death meant. One poor, half witted little negro lad asked artlessly if hanging hurt much. The moral sentiment is the latest and noblest to be developed. Children under 16 cannot be controlled by it, for except in the rarest of cases it is yet latent in them. Where they commit crimes there is sometimes even a lack of mental development, sometimes an unfortunate bent toward cruelty and monstrosity which must be eradicated by years of the best and most careful education. When children under 16 manifest these abnormal and criminal tendencies, they should be sent to a reformatory, not to a prison. There, away from hardened criminals, away from evil influences, with only restraint enough to keep them from doing any more injury, they can be made nearly always into useful citizens. That is what will be done with them in 1993.

The silver and tariff questions were the most important subjects before the short session of the Fifty-second congress, and while it hanged away at these two constantly nothing at all was done with silver and nothing of importance with the tariff. What the house passed the senate rejected, and vice versa on both topics, and it was a game of seesaw between the two houses from December to March 4.

If you are an assconon young man and want to get a free trip to Europe to study art or see the country, you can get it almost any day by shipping on board of one of the cattle steamers at any of the Atlantic ports and working your passage over by helping to feed and take care of the animals. It will probably be pleasanter to wait till summer before making the trip, however.

RATHER EMBARRASSING

The President Asked to Retain Republicans.

GRANT AND LINCOLN AMONG THEM.

Mr. Cleveland Modifies His Famous Rule. Protest of Foreign Missionaries—Earnest Work Promised In the Senate—Mr. Morton Reducing His Force.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Connected with the great scramble for office there is nothing quite so embarrassing to the administration as the demands made by prominent Democrats for the retention of Republican officeholders. Demands of this character are being made for the big places as well as the little ones. It is astonishing how many Republican office holders are backed by Democrats.

Two notable instances of this character are the cases of Minister Lincoln and Fred Grant. The secretary of state has been overwhelmed with requests from prominent Democrats for the retention of these two gentlemen. The Illinois Democrats are said to be particularly urgent in their demands for the retention of Fred Grant as minister to Austria. The requests are principally on sentimental grounds, most of the letters calling attention to the valuable services rendered the country by the parents of the present incumbents.

Judge Gresham's Illinois friends have urged so strongly in favor of Mr. Grant's retention that there is really a very strong probability that he will be continued in office, if not for another term, for at least a year or so.

The President Modifies a Rule.

The president made his fifty-sixth birthday the occasion for changing somewhat his rule barring former officeholders from reappointment. He told Congressman Springer, in reply to a question, that where a whole community is anxious for an official's reappointment he would make an exception in his favor. Mr. Cleveland also said former appointees might file applications for positions other than those previously held by them and get due consideration.

This latest declaration has carried considerable consolation to many ex-office seekers who presumed there was no chance whatever for them because they had held office before. Many of them have left the city, and it is a strong probability that this new a will bring a great many of them back on field.

The Senate to Work In Earnest.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—There is some reason to expect that the senate will enter in earnest this week upon the business for which it was called together. So far not a single nomination has been acted upon, except the cabinet appointments. Excluding half a dozen army and navy promotions, there are now 16 presidential nominations which have not been passed upon even in committee, and therefore it is unlikely that today's session will result in any confirmations. In connection with the statement that the Democrats will attempt to reorganize the senate it is stated that the Republicans have decided to oppose it with all solid front.

The rumor that President Cleveland is not satisfied with the makeup of the senate committees is denied by the statement that the president has not had time to see a list of the new committees.

Turkish Officials Interfere.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Several representatives of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions had interviews with Mr. Josiah Quincy, the acting first assistant secretary of state. They told Mr. Quincy that Turkish officials interfered with the correspondence of the American missionaries in that country; that the missionaries were subject to much ill treatment by the natives who were not restrained by the authorities, and that messages from United States Minister Thompson to the department in Washington had never reached their destination, from which he (Thompson) inferred that his mail was tampered with. Their statements were so positive that an investigation of the records of the department was ordered to determine whether or not the correspondence on file substantiated the assertions.

Miss Barton Accepts the Gift.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Miss Clara Barton, president of the American National Red Cross, has gracefully accepted the magnificent gift of between 700 and 800 acres of land on the border of the Black Grass region, in the state of Indiana, tendered the association last month by Dr. Joseph Gardner of Bedford, Ind.

Many Want Fat Berths.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—There is an unprecedented rush of applicants for the various consulships, especially those which are reported to be desirable from a financial point of view. The best of these are in Great Britain, where the consuls are enabled to retain the greater part of the fees received on that account.

Electricity Unprofitable on Farms.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—United States consuls, directed by the state department to prepare reports on the use of electricity as a power in the propulsion of farm machinery, state that only a few places have experimented with these directions been made, and at these unprofitably.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Attend Church.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The President and Mrs. Cleveland attended church for the first time since their return to Washington. They occupied the same pew in the Old First Presbyterian church. The church was filled to overflowing.

Forty-seven Heads Come Off.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—As the result of certain modifications and changes in the work of the bureau of animal industry, Secretary of Agriculture Morton has made a reduction of 47 on the roll of the bureau.

Predicting a Nomination.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—It is expected that the nomination of Charles S. Hamlin of Massachusetts for assistant secretary of the treasury will be sent to the senate today.

Long Struggle With the Elements.

BALTIMORE, March 20.—After a struggle with the elements for 45 days the schooner Calvin F. Baker, Captain Edson Chase, with a cargo of 998 tons of ice, has arrived. The vessel had been given up for lost.

Killed by His Horse.

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., March 20.—William Slade, a farmer living at Bennet's Corners, in attempting to hold his horse from running, was hurled against a post and killed.

TREMONT TEMPLE BURNED.

The Third Disaster by Fire in This Famous Boston Structure.

BOSTON, March 20.—This city was visited by a third great fire, which at one time threatened far worse disaster than resulted. No lives were lost, however, as was the case in both the other fires. The total property loss will approximate $400,000, the most of which will have to be borne by the insurance companies.

This loss is mainly that on historic Tremont Temple, which is practically in ruins. There was great danger at one time to that well known hostelry, the Parker House, but this was fortunately averted. The fire was discovered by a gas engineer at the Parker House and had already gained great headway, for when the fire apparatus arrived the whole rear of the building was in flames. An alarm was rung in from the hotel, and a second and third alarm soon followed. Several streams were soon playing upon the building, and after two hours of hard fighting the fire was under control.

The Tremont Temple building had many occupants, and most of these will be heavy losers. In the building were the offices of The Watchman, the chief organ of the Baptist denomination; the American Baptist Home Missionary society and other offices of that denomination. It is leased by the Evangelical Baptist Missionary society and assessed at $105,000. The Parker House is assessed at $285,400.

An accurate estimate of the losses cannot be made at present. That on Tremont Temple is thought to be $200,000 and on the Parker House about $85,000.

On the south side of Tremont Temple is the dry goods store of W. S. Butler & Co. He estimates his loss at less than $15,000, which is by fire and water.

The Parker House in the rear was but slightly damaged. Tremont Temple has been one of the most conspicuous public buildings in Boston of the present generation, and since 1843 has been celebrated all over the country as the largest Baptist church perhaps in the country. It was erected in 1852, rebuilt the next year at a cost of $125,000, destroyed again in 1879 and rebuilt in 1880 at a cost of more than $200,000. The seating capacity of its auditorium was 2,000.

Burning of a Thread Factory.

NORTH EASTON, Mass., March 20.—E. J. W. Morse & Co.'s thread factory at South Easton was burned. The loss on building and machinery is estimated from $175,000 to $200,000. It was the largest fire in the history of the town, and will throw about 75 hands out of employment.

Twenty-One People Perish In Fire.

MADRID, March 20.—A fire broke out in a pastry cook's shop in St. Sebastian. A keg of gunpowder exploded and the fire spread to the adjoining houses, which were densely tenanted. Twenty-one persons are known to have perished.

Labor Men Excited.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The decision of the judge at Detroit restraining employers from striking caused much excitement in labor circles throughout the country. It is the general opinion that the decision is the most important given for years by labor matters. Labor men as a whole denounced it, while lawyers were disposed to be reserved in most cases, some, however, declaring that the decision would not be upheld by the higher courts. It would seem that the life and death of labor organizations depended on the outcome.

An Absconder on His Way Home.

NEW YORK, March 20.—A. A. Cadwallader, the absconding cashier of the superior National bank of West Superior, Wis., is a passenger on the Brazil mail steamship Seguranca, due here this week from Rio Janeiro. When he arrives he will be turned over to Wisconsin authorities.

Another Strike on the Big Four.

SPRINGFIELD, O., March 20.—The entire force of the Pan yard at Urbana went out on another strike, and the yard was again tied up. The switchmen demand the discharge of Yardmaster Carney, pay for overtime and reinstatement of all the strikers, 34 in number.

CHATTANOOGA, March 20.—J. E. Stronz of Shelby county, Ala., is the winner of a newspaper's prize for the person guessing nearest to the number of votes cast for President Cleveland. His guess was for 136,610, the number of votes actually cast being 12,136,562.

Both Priests Celebrated Mass.

SWEDESBORO, N. J., March 20.—The warring factions of St. Joseph's Catholic church remained true to chosen priests, and rebellious Father Treacy and Father Leahy each celebrated mass to about the same number of persons.

WORLD'S FAIR EXHIBITS

Two Sculptors at Work on the Ideal Human Form.

MISS ADA REHAN DONE IN SILVER.

Arrival at Baltimore of Krupp's Cannon, the Largest Piece of Ordnance Ever Made In the World—A Book So Valuable That Soldiers Will Guard It Carefully.

BOSTON, March 20.—Sculptors Harry Elkson and Miss Theo Ruggles are modeling two figures in clay of the typical American male and female forms of the present day. The figures are the result of measurements carefully taken by the most approved anthropological methods of no less than 10,000 persons, nearly all of them between 18 and 25 years of age, and the majority of them college students. Five thousand Harvard undergraduates were measured for the male statue. Several measurements of students of other colleges and a few of professional athletes have been used.

There are a little less than 5,000 measurements of females, most of them from Harvard annex, Vassar, Wellesley and other institutions of learning for women. Sixty-five different measurements had to be taken of every individual. The measurements include the girth of head, neck, trunk, arms and legs, each in various places. It is possible from the measurements thus taken to form an exactly accurate statue of the person measured, perfect in every detail of muscle and integument. The 65 measurements of the 10,000 people are classified and the mean obtained.

Hard to Find a Perfect Model.

The mean, instead of being the average, is the instance that is found most frequently. For instance, if most of the 5,000 men are just 68 inches tall, 68 inches is the mean. So, too, with the female statue, only an individual filled the measurements of the type in more than one or two particulars, and a great multitude have not a single one of the measurements of the typical figure.

One difficulty that has greatly bothered the artists has been the impossibility of finding a model who could come anywhere near the proportions of the figure ordered. One man would be possessed of exactly the height of the type, and therefore would be the characteristic American man in that particular. Another might have the collar bone of the typical American and be a violent departure from the type in all other respects.

The faces of the figures are taken from composite photographs. Some 200 faces of young men will be composited in the face of the male figure, and about as many in that of the female. The female face is that of a co-composite, representing a number of separate composites from the different female colleges already enumerated. The face of the male figure, which is beardless, is a composite of the faces of those preferred by composites from Amherst, Bowdoin and other colleges. The figures are for the World's fair. They will be completed early next month.

Miss Rehan's Silver Statue.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Fifteen hundred-tons of Ada Rehan was cast successfully. Sixteen hundred pounds of sterling silver were melted in a crucible, and the molten mass was poured into a mold for Montana's silver statue of Justice. After an hour the mold was removed and the statue revealed. It was pronounced a beauty. The statue is 7 feet 10 inches tall. Not only is the statue an exact reproduction of the figure of Miss Rehan, but the features are there, though the expression has been made rather more severe than Miss Rehan usually has. This was done to carry out the idea of the sternness of justice.

The statue is 7 feet 10 inches tall and will stand upon a silver globe 2 feet in diameter. The scale to be held in one hand and the sword which will be grasped in the other will be cast separately, but every part of the statue will be of sterling silver. The metal comes from Montana, every ounce having been extracted from the native ore in various smelting works of the state.

One of the Queer Exhibits.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Among the queer things to be displayed at the World's fair, one of the most conspicuous will be the "Platobogen." The "Platobogen" is a book of no more a character that it will be 9 ft here in a man-of-war and be guarded by soldiers day and night while it remains in Chicago. It belongs to the Royal library of Copenhagen. It is in two volumes, neatly and artistically written on parchment of extreme delicacy.

The work was begun in 1570 and finished in 1590 by two Christian monks. It contains the histories and legends of the kings of Norway. In the chapter which deals with the Icelandic story of Erik the Red and his son, Lief the Happy, it is stated that these two great skippers discovered this continent in 1000.

Krupp's Mammoth Gun Arrives.

BALTIMORE, March 20.—After a tempestuous voyage across the north Atlantic from Hamburg, with the second consignment of the Krupp exhibit for the World's fair, the British steamship Longueil arrived. The cargo comprises exclusively war material. The chief article is the big 124-ton cannon built expressly for the exhibit. The piece is of course the largest ever made in the world. The caliber of the gun is 19½ inches. The projectiles fired from it weigh 2,000 pounds, and are 4 feet long. About 900 pounds of powder are used at a single shot, and the projectile is hurled with such terrific force that it will go through a plate of steel 20 inches thick at a distance of a mile.

Relics Very Old Lace.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—An interesting lace exhibit will be displayed at the fair, in connection with the exhibits of the Smithsonian institution. It will embrace nearly all the laces of importance made, the collection are pieces of trimming that antedate the lace making period. They are samples of knotted net.

Heirs Sue For $1,000,000.

PITTSBURG, March 20.—Papers have been filed in this city in a suit involving the title to $1,000,000 worth of property against the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad company and the Pennsylvania company. The suit is brought by the heirs of John Barbee.

Irishmen Can Hold Their Own.

LONDON, March 20.—John Dillon, Nationalist, said in a speech that if in the trouble with Ulster it came to firing ditches, the home rule Irishmen could hold their own with anybody. He asserted the idea of the persecution of Protestants by Catholics in Ireland.

JACOB H. VANDERBILT DEAD.

He Was a Noted Steamboat Captain In Waters About New York.

NEW BRIGHTON, S. I., March 20.—Captain Jacob Hand Vanderbilt, brother of the late Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, died at his home on Grypon's hill, Staten Island. Death resulted from congestion of the lungs. Captain Vanderbilt was born on Staten Island, Sept. 2, 1807. When only 18 years of age he commanded a steamboat. For nearly 40 years he commanded steamboats plying between New York ports on the Hudson, on Long Island sound and in New Jersey. Later he became president of the East Shore railroad. He married Euphemia Maria Bauman, a descendant of General Ira Putnam. Three children survive him: Ellen, Mrs. Horace D. Cæsar; Clara, the wife of James McGaines; and Jacob H. Vanderbilt, Jr., who is married and lived with his father.

THE DEAD ENGLISH SPORT.

An Incident In His Varied Career With Mrs. Langtry.

NEW ORLEANS, March 20.—Squire Abingdon, the rich Englishman who came here with Charley Mitchell and Jim Hall two weeks ago, and who was one of the most famous sports in Great Britain, died at the St. Charles hotel in the morning of pneumonia.

An incident of his career was his experience with Mrs. Langtry, the actress whose theatrical expenses the squire bore. During a disagreement with Mrs. Langtry the squire used his fist in a way to temporarily spoil her beauty. By way of reparation he gave her a large sum of money and permission to select from his paddock any one of the yearling thoroughbreds which attracted her attention.

A friend of Mrs. Langtry, who knew a race horse when he saw one, suggested that she select the colt Milford. She did so, much to the squire's chagrin. He, however, kept his promise, and Milford has won many a pretty stake for Mrs. Langtry, the prizes, in value, amounting to about $50,000.

Both Mitchell and Corbett say Abingdon's death will not interfere with their fight. There is talk now that the battle may take place in London.

STATE PRISON HORRORS

Grave Charges Against Connecticut's Warden.

PRISONERS DRIVEN TO MADNESS.

Accusations Made by the New York World Against Warden Chamberlain—The Sick Dragged to Solitary Confinement and Death While the Hospital Is Empty.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The World prints several columns under the head "The Black Hole of Connecticut," in which it says the state prison of Connecticut is a dungeon of horrors. The World goes on to say:

"For eight years Samuel E. Chamberlain has been warden of this prison. During that time many men have been hurried into an untimely grave, many more have been driven mad. Indeed, the road from the state prison at Wethersfield to the state asylum at Middletown has been worn bare by a steady procession of men.

"The warden admits that 10 men out of less than 300 go mad yearly. Others double his figures. Even the warden's estimate sends a chill of terror to the heart.

"The punishment for offenses in this prison is confinement in a dungeon, absolutely dark and below the surface of the ground, whose walls reek with moisture. To these dungeons men have been sent continually who were sick or who were physically unable to work. Men have been found in them raving mad. Men more fortunate have been taken from them dead. One man, a paralytic, rotted there.

Convicts Beaten With Loaded Canes.

"Convicts in this prison have been beaten with loaded canes, and have been starved. One man who was dying was dragged from his cell to a dungeon at midnight by the warden. Six hours afterward he was found dead there.

"Incredible as it may sound, the dungeons are for the sick. Warden Chamberlain believes that convicts never become really sick. They say they are sick, but they say this to escape work. Often these same sick men die, but that, of course, is due to pure obstinacy. When a convict complains of sickness the proper place for him is a dungeon. This is to teach him what the warden calls 'a lesson.' He is simply, in the warden's phrase, 'a dead beat,' and the place for 'dead beats' is a place of punishment.

"When Warden Chamberlain took charge of the prison he found Dr. A. S. Warner the physician. Dr. Warner is a kindly, gentle old man, beloved by everybody. He lived all his life in the little town of Wethersfield, just outside the prison, and was a universal favorite. He was also a surgeon of his time. He brought the sick delicacies and fruit from his own table.

Dr. Warner No Longer Needed.

"He insisted that they should be sent to the hospital and properly cared for. Dr. Warner was not the man for Warden Chamberlain. The old doctor was informed one day that he was no longer needed. He was too considerate of the prisoners, he was told.

"The warden appointed in his place one Edward G. Fox. This man brings no basketfuls of fruit to the sick. More important still, he is not given to sending men to the hospital."

The World prints a number of instances of terrible cruelty, among them the case of Wales M. Doolittle, a life prisoner, of whom it says: "This man's mind began to weaken after he had been in prison a few years, but he was regarded as harmless. The cause of his insanity is not clearly established, but in his case, as in many others, the horrors of the dungeon were probably responsible.

"Doolittle was sitting in his cell, when a French Canadian watchman, who happened to be passing, thought it would be amusing to annoy the helpless convict.

"At the back of each cell is a bell shaped iron cylinder which terminates in a small tube. This tube opens on the corridor so that a guard passing can look in at the prisoner without being seen himself. Tredeau hastened around to this tube and began taunting Doolittle and calling him vile names.

Horrible Cruelty Alleged.

"The half man creature was roused to a frenzy, and in his rage he hammered and battered at the door and shouted out his curses at his unseen foe.

"When Chamberlain was at once summoned and with Deputy Warden Baisden, Hallkeeper Martin and Watchmen Holmes and Hughes descended upon him. The watchman came from the passage behind the cell and joined them. The warden opened the cell door and ordered Doolittle to come out. He sullenly refused.

"Then the warden rushed at him with his loaded cane and struck him savagely across the head. Tredeau and Baisden joined their chief, and in a moment Doolittle was on the floor howling for mercy. The sickening thunk, thunk of the heavy sticks over his head punctuating his cries. He was dragged off to the dungeon, where he remained for a week without the slightest medical attendance. When taken from the dungeon he was hopelessly insane. He is now at the Middletown asylum."

In the article tales of inhumanity are told that are scarcely credible, and the case of Doolittle diminishes but an inkling of the general tenor of the charges.

To Aid the Colored People.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The Freedom Manufacturing company, a concern organized by colored men to give employment to their race, has opened its offices here. Frederick Douglass is the president.

REPORTERS WERE PLENTIFUL.

Ex-President Harrison now More Newspaper Men Than Ducks.

PEORIA, Ills., March 20.—Ex-President Harrison was a brief visitor in this city. He was on his way to Indianapolis and has been down in the marshes below this city for a week killing ducks. Mr. Harrison said the weather was too cold for hunting, and his party had been driven in for shelter twice. It was too early in the spring for the ducks to be plentiful, and the representatives of Chicago newspapers scared away what few ducks went on the lake. The ex-president hardly dared to fire his gun, he said, for fear of hitting a Chicago reporter. Mr. Harrison was coming in on the Rock Island train from Kansas, and the same noised through the train that he was one of the passengers. One woman finally mustered up courage and approached him.

"I beg pardon, but are you President Harrison?"

"No, madam," he replied, "I am Benjamin Harrison of Indianapolis." The ex-president signed some letters that were handed to him. One of them was from a Chicago commission firm, inclosing prices for game and referring the general to numerous banks for its reliability.

Expired At the Same Moment.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A strange coincidence in the death of mother and son at exactly the same moment occurred in this city. The case is rendered still more peculiar by the touching circumstances. Mrs. Gardner, aged 91 years, and her son Theodore, aged 58, have devoted their lives to each other, the son refusing to marry on account of his devotion to her. For some time they had both been in delicate health, and a few days since the son was removed to a hospital. At 10:30 Mrs. Gardner died and another son went to the hospital to inform his brother of her death. He was informed that Theodore had died at exactly the same hour and minute.

Luxury of Modern Travel.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Miss Doolittle, a clerk, will leave Chicago in a palace car Wednesday night. She will go to Portland, Or., the City of Mexico, St. Louis, New York, Hartford and back to Chicago, and is not to get out of the car during the entire circuit of the United States and Mexico. Railroad men undertake to send the young woman as a practical demonstration of the convenience and luxury of modern travel.

Bands of fancy galloon, ribbons and folds of black satin will be used in rows in the same way as fur on spring gowns. Small bows are dotted on at intervals sometimes. Where the material permits, ruffles of the dress goods may be used. A new ruffle which reaches to the knees, like the old fashioned Spanish flounce, is cut in a circular fashion, somewhat after the manner of a bell skirt. This ruffle is quite full around the bottom and tapers at the top, giving the fashionable flare of the season. It is usually put on with a heading of two or three narrow ruffles standing upright, or with a band of fur.

A group of from three to five narrow ruffles overlapping each other is also used on the bottom of light goods, such as the black or cream gauze with gay satin stripes. Let it be acknowledged here that these full skirts are lovely. They are becoming and graceful to the

WOMAN AND HOME.

YOUNG WOMEN ARE ESPECIALLY FITTED FOR CERTAIN WORK.

Hints on Good Manners—The Real American Girl—Selfishness of Mourning—A Woman's Presence of Mind—The Fib About Age—The First Bean.

How often it is said, "Oh, she is a woman, and of course she can't expect to get as much as a man!" It seems to have been demonstrated that in the shorthand, and typewriting field the women do not get as much wages as the men. This, it is claimed, is because of the fact that the man can do additional duty from which the woman is debarred. We believe it is true that in the higher branches of the profession, where verbatim reporting is required, the compensation has not been based upon the sex of the worker. The pay of court stenographers is generally fixed by law, and where a woman is appointed to the position she receives the same pay as her masculine co-worker.

In a business office it has generally been considered that the young man can be called upon in ways in which it would not be possible to employ young women, and for this reason his wages have been made somewhat higher than hers. There are, however, many things to be said upon this point, in which it might be shown that there are compensations in the case of the young woman which more than offset her supposed disadvantages.

She is peculiarly fitted for the confidential character of the place. She has not the inducements to reveal the secrets of the office. She is not likely to be led into temptation after office hours. She is more reliable in the matter of sober habits. And last, but not least, she is likely to be more companionable as an office companion. This last qualification opens up a whole line of interesting considerations. Business men are often subjected to annoyance of a very harassing character, and the slightest degree of friction in the office relations will make much difference in the amount of wear and tear involved in the strain upon the nervous system.

The quiet, steady, alert and sympathetic helpfulness of a thoroughly honest, capable and respectable young woman goes a long way toward inducing that proper frame of mind, judgment and temper upon which hang business interests of vast magnitude and importance.

We could therefore recommend to business men the propriety of giving careful and conscientious consideration to the many advantages which they may secure by the judicious selection of a refined, intelligent and respectable young woman for the duties of stenographer in the office, and particularly the reasonableness of paying her at least as much wages as is paid to the young man in the same line of work.—Stenographer

Hints on Good Manners.

Many women, particularly the more youthful ones, commit through careless ness or thoughtlessness many breaches of good manners which need but a reminder to be speedily remedied. To begin with, the street tooth is the average American girl tempts her to eat candy in the street and at the theaters, though she may be quite aware that to do so is not good form. The same girl would scorn to eat peanuts and consumes those delicacies as "candy" munches away on caramels or butter scuss in public vehicles, public thoroughfares and public places of amusement.

Many young women, the best hearted in the world, will wound their parents' hearts by openly correcting or contradicting them, forgetting that their own superior knowledge does not show up to advantage when paraded at the expense of good manners. This habit on the part of the younger members of society is one that should be skipped in the bud at once. Suppose father or mother do mispronounce a word, make a misstatement or fall into an error of grammar, does it make the things any better by emphasizing their faults so openly? The first law of good manners is consideration and respect for those older and wiser than ourselves, therefore that, outside of any other promptings, should restrain the flippant correction of parents before strangers at least.

To discuss your clothes, your servants or your domestic affairs is to stamp yourself ill bred. General conversation is the only sort tolerated in the best circles. Do not talk and laugh at the theater or other place of amusement, annoying those about you who came to enjoy the performance and not your conversation. Do not stage people and their dress them so that there is no possibility of their mistaking the topic of your conversation.—Philadelphia Times.

The Real American Girl.

The truest, best and sweetest type of the American girl of today does not come from the home of wealth; she steps out from a home where exist comforts rather than luxuries. She belongs to the large American class—that class which has given us the best American wifehood; which has given helpmates to the foremost American men of our time; which teaches its daughters the true meaning of love; which teaches the manners of the drawing room, but the practical life of the kitchen as well; which teaches its girls the responsibilities of wifehood and the greatness of motherhood. These girls may not ride in their carriages, they may not wear the most expensive gowns, they may even help a little to enlarge the family income, but these self same girls today the great bulwark of American society not only of the present, but of the future. They represent the American home and what is best and truest in its every aspect, and they make the best wives for our American men.

I have no patience with the theories that would seek to place the average American girl in any other position than that which she occupies, ornaments and rightfully holds—the foremost place in our respect, our admiration and our love. She is not the society girl of the day, and she is better for it. She knows no superficial life; she knows only the life in a home where husband, wife and children are one in love, one in thoughts and one in every action. She believes no woman to be so great as her mother, no man so good as her father. She believes that there are good women and true men abroad in the world, and, thank God, her belief is right. And that man will ever be happier who takes such a girl for his wife.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Selfishness of "Mourning."

The fashion of gloomy apparel on the public, whom we do not know, and who do not know us, is a violation of the Golden Rule. Fashions in mourning stationery, in mourning headgear, in mourning livery —what a hollow sound they have! Does "mourning" help to keep alive the memory of the dead? Possibly to some, but who of the dead would care for remembrance thus perpetuated, associated with somber misery? And must it be written that "mourning becomes" some people, and that it has been worn beyond even the fashionable period for that reason? What sense of grief, or the sacredness of sorrow, or the solemnity of death is conveyed when a rosy cheeked person enveloped in crape comes into a street car laughing and chattering with a companion? Is it not travesty?

One cannot hope that the aged, accustomed to the usage, will abandon it at once. It is enough to be grieved to see display it, who would forbid them, who have lost so many of their life friends? In the very old there is, if anywhere, an approach to appropriateness in the wearing of at least partial black. But the discarding of excessive mourning display may well be begun by the young and middle aged. Especially let us not have children, spirits of joy and hops, masquerading in the hues of death. Why cloud their lives more than nature clouds them? In all but the very aged it seems as if some appropriate observance in neck dress, the wearing of grays and browns, etc., rather than any gay colors, were as far as we could safely go without inflicting our grief on others.—Lippincott's.

A Woman's Presence of Mind.

There are few who are not familiar with the story of "Elizabeth; or, The Exile of Siberia," but there are not many who know that the author, Mme. Sophie Cottin, was not only a woman of genius, but a patriot whose sympathy for distress made her risk her own life without a question or hesitation.

She was a widow, young and beautiful, and who, mourning her husband, inconsolable, retired from the world and in her grief devoted herself to her literary work. While the reign of terror was at its height a man whose name was on the proscribed list, but who was personally unknown to the police, hid in her old. He was in hiding, doomed to the guillotine should he be arrested. To assist him meant, in case of detection, arrest and death for herself. But notwithstanding this she went to work at once to complete an unfinished story that she might have money for him when he came. While thus engaged she was surprised by a domiciliary visit from the gendarmes. The compromising letter lay upon her desk.

With wonderful presence of mind, she explained that she was a literary woman engaged in her usual occupation and offered to read a portion of what she had written. They were soldiers themselves, and she read with all the dramatic power she possessed the entire manuscript so far as it had been completed. They were charmed and gratified and went away, refraining from searching the papers or molesting her in any way.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

One Thing a Woman Will Fib About.

No matter how honest a woman may be, she will tell a fib about her age.

There are exceptions to this, all exclaim in wrath, but these same G. Washington exceptions will smile and purr like contented pussy cats when some understander of the feminine nature says: "What! You 85? You don't look a day over 30!"

You see the principle in there just the same, and the universal horror of growing old. There is that which is unspeakably terrible to a woman in having old age relentlessly stalking toward her and no power on earth able to prevent it.

Men laugh at the idea, but they do not understand—they cannot. To a man increasing years usually bring success, happiness, attainment of the aims and desires of his youth, while the passing years take from a woman youth and beauty, her greatest powers, making her more dependent on the man she marries, obliterates her. A wise woman does well to fasten the heartstrings of those she loves to her by cultivating in the day of her freshness and beauty the fascinating little manners and ways that can laugh at time—a thing complexions cannot do. But when we get too blue over this subject it is comforting to remember her women who "never grow old" grow old. If only they had told us how!—Chicago News.

The First Bean.

The first bean appears along about when we are 14 or 15. Then have been, of course, many little boy admirers, but the genuine gallant does not materialize until we put on long dresses and commence making our faces up for young ladies, a comprehensive phrase that all girls will understand. He is usually the brother of some especial chum of ours, and in this way we are enabled to see him more often than if we had no reason for going to his home. He is exceedingly bashful before people, but can talk a blue streak to us when we are alone. He squanders his allowance on ice cream, soda and caramels, and on rare occasions invites us to a church social or concert. He is always one of the group of youths who wait outside the church or Sunday school door, and he is the one always to escort us to our homes on the occasion.

We are tossed unmercifully about him and really enjoy it, though pretending to be fearfully indignant and provoked about it. This sort of thing goes on until something happens, as some things have a way of doing, and either he goes away to college or we leave for boarding school, or perhaps a quarrel or a chosen successor intervenes. At any rate years perhaps will roll away before we see a bearded man who bears not the slightest resemblance to the blushing, rosy cheeked boy we called our first beau.—Elmira Telegram.

A Music Teacher's Advice.

A vocal teacher on Murray hill, who gets $5 for 30-minute vocal lessons, is most conscientious in prescribing for the physical welfare of her pupils. Here is her theory:

"Perfect digestion, sweet breath and nice teeth first, my dear, and then we will study the scales. Give up candy or give up vocal music. The two can't be united. Eat a pound of grapes every day of your life. This is good for the voice, the throat and the stomach. Get them at any price. Pay $1 a pound and if need be go without gloves. Splash cold water over the throat, shoulders, chest and arms every morning, dry quickly, and you will never have a cold. Close the register in the sleeping room, no matter what the temperature is and sleep in a flannel gown with plenty of blankets. Fruits and comfortables are weighty, but not warm. Cold air should never touch a delicate throat. Breathe through the nostrils day and night. Sleep with the mouth closed, if you have to tie up the chin. In bad weather don't economize on car fare. It is cheaper to ride than to ruin the boots and soil the hem of new garments. A cultivated voice should be the pride of a girl who talks as well as the one who sings."—New York Evening Sun.

Italian Women.

The Italian woman has not yet taken her true working place in society. She is generally handsome, rarely corrupt, in the strictest sense of the word, though by no means a moralist. At home she rules; outside she exerts no influence whatever. The political woman is as yet unborn. A few literary women exist, but among them are only one or two who rise above the average. The Italian woman is always a good mother; even when a bad wife she follows impulses rather than reason in her actions, and has to a greater degree than her sisters in any other European country.

During the national uprising she was hopeful, but she remained humble and never became ambitious. Mme. Ratazzi, who tried to meddle in politics, had to desist. Outside her domestic circle the Italian woman does not work, except in the lower classes, and then she uses rather her physical than her intellectual strength. The business women, like in France, is not met with except in Piedmont and Milan. The state has not been able to find woman other official employment than that of schoolmistress in small communes and of telegraph clerk on a limited scale.—Leisure Hours.

Smoking Women in Fiction.

The prominence of cigarette smoking women in modern fiction, especially in dealing with the refined products of civilization on the continent, must have been noticed. If smoking by women were one of the commonest and most natural things in the life at great European centers, we should not be surprised, but we do not believe it is yet so common, at least as a public practice, as the fiction writers would show. We think that the novelist is attracted to the cigarette smoking woman rather because there is an element of irregularity about her, something new somewhat startling to American readers and therefore likely to take.

There is no question that cigarette smoking is common among the "fine ladies" of Europe, and particularly in that class from which Marion Crawford has drawn some of his characters. The novelist has only given creature who ran away with Don Orsino's heart he first met in a studio where she was sitting for her portrait. When fatigued with sitting she borrowed a cigarette, placed her self carelessly on a divan, and smoked with Don Orsino and the artist.—Exchange.

Flats as Homes.

Severe criticisms were passed recently upon a firm of builders because they had put up a small city, where land was cheap, a large apartment house. "Here will be 10 families crowded under one roof," said the critics, "when each one might just as well have a roof all to herself." But when the 10 flats which the building contained were rented another side of the question came to light.

Seven were occupied by families of women who had naturally suffered much from timidity when living in isolated dwellings, or who had been crowded and inconvenienced when living rooms in the houses of other people. Two other families were those of traveling salesmen, who were obliged to be out of town more than half the time. The modern flat, even in its best form, may not be a model dwelling place, but it is blessedly adapted to the purpose of setting such fatherless in families.—Congregationalist.

Keep Children's Feet Dry.

"Keep children's feet dry and warm," said an experienced old nurse, "and you need not be afraid of their taking cold." When a child's feet are found to be cold at night, plunge them for an instant into cold water and rub briskly with a dry, coarse towel. Have a pair of rubbers at once. Nervous children are apt to have chilly feet. Often they are in a cold perspiration the greater part of the time. Such children should change their stockings daily, wear thick soled shoes and avoid rubbers, except in absolutely stormy weather.

Too often rubbers are a temptation to a child, inducing him to walk in puddles and experiment as to how far he can wade in the water without wetting his feet. Cork insoles are desirable for boys and girls who are much out of doors, and the habit of inquiring into the condition of their own feet will make them exercise proper precaution and avoid illness.—Childhood.

The American Mother.

Our British brother really begins to find us out. In an article on the American child, which one who has been here contributes to the London Queen, he says of the American mother:

"She is if possible too unselfish, and the consequence is that the child is apt to become exacting. But it is precisely this peculiar trait that runs through all American society; it is characteristic of men no less than of women. Husbands slave for their wives, regardless of all recreation even in the most heated days of summer, while the wives in their turn lavish all their thought and care upon the little husband."

Spirit in a Child.

The older members of the family often laugh at the "spirit" of the child when they should correct it. When the habit of ill temper has been formed by continual outbursts of anger, they attempt to curb it and find how hard it is to control the force of habit. Selfishness of every kind grows with indulgence, but nothing grows so rapidly by indulgence as temper. When this habit is once confirmed, the individual may be justly likened to some rabid wild beast, whom every one seeks to avoid.—New York Tribune.

Fruit and Health.

Lemons, grapes and tomatoes are most valuable from a medicinal point of view, and if the uses of such fruits and their juices were persevered in there is every reason to believe that not only cancer, but many other diseases of a similar nature with which the skill of the surgeon and physician are unable to cope, might be actually cured, or so much alleviated as scarcely to shorten life. —Family Doctor.

Studying Greek Drama.

Syracuse has a Greek drama class for women that meets once a week to study the dramas that in the days of their early popularity no woman might appear in, for on the Athenian stage no woman actor was allowed. Even Sophocles' Electra was always played by a man, and her maidens were the youths of Athens.

The pine bath is one of the modern fashionable treatment fads. A strong solution of extract of pine is poured in the water of the bath, which is made as hot as can be borne. This bath is taken at night only.

The foremost novelist of the realistic school in Spain is a woman. Senora Emilia Pardo Bazan not only writes powerful fiction, but is distinguished for her erudition and scholarship.

State facts to children as they actually are, and there will be few who prove any greater cowards than we ourselves would be under similar circumstances.

The Ladies' Fuel and Aid society is a worthy organization of New York Jewesses. The aim of its members is to seek out, visit and relieve the sick and needy.

Coffee grounds are used to fill pincushions. They should be put in a bag and hung up back of the stove until they are perfectly dry.

There are believed to be a score of women in New York city whose collections of lace carry in value from $60,000 to $80,000.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Two Thousand Dollars Appropriated for a Quarantine Hospital—A Special Election to be Held to Vote on the Sewerage Question—Other Business.

An adjourned meeting of the City Common Council was held last night.

Present—President Glinn, and Councilmen Case, Erickson, Fisk, Frazee, Marsh, Millington, See and Weber. Absent—Bird and Johnston.

In the absence of City Clerk Runyon, by illness, Mr. George Odlorne was made clerk pro tem.

The reading of the minutes was, on motion, dispensed with. A petition was read from Mr. Charles P. Sebring asking permission to connect a sewer from his new building on North avenue with the receiving basin. It was received and referred to the Committee on Streets.

About twenty-five Netherwood taxpayers petitioned Council, in a communication, against the locating of a quarantine hospital in that locality. The communication was referred to the Board of Health.

Residents in the vicinity of the gravel pit again petitioned Council to have the pit filled up, and also asked that Midway avenue be graded. The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets.

Mr. Fisk, of the Finance Committee, reported that the committee had investigated the matter of securing a pest house, and discovered that the place suggested as a suitable one by the Board of Health was out of the city limits and situated in Fanwood township. He offered a resolution, which was adopted, that $2,000 be appropriated from the license money to purchase a quarantine hospital, said amount to cover all expenses of furnishings, etc.

Mr. Erickson said the Committee on Fire and Buildings had advertised for bids for the erection of the new engine house, but that they were not ready to make a report.

The amendment to the hack ordinance was passed on its first and second readings, ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Miller's license application was reported as conforming to the law. The license was granted.

A bill of $33.45, from a New York firm for printing, was referred to the city accountant for auditing.

Mr. Case, from the Committee on Sewerage, made the following report:

PLAINFIELD, March 20, 1893.

To the Common Council.

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Water and Sewers having duly considered the subject, is of the opinion that the Intermittent Filtration System of Sewerage, as recommended by the Committee of Citizens in their report submitted to the Common Council March 6, 1893, should be adopted for the City of Plainfield. It will cost about one-half the amount of any other system which can be adopted considering the location and surround lings of the city. It has been passed the experimental stage and become one of the standard methods of sewerage, especially for inland cities; it is approved by the highest expert authority in that line of business, and is rapidly growing in favor; it will require the same general plant as for a system how ing its outfall in the Raritan river or elsewhere, so that in case it should prove unsatisfactory another could be adopted with small loss, if any, to the city. These considerations, and the additional one that if the Raritan River plan (which is the only other practicable one) should be adopted, the city may at any time be shut out by hostile legislation based on the undoubtedly growing opposition against polluting streams with sewerage, are some of the reasons which have influenced your committee in its recommendations.

To introduce and complete a system that will be adequate to meet present requirements and make a wise provision for the future, will cost, in near as call cate can be made, from $90,000 to $100,000. The only practicable method of raising such a large amount for immediate use is by the issue of bonds, and your committee submit that the question as to whether the money shall be procured in such manner for the purpose, be submitted to vote as early as practicable.

It is also suggested that the financial features of the Citizens' report be referred to the Committee on Finance.

In pursuance of the forgoing suggestions the Committee recommend the adoption of the annexed resolutions.

Respectfully submitted,

SPENCER K. CASE,
E. N. ERICKSON,
WM. H. E. SEE,
Committee on Water and Sewers.

Resolved, That it is the judgment of the Common Council that the Intermittent Filtration System of Sewerage, as recommended by the Committee of Citizens to Common Council in their report submitted March 6, 1893, should be adopted for the city of Plainfield, and that measures should be taken to put it in operation without delay, provided the citizens, by vote, authorize the raising of the necessary amount of money.

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and are hereby requested to arrange for a special election at which the question of issuing sewer bonds for the amount not exceeding $100,000 shall be submitted to the voters of the city.

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and are hereby requested to take under consideration the financial features of the citizens report on the matter of sewerage and report to the Common Council their conclusions with such recommendations of approval, or change as they may conclude are for the best interests of the city.

Several residents of Park avenue petitioned Council not to grant permission for the moving of the Burlingham house along that thoroughfare. Besides blocking the street, they said, the shade trees will be damaged, and the city would probably be sued for damages. The petition was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings.

Street Commissioner was authorized to purchase a new road scraper at a cost not to exceed $250.

The street numbering ordinance and the ordinance creating two election districts in the First and Second Wards, were passed on third reading.

Several hackmen, cartmen and an auctioneer were granted licenses.

Council adjourned.

DON'T WANT THE BIBLE

MINISTER PATTON OBJECTS TO ITS USE IN THE WESTFIELD SCHOOLS.

A Woman Candidate for School Trustee with Similar Opinions is Bitterly Opposed by Voters—Women will Vote—An Exciting Time Anticipated.

There promises to be an exciting time at the election of School Trustee in Westfield.

The Board of Trustees consists of three members. The terms of two of them have expired and their places are to be filled this evening.

The foundation of the anticipated excitement was caused by the Rev. Charles Patton, pastor of the Congregational church, who recently preached a sermon against the use of the Bible in the public schools. He created a genuine sensation and made many bitter enemies. The matter is now to be decided at the polls.

To carry his views into effect Mr. Patton has secured the nomination of Miss Emma Bridges, who also believes that the Bible should be abolished from the public schools. She is the first woman who has ever been nominated for the office, and not only is she strongly opposed by voters because of her views on the Bible question but also because of her sex.

The Junior Order of United American Mechanics are strongly against Mr. Patton's plan to remove the Bible from the schools and not only are they working hard to defeat the ministers candidates but they will have their Councilor on hand at the polls to-night to make a speech of protest. The women of the town can vote at this election and the members of the order are doing electioneering among their friends, both male and female, and are determined that the Bible shall remain in the schools.

Who Mr. Patton's second candidate is remains a secret.

Mr. Patton claims that the Protestant Bible should not be forced upon children of the Catholic and Jewish faith who attend the schools; but that the Protestant children, who are in the majority, must be deprived of the religious service. He says they can attend church services after school hours just as the Catholics and Hebrews do.

Hot Ashes Cause a Small Fire.

Hot ashes caused a fire this morning on Second street, in the rear of Jule Boutes' house. They had been emptied into a barrel to which they set fire. The flames from the burning barrel ignited the woodwork of a rear stairway, which blazed furiously, filling the upper part of the house with smoke. The fire was put out with a patent fire extinguisher before much damage was done.

A GOOD LANTERN SLIDE EXHIBITION

Given at the Plainfield Camera Club Rooms Last Evening.

An exhibition of lantern slides, made by the New York Camera Club, was given last evening by the Plainfield Camera Club in the club's home on East Front street.

The seating capacity of the club was considerably taxed to accommodate the large audience present.

Promptly at eight o'clock the gas lights were extinguished and the dissolving lantern, in charge of Professor Teale, began to cast the excellent pictures upon the screen.

Views were shown of New York, New Jersey, California, Japan, Kingston, Jamaica; portraits of natives of the various localities, landscapes, cloud effects, marine views, Sherman's funeral pageant, parade at the laying of the corner stone of Grant's monument, and the "Columbus Day Celebration" which showed the great bunting decorations of the New York streets.

The slides were very clear and nicely toned throughout and some of the pictures showed decided merit, among them being the cloud effects, marine views, and several of the landscapes.

After the exhibition of the New York club's slides, with which every one seemed well pleased, a private test was made of some slides made by Plainfield members, and a comparison with the views exhibited was in favor of the Plainfield club. They intend to astonish the amateur clubs of the Lantern Slide Exchange next season, and be second to no club in the country for quality, or perhaps quantity either.

MINISTER TO GERMANY.

EX-CHANCELLOR RUNYON APPOINTED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. Runyon was Born in Somerville and was Fitted for College in Plainfield—He is Well-known in This City.

Among the appointments made yesterday by President Cleveland was that of Ex-chancellor Theodore Runyon, of New Jersey, to Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany.

Theodore Runyon is a thorough Jerseyman, born of French Huguenot stock. His ancestors spelled their name Roguion, and were among the earliest settlers of Middlesex county, where hundreds of the name still abide. He was born in Somerville on Oct. 26, 1822, and spent his childhood days at Bound Brook.

He was fitted for college at Plainfield and graduated at Yale in 1843. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in New Jersey in July, 1846. He practiced in the city of Newark until he was appointed Chancellor in 1873. For many years he was City Solicitor of Newark. He was interested in the militia of the State at this time, and was Brigadier-General of the State Rifle Corps after Gov. Price had appointed him one of the Commissioners to revise the militia laws Subsequently he became Major-General of the National Guards. In 1860 he was one of New Jersey's Presidential electors and cast his vote for Stephen A. Douglas. When the rebellion broke out he went to the front in command of the First Brigade, with a commission from Gov. Olden, and arriving at Washington in an emergency he received the thanks of the President and Cabinet and was brevetted Major-General on the spot. He had 3,000 men, and their arrival was hailed with great joy at the capital, the people feeling for the first time that the city was safe. He crossed the Long Bridge on the morning of May 24 with his command, and was foremost in the first advance of the Army of the Potomac. At the first battle of Bull Run he had thirteen regiments under his command, and of the 10,000 men nearly four thousand had served within a week of their full term of enlistment. Gen. Runyon was a zealous officer in his campaign, but was restricted by his superiors, and the defeat at Bull Run was perhaps the saddest page in the history of his life. He retired to private life upon the expiration of his term and resumed the practice of law. In 1868 he was elected Mayor of Newark and held the office until 1885, when he was nominated for Governor and was defeated by Marcus L. Ward. In 1878 he was made a commissioner to prepare an amendment to the State Constitution. Gov. Parker, who later in the year was appointed Chancellor of the State. He held this office until his second term expired in 1697, when he was succeeded by Chancellor McGill. Mr. Runyon is a young man for his years. He has a firmly knit frame, below the medium height, and walks with a light, springy step. He is delightful in conversation, a deep student, and a companionable man in every way, though studious and given to long periods of brown study. Three times in his life the degree of LL. D. has been bestowed upon him, once by Wesleyan University in 1857, then by Rutgers College in 1881, and finally by Yale College in 1892. He has a pleasant home in Newark, and one of his daughters has recently achieved fame as a novelist.

A Woman with a New England Conscience Testifies Against her own Daughter.

An action of Charles J. Kimball, a clerk, for an absolute divorce from Anna A. Kimball, before Justice Patterson of the Supreme Court, New York, yesterday, had the novel experience of a mother smirching the character of her own daughter in behalf of her son-in-law.

Kimball testified he married Anna on March 21, 1885, in Brooklyn, and lived with her less than a year. Mary J. Hobby of this city, a Mrs. surrogate woman, then testified that she was the mother of Anna, who has lived with her since the separation. Her daughter had two children, Frank, of whom Kimball was the father, and a girl, Anna, born in Brooklyn both of whom are well-known here.

Mrs. John Thatcher, who has been for some time employed as clerk in the grocery store of R. W. Rice & Co., in North Plainfield, gave up his position Saturday. He left town to-day for Chicago, where he will enter into business with his uncle.

"Mission Life in India" will be the subject of an address, to-morrow evening, in Vincent chapel, by Mrs. Ellen Maxwell, of Lucknow, India. Mrs. Maxwell is an interesting speaker, as well as an author of repute. Those who hear her will find her address interesting.

"How did you come here?"

"I had a letter from Mr. Kimball asking me to come," said Mrs. Hobby.

"Had you any talk with Mr. Kimball about the case?" asked the Judge.

"No, sir."

"So you came here for that reason to testify against your own daughter?"

"Well, I thought it was my duty to come. I thought it was right."

The young man corroborated Mrs. Hobby. He had not provided for the support of the child, he said, but had once given Mrs. Kimball $5. Mrs. Kimball interposed no defense. Decision was reserved.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works are making for the Central Railroad of New Jersey, for exhibition at the World's Fair, an exact duplicate of the Central's famous engine, No. 385, which holds the world's record for fast time. During a run from Philadelphia to Jersey City she made a mile at the rate of 97.3 miles an hour—the fastest authenticated speed on record, though the Reading claims that one of its locomotives pulled a train 4.1 miles in 2½ minutes in 1890.

EDITORIAL NOTES

How to Become Insane.

Begin to think you are not treated right. Make sure you are not appreciated by somebody or anybody, it makes no difference whether by your family, the world in general or your sweetheart. Dwell on this thought constantly; put yourself to sleep by brooding over it nights. The next step will be to consider that somebody has a spite at you and is persecuting you relentlessly. This is often the first sign of insanity, and it is an infallible one. Sometimes the wronged and injured one fancies that all the world is wrong but himself. If he is poor, he begins to brood over that and blame somebody else for it. Occasionally it is the fault of the millionaires who have taken all the wealth out of his pocket; again it is the fault of the government that his done the same thing.

In any case the end comes sooner or later to the individual who starts in life as a kicker with a grievance and keeps it up. The end is that he becomes the most dangerous lunatic that can be at large in the community. He may commit murder at any moment. This was the history of Guiteau. It is the history of the man who tried to murder John Mackay and of nearly every crank who ever tried to blow up millionaire, president or governor. It is the history of the unfortunate southern lady who recently killed her two sisters before being committed to a lunatic asylum.

Therefore, as you value your sanity and desire to keep from shedding blood, do not permit yourself to brood over grievances. They rarely exist except in your own imagination, and even when they are real a cheery, persistent determination will rid you of them and in every case give you just the place and the appreciation you deserve in this life. Pour sunshine, not black frost and blizzard, upon the world, and the world will return all the warmth and radiance to you after awhile.

St. Patrick.

There are people who deny that St. Patrick was born in Ireland. This is very mean, for while Erin has produced fighters, orators, poets and policemen, splendid ones and not a few, the list of native born Irish saints is for some reason not a long one, though for some years after Patrick had lived and labored there the Irish were so good that Erin was called the isle of the saints. Give her all the glory of her St. Patrick.

Fortunately history bears out Ireland's claim to be the birthplace of Patrick. His first name, before he became a saint, was Succath, and he lived 1,400 years ago. From the third to the tenth century Ireland was called Scotia, because of the tribe of the Scoti who inhabited the interior. That may have given rise to the story that Patrick was a Scotchman, but he was not. He was undoubtedly an Irishman, though the most known of his lineage is contained in the words of the favorite song:

St. Patrick was a gintleman
And came of dacent people.

About 480 the pope commissioned Succath to convert Ireland to Christianity. He labored over 40 years among his countrymen and died 1,400 years ago this 1893. He converted the people of the whole island, and they have since converted ever since. He drove out not only the pagan gods by his eloquence, but even the snakes were moved and either crawled away to their holes and sickened and died or swam across the water to England to plague British landlords. St. Patrick died on the 17th of March, according to the best belief and tradition, and it is to rejoice in his release from his labors and his entrance into heavenly joys that all good Irishmen and their friends celebrate the day.

One of the grandest facts about our American civilization, as far as it has got, is the rapidity with which new communities in the west settle down to honest, conservative life. The colonizing of Oklahoma is an example. When the boomers filled the territory, there were for a few days some unpleasant gambling and fighting occurrences, combined with crazy drunkenness. But it lasted only till the respectable men who constitute the majority of every community could get the reins into their own hands. So thoroughly conservative is Oklahoma now that at the present session of the legislature a bill was passed and immediately signed by the governor which makes gambling of any kind a felony. Even progressive euchre parties where prizes are offered come under the head of gambling in the meaning of the new law.

What is to become not only of Canada, but of England herself? The financial depression of Canada is equaled if not exceeded in Great Britain. In spite of improvements in cheapening the cost of manufactured goods, in spite of the fact that America has taken hundreds of thousands of Great Britain's poor off her hands annually, at this time industrial statistics show the record of 23 people in every 1,000 as paupers. At the same time returns from the British trades unions show that of their members one in every ten is out of work.

Hold fast like iron to your own convictions of right, but let other people hold fast to theirs too. Likewise hold yourself always ready to adopt broader and higher views than your present ones, if they come your way.

CLEARING UP BUSINESS.

The Senate Does Much Work In Little Time.

LARGE BATCH OF APPOINTMENTS

General Eustis to Go to France and Wade Hampton to Be Railroad Commissioner. Fession Office Matters—The Coming Struggle In the Senate.

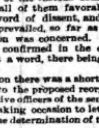
WASHINGTON, March 21.—In an executive session lasting a little more than half an hour the senate disposed of a great deal of work that has accumulated pending the reorganization of the committees. All of the earlier batch of nominations were confirmed except here and there a postmaster, and the nominations of ex-Senators Eustis and Hampton, just made, were confirmed without the formality of a reference to the appropriate committees. When the reports of the various committees were made—all of them favorable—there was not a word of dissent, and the utmost harmony prevailed, so far as any word of opposition was concerned. The nominations were confirmed in the ordinary way, without a word, there being no objection offered.

J. B. EUSTIS.

During the session there was a short discussion relating to the proposed reorganization of the elective officers of the senate, the Republicans taking occasion to let the Democrats know the determination of their caucus.

Republicans Refer to Precedents.

In a casual way the Republican leaders referred to the precedents, and stated that there was no authority for the reorganization of the senate at an extraordinary session, and warned the Democrats, with due regard to parliamentary courtesy, that they would not sit idly by and see the work of reorganization prosecuted without attempting to frustrate it. It is understood that nothing bearing upon the proposed reorganization will be discussed in open session until after another executive session shall have been held. At that executive session the Republicans will unfold to their opponents the course they intend to pursue, and if the Democrats then see fit to undertake the task of reorganizing the elective officers, the contest will be transferred to the open session.



WADE HAMPTON.

It is understood that certain prominent Democrats have said that rather than remain here and engage in an unseemly squabble they would be in favor of permitting the present organization to remain until congress meets in regular session. If there is to be a struggle over this matter, it will no doubt be precipitated soon.

Long List of Lucky Ones.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate:

State—James B. Eustis of Louisiana to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to France; Theodore Runyan of New Jersey to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany; John E. Risley of New York to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Denmark.

Justice—James G. Jenkins of Wisconsin to be United States circuit judge for the Seventh judicial circuit; Walter D. Dabney of Virginia to be solicitor for the department of state; Charles B. Stuart of Texas to be judge of the United States court for the Indian territory. To be marshals of the United States—David T. Guyton of Mississippi for the northern district of Mississippi; William H. Hawkins of Indiana for the district of Indiana; Abner Gaines of Arkansas for the eastern district of Arkansas; James J. McAlister of the Indian Territory for the United States court for the Indian Territory. To be attorneys of the United States—Frank B. Burke of Indiana for the district of Indiana; Clifford L. Jackson of the Indian Territory to be attorney for the United States court for the Indian Territory; Joseph W. House of Arkansas for the eastern district of Arkansas.

Treasury—Oscar T. Bland of Maryland to be first auditor of the treasury; Thomas Holcomb of Delaware to be fifth auditor of the treasury.

Interior—Wade Hampton of South Carolina to be commissioner of railroads.

Postmasters—New Jersey, Charles E. Clark, Matawan, and a number of western and southern postoffice nominations.

Matters In the Pension Office.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—It is expected that within the next few days the president will send to the senate the nomination of a commissioner of pensions, and any changes in policy as to pensions and questions of reorganization will be deferred until General Raum's successor has had an opportunity to familiarize himself with the duties and needs of the office. In the meantime Secretary Hoke Smith will continue to sign all pension certificates as they are presented to him.

Few Callers at the White House.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—There were few callers at the White House. This was not due to any falling off in interest on the part of office seekers, but to the fact that the president reserves Mondays for work and the reception of such persons as he may especially desire to consult. Under this privileged class were included Mr. William F. Harrity, chairman of the national Democratic committee, and Mr. W. U. Hensel, attorney general of Pennsylvania.

Bill Knows Risley; Murphy Doesn't.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—When asked in regard to Mr. John E. Risley, appointed from New York as minister to Denmark, Senator Murphy replied that he did not know Mr. Risley, and had never heard of him. Senator Hill said he knew who Mr. Risley was. He was a relative of Senator Voorhees, and as he (Mr. Hill) believed, was a very good man.

The Cherokee Strip Opening.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Secretary Hoke Smith is making preparations to carry into effect the act ratifying the agreement with the Indians relating to the permanent the Cherokee strip. Indian Inspector Cisney expresses the opinion that there will be no unlawful invasion of the strip.

Justice Jackson's Maiden Opinion.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Justice Jackson rendered his maiden opinion as a justice of the United States supreme court. By the opinion the court affirmed the judgment of the circuit court for southern New York in the case of Passavant & Co. against the United States.

THE MISSING NARONIC.

Intelligence Received Showing That She Has Surely Foundered.

BREMEN, March 21.—Intelligence has been received showing beyond say doubt that the missing steamer Naronic is lost. The British steamer Coventry from Fernandina reports that on the morning of March 4, when in latitude 42 north, longitude 46 west, she passed a lifeboat painted white bearing the name "Naronic." The boat was floating keel upward. In the afternoon of the same day another lifeboat from the Naronic was passed. This boat gave evidence of having encountered heavy weather. The mast and oars of the lifeboat had been lashed together and attached to the painter and then thrown overboard as a sea anchor to keep the boat's head up to the wind and sea.

Judging from appearances neither of the boats had been long adrift. The position of the drifting boats was about south by east of Sable island, on the banks of Newfoundland. There is a chance that the occupants of the boats were picked up by a passing vessel.

The number of souls on board the Naronic were a crew of 64 and 14 cattlemen, who were on their return to this country.

Judge Ricks Surprised.

CLEVELAND, March 21.—Judge Ricks of the United States circuit court is in Toledo to hear the cases of the Lake Shore engineers, cited to appear for contempt of court in refusing to obey the injunction in the Ann Arbor strike. He was surprised to know that his remarks in court on Saturday had been criticised by Chauncey M. Depew and Edward Lauterbach of New York.

$150,000 For the Encampment.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 21.—The city council made an appropriation of $75,000 to assist in defraying the expenses of the twenty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held here next September. A subscription of $75,000 more by citizens will be added to the fund.

What Bourke Cockran Thinks.

BALTIMORE, March 21.—Bourke Cockran of New York said to a reporter: "I do not think that Tammany Hall will be helped much through Cleveland's administration. Of course, certain appointments will go to that organization, but I do not think that anything great is to be expected."

Ex-Senator Saulsbury Very Ill.

WILMINGTON, March 21. — Ex-United States Senator Eli Saulsbury is critically ill at his home at Dover, and his death is expected. He has long been a sufferer from rheumatism. He was in the senate from 1870 until 1890, and was succeeded by Hon. Anthony Higgins.

DRAMATIC COURT SCENE

Harris' Wonderful Speech Before Recorder Smyth.

LOUDLY CHEERED IN THE STREETS

The Condemned Poisoner Sentenced to Die In the Week Beginning May 8—His Effect Surprised All Who Heard It, and Lawyers Say It Is Unprecedented.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Carlyle W. Harris, condemned murdered, convicted of the capital crime of poisoning his wife, was cheered in the streets of this city by a crowd of thousands after he had delivered a remarkable speech on the occasion of his resentence to death.

CARLYLE W. HARRIS.

The courtroom was crowded, and when Harris was asked if he had anything to say he began with the statement: "I have sent statements to the effect that my friends intended to hold a large mass meeting to protest against my conviction. This is not on my suggestion, nor with my consent. I should see in it, dear honor, a reflection on the judge who sentenced me and upon the action of the court of appeals. I thank my friends, but this is not my wish."

"A learned antiquary," he said with elaborate sarcasm, "in future days will ascertain with interest that in this end of the nineteenth century schoolgirls had reached that beatitude of scientific wisdom, when their expert evidence was accepted in the court of general sessions."

"You Put It In My Coffee."

It was a strong plea, full of the pathos of the words of one who stood face to face with death. But tasteless, all. He read an affidavit from Crawford Mason, one of the jurors, to the effect that had he heard Dr. Kinmouth's evidence he would have voted for acquittal. Harris handed this to Mr. Howe.

"Do not file this," he said. "It is too late place it in my coffin."

Harris made a bitter attack on Dr. Treverton, and declared that one affidavit of Dr. Kinmouth should have saved his life.

"I do not blame the jury," he continued. "They have been bludgeoned with medical terms until they were blind to the truth."

He turned to Mr. Howe and handed him a black bordered envelope and the old lawyer's hand shook as he took it.

"It is all I have to give—it is what I prize most."

The envelope contained a pair of cuff buttons, the last gift of the wife for whose murder he goes to his death.

He paused for a moment, and then leaning far over the bar he said: "I am before my judge, as you will some day come face to face with your judge, Recorder Smyth, stripped of all these earthly dignities.

"There is a sustaining power in innocence which in this case has risen superior to the terrors of death. Two years ago I visited a lonely grave, and now today, as then, I thank God that he who will now read in this new evidence my innocence of this foul crime!"

With these words he bowed and stopped speaking, although he still remained standing. He had spoken 1½ hours.

Recorder Smyth arose and said: "After hearing all you have to say I am still of the opinion that this new evidence would do you no good. In this I am sustained by the court of appeals, which canvassed all the evidence which your counsel saw fit to introduce."

"The Last of Carlyle Harris."

Within two weeks beginning——"

Harris clutched the bar with one hand. The other hand he stretched out to the recorder. His words were indistinct at first. Then, raising his voice, he cried:

"The last of Carlyle Harris! I warn you, Mr. Smyth, it will be the last of schoolgirl experts! The last of perjured testimony suit"——

Deputy Sheriff Burke touched him on the shoulder and he sank into his chair.

"Your sentence will take place in the week beginning Monday, May 8," the recorder said. "Remove the prisoner."

Harris picked up his coat and hat and accompanied the deputy sheriff as he had brought him down from the Tombs. He was pale, self contained, unbroken.

At Harris' request, as expressed in his speech, the suggested mass meeting will not be held. Instead, it is more than probable that Governor Flower will be asked to appoint a commission to inquire into the new evidence and the whole case and report upon it, the finding of the commission to determine the action of the governor.

FOUR BRAVE YOUNG WOMEN.

They Carry Their Mother's Body From a Burning Building.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—But for the courage and presence of mind of four young women, the body of their dead mother would have been cremated. On Wednesday last Mrs. Ann Donahoe died at the age of 78. The four sisters went to the kitchen to get something to eat after a long vigil by their mother's bier. While down stairs they detected the odor of smoke, and rushing up to the room in which their mother's body was lying they found that one of the candles around the coffin had overturned, and the carpet and window curtains were ablaze. The girls did their best to stamp out the fire, but finding that the flames were arising around the coffin they picked up the casket and staggered from the blazing room with their heavy load.

Derisively Cheered by Irishmen.

LONDON, March 21.—In the house of commons William Johnston, Conservative, asked Chief Secretary Morley if it is true that the government is hiring mills in Belfast to accommodate 2,000 British soldiers. The Irish Nationalists derisively cheered the speaker, who, according to rumor, is pledged, in the event of home rule, to take the Bible in one hand and a rifle in the other. Chief Secretary Morley replied that the statement implied in the question was entirely untrue.

The Fair to Be Open at Night.

CHICAGO, March 21.—It was practically decided whatever the fate of Sunday closing, the rule at the World's fair will be late closing. Chief Engineer Shankland said: "The electrical exhibit is the finest thing on the grounds. The people will want to see it and they will be given a chance. Thinemans that the gates will be kept open until 11 o'clock. Any other ruling would be the utmost folly."

Affairs at Albany.

ALBANY, March 21.—Comptroller Campbell's report to the legislature on World's fair expenses showed the commission's bills as a whole were not extravagant, though some of them needed explanation. There will probably be no tele@one legislation this year as the senate refused to take Gouverneur Markham's bill from the committee where it is practically smothered.

Mr. Carlisle Rests on Monday.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—"The secretary will see no visitors on Monday," was the sign pinned on the door leading into Secretary Carlisle's room. It means exactly what it says, as a number of visitors, including several senators, found out when they called to see Secretary Carlisle.

THE FIGHT WAS A DRAW

Dixon and Siddons Gave a Very Poor Exhibition.

THE MANY SPORTS DISAPPOINTED.

In the Twelve Rounds Fought Nothing Serious or Entertaining Resulted—The Crowd Amused Itself by Singing "Home, Sweet Home."

CONEY ISLAND ATHLETIC CLUB, N. Y., March 21.—A very large and enthusiastic crowd of sporting men took advantage of the fine weather and visited the Coney Island Athletic club in anticipation of seeing two spirited contests. In the fight between Jack McGee and Billy McCarthy, the boys looked for a good stiff bout, but as it was down for a limited number of rounds, not quite so much was looked for from these two as from the others, for if the game got too hot for one he could stand the other off for a round or two and thus gain time. Dixon, however, according to agreement, had to knock Siddons out in 12 rounds or beat him. Everybody knows that Dixon is a rapid fighter and by far the most scientific boxer, while all those who know Siddons are fully aware of the fact that he is by no means an easy man to knock out.

The 10-round contest between McGee and McCarthy resulted in a draw, with honors about equally divided.

The Dixon-Siddons Fight.

The attraction of the evening began with the appearance of George Dixon, who took the place of Skelly, who was sick, and George Siddons. The latter was in prime condition, while the former had no training at all for the fight and was thus placed at a disadvantage.

First Round—Dixon walked around his man feinting several times, but making no attempt to lead. He suddenly flushed his left on Siddons' chin. He jabbed his left again in the same place and received in return Siddons' left in the face rather lightly.

Second Round—They sparred a few minutes for an opening, when Dixon rushed in and swung his left on Siddons and got away without a return. Dixon rushed him again and landed left and right. The crowd hissed Siddons for remaining away. Dixon made three more rushes before the close of the round and landed with his left each time. Siddons played a waiting game.

The Fighters Were Hissed.

Third Round—Dixon landed another left on Siddons' rib and retired without any return. There was another minute of walking around and Dixon landed the left again in the same place. These were the only blows in this round and the fighters were hissed.

Fourth Round—Dixon went right at his man this time and landed his left on each of his Siddons' stomach. They clinched and after the break Dixon ran in again and landed both left and right. It was a very tame round, with Dixon doing all the leading.

The fifth and sixth rounds were so tame that the crowd yelled "Fake" at the contestants.

Seventh Round—The cries of "Fake" braced the men up a little, and Dixon showed a little more energy at the start by landing on Siddons' stomach and forced matters slowly, landing lightly on the neck. "Home, Sweet Home" was whistled by at least 2,000 people, during which time Siddons avoided a wild rush by the ironclad. The round ended with far more music than sparring.

The Crowd Whistled "Home, Sweet Home"

Eighth Round—The crowd kept on whistling "Home, Sweet Home." All through the minutes' rest, and it had the desired effect, as the boys did more genuine fighting in this round than in any of the previous rounds, and even at that they did not do enough to keep themselves warm. Siddons, however, did do a little leading, and the crowd yelled for a fight.

Ninth Round—Dixon landed two lefts on the stomach in quick succession and then another left in the same place. A light tap on Siddons' neck closed the round.

Tenth Round—The crowd began to leave their seats. Dixon forced the fighting and landed a few more good left handed blows on the chest and stomach of Siddons.

Eleventh Round—After a minute's walking Dixon landed a good blow over Siddons' heart. Dixon exhibited some temper and landed another blow in the face, following it with a light tap on the ribs with his left.

Twelfth Round—About half the people in the house left before the pair came up for this round. Dixon made matters lively, however, by forcing the fighting. He drove Siddons all over the ring and landed many times with both hands, but none of the blows were of a knockout nature.

The fight was a draw, and the general verdict was that it was the poorest exhibition ever seen around these parts.

An Old Murder Recalled.

LITTLE ROCK, March 21.—The police here are confident that there is ground for believing the murderer of John M. Clayton at Plummerville is in the hands of the authorities at Bonham, Mon., who claim that they have positive identification of the murderer. Four years ago the legislature passed an act offering a reward of $5,000 for the capture and conviction of the murderer, and this act has never been repealed.

BISHOP WIGGER GIVES UP.

All Former Orders Given by Him Have Been Withdrawn.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Bishop Wigger of the diocese of Newark has issued a circular letter addressed to each priest in the diocese rescinding his former order in which the priests were ordered to refuse absolution to those members of the parish who sent their children to the public schools in preference to the parochial schools. The letter is as follows:

REV. DEAR SIR—In the case of those parents who without sufficient reason send their children to public schools, I bee to inform you that all directions, whether public or private, given by me in regard to refusing them absolution are hereby withdrawn. The case thus falls under the general principles of moral theology and has to be dealt with according to the same.

Pleading For a Fallen Woman.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., March 21.—A sensation was caused in court when Judge Wickham prepared to sentence Mrs. Thornburgh, who plead guilty to keeping a disorderly house. Rev. M. J. Sleepy, a Methodist minister, made a plea in her behalf, in which he cited an instance of her great devotion as a nurse in a family that were sadly afflicted with black diphtheria that carried off some of the children. Many in the courtroom were visibly affected by his plea. She was released on payment of costs.

Disappointment Killed Him.

EDINBURG, Ind., March 21.—E. K. Hosford, formerly postmaster at this place under Cleveland is dead. Hosford had been trying to get the position again, but the president's announcement that he would not employ any former occupant of office disappointed him so greatly that it brought on the illness of which he died.

Ryand Found Guilty at Kittaning.

KITTANING, Pa., March 21.—The jury in the case of W. J. Ryand, charged with murder and attempted bank robbery at Leechburg, handed in a verdict finding Ryand guilty of murder in the second degree. The judge then sentenced Ryand to 12 years in the penitentiary. The other cases were postponed till June.

SOME NEW GARMENTS

SHIRT WAISTS AND BODICES ARE USEFUL AND NEAT.

A Great Blessing For Those Who Travel Much—Pretty In Either Silk or Gingham—An Avant Courier of the Coming Spring Season—A Smart Frock.

"What a blessing waists are, to be sure!" said a pretty woman who lives half her life in her trunk to a New York Tribune writer. "We travelers cannot be sufficiently thankful for a fashion that is at once so becoming and so 'dressy,' and which takes up so little space. With a few percale and cheviot waists and a couple of silk ones, one may have really a great variety in the smallest compass."

Some of the new patterns in waists are especially pretty, and most of them are adaptable for either silk or gingham. One of the newest and most effective styles has two long pieces of the silk gathered into the shoulder seams; one of these has a full ruffle on the inner edge. The long ends are crossed in front and at the back and then brought around again in front and tied in an empire bow at the side. For women who are in the habit of dressing for dinner in low bodices a low necked waist will be found very useful. This is simply a gathered baby waist, with a full accordion plaited or gathered ruffle around the neck.

NEWEST THINGS IN WAISTS.

A very simple but very pretty gingham waist has a gathered front fastening on one side with a deep ruffle. Instead of the usual collar a band of ribbon finishes the neck to match the very broad belt, the feature of both the collar and belt being that the edges are brought together with a finish of a tiny ruffle on either side. This is a very neat arrangement and does away with the necessity of a bow to conceal the joining.

"One swallow does not make a summer;" neither does a spring costume give us genial weather; nevertheless it is pleasant to see this avant courier of the coming season. It is quite the latest thing in a smart frock and may be worn at receptions and afternoon teas until the weather becomes suitable for a light street dress. The style is distinctly flounce of the bengaline lined with the silk goes around the neck. A poke bonnet lined with colored silk, with an inside trimming of artificial flowers, is worn with this pretty but rather ultra costume.

Pale blue and pink ginghams make very pretty petticoats if made with a couple of small flounces at the bottom, and they have the merit of being washable. "I must confess," said an old fashioned lady the other day, "it seems perfectly dreadful to me that ladies are willing to wear petticoats that cannot be put into the tub. Why, I am obliged to change my white skirts every day; so fancy the amount of actual dirt there must be on a silk one worn during the whole season!"

The neighbors have commented upon the order which reigns among the juveniles, who are in charge of a nurse while the father is down at his office during business hours.

Discipline is maintained, however, by an extraordinary—the telephone.

"Mr. Blank," the nurse says when the fatherly ear is turned on, "Willie says he is going out skating, and you know he has a cold."

"Send him to the telephone," commands Mr. Blank. "Is that you, Willie?"

"No, p-a-p-a."

Fitted For It.

The Rev. Dr. Biddell told a lively story last evening at the "old ground" dinner. It was about a Presbyterian minister who had a young son, a lad of about 10 years. He was endeavoring to bring him up in the way he should go, and was one day asked by a friend what he intended to make of him. In reply he said:

"I am watching the indications. I have a plan which I propose trying with the boy. It is this: I am going to place in my pocket a Bible, an apple and a silver dollar. Then I am going to leave the room and call in the boy. I am going to watch him from some convenient place without letting him know that he is seen. Then, if he chooses the Bible, I shall make a preacher of him; if he takes the apple, a farmer he shall be, but if he chooses the dollar I will make him a business man."

The plan was carried out. The arrangements were made, and the boy called in from his play. After a little while the preacher and boy both softly entered the room. There was the youngster. He was seated on the Bible. In one hand was the apple, from which he was just taking a bite, and in the other he clasped the silver dollar. The good man turned to his consort. "Wife," he said, "the boy is a boy! I shall make a politician of him!"—Boston Record.

He Felt Relieved.

It was a long ride through a desolate and dangerous country, and the politician sought to relieve the monotony by philosophic musings on his recent victory and the embarrassments that even success brings.

"Hold up your hands!"

The stagecoach gave a lurch and stopped. The ray of light that shot into the vehicle turned the spattering rain into myriads of evanescent gems.

"What do you want?" asked the politician with a firmness that showed that he had faced danger before.

"Your money."

"Here it is."

"Your watch and diamond ring."

"They are yours."

"I must say you are good natured anyhow," said one of the highwaymen.

"Not at all. Are you sure that's all you desire?"

"What in thunder did you think we wanted?"

"I was afraid," said the politician's voice trembled a little, "that you wanted an office."—Washington Post.

Even a Poet Has Rights.

"I have here," said the long haired poet, entering a newspaper office, "an ode which will make about one column in your paper. I wish——"

"Don't want any poetry," growled the editor, who was feeling savage and dyspeptic. Get out of here."

"I was about to add," continued the visitor, "that the poem has reference to a new kind of patent soap that my employer has invented, and I was going to ask you to publish it as an advertisement at twenty cents a line."

And he disappeared in the direction of the rival newspaper office before anything could be done toward intercepting him or making overtures of peace.—New York Herald.

A PRACTICAL APPLICATION.

How a Scientific Young Man Proved the Truth of What He Said.

A scientific young Detroiter with some admiration for young women does considerable coiling, and the girls don't always like it, for he will insist upon talking science when romance and emotional fiction are so much more to their taste. The other evening he was making a call and very innocently began to talk of sleep.

"Do you know," he said, "that while no one fully understands what sleep is one thing is accepted as proved—to wit: That the condition of the blood vessels of the brain, and indeed of such tissues as the optic disk is an anaemic one in sleep. An drowsiness comes on the surface of the brain grows paler in color, and the lack of red blood is noticeable when such conditions are observed. The theory of Dr. James Cappie of Edinburgh and of some other eminent scientists has been to the effect that the tissue of the optic nerve, the brain and even of the skull, are capable of congesting and dispersing comparatively large quantities of blood; that congestion produces vertigo and unconsciousness or stupor, and that the dispersion of blood from the brain cells produces a slight compression on the surface of the brain and thus brings about sleep."

The fatal moment was at hand. She was veins the effect will be to cause a slight yielding in the brain and a pressure upon it."

He stopped a moment to catch a response from the young woman.

A long, low, soft murmur, as of the wind among the pines, came to him from the corner of the sofa, where the heavier shadows from the rich silken shade of the silver lamp fell—the girl was snoring.—Detroit Free Press.

With Good Reason.

The introduction in our cities of apartment houses in which a considerable number of families live under one roof has given rise to many amusing occurrences. In an eastern city recently two physicians were waiting together at the street, when one of them lifted his hat to a lady whom they met.

"An acquaintance?" asked the other.

"Oh, in a way," answered the first doctor. "I treated her the other day for a small difficulty."

"What was it?"

"A wart on the nose."

"And what did you prescribe?"

"Nothing. I had to refrain absolutely from playing the piano."

The other doctor was astonished. "Ordered her to leave off playing the piano—for a wart on the nose? Well, I can't understand your treatment."

"If you knew the circumstances, you would," said the first doctor. "She occupies the flat just under mine in the apartment house."

"Ah, now I understand!" said the other.—Youth's Companion.

Future Vengeance.

"You'll be sorry for this some day!" howled the son and heir as his father released him from the position he had once held across the paternal knee.

"I'll be sorry? When?"

"When I get to be a man!"

"You will take revenge by whipping your father when you are big and strong and I am old and feeble, will you, Tommy?"

"No, sir," blubbered Tommy, rubbing himself, "but I'll spank your grandchildren till they can't rest!"—Chicago Tribune.

SHE FORGOT HERSELF.

Aunt Thankful Woke In Suddenly Surprised by a Monkey.

Much has been said and written in regard to the ludicrous acts which persons commit when suddenly overtaken by a surprising difficulty or by some actual danger. Even the coolest nerves give way at times, and judgment is momentarily overbalanced. Aunt Thankful Wade was no exception to this general rule. Under ordinary circumstances she was self possessed and unruffled, but on one occasion she found the situation so very unexpected that a slight weakening was certainly to be excused.

In her youth she had left her eastern home and taken up a claim near her brother's sheep ranch in Montana. Living alone, she had faced unflinchingly much danger and hardship, and enjoyed the reputation of being unusually fearless.

A few rods below her house was the little railway station, and one day a box containing a live monkey was deposited upon the platform. Though the frail state he soon found his way while the station master was busy, and five minutes later he confronted Aunt Thankful as she chopped kindling wood before her door.

With a shriek of dismay the startled woman ran into the house and shut the door, but the monkey, undaunted, leaped through the 7 by 9 window into the room.

To reach the door again without passing the chattering creature was impossible, and, intending to be more discreet than valorous, Aunt Thankful ran into the pantry, landing with both feet in a huge pan of dough upon the floor.

Frantic with terror, she threw tin dishes, plates, knives, whatever she could reach, at her grinning opponent, all of which he deftly seized and returned with alacrity.

As the crying necessity for the station master appeared, and making a lasso from the clothesline secured his express package, which had gone so sadly astray.

"Were you frightened, Aunt Thankful?" he asked.

"Well," she said, stepping forward with her usual dignity, "I don't hear to her him fur a stiddy boarder, nor I don't keer ter play ball with an ape."

Then looking down at her feet covered with the soft dough, she added:

"I ain't neater than most folks, but I don't ginerally knead my biscuits with my feet."—Youth's Companion.

Taking His Precautions.

He was a teacher of mathematics and great at figures. His wedding was to come off on a Thursday, but he suggested to his future mother-in-law that the happy event should be fixed a day earlier.

"What is that for?" the lady suspiciously inquired.

"I will tell you," he replied with an air of importance. "I have just calculated that if we are married next Thursday our silver wedding will fall on Saturday, when I am in the habit of spending the evening over a game or two of skittles, which I should not like to miss on any account."—Bremer Zeitung.

Interesting, but Sensitive.

"What an interesting animal! exclaimed Freddy, approaching the cage of the orang outang. "I wonder, tah Jove, if I'm distantly related to him?"

At this point Freddy was interrupted by a scream from the caged simian, so full of anguish, horror and sudden, desperate, unforgivable rage, that the entire menagerie was thrown into a state of violent excitement, and the keeper hastily ushered the young man into the apartment where the mummies and stuffed snakes were on exhibition.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

THE ANNUAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

North Plainfield Elects Mr. Samuel McCutchen for Three Years and Mr. Stephen Joseph for One Year—Increased School Accommodations.

There has probably never been in School District No. 38 a more largely attended and more representative annual school meeting held in North Plainfield township than that of last evening in the basement of the school building. How much better it would be if the citizens always manifested such timely interest.

The meeting was called to order by School Trustee McCutchen, and organized by electing Mr. James McGee chairman and Mr. Horace Martin secretary.

School Clerk Romney read the annual financial statement and stated that the amount of money required to maintain the schools in addition to the sum received from the State would be $5,500, the same as last year. The report was received and the recommendations approved.

Mr. McCutchen, as President of the Board of Trustees, read its report showing the condition of the school to be exceedingly discreditable to the people, the smaller children being compelled to attend school in a damp cellar because the people refused to provide better accommodations. This state of affairs would never have been had the leading citizens of the township so earnestly as on this occasion attended these annual meetings in former years.

The report was approved and received.

The election for school trustees was then held.

Mr. Samuel McCutchen (who was chosen last year to fill the office during the unexpired term of Mr. James McGee, who had resigned, after suffering severe family bereavement) was unanimously chosen for the three year term, and Mr. Stephen Joseph for the one year term.

The chairman then inquired if there was any new business to come before the meeting, and, in response, Mr. T. W. Morrison suggested that a time be designated for the citizens to meet and confer about plans to provide adequate school accommodations, considering it a burning shame that the children should be crowded as they are, and that the little children have no better accommodations provided for them than a damp cellar.

Mr. Samuel McCutchen took the floor and, after suitably thanking the people for re-electing him, stated that he had hoped to be able to submit plans and costs for an addition in front of the present building, providing eight new class rooms, but had been unable to have them ready in time. He had no pet scheme, no hobby. He simply hoped that something would be done. If any of the little children should become sick and die as a result of attending school in the damp cellar he would feel very bad about it. "It is a fearful responsibility. We do the best we can with these accommodations. They are all that you provide. We are required by law to provide suitable accommodations to be entitled to the money which comes to us from the State, and the present accommodations I do not consider suitable." He would, like an advisory Committee of citizens appointed. As to a time to meet to confer he thought they could have plans and prices ready to be submitted within a few weeks.

Mr. Lounsbery moved that instead of proposing to spend any money on the present building the Committee submit plans on the evening of April 29th for a new primary school building to be located North of Somerset street, as the growth of the township was northward. In view of the proposed street railway this would make it necessary for the primary children to cross the tracks.

Mr. Charles McCutchen moved as a substitute that the trustees submit plans on April 29th for enlarging the present school building. The motion unanimously prevailed, and the meeting adjourned to that date.

THE PYATT HOMESTEAD BURNED.

The Fire the Plainfield Firemen Couldn't Find.

The old Pyatt homestead, at Samptown, was burned to the ground Monday night, the chimney alone remaining. Mrs. Pyatt, who is a widow, moved from the house sometime ago, to live with her son, who resides nearby. She rented the place to a family named Montgomery, who recently moved to this city. The house was sub let to some Italians, who were to occupy it next week. The neighbors did not like the idea of having a gang of Italians in their vicinity, and it is thought they set fire to the house to keep them away.

This was the fire that caused the alarm to be sent in from box 43, calling out the firemen Monday night, who returned after going as far as Grant avenue.

The Westfield Election.

The school election at Westfield last night occasioned considerable excitement among the voters of that town. As stated in yesterday's News the reading of the Bible in the public schools was made an issue. The Bible faction won by the election of Dr. Sherman Cooper and R. L. Fink. The other candidates were Miss E. Bridge, Mr. J. B. Green and Dr. Morse.

DUNELLEN'S ELECTION.

THE SCHOOL HOUSE CROWDED AT LAST NIGHT'S MEETING.

The Rev. Mr. Livermore Resigns from the Board of Trustees and Mr. H. C. Gaskill Elected.—The Rev. A. I. Martine Also Elected.

"Goin' to be a putty big 'lection," remarked one of Dunellen's oldest residents, last night, as he was ascending the stairs in the school building to the principal's room, in which the election was held. He was not far off in his calculation, for the meeting was said to be, by those who know, the largest ever held in that place. There were about three hundred persons present, including probably a hundred women. The false report published in the Press of this city to the effect that one of the trustees had resigned and that there was a contest over the election between the Junior Order United American Mechanics and the Catholics, was the cause of the big gathering and stirred up the village folks ire. The Rev. L. E. Livermore during the meeting denounced the report as the work of some person who desired to create strife, where naught but the most peaceable relations had existed, and he especially called the attention of the reporters present to the peace and harmony which reigned throughout the meeting, in direct contrast to the story published. Mr. Livermore also requested that the matter be given special mention in order to undo the wrong that had been done them.

The meeting was called to order by the Rev. Mr. Livermore, who read the call. Mr. W. J. Hamilton was elected chairman and Mr. H. C. Gaskill secretary. The sum of $2,700 was voted for school purposes. The financial report for the year showed a balance on hand of $2,496.19 to the credit of the school district.

Mr. Hamilton appointed as tellers Messrs. Lowrie, Zender and Bodine, and the election of trustees was proceeded with.

The Rev. A. I. Martine was elected in place of Mr. R. J. Swackhammer, whose term expired last night.

As Mr. Livermore is to move away from Dunellen in a few weeks he presented his resignation as a member of the Board. It was accepted and Mr. H. C. Gaskill was elected to serve the remainder of the term.

The Board now stands thus: Mr. T. L. Thomas, one year; Mr. H. C. Gaskill, two years, and Mr. Martine, three years.

The chairman appointed as the auditing committee Messrs. T. R. Wyncoop, A. Gray, and T. C. Bodine.

A vote of thanks was extended to the retiring trustees and a special vote to the Rev. Mr. Livermore.

Mrs. T. C. Bodine was nominated by Mr. T. F. Haffner for a member of the Board, but she declined.

EMPTIED SEWAGE IN THE STREET.

Complaint Made to the Board of Health of Brown & Co.'s Action.

Mr. Wm. H. Hillman of Sherman avenue complained to the Board of Health to-day that an employee of Brown & Co., the odorless excavating company, had emptied a load of sewage from a cesspool directly on the sidewalk at the entrance to the woods on the Leland estate, corner Grant and Sherman avenues. The man attempted to drive into the woods, but his wagon became fast in the mud and all attempts to get any further proved unavailing. He at last emptied the load on the sidewalk and drove off.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Edward Stein of Grandview avenue, who has been seriously ill with typhoid-pneumonia, is convalescent.

A meeting, to be addressed by Mrs. Ballington Booth, will be held in the Crescent avenue church, on Monday evening next.

Mrs. Henrietta P. Jacques, wife of the late Rev. P. L. Jacques, died in North Plainfield, yesterday, in the 79th year of her age. The funeral will be private.

At Mr. Hulett's Sunday opening next week, at his piano store on West Front street, an excellent programme will be rendered. A piece of Mrs. Bartlett of West Front street, who has recently returned from Europe, will give several of her best selections.

The P. Bi C. Entertainment.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club entertainment at Music Hall last evening was enjoyed by the many friends of the club present.

The Princeton gymnasium team showed themselves to be well-trained athletes. The instructor of the P. Bi. C. took a prominent part in the work on the apparatus.

The wrestling of the Princeton boys was very exciting and brought out to advantage the agility, strength and science of the young men.

The music was captivating and of a kind only heard when college boys play.

Cut in the Palm of his Hand.

Frank Perry of Harrison street, North Plainfield, an employee of the Scots Press Works, while at work, Saturday, sharpening a trimmer for one of the presses, received a bad cut in the palm of one of his hands. The knife slipped. Young Perry thoughtlessly closed hold of the blade to keep the trimmer from falling, and the sharp knife buried itself in his hand. It is thought that the wound will heal all right.

TRAMPS AT SOMERVILLE.

After a Hard Fight Three are Captured.

A gang of tramps has been terrorizing the vicinity of Somerville for several weeks. The men made their rendezvous in a vacant house, at the west end of the town, owned by Theodore Cornell. He attempted to drive them out, with the assistance of some officers, Monday afternoon, but the tramps refused to go and made a stubborn resistance. Mr. Cornell again entered the house, when one of the tramps made an assault upon him. Mr. Cornell was not easily frightened, and, with a club which he had taken with him, kept the gang at bay until officers came to his aid. Only three of the men were captured, and they had their hands badly battered before they gave in. They were loaded in a wagon and taken to the county jail, where they will be held for the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of assault and battery.

The gang has burned fences, insulted women, demanded money of them and in other ways proved a terror to the neighborhood.

The notorious Whyo gang, which so long terrorized the town of Raritan has, it is said, also returned, and headed by Dominic Fitzpatrick who recently served a term in State Prison for robbing, is making things lively in that town.

Since that time Marshal Pangborn has been on the lookout for him, and last night he arrested him at his old trick of attempting to get in his wife's house, which is near the lockup. A DOG CASE IN COURT.

THE DEATH OF "CARLO" CAUSES A LAW SUIT.

Mr. Pearsall with His Little Gun Killed Mr. French's Little Fox-Terrier and Has to Pay $40 for the Act.

The suit of James A. French versus Alfred E. Pearsall of Westfield, occupied yesterday afternoon in Justice Nash's court. The suit was brought by Mr. French for $200 damages for the loss of his dog, Carlo, which Mr. Pearsall shot on Sunday, November 20th last.

Mr. Charles A. Reed was counsel for the plaintiff and Mr. Coding, whom Plainfielders know better as manager of Westfield's base ball team than as a lawyer, conducted the case for defendant Pearsall.

Many Westfielders were sworn as witnesses, and they all testified that they "knew" the late Carlo, which it appears was of Scotch-terrier descent, and used to act as a "varmin" killer for the neighborhood, being especially adapted for the killing of opossums and skunks.

The most of the testimony seemed to be in regard to the price which such a dog would be worth. They all agreed—that is, all the witnesses for the plaintiff did—that the dog was of such worth that it was invaluable, and no one would venture the opinion as to the real money value of Carlo. The evidence of Mr. Cyrus Wilcox came the nearest of any to establishing a price on the dog, and he said Scotch terriers were worth anywhere from $50 to $1,000, but he could not say to which class Carlo belonged.

Mr. Reed tried to establish a relationship between the deceased and a dog owned by a Mr. Conant, but the judge ruled that it had nothing to do with the case, so the matter of finding out if Carlo had any relatives was dropped.

Lyle Moorehouse said he discovered the body of the dog on the sidewalk, within an eighth of a mile of his house, and that it was his father who took the dead dog into the woods nearby for burial.

In his own defense Mr. Pearsall admitted that he shot the dog, but that he did it in self-defense. "The dog was in my yard," he said, "chasing the chickens, and I took my rifle and went out to drive it away." When asked why he took the weapon Pearsall said it was because he knew the dog to be a vicious one, and besides a member of his family had been bitten in the nose by a brute and that helped to make him afraid of dogs. "I yelled to the dog," Mr. Pearsall said, "to get out, and it immediately started toward me with its mouth open and I shot it." He admitted that he told the dog to "get out," and then stated that the shortest way for it to get out was by passing by him and his gun, which it was evidently trying to do, according to Mr. Reed's view of the matter.

The jury retired and after a short deliberation brought in a verdict for $40 for Plaintiff French.

PRINTING PRESS PATENTS.

Mr. Walter Scott Restrained from Selling Goods of Hoe Manufacture.

In the United States Circuit Court at Trenton, Friday, Judge Greene heard argument in the case of Robert Hoe, Stephen D. Tucker, Theodore M. Mead and Charles W. Carpenter versus Walter Scott of this city for preliminary injunction restraining the defendant from using certain patents alleged to have been signed over to R. Hoe & Co., the press builders of New York. Messrs. Dickerson and Munson appeared for the complainants for the motion, and B. Lee of Jersey City, for the defendant against the motion.

On hearing the evidence Judge Green issued an order restraining the defendant, his workmen, employees, agents from selling, shipping or delivering any printing press covered by Hoe patents, until final hearing in the case at the September term.

EDITORIAL NOTES

S. O. Brinkley of North Carolina is said to have a beard five feet long. Shave it off, Brinkley.

In spite of learned opinions that drinking water does not distribute cholera germs, the fact remains that the greatest cholera epidemic which ever visited London—that of 1832—was directly traceable to the water of the River Lea. Some cholera infected immigrants inhabited a cottage on the banks of this river, and the house drainage emptied into the Lea. The consequence was 16,000 deaths from cholera in London. Germs of many deadly diseases, both in man and beast, are conveyed in drinking water—a fact that all the world ought to heed.

If an appropriation can be had from congress next winter, an electric street car line will be constructed all the way from Washington to Baltimore. A private company will build the line from Washington as far as the single tax town of Hyattsville this summer. Then it is hoped that congress will appropriate money to finish the electric road through to Baltimore, as well as to construct an asphalt drive alongside of it. This is a magnificent scheme. Baltimore is 39 miles from Washington, and an electric car ride between the two cities would be delightful. Likewise along that magnificent asphalt boulevard lot owners would reap fortunes on the unearned increment plan. There are intelligent gentlemen already fully alive to this fact. These intelligent gentlemen should at least help to build the boulevard and the electric car line.

If the Canadian Pacific starts its threatened steamship line from Halifax to Liverpool and the American Grand Trunk line starts in revenge its great steamship line from Portland to Liverpool, we shall have some of the liveliest competition even this continent has ever witnessed. The distance from Halifax to Liverpool is 297 miles shorter than from Portland to Liverpool, but the land journey from Montreal to Portland is 459 miles shorter than the railway trip from Montreal to Halifax. The Grand Trunk will have additional advantages in taking its point of departure from Portland, such as a more thickly settled adjoining territory and milder climate. The Portland harbor is one of the noblest on the borders of this continent. A great American steamship passenger line from Portland to Liverpool would be a boon both for Portland and the country.

Pure Food Laws.

It is unfortunate indeed that along with the antioption bill in congress the pure food bill was defeated as well. The adulterations that are employed in tea, coffee, sugar, spices, condiments and preserved fruits and jellies are enough to make one resolve to starve before touching any of the articles named. The adulteration extends to the baker's bread the poor man eats, and in many states to the butter he spreads upon it.

A persistent effort is now being made by grocers of the best class against this wholesale poisoning. They have mighty manufacturing interests arrayed against them, and these doubtless helped defeat the pure food bill. But it will come up again, and it will keep bobbing up till its iniquitous and diabolical opponents have gone to the reward they earned by making white clay candles, yellow ocher mustard, brick dust red pepper and chicory coffee.

Cost of Silver Mining.

Mr. James D. Hague gives in The Forum a comprehensive account of the cost of silver mining and the profits derived from it. The story is not one to make the reader conclude that silver mining is much better than even a government clerkship. The richest mine known in modern times is the great Comstock lode, discovered 33 years ago. Since then it has produced between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000 in gold and silver. This mine it was more than anything else which caused the lowering of the price of silver and the present depression of that metal in the money market. During the most prosperous period the Comstock paid a profit of 60 per cent. But that was when silver brought $1.20 an ounce. The price thence on fell off rapidly, and for 1892 averaged no more than 87 cents.

The second richest silver mine is the Crown Point and Belcher. When silver sold at $1.29 an ounce, the Crown Point and Belcher yielded a profit of 10 per cent. With silver at 87 cents it would pay no profit at all. Mr. Hague gives many other facts and figures, summing up as follows:

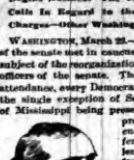
If the cost of producing silver has any bearing upon the conditions at home, touching its value and its relation to gold, these facts and figures are worth consideration, because they afford tend to correct an apparently prevalent impression that the average cost of silver is far below even its present market price. These statements go to show that only the most favorable producers, the finders of the great prizes, can produce silver at any large profit, while the average producer, especially at the present time, must content himself with a very small profit and be glad if he does not make a loss.

Many of the silver mines are closed as unprofitable under existing conditions, and it is my belief that the majority of people whose money is now invested in silver mining enterprises will lose their money if they attempt more than they can produce it. I think it doubtful if all the silver ever produced in the United States, reckoned at the old standard of 16 to 1, would, after deducting from its value the cost of its production, return the capital invested in the operation. The great profits of silver mining go to the fortunate few; the average miner of the precious metals is not overprosperous, and very many never find the "pot of gold" for which they toiled, but few are citizens.

DECIDED BY THE CAUCUS

The Senate Democrats Will Attempt Reorganization.

CLEVELAND IS AGAINST NEPOTISM.



WILLIAM B. COX.

Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell Begins Business—The Turkish Minister Calls in Regard to the Missionaries' Charges—Other Washington News.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The Democrats of the senate met in caucus to consider the subject of the reorganization of the elective officers of the senate. There was a large attendance, every Democratic senator with the single exception of Senator Walthall of Mississippi being present. As at the preceding conference, Messrs. Peffer, Kyle and Allen, Populists, were not invited to attend. The caucus adjourned at 4 p. m., having during the four hours of its session come to the determination to nominate the elective officers. The ticket so nominated is composed of William B. Cox of North Carolina, as ex-representative, for secretary of the senate; Richard J. Bright of Indiana, ex-sergeant-at-arms, for sergeant-at-arms; Rev. W. H. Milburn, present chaplain of the house of representatives, for chaplain of the senate.

This result was not reached without a protracted debate, for there was a considerable element of the party that opposed the idea of doing anything that would be a violation of the precepts of the senate and give cause for opposition on the part of the Republicans.

Patronage Controlled by the Caucus.

No time was fixed for the presentation of the necessary resolutions in the senate, and they may be deferred or may come up for action. A leading member of the committee stated that the chief reason why the caucus took this course was to get rid of the importunities of candidates and to enable the senate to go about its regular work. The nominations made were adopted with practical unanimity.

The patronage of the senate under the officers agreed upon was considered for some time, and a list agreed upon of the employees of Republican faith who will be retained. As the Democrats have been permitted to have certain employees, the Republicans will, of course, be given the same privilege. The patronage, however, instead of being under the control of the officers, will be parceled out by the party caucus.

After the caucus was over one of the leading members of the Democratic committee said that it was the intention of the party to make the attempt to elect the nominees.

The Republican senators about the Capitol look upon the action of the caucus as a declaration that the Democrats intend to inaugurate a contest over the organization, and they will hold another caucus to decide upon the plan of campaign. One Republican senator who took a prominent part in the last caucus said that the Republicans would not stand idly by and see the precedents of the senate trampled without a protest, and intimated that if the Democrats precipitated a contest there was no telling when it would end.

Mr. Cleveland on Nepotism.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The president took occasion to define his position on nepotism. One caller presented the name of a constituent who wanted a government position. He told Mr. Cleveland that the applicant was a good Democrat, a good fellow, and, furthermore, a relative of the president himself.

"That settles it," Mr. Cleveland is reported as saying. "His name cannot be considered." And then the president is said to have read the congressman a lecture on the danger of appointing relatives to office. Among those who saw Mr. Cleveland was ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, who had a pleasant interview with the president. If he did more than pay his respects, he failed to say so when he came out.

Very much of Mr. Maxwell's time during the next few weeks will be taken up by callers, so that it will be some time before the work of making changes will have actively begun.

EXPLOSION AND FIRE.

The Town of Litchfield, Ills., Visited by a Great Catastrophe.

LITCHFIELD, March 22.—Fire destroyed the Keeler flouring mill, and in an explosion of mysterious origin that followed nearly every business house in the village was wrecked. Many persons were badly hurt by flying bricks and timbers. The damage to the mill is $1,600,000, to other property $150,000.

John Cowie, head millwright, late of Waterloo, N. Y., was instantly killed.

It is estimated that 50,000 worth of glass was destroyed in the town. Houses in Litchfield were shaken from their foundations. It is believed that a spark from a passing locomotive ignited the dust in the mill and caused the explosion.

When the fire started the citizens were awakened by the ringing of fire bells, and before many of them could dress they were stunned by the shock of the explosion and the next moment found the walls of their homes falling upon them.

The explosion shook the earth over a wide area, while the atmospheric concussion was felt as far as Decatur, a distance of 50 miles.

The large elevator standing immediately across the Wabash track west of the mill containing 50,000 bushels of wheat was quickly in flames, and together with its valuable contents was burned to the ground. Ten or 12 cars of wheat standing on the Wabash track were also burned.

The mill was the property of Keeler Bros. of St. Louis. Its capacity was 2,000 barrels of flour daily.

Secretary of State Manager Smith says the amount of insurance carried on the mill, elevator and contents was about $250,000.

SENSATION IN GERMANY.

Grave Charges Made Against Prince Bismarck.

VERDICTS IN THE PANAMA TRIALS.

Charles De Lesseps, M. Baihaut and M. Blondin Declared to Be Guilty — All Three Sentenced to Imprisonment and to Pay Heavy Fines and Costs.

BERLIN, March 22.—Rector Ahlwardt, the Jew baiter, libeler and bankrupt, recently brought from prison to take his seat in the reichstag, in the course of a speech declared that he had 11 documents which showed conclusively that while Prince Bismarck was chancellor fraudulent contracts had been made repeatedly with Jewish financiers. Vast amounts had been transferred dishonestly by means of these contracts from the coffers of the state to the pockets of Jewish speculators. These statements were made by Ahlwardt amid growing confusion among the Radicals, National Liberals and Social Democrats. He was interrupted by calls for names, but he did not give them. After the president had quieted the house Ahlwardt said that the deputies were not obliged to depend upon his word for proof that these frauds had existed, as the documentary evidence was above impeachment. Had the losses of the state through the contracts been trivial, the matter might better have been allowed to pass unnoticed, but the truth was that, through its relations with the Jews, the government had lost hundreds of millions.

The documents proving the C are signed by man of national reputation. Several of these men were now ministers. One of them was Dr. Johannes Miquel, Prussian minister of finance. Prolonged uproar followed this statement. Deputies shouted that Ahlwardt should produce his documents, as his words had been proved to be worthless, and the debate closed with his being directed to submit the document to the reichstag.

THE PANAMA VERDICTS.

The Jury Found Charles De Lesseps, M. Baihaut and M. Blondin Guilty.

PARIS, March 22.—After the arguments of counsel for the defendants in the Panama cases had been concluded the cases were given to the jury.

In comparatively short time the jury returned to the courtroom, which had in the meantime filled up with a crowd of persons who learned that the trials were approaching a close, and after the usual legal preliminaries announced that Charles de Lesseps, accused of corrupting ex-Minister of Public Works Baihaut to support the Panama lottery bonds bill, had been found guilty; that M. Baihaut, who had confessed his guilt in open court, had also been found guilty, and that M. Blondin, the go-between in the bribery of Baihaut, was also guilty. The other defendants were declared not guilty. These were Marius Fontane, Panama editor; M. Sans-Leroy, ex-deputy, who was accused of changing his vote in committee on the Panama bill as the result of the bribery; Senator Feral, accused of being bribed by Baron Reinach, and Deputies Dugue de la Fauconnerie, Gobron and Antonin Proust, who were accused of corruption.

The Sentences Imposed.

The court, after deliberation, sentenced M. Baihaut to imprisonment for five years, to pay a fine of 750,000 francs and to the loss of civil rights. M. Blondin was sentenced to imprisonment for two years and Charles de Lesseps to imprisonment for one year, the one year to run concurrently with the five years' sentence already imposed on him. All three of the convicted prisoners were condemned to pay the costs of the proceedings. The civil parties to the proceedings.

The sentences of Charles de Lesseps and Blondin were made comparatively light on account of extenuating circumstances in their cases.

The court also ordered M. de Lesseps, M. Blondin and M. Baihaut to pay M. Monchicourt, liquidator of the Panama Canal company, 375,000 francs, the amount taken from the treasury of the company and paid to M. Baihaut for his influence in favor of the lottery loan bill.

Charles de Lesseps received his sentence calmly. He told the jury with apparent earnestness that he had always tried to do his duty as a director of the company, and that where he had erred in judgment he had at the time supposed he was acting for the best interests of the canal and the state, and alluded with genuine emotion to the troubles which had overtaken his father.

MR. MORGAN'S MISSION.

Is He Going to London to Negotiate a Loan?

OPINION OF WILLIAM L. STRONG.

Pierpont Morgan, It Is Stated, Has Been Authorized to Sell $50,000,000 in Bonds by the Government—The Report Generally Credited In Wall Street Circles.

NEW YORK, March 22.—It was reported from an authoritative source that J. Pierpont Morgan, who sailed on the Majestic today, goes on an important mission for the government. It is stated that he has been authorized to negotiate a loan of $50,000,000 in gold.

The report is apparently well founded. Mr. Morgan was in Washington last week and held a long conference with Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle.

Of course neither Mr. Morgan nor the secretary of the treasury could be expected to say anything for publication on the subject. Even if it be true that Mr. Morgan is going to London for the purpose stated none of the treasury officials would admit it.

However, there are many things that seem to confirm the report. Mr. Morgan's friends say that only the most important business would take him out of this country at this time.

"I suspect," said Colonel William L. Strong, president of the Central National bank, to a reporter, "that Mr. Morgan's reported mission on the other side of the water is one of importance on the part of some of the boys in Wall street. I am one of those who believe it is true that he is going over to negotiate a loan for the government, but I have no authority for saying so. I heard the report in our bank. It came from two different sources.

Mr. Morgan Is a Shrewd Man.

"Mr. Morgan is not a man to let his right hand know what his left hand is doing in a financial transaction, and naturally in a matter of this kind he would not be justified in saying anything. Secretary Carlisle is also very close mouthed, so I do not see how any one in financial circles can claim to have any official information on the subject. But I am inclined to think that the information regarding Mr. Morgan's mission on the other side is reliable.

"Several weeks ago there was some talk of the treasury department issuing $50,000,000 of 4 per cent bonds. That was before the administration changed hands. I was reported at that time that Mr. Morgan offered to negotiate the whole issue for Secretary Foster. It was understood that Mr. Morgan had several conferences with Secretary Foster on the subject. I have reason to believe that this is true, for one or two friends of Mr. Morgan told me as much.

"It is therefore reasonable to assume, if the treasury department has decided now to issue the bonds, that Secretary Carlisle will take up the matter where Secretary Foster left off and make Mr. Morgan the medium of the transaction.

"When the subject was first mentioned I believe arrangements were made to dispose of bonds on the other side on a basis of 8¾ and 8¾ per cent. I believe Mr. Morgan would have no difficulty in placing the bonds on that basis today."

NEW YORK, March 22.—The Press says: "It has just leaked out that President Cleveland has notified the members of his cabinet that they must make no appointments until the names of those selected to assume offices have been submitted to and approved by him."

A Pardoned Man Arrested.

TROY, N. Y., March 22.—Charles Quinn, who was pardoned last December by Governor Flower after having served 6 of a 20 years' sentence for arson, was arrested while in the act of burglarizing a cigar store.

New Sensations in Kansas.

TOPEKA, March 22.—The boodle investigation is developing new sensations every hour. If the testimony thus far given is true, both Republicans and Populists made boodling a business during the past winter.

The Lowest In Four Years.

OTTAWA, March 22.—On a motion to censure Mr. Osborne for remarks made in parliament on the home rule bill the government was sustained by a majority, the lowest in four years.

BOSTON, March 22.—The senate the house order to investigate the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad was adopted without dissent.

Two Smallpox Hospitals.

READING, Pa., March 23.—Two hospitals have been opened here for the accommodation of smallpox patients. It is thought the disease is under control.

Mitchell Leaves For England.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Charles Mitchell accompanied the body of his late backer, "Squire" Abingdon, to England, sailing on the Majestic.

A CHINESE INVASION.

Five Hundred of Them Are on Their Way to This Country.

MONTREAL, March 22.—Five hundred Chinese, who were landed last week, are causing the health authorities of Quebec a great deal of anxiety. It is reported that smallpox has broken out among them, and if the Chinese are allowed to come here the plague will be sure to spread. These Chinese are bound for Eastern Canada, where a few of them will probably remain, but the great majority of them have their destination in the United States, where they have friends. It is well understood that the Celestials will be dropped at different points along the line of railway and smuggled across the lines into the states.

The principal ports exposed are Rouses Point, Fort Edward, Cape Vincent and Ogdensburg, while some of them will go into New Brunswick and attempt to cross into Maine.

Five People Found In a Box.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 22.—A farmer residing south of this city was duck hunting on a sand bar, when he discovered a large dry goods box floating with the current. He hauled the box to the shore and broke it open. The investigation disclosed the box was filled with dead bodies in an advanced state of decomposition, the remains being so badly decomposed that identification was impossible. Coroner Reynolds made an investigation and found the females were three of four men and one woman, and appearances indicated that they have been murdered.

Rhode Island Politics.

PROVIDENCE, March 22.—At the Republican convention D. R. Brown of Providence was nominated for governor and E. B. Allen of Hopkinton for lieutenant governor. M. W. Bull of Middletown was nominated for congress in the First and A. B. Capron of Smithfield in the Second district. The Democrats nominated Daniel E. Baker, Jr., of North Kingstown for governor, Dalton E. Young of Newport for lieutenant governor, and for congress Austin Lapham of War ick and Charles H. Page of Rochester in the First and Second districts respectively.

The Wonderful Telautograph.

CHICAGO, March 22.—An exhibition of Professor Elisha Gray's telautograph was given in the Home Insurance building. The telautograph enables one to transmit instantaneously by wire a facsimile of his handwriting to a distance. An ordinary pen or pencil is employed. As it moves a pen at the other end of the line moves simultaneously and forms the words and letters in precisely the same way. Whatever is written at one end of the line is reproduced in facsimile at the other end.

Anti-Pinkerton Bill Passed.

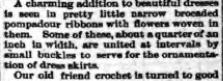
HARRISBURG, March 22.—In the house the bill regulating the appointment of special deputies, marshals or policemen by sheriffs, mayors and other persons authorized by law to make such appointments and making it a misdemeanor for persons to exercise the functions of such officers without authority, was passed finally. The measure is known as the anti-Pinkerton bill.

Shot and Killed a Robber.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., March 22.—Hiram Kistler, proprietor of a general store here, was awakened by the ringing of his burglar alarm. He seized his rifle and found a man taking goods from the store, fired and killed the robber. The latter's two companions escaped in a wagon. The dead man is not known here, and there was nothing on him to lead to his identity.

Those Receivers' Certificates.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—The receivers of the Reading applied to Judge Dallas for power to issue receivers' certificates. The judge said he was too important a matter to decide hastily and referred the matter to a master for investigation. The amount desired to be issued was $6,800,000.



Fashionable Dress Trimmings.

The leading idea in all the new trimmings is the fancy for flat and moss ornate. Most of the galons are made in three widths, for skirts are to be ornamented flat with three rows of graduated bands. A novel introduction has a transparent gold gauze ground, with a lace appliqué thrown upon it, the lace portion white, the pattern outlined in gold and shaded in the most delicate pompadour tints—pink, green and heliotrope.

Velvet is applique on a vast range of flat trimmings. Sometimes the pattern simulates a natural flower, but these are oftener conventionalized, and the hearts of the blooms are frequently composed of transparent net or coarse meshed netting.

A charming addition to beautiful dresses is seen in pretty little narrow brocaded pompadour ribbons with flowers woven in them. Some of these, about a quarter of an inch in width, are united at intervals by small buckles to serve for the ornamentation of the skirts.

Our old friend crochet is turned to good purpose, and one of the newest adornments on black crape are stars worked in crochet and sewn on at the corners. Looking at the season's trimmings, one sees in a moment the class of materials they are made for; that shot and combre effects are to be the dominant idea, and that we have never had prettier mixtures as far as color is concerned.

Jet is to be universally used, and scrolls of jet on a foundation of shaded colorings are new and pretty.

An inexpensive trimming, which has an excellent effect, is a small Grecian plait of cord, plain and tinseled, shaded and mixed in tone, which will head the rouleaux and the folds that without doubt are the keynotes to coming fashions. Some of the shaded ribbon bands have a tinsel thread, and the flat ribbon ornamented in a variety of ways is the dominant idea in the fashions of the hour.

He could prate about penology, dilate on anthropology and clarify zoology in a manner truly wise,

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Funny Baby Gorilla.

The young gorilla sent some time ago to the Berlin aquarium is, according to the statement of the superintendent, Dr. Hermes, by far the most interesting possession the aquarium ever had. "He is such a jolly little fat rascal," says the doctor, "and is at times very hard not to believe him human. He is irresistibly comical in his earnest efforts to imitate the actions of his teacher." He has been taught a number of things and is as keenly alive to praise or to blame as any child. He seems very proud to be allowed to sweep his room, which he does very nicely except that he once in awhile uses the broom as a duster. This he once did in the superintendent's library, and the effect was very startling.

HE FEEDS WITH A SPOON.

He has a smooth, shiny, black face, well shaped ears and large, intelligent eyes brimful of mischief. If his nose was a little more prominent, he might pass for a young darky. His awkward motions remind one a great deal more of a clumsy boy than of a monkey. He is extremely fond of company and distinguishes readily between men or women. Small children between 4 and 6 years are his chief delight. He is very fond of kissing them and permits them to take all manner of liberties with him without getting angry or using his great strength roughly.

Young Mr. Gorilla's habits were very regular. In this respect, says the superintendent, he was more like a thoughtful child than an animal. About 8 o'clock in the morning he generally wakes. He then sits up in bed, looking glum and sleepy, waiting for his milk, which is given him in a glass. Should this be late he whimpers, but as soon as he receives it he gives a little snort of satisfaction. He now gets up, looks around the room and begins to play. He takes his bath at 9 o'clock and grunts with delight while being washed. For breakfast he has a couple of sausages, bread and butter and fruit. He is very fond of the latter and comically careful about what he eats. If he is given cherries, he very carefully picks out the stones.

Dinner is served at 1 o'clock. The young gorilla is always very anxious to find out what the bill of fare consists of. The basket containing the dinner is most carefully examined with a view of getting a sample of a tidbit. A box on the ears is his usual reward, which seems him pouting out patient to a corner, where he sits in eager expectancy, never taking his eyes off the food. A cup of beef tea is the first course. Then a stew of rice, vegetables and meat. The young gorilla has been taught to feed himself with a spoon, which he does very cleverly, but when he thinks nobody is watching him he uses his fingers. After dinner he takes a nap for an hour and a half, then plays some more. He has a light supper of tea and bread and butter. At 8:30 he goes to bed, which is like an ordinary one, with mattress and blanket. Our little Mr. Gorilla rolls himself snug in his blanket and soon sleeps the sleep of a happy little monkey, though simple minded country folk call him the "little nigger."

PLAYING HIDE AND SEEK.

Japanese Children.

The Japanese are trained to civility from babyhood. Before a baby can speak it is taught to lift its hand to the forehead on receiving a gift. Should a child fail to make this signal of respect and gratitude it would be reproved by some bystander.

Mr. Albert Tracy, who rambled through Japan without a guide, while strolling about a town stopped to see the children coming from school.

They walked sedately and quietly with books and slates under their arms. The sight of a bedecked foreigner startled the first to come, but they bore it with a respectful bow and passed on. The next ones regarded this civility, and then as fast as the pupils came they made a profound reverence.

The innate gentleness of the people impressed the rambler. He records that he never saw a single instance among boys of that tyrannical, bullying spirit, so often observed in other countries, that delights in inflicting pain on weaker companions. Japanese children are well behaved, even toward each other.—Youth's Companion.

How French Boys and Girls Are Dressed.

Little boys and girls of the laboring classes are not dressed as prettily as the corresponding classes in America; their stockings are coarse and shapeless, heavy shoes with wooden soles make their feet look clumsy, and the flowing blue cotton apron, loosely gathered about the neck, with wide, long sleeves, is certainly more acceptable than a tattered, soiled dress, but it is not as pretty as the white pinafore which sets off the chubby neck and arms of American babies.—Paris Cor. Brooklyn Eagle.

VISITING CARDS.

Their Use and the Correct Way of Having Them Engraved.

It is correct—

To use perfectly plain visiting cards of fine pasteboard, engraved in plain script.

In an emergency, if obliged to use a written visiting card, to write one's name with pencil rather than with pen and ink, since the use of the latter would seem to imply deliberate purpose.

For a gentleman to use a smaller card than a lady and one narrower in proportion to its length.

For a gentleman to prefix "Mr." to his name on a visiting card.

For an officer in the army or navy, a physician, a judge or a minister of the gospel to use his title on a visiting card.

To use the full name on a visiting card, as "Mrs. Joel Cotton Smith," "Miss Clara Howard Jameson."

For a lady to prefix "Mrs." or "Miss," as the case may be, to her name on a visiting card.

For a married lady to use her husband's full name, or last name and initials.

For a young or single gentleman to put the name of his club on his card rather than his own residence, if he prefers.

For a lady to have her reception day engraved in the left hand corner of the card.

For residents in small towns to put the name of it on their cards in order to avoid confusion.

For the oldest single woman belonging to the oldest branch of a family to use "Miss Esmond" on her card, or for the oldest daughter of a younger branch to do so, where there are no single women in the elder branch.

For a young lady to have her name engraved below that of her mother on the same card.

For husband and wife to have each a separate visiting card.

For a lady to leave her husband's card at those of her sons and daughters in making the first call of the season.

For a lady to leave her husband's card as well as her own after a dinner party.

For a lady to have two cards in calling upon a mother with several grown-up daughters—one for the mother and one for the daughters.

When calling for the first time upon several ladies (who are not mother and daughters), to leave a card for each.

A Tailor Made Gown For $22.

The accompanying cut represents a tailor made gown of gray plaid cheviot, the cross lines being of an olive green shade mixed in the gray. The vest is very novel in design and is made of broadcloth to match the stripe in the goods. It is finely stitched at the edge and is open to show a linen shirt front and an Oxford necktie of gray silk with pink spots. The skirt is ample enough to admit of small hoops, if desired, and the waist is cut cost length and has the fashionable flaring revers. It is further ornamented with large buttons of pearl.

A Chain of Coincidences.

"From Kalamazoo, are you?" said the elderly stranger, leaning back comfortably in the easy chair at the hotel and lighting a cigar.

"Yes; from Kalamazoo," assented the young man whose acquaintance he had made on the train.

"Live town," mused the other. "I lived there myself twenty-five or thirty years ago—in fact, I was married there. Have a cigar? I don't suppose you know many of the people I knew. Always lived there?"

"Yes, until two or three months ago."

"Well, now, if you ever heard of a girl—she wouldn't be a girl now—named—let me see—she was my wife's most intimate friend. Um—if I remember now. Her name was Henrietta Parkinson. We called her Nettie. Ever hear of her?"

"I should think so. Nettie Parkinson was my mother's maiden name."

"You don't say so! Shake, young man! I feel as if you were almost an old acquaintance. Is she well?"

"Yes. She's well and hearty."

"By the way, did you ever know a spruce young dry goods clerk—though I don't suppose he'd be very spruce or very young either now—named—"

"Henry Rockamore?"

"Yes. We always called him Hank."

"Oh, yes, I knew him intimately. I saw him only a few days ago and had a long talk with him."

"Shake again, young man! I'm beginning to feel pretty well acquainted with you. Hank Rockamore, when I left Kalamazoo, was sparking—that is, I mean, he was paying a good deal of attention to Nettie Park—I mean your mother."

"Well, it seems he succeeded eventually. He's my father."

"You—don't—say—so! Young man, shake again! We're old friends. Come on, we'll go out and see the town and I'll be your father and mother both for the next two days!"—Chicago Tribune.

Carrying Beauty.

The festivities were left behind, and they were whirling to the station to take the train for the wedding tour.

With a heavy sigh the bride leaned despondingly against the window and looked through the window. Anon a tear gathered upon the eyelashes and clung trembling there. Her husband was not slow to detect the attitude of sorrow.

"My darling"—

A wild alarm filled his face.

"—what has come over you?"

The trembling teardrop fell and splashed upon her cheek. Another came and then another, and finally a very torrent of grief was her fate. Yet she was silent.

"Light of my life"—

He was well nigh frantic.

"—what distresses you? Do you regret"—

She interrupted him with an exclamation of horror.

"No, no, no," she cried, throwing her arms impulsively about his neck, "not that. I—oh, oh—boo, yo-o"—

He drew her closer and kissed away her tears.

"What is it, sweetheart? Tell"—

He was gently insistent.

"—me, won't you?"

"Oh—boo—I half-b-b-believe-th-the maid—boo, boo—of b-honor looked prettier than I did. Oh, oh!"

After a time he succeeded in reassuring her to a certain extent.—Detroit Tribune.

"You did."

A Cheap Substitute.

Wife—Well, what do you think Johnny wants now?

Husband—I've no idea.

Wife—He wants me to tease you into buying him a bicycle.

Husband (who has tried bicycling himself)—Nonsense! He can't have one. Tell him to go up into the attic and fall down two flights of stairs. It will be just about the same thing, and save me a hundred dollars.—Texas Siftings.

Cause for Complaint.

A boy of seven protested earnestly after his vacation against being sent back to school.

"Yes, but not to that school."

"And why not to that one?"

"Because there they want to teach me a lot of things that I don't know anything about!"—Youth's Companion.

Unexpected.

Miss Pinkerly—Why, Mr. Tutter, what are those little pockets for in the sleeves of your overcoat?

Tutter—Don't you know, really? Why, they are for a lady to put her hand in. I will show you if you will let me have your hand.

Miss Pinkerly—Oh, Mr. Tutter—George—this is so sudden!—Clothier and Furnisher.

A Cruel Joke.

A Pleasant Outlook.

Suburban Policeman—I have got to the end of my beat and can't go any further with you. Your friend's house is about a mile from here to the right. You go through Slaughter alley and Dead Man's lane to get there, and I'd advise you to put one of your cards in your hat in case your body is found mutilated so that it's recognizable.—Life.

She Couldn't Decide.

A moment later she was confronted by a masked man.

The beautiful girl was scared. Her cheek was as white as the undriven snow, and her eyes stuck out to their full size.

She tried to pass the marauder, but instinct told her he was a marauder—without speaking to him.

But he intercepted her.

"I propose"—

His voice was harsh and discordant.

—"to abduct you. Will you"—

He was very calm.

—"go with me?"

She hesitated.

"I don't know," she faltered. "Really, you"—

Her manner grew suddenly firm.

The Equinoctial Storm.

The storm reported in the Southwest yesterday was central last night in Kansas, but its influence extended to the Middle Atlantic coast and the lake region. Its energy, as well as extent, entitle it, perhaps, to the honor of being the equinoctial storm.

It is likely to cause dangerous winds and weather off the Atlantic coast from the Delaware Capes northward to Portland, Me. It is attended by a "warm wave," which carried the mercury up to 80 degrees Fahrenheit in the lower Missouri Valley.

A PINK TEA.

Preceded by a Missionary Talk at the Congregational Church.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Congregational church gave a pink tea in the church last evening. The company gathered in the auditorium and listened to reports from the secretary of this society, Mrs. E. L. Suffern, and greetings from friends to the mission work, through the president, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, and then to an address by Miss Theodora Crosby, who served four years as missionary in the Micronesian Islands. She spoke impressively and interestingly of the work there. Some of her stories are touching, some tragic and others ludicrous. She spoke of missionaries who were literally martyrs in former days, and one family who were there now, were actually wearing their lives out because relief was not sent them. But in spite of all she said the missionaries did not want pity for themselves but pity for the people.

During the evening Mr. Horace Martin sang two solos, and Mr. Barnes, Mrs. Dwight and Mr. Conde gave two organ, piano and violoncello trios that were well received.

After the exercises those present passed into the parlors, where tables very tastily arranged under the supervision of Mrs. Henry Lopsley, and presided over by Mrs. John Burnett and Miss Ellis, awaited their attention. All were bountifully supplied with refreshments and a social hour was passed very pleasantly.

The floral decorations, which were very artistic, were due to the liberality and taste of Mrs. W. H. Brower.

THEIR TENTH ANNIVERSARY.

The Event Celebrated by Unity Lodge, Last Evening.

Addresses were made by Grand Inner Guardian Rockafeller of Somerville, District Deputy Grand Chancellor Dungan of Bridgeton, District Deputy Grand Chancellor Bowman of Goodwill Lodge, Scotch Plains. There were several members present from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, of this city. Among those who delighted the guests by recitations were Fair Chancellor Dunn and J. B. Carney of Perseverance Lodge, and A. W. Ten Eyck of Unity Lodge. A collation wound up the evening's entertainment.

MME. CHARLIER'S WILL.

Curious Provision for a Son Who Has Long Been Missing.

In the Union County Orphans' Court at Elizabeth, yesterday, the will of Mme. Charlier, the noted fortune-teller, came up. The estate is worth about $50,000. Citations were issued to the heirs to appear May 17, when a referee will be appointed to take the testimony.

Mme. Charlier's will is unique, and the court has not yet been able to construe it. She bequeaths her possessions to her three children—Joseph, who lives in Roselle; Lucy, who dwells in Jersey City; and a son whose whereabouts is unknown. He has been away from home twenty years.

His mother in her will says that he is in the hands of savages in South America who are holding him in bondage, and she directs that if he does not return to New Jersey within eight years from the date of his mother's death his share of the estate shall be divided between his brother and sister. Mme. Charlier, just before her death, said that it had been foretold her in a dream that her son would appear within eight years from her demise and claim his share of the estate.

The court ordered all the diamonds and other valuables belonging to the estate removed to a safe deposit vault at Elizabeth, so as to place them beyond the reach of burglars.

The car on which has been filed by Joseph Charlier against admitting his mother's will to probate will be withdrawn when the citations are returned to the court.

Their Twentieth Anniversary.

The twentieth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the First Baptist church will be held in the church to-morrow.

The afternoon meeting, beginning at three o'clock, will be addressed by Mrs. Downs of India.

An entertainment will be given in the evening at 7.45 o'clock, conducted by Mrs. Downs, illustrating the manner and customs of the Telegus.

A cordial invitation is given to all to be present at these meetings.

An Accident to a Bowler.

Dennis Galbraith met with a peculiar accident last night, but nevertheless a painful one. He was bowling at the C. Y. M. L. club house on Sixth street, and while standing with his hand resting on the balls, a ball rolled swiftly down the runway against his finger, badly bruising it. The injured finger was dressed by Dr. Simpson.

"Missions in India" as Told by Mrs. Maxwell.

The storm last evening somewhat interfered with the attendance at Vincent chapel to hear Mrs. Elizabeth Buckmaster Maxwell speak on "Missions in India."

Mrs. Maxwell earned her right to speak by spending ten years in missionary work in that country, helping her husband. She is a handsome woman of noble bearing, and spoke in a very pleasing and intelligent manner throughout.

She was very neatly attired in mourning, which she wore out of respect to the memory of her husband, whose death occurred in India, of cholera, after an illness of but twelve hours, while he was doing mission work among other sufferers.

Mrs. Maxwell said that few people had any conception of the difficulties of mission work in India. The country has an area two-thirds of that of the United States with over five times the population, and the people speak over three hundred different languages.

Then there is caste to be overcome. This and the hordes of all forms of destructive animal life and the climate are perhaps the greatest of all difficulties.

The people of one caste will not affiliate with the people of another caste, and so far is this carried that a high caste Hindoo will not suffer himself to even touch the garment of a lower caste, considering it a serious pollution. All forms of labor are held to be degrading. Furthermore, those who do one form of labor cannot be induced to do another form.

If the woman in this country who knows her trials with one servant were to multiply it by ten she might form some idea of the difficulties one must contend with there to even maintain existence.

Horses are very cheap. A good horse costs forty dollars, and a pony for children can be had for three dollars and a half. They do not cost much to keep, but they require close attention, for the climate is very trying to them also. The climate is particularly trying to children. The missionary must have a horse or he cannot travel, and unless one has a pony it is almost impossible to give the children necessary exercise in the open air.

One good servant in this country will do almost as much as seven servants in India. The servants there are very cheap, and seven would cost only about what one would cost here.

There are at present about three millions in India who are professing Christians, and there is good news from there. The greatest revival ever known there. To sustain it men and means are greatly needed.

After Mrs. Maxwell had finished her exceedingly interesting address, Rev. Dr. Burlbut said that unknown to her she had brought with her some copies of a new book entitled "The Bishop's Conversion." He had been fairly fascinated with it. He had not known the authoress, who it so happened was Mrs. Maxwell. He was sure those who had heard her would want to read her book, the profits of which went to herself. The books were purchased by those present at $1.50 per copy.

After a collection had been taken up the audience was dismissed with the benediction.

Fifty nine-tenths of them are Democrats, and yet there is not one among them who wants to be postmaster under Cleveland. The office pays a little over $300 per year. The present Postmaster is a Republican, appointed under Harrison. He is so well liked that no one wants him thrown out.

One of the most exciting school meetings seen in Red Bank for a long time occurred Monday night. C. D. Warner, Mayor of the town, ran for trustee, and his opponent was W. M. Gray, nominated by the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Warner got the votes of the women on the ground that he was the means of getting a saloon license. Warner, however, was elected by 89 majority. Many ladies were present.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A genius has invented a new kind of paint which is yellow when it is cold, but bright red when it is hot. A practical use is suggested for it as a coating on machinery. When boxes and bearings and other portions of machinery where friction is engendered become hot, the paint would turn red and give warning.

Ex-Secretary of Agriculture Rusk characterizes in terms of contempt the idea of producing rainfall by explosives. He predicts that it will die out shortly "along with its twin absurdity, the flying machine." Take care, Uncle Jerry Rainfall by explosives probably will not work. But nothing is more likely than that rainfall will be controlled in some other way by science in future, and that not very far in the future either. Every great idea meets with many failures before it is successfully worked out in matter, but it always gets there all the same. As to that other "absurdity," the flying machine, it is almost safe to predict that Uncle Jerry himself will take a trip in an airship before he dies. At least if he does not there are those now living who will.

One of the things that will make country life more agreeable is the electric street car. Before many years lines of these cars will be running through every thickly settled neighborhood. Instead of having to take his farm horses from the plow or wagon whenever an errand to the next village must be done, it will only be necessary for the rural inhabitant to wait till the electric car comes along, board it and go to the postoffice or country store in a jiffy and back again by the same means of transit. The electric car is cheaper than the horse car. The tracks can be easily laid at the sides of the wide roadway. Such lines, too, would quickly increase the population of a country neighborhood. They might now be established in many localities which the steam railway has not yet penetrated. They could easily connect towns which now have no means of communication except by horse and carriage.

Mourning Stationery.

Few things give a more unpleasant shock to a sensitive person than to have a card sent to him which has a black border around it half an inch deep or to get a letter in an envelope with a like border. The first moment until he glances at the name upon the card or opens the envelope is so fraught with frightful possibilities that it becomes real agony. The mind flies involuntarily to absent ones he loves most tenderly. The thought stabs him like a knife. What if—

The effect, while not so startling, is fully as unpleasant when in a car or at church the beholder's eye falls upon a whole family clad in dead, terrible black from head to foot. It is a horror to humanity this awful fashion of wearing mourning. It makes half the world a grievous, saddening sight to the other half. And when, as is sometimes the case, the whole matter of putting on mourning apparel is a mere piece of vanity, it becomes not only a melancholy reminder to the spectator, but downright sinful hypocrisy. There is woe enough in every human breast for itself without constantly being reminded of others' woe. It is selfish to obtrude our unhappiness upon others.

If the dictates of fashion require that mourning must be worn, at least let us have none of that wretched mourning stationery, those frightful ill omens' black cards and envelopes, that shock and unnerve sensitive persons. At least, too, let those who wear the weeds of woe carry white handkerchiefs.

A Pennsylvania Idea.

A lawyer of Pittsburg—John H. Stevenson has the honor to be his name—has drafted and sent for introduction into the Pennsylvania legislature a bill that is worthy of notice. It is a bill providing that no man addicted to the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors shall be appointed to any statutory office in that state. Being "addicted to the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors" is interpreted by this act to mean that a man has been publicly intoxicated within one year previous to his appointment. The word "publicly" leaves a large hole in this would be statute.

Then Mr. Stevenson's act names the officers whom it is intended to affect. They include administrators and guardians, commissioned officers of state militia, policemen and firemen and all officers created by special law or statute. This would probably include teachers in the public schools if such a thing had ever been known as a schoolteacher's getting drunk. The peculiar feature of this would be law is, however, in its postscript or last clause. "It will not affect members of the legislature."

Why not members of the legislature? There can only be one explanation. Members of the Pennsylvania legislature must be such teetotal temperance men that those who so need to include them under the law against men who get drunk holding office. It is odd, too, for members of congress and of legislatures generally are not averse to intoxicating drinks. But not Pennsylvania legislators, as we see from Mr. Stevenson's law. They never are drunk. Allow us herewith to hold up the Pennsylvania legislators to the gaze of an admiring world as the only sober legislators in America who never become intoxicated.

AFFAIRS IN THE SENATE

Harris Succeeds Manderson as President Pro Tem.

LIST OF LATEST APPOINTMENTS.

Postmaster General Bissell Outlines His Position In Regard to Appointing Postmasters—Many Old Timers Call on the President—Carlisle Is Silent.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—A provision in the last executive appropriation bill required the appointment by the speaker of the house and the presiding officer of the senate of the Fifty-second congress of three representatives and three senators of the Fifty-third congress as a committee to inquire into the workings of the several departments of the government. Mr. Cullom, who was one of the senators so appointed, applied to the senate to be relieved of his duties on the commission, but it was developed in the course of a discussion that the law did not provide the means of filling any vacancy that might occur. The subject gave Mr. Hoar an opportunity for challenging the constitutionality of recent appointments by the president of the United States of senators as delegates to the Brussels monetary conference and in other civil capacities, and he thought the question of sufficiently grave importance to have it referred (with Mr. Cullom's resignation) to the committee on privileges and elections. Finally, in view of the difficulties in the case, Mr. Cullom withdrew his request and Mr. Hoar's motion fell with it. Mr. Manderson resigned his position as president pro tempore of the senate and Mr. Harris was elected in his place. In receiving the subject of reorganizing the senate official force was broached, but no conclusion was reached. Only three nominations were confirmed. Some comment was caused by the failure to confirm Edward B. Whitney of New York, nominated to be assistant attorney general.

ISHAM H. HARRIS.

Mr. Cleveland's Callers.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—While a number of the faces at the White House this morning were those of old comers, the majority of callers were new to the scene, and they waited about with a persistency born of determined resolution to see Mr. Cleveland if possible.

Bourke Cockran of New York was one of the callers. He said he merely paid his respects to Mr. Cleveland. Judge Toney of Louisville won a bet at the White House by shaking hands with the president. Nearly a year ago at a dinner by the Iroquois club at Chicago the judge laid a wager with a friend that he would shake hands with Mr. Cleveland inside the White House within 12 months. Judge Toney told the president of the wager, and thanked him for the champagne supper of 12 covers in which he would participate.

A committee of nonunion printers asked the president to recognize nonunionists in the appointment of a public printer.

The Latest Appointments.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate:

Interior—John S. Seymour of Connecticut to be commissioner of patents; Silas W. Lamoreaux of Wisconsin to be chief clerk of the general land office; William H. Sims of Mississippi to be first assistant secretary of the interior; Edward A. Bowers of Washington to be assistant commissioner of the general land office; Henry C. Ball to be second deputy commissioner of pensions.

Justice—Horace H. Lurton of Tennessee to be United States circuit judge for the Sixth judicial circuit. To be marshals of the United States—Frank E. White of Nebraska for the district of Nebraska; George Prisbie, Jr., of New Jersey for the district of New Jersey.

State—Max Judd of Missouri to be consul general of the United States at Vienna.

Treasury—John J. Carver of Louisiana to be collector of internal revenue for the district of Louisiana.

Influence of Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Postmaster General Bissell, in answer to a question, stated that the advice and recommendations of congressmen, while not being accepted as conclusive in appointing postmasters, would be given due consideration. He thought, however, that the question of candidates should, in a measure at least, be decided by the people of the locality. Mr. Bissell also regretted the published statements that women and newspaper men would not be appointed, saying neither of these statements was true.

Secretary Carlisle Is Silent.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Secretary Carlisle's attention to the rumor that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan goes to Europe authorized by this government to negotiate a sale of $50,000,000 United States bonds for gold, and has given orders that the treasury employees refrain from talking on the subject.

EX-SENATOR SAULSBURY'S DEATH.

Brief Sketch of the Career of Delaware's Distinguished Citizen.

ELI SAULSBURY.

May, and the attending physician. Eli Saulsbury was born in Mispillion Hundred, Kent county, Dec. 29, 1817, and was a brother of Chancellor Saulsbury and also of Governor Saulsbury. Having a natural aptitude for the law, he read considerable and acquired a large fund of legal knowledge before he entered regularly upon its study. He moved to Dover in 1837 and opened a law office there, rising to a front rank in his profession. He filled several positions of honor and in January, 1871, was elected to the United States senate as a Democrat. He was re-elected in 1877 and 1889.

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

Some of the Important Changes Proposed In the Measure.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The bill prepared by a committee headed by E. Ellery Anderson for submission to congress contains these provisions:

Crude materials to be used in the process of manufacture are in general to be free of duty; all duties made strictly ad valorem; the duty on all woolens and worsteds placed at 20 per cent; tin plate taxed not more than 1 cent per pound, at which the revenue collected is too small to pay for collection and upon which it is not probable that any more reduction of rates would produce substantial revenue placed on the free list.

That German Sensation.

BERLIN, March 23.—The charges made by Rector Ahlwardt in the reichstag caused great excitement throughout the city. In the reichstag the matter was made the subject of a long and exciting debate. A committee examined the documents he produced. They were simply receipts given to the Diskontogesellschaft, of which Dr. Miquel was a director, by the Roumanian Railway company. The Diskontogesellschaft is a private concern, and in its dealings with the railway was trying to save it from financial ruin. Ahlwardt claimed that additional evidence in his possession would weigh 100 pounds. The committee announced that Ahlwardt had failed to prove his assertion, either by personal or documentary evidence. The rector was treated with the greatest derision. The reichstag has adjourned until April 13.

The Female Ball Players' Case.

HAVANA, March 23.—The official newspaper declares that the attack on the female ball players was made by the lower class for the reason that the players were only amateurs and not professionals, as advertised. The crowd thought they were imposed upon, and the assault, says the paper, was grossly exaggerated at the time.

THE BEHRING SEA CASE.

An Outline of the Case of Each Government.

THE GREAT QUESTIONS INVOLVED.

Distinguished Array of Legal Talent Engaged on Both Sides—What the American Counsel Is Prepared to Prove—Our Nation Has the Best Right.

PARIS, March 23.—The Behring sea arbitrators began the hearing of arguments in that celebrated case today. The main case of each government and a counter case, replying to the main case, have already been submitted to them. It is presumed that they have acquainted themselves with the facts in controversy and with the principles of law which each government declines to have applied. The American arbitrators are Mr. John Marshall Harlan of the supreme court and Senator Morgan of Alabama. The British arbitrators are Lord Justice Hannen and Sir John Thompson, the premier of Canada and the Canadian minister of justice. There are three other members of the court, and they will probably be the following members. These are M. Gram of Norway, Baron de Courcelles of France and Viscount Venosta of Italy.

JOHN M. HARLAN.

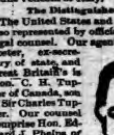
The Distinguished Counsel.

The United States and Great Britain are also represented by official agents and by legal counsel. Our agent is Hon. John W.



SENATOR J. T. MORGAN.

Foster, ex-secretary of state, and Great Britain's is Hon. C. H. Tupper of Canada, son of Sir Charles Tupper. Our counsel comprise Hon. Edward J. Phelps of Burlington, Vt.; Hon. Henry W. Blodgett of Chicago and James C. Carter, esq., of New York. The British counsel include Sir Charles Russell, Sir Richard Webster and John Rigby of England and Sir Charles Tupper of Canada.

The previous experience which the treaty governments have had, together with an arbitration similarly conducted, has enabled them to move smoothly and rapidly through the early stages.

Five Questions Involved.

Five questions are to be passed upon by the court. The first is historical. The first inquires, "What exclusive jurisdiction in the Behring sea and what exclusive right in the fisheries thereof did Russia assert and exercise up to the time of the cession of Alaska to the United States?" The second inquires, "How far Russia's claims of jurisdiction and of right in the seal fisheries were recognized by Great Britain." The third inquires "What exclusive rights in the fisheries in the Behring sea, and in the waters, did Russia claim and exercise as part of the territory and dependencies ceded to the United States by the treaty of March 30, 1867?" The fourth inquires, "How far was the exercise of such claims limited or affected by the rights of navigation and other rights of the subjects of Great Britain in the waters of Behring sea, including the question of the extent of the territorial rights of the United States in the waters of Behring sea, and how far were such rights limited or affected by the rights of navigation and other rights of the subjects of Great Britain in the waters of Behring sea, including the question of the extent of the territorial rights of the United States in the waters of Behring sea, and how far were such rights limited or affected by the recognition by the United States of like rights of the subjects of Great Britain?" The fifth inquires, "What regulations are necessary for the preservation of the fur seal in or habitually resorting to the Behring sea outside the ordinary three mile limit?"

SIR JOHN THOMPSON.

Russia's Claims.

The first question is the most important of the five, as it involves the claims of Russia to exclusive jurisdiction in the Behring sea and to exclusive property in the fur seals. Russia claimed and exercised the right to exclude all vessels from the Behring sea, and to capture and confiscate all vessels found in the sea, and to prohibit all killing of seals in the sea. Russia claimed

I'm pretty near the grave, and I won't live the rest of my life a scab."

The man was so thoroughly in earnest that the melodramatic outbreak made a great impression on the crowd. There was a dead silence for a moment, and finally a perfect storm of applause from all parts of the room.

The judge, looking greatly incensed, arose from his seat and said: "Gentlemen, this is a court of justice; whatever your feelings may be, you are not allowed to express either approval or disapproval. The first man making another interruption will be ejected from the courtroom."

Chief Object of the Defense.

During the examination it developed that out of all the LakeShore engineers attached only two, Lennon and Clark, were members of the brotherhood. As will be easily understood this fact has a decidedly important bearing on the outcome of the case.

The defense is making every effort to prove that the men had all resigned their positions before the order had been read to them, or before they had any knowledge that Judge Ricks had issued an order compelling them so long as they remained in the employ of the road to handle the freight of the Ann Arbor line.

At the afternoon session Attorney Southard, representing the brotherhood, introduced affidavits from all the strikers attached. In every case they said they had resigned their positions of their own free will, without any dictation from the brotherhood, without having read the order of the court or having heard it read, and that ever since the 17th of March they had considered themselves freed from all obligations as employees of the Lake Shore road.

Another interesting feature was the testimony of William Watson, chairman of the local grievance committee. Watson had been summoned to bring into court all the secret laws and rules of the brotherhood relating to boycotts, and had submitted a number of unimportant documents, which utterly failed to reveal any of the secret workings of the organization.

An Embarrassed Witness.

He was sharply examined by the attorneys for the defense and made to state positively that he knew of no other secret rule bearing on the subject in question. He had just concluded a most positive declaration to that effect when the attorney remarked that Chief Arthur himself had filed with the court a rule which the witness had failed to mention. The paper was then produced and read. It is as follows:

That hereafter when an issue has been established by the grand chief and carried into effect by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers it shall be recognized as a violation of obligation for a member of the brotherhood who may be employed on a railroad running in connection with an object of said railroad to handle the property belonging to said railroad or system in any way that may benefit said company with which the brotherhood is at issue until the grievance or issue, of whatever nature or kind, has been amicably settled.

The reading of this rule created a small sensation, and the witness, who had emphatically declared a few minutes before that there was no such law in existence, was visibly embarrassed. He made an effort to explain by saying that he was not aware that the counsel for the defense had referred to rules of that nature. The rest of the testimony referred principally to the time and manner of the strikers' departure from their trains.

MAID AND MISTRESS.

THE LATEST NOVELTIES IN CAP AND APRON.

Fashion's Decrees Are Constantly Varying Even with the Nursery Maid—Pretty Caps and Aprons—A Simple House Dress for the Mistress.

A fashionable nursery maid can't dress as she may choose. Think of what that is to a woman. Every woman, no matter what her station in life, has some little hobby in dress. Just to gown herself in this hobby makes her look happy. The fashionable nursery maid has not this privilege. Her gowns, her cap and her apron must be made in the style which the lady of the house considers correct. No thought is given to whether they are becoming to the wearer or not. So it often happens that the nursery maid with the small pinched face is forced to wear a cap of huge proportions and an abundance of ruffles, while the bland, round faced young woman carries a cap not larger than a tumbler doily on her good sized head.

Fashion does not always cater to the fitness of things. However, this year's styles in caps and aprons are pretty, and the variety is large enough to suit the various maids called upon to wear them. There is the apron of fine white cambric, with narrow yoke and shoulder straps, which the English call the Kensington. It is thrty-eight inches long and has five 6ins tucks. The strings are a quarter of a yard wide, each finished with narrow tucks. With this apron is worn a jaunty little cap, with long strings in the back.

Another apron worn by the fashionable waitress is made in the same style only with much wider tucks. Occasionally the tucks are outlined with a colored thread, but the apron strictly correct this season boasts of no color. Bands of embroidery are among the favorite modes of trimming. Deep ruffles of embroidery are also fashionable.

It is possible that the average woman in looking at the pictures or reading descriptions of house dresses is inclined to think that they are very elaborate, and she cannot compass the making of one. And it is just here she makes her mistake. The simplest of all designs, the princess, may, if it is properly fitted, have hanging lace sleeves added to it, have knots of ribbon here and a bit of trimming there, until it rivals in magnificence a house gown which is much more elaborate in cut. It is in knowing how to put the decoration on, it is in giving an individuality to your house dress, that makes it becoming, and I do think that as it is the people we love whom we see at home it is more than worth while to pay due attention to the gown that is to be worn before them.

LAID HIS HEAD ON THE TRACK.

The Plan Adopted For Suicide by a Jilted Lover In Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, March 23.—Because of unrequited love, Will Fry, aged 17 years, laid his head on the Louisville Southern track and suffered decapitation. He has been in love with a schoolgirl living in his neighborhood for some months past and the girl not reciprocating his attentions any more than she did a number of other young fellows.

Young Fry is said to be excused from school and walking to a point on the railroad where there was a sharp curve, waited for a train. At its approach he laid his head on the track. When the engineer saw the young man it was too late to defeat his purpose and the young man's head rolled down an embankment.

Killed Himself and Wounded Another.

STOVERSTOWN, Pa., March 23.—Daniel Hamme, a married man, shot a married woman named Glattfelter, with whom he had associated, and seriously wounded her. He then turned the revolver on himself and put a bullet through his brain and died almost instantly. The deed was committed in Mrs. Glattfelter's home, her husband and a number of neighbors being present at the time of the tragedy.

WOMAN AND HOME.

CURB THE CHILDREN'S TEMPER AND SET THEM GOOD EXAMPLES.

Daintiness In Dressing — Bicycling For Young Children—Wedded to the Pen. There Are Few Women of Leisure—Notes For Homemakers and Mothers.

A great deal has been said in recent years about the physical training of children and the duty of parents to provide their little ones with almost fresh air and wholesome exercise, while comparatively little is said concerning the necessity for a cheerful and equable social atmosphere about the home. A great many children who are born in luxury never feel the refining influence of a gentle, cultured home. The moral atmosphere about them is poisoned by the evil temper and want of restraint of parents who little realize how often they shock the delicate sensibilities of little ones whose fine nervous organisms have not become accustomed to these changes in the home atmosphere.

The nervous system of a little child is peculiarly delicate and sympathetic. The most serious disturbance to its health must result from the continual shock of domestic broils and rude explosions of temper. And it is well known that such disturbances leave a permanent mark upon the physical as well as upon the moral nature of the child. The most physicians of children consider the English system of the nursery a most wholesome and wise one. By this system the children are left to grow up in a world of their own, away from the jars and excitement of more mature life, the anxieties of which they very often share sympathetically, though they do not understand them and are not brought up by the experience and wisdom which only comes with mature years. Suffering in a child's mind is as intensity while it lasts. He does not see beyond it.

There is a spirit of righteous indignation which no one should be without. For "anger," says a wise writer, "is a sinew of the soul, and he who wants it hath a maimed mind." It is not to this anger that we refer, but to the uncontrollable temper of purely selfish persons, who make the atmosphere of their homes miserable with their rude outbursts, who seem to exhibit their temper merely for the purpose of showing their power and because it is unchecked and foolish grievance. For the individual with an ungovernable temper is usually a weak person, who takes this miserable manner of asserting his dignity.

The wretched suffering of a little child brought up in a household where the mother is of uncertain temper, liable to frighten the helpless child by her sudden spasms of coarse anger, can hardly be conceived. Almost as wretched is a gentle, refined wife whose lot it is to live with a husband who is a confirmed grumbler and whose temper is so continually at a white heat that he is hardly to be looked upon as a reasonable being. It is above all things the duty of parents to curb the temper of their little ones in childhood and to teach them that the woman must herself up who is a born nutlet in parturition.

With the woman who is a natural genius at robes and in the way of wearing them this "well dressing" is not dependent upon the cost of material, a wide variety or much of it. Without special thought, she makes the best of her material. With the most inexpensive fabrics and the least space of time she will appear as exquisitely dressed as others make out who are unlimited in resources.

Further, the veriest dowdy toilets may have lavished money, time and thought upon her personal deckings. It is not at all her fault that she is a glaring error in good form and a distraction of delicate taste. She hasn't the perception and the knack necessary for the success of a pretty costume.

But she usually feels happy, for she seldom realizes that she is a "curious sight" and a "question of ludicrous modes and colors."

The natural genius at dressing has "the tact somehow of getting things on in the right way, of slipping them deftly and securely into place and making them stay there.

Who of us does not known some woman whose daintiness of wearing a cheap print gown and a shifting hat has made her the prettiest picture in all the church and who has not envied her that fine instinct in her fingers that taught her how to give just the touch of genius to it all that makes the difference between being exquisitely dressed and ill dressed?—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Bicycling For Young Children.

The average mother of the average small child yields without question, if her purse permits it, to his request for a bicycle, tricycle or velocipede. That in so doing she sometimes does the boy or girl a serious wrong is attested by the harmful results which often follow. An English surgeon lays down the rule that, given the usual development of six years, that is the earliest age to permit a child to cycle, and the caution is added that this in many cases is too early.

Great care should be taken in choosing and fitting the machine. It should be light of course, the gearing low enough to admit of a short crank throw (four inches is generally safe for a child of 6 or 7) and the saddle and spring properly adapted to the weight and size of the rider, but most important of all is the length of reach. This should be quite short. The child should be able easily to touch the pedal at its lowest point with the heel. Nothing is more injurious than a reach so long that the unfortunate boy appears as if riding on a rail, just touching the pedals with the tips of his toes.

Then, the position must be carfully studied. Young growing tissues are easily distorted, and a saddle too far back and handles too far forward would certainly cause a curved spine and a permanent camel's hump. The peak of the saddle two inches behind the crank axle and handles so brought round and back that the child can sit perfectly upright on the machine are two things that must be insisted on in buying either a bicycle or a tricycle for a young rider.—Bicycling News.

Wedded to the Pen.

I was talking to a very bright literary woman in New York a few evenings ago, and in the course of conversation she said:

"It is very strange to me that so many girls are anxious to write and be known as authors, since there is nothing that seems to keep women from marrying so much as a literary career. There is undoubtedly something about a literary career that keeps women from realizing their highest destiny. Look over a casual list of women who have made literary successes, and for the most part they are unmarried. There is Mary Wilkins, a woman who would have made the dearest little wife for some man, but she told me the other day that she was so wedded to her pen that she had no time to think of marrying. Now, such a thing is a pity. Clever Margaret Merington practically told me the same thing. Look at the long list of others: Gail Hamilton, Grace King, Mary Mapes, Maria Parloa, Sarah Orne Jewett, Lucy Larcom, Constance Fenimore Cooper, Edith M. Thomas, Nora Perry, Elizabeth Marbury, Louise Stockton, Juliet Corson, Octave Thanet, Josephine B. Le Row, Kate Field, and doubtless there are others I cannot recall now at the moment. I don't know what there is about the pen, but its steel point certainly seems to penetrate the feminine heart."

And my delightful friend, herself a literary woman of repute and a maiden lady, sighed, which spoke louder than had her words.—Philadelphia Times.

There Are Few Women of Leisure.

"You business women are all wrong in calling us women of leisure," said Mrs. Emma Webb Haskett. "Women of leisure indeed, as if matrimony was not a profession and a difficult profession. The fact that it is not regarded as such causes a large proportion of all the trouble there is in the world. No woman has a right, as an honest Christian human being, to expect to get something for nothing. Now, you are very busy, having almost no leisure at your command, and it takes about all that you can make to live, doesn't it?" The notebook woman was constrained to admit that this was a truthful statement. "Now, I have," said Mrs. Haskett, continuing, "something more than thismuch, truly, but something—and do you suppose that I am not obliged to give value received? Most certainly I am, and my task is in its way no less arduous and exacting than yours. And it is proper and fitting that it should be so.

"Matrimony is no one sided bargain. It is not like an account book, with all the gain on one side and the loss on the other. If I had my way, there should be added to schools classes which should teach the dignity of matrimony and its demands. There is much which both men and women should seriously consider which they never think of in this connection. I am of course speaking of matrimony from a business standpoint, and if the latter be the more business there is in it the more happiness as a general rule."—Chicago Post.

Where Mothers Often Err.

Of course every mother's baby is the sweetest, the brightest and the prettiest baby in the whole wide world that is full of lovely, sweet things, and every mother expects everybody else to have the same opinion that she herself holds on this particular matter. It is in the nature of things that this should be so, for it is a part of the great mother love that is awakened by the first feeble wail of the tiny bit of humanity that comes into the world to be loved and cared for in its perfect helplessness. But there are people who are kind hearted and sunny, who love children and would do anything in the world for them, but who grow tired of hearing about the wonderful things they say and do. Isn't it a little bit strange that mothers forget this and confine themself to conversation relating to baby and devote their whole time to the children?

It is in part a mother's duty to devote herself to her children and do everything she can for their good. But some mothers forget that there are other duties she owes to herself, her children and her friends as well. One forgets that it is her duty to keep in touch with the world and with people outside her own fireside circle, so that when the boys and girls grow up mother won't be a bit behind the age because she devoted the best days of her life solely to looking after their comfort.—Buffalo News.

Women Wage Earners.

When this country had a population of 5,000,000, an idle woman was almost unknown. Women worked on the farms, looms, wove, braided straw and counted their half, if not more, in the concerns of industry.

Now, when we have a population of 65,000,000, and our industries have grown immense, the figures of female employment look formidable. But the question which no statistics of employment permits us to answer is whether the percentage of women who live in comparative idleness and luxury has not increased much faster than the percentage of women who are engaged in useful employments.

This is a question that the statisticians seem anxious to get at, but the figures do not furnish the necessary data. Certain it is that the number of women employed in housekeeping, as compared with the number who seek employment in other channels, is constantly growing less.

All efforts to ennoble the vocation of housekeeping, along with other seductive channels of employment for women, are most timely. Much of the old time drudgery involved in it has been removed through the introduction of modern conveniences. That it should grow into disrepute simply on the basis of mistaken pride is a great misfortune.—Helen Campbell in Arena.

A Plea For Color In Dress.

"I wish all the girls," said a complainant, "would not wear black so unanimously in the evenings. I was in a house the other evening and went into the drawing room. You've no notion how bright and pleasant it looked. One of the girls had a red silk gown with bangles of black crochet. Another was in some soft mates colored stuff, with a shiny belt. One girl wore black, but it was livened up and done off with bunches of green and pink ribbons. Can't you all manage to fix yourselves up like that?" There is certainly something in this complaint, for black is such very convenient wear for dinner and is so pleasantly undatable that it is universally popular. White and pale colors and so readily with gas and from coal fires that only those who enjoy very liberal dress allowances can indulge in many gowns of these festive tints.

Red is a capital wearing color, but it does not suit everybody. It nearly always, however, sets off the gray haired to advantage. Why middle aged women do not more frequently wear it is a difficult to surmise. They enshroud themselves in black when their sons and daughters would ever so much prefer to see them in colors to say nothing of their husbands.—Chicago Herald.

Mutton Suet as a Household Remedy.

It is very vexing and annoying indeed to have one's lips break out with cold sores; but the best remedy for them is better to strike out than strike in. A drop of warm mutton suet applied to the sores at night just before retiring will soon cause them to disappear.

This is an excellent remedy for parched lips and chapped hands. It should be applied to the sores at night in the liquid state and well rubbed and heated in before a brisk fire, which often causes a smarting sensation, but the roughest of hands by this treatment will often be restored to

There is certainly something in this complaint, for black is such very convenient wear for dinner and is so pleasantly undatable that it is universally popular. White and pale colors and so readily with gas and from coal fires that only those who enjoy very liberal dress allowances can indulge in many gowns of these festive tints.

Red is a capital wearing color, but it does not suit everybody. It nearly always, however, sets off the gray haired to advantage. Why middle aged women do not more frequently wear it is a difficult to surmise. They enshroud themselves in black when their sons and daughters would ever so much prefer to see them in colors to say nothing of their husbands.—Chicago Herald.

Mutton Suet as a Household Remedy.

It is very vexing and annoying indeed to have one's lips break out with cold sores; but the best remedy for them is better to strike out than strike in. A drop of warm mutton suet applied to the sores at night just before retiring will soon cause them to disappear.

This is an excellent remedy for parched lips and chapped hands. It should be applied to the sores at night in the liquid state and well rubbed and heated in before a brisk fire, which often causes a smarting sensation, but the roughest of hands by this treatment will often be restored to their natural condition by one application.

If every one could but know the healing properties of so simple a thing as a little mutton suet, no housekeeper would ever be without it. Get a little from your butcher, try it out yourself, run into small cakes and put away ready for use. For cuts and bruises it is almost indispensable, and where there are children there are always plenty of cuts and bruises. Many a deep gash that would have frightened most women into sending for a physician at once I have healed with no other remedies than a little mutton suet and plenty of good castile soap.—St. Louis Republic.

Pure Little Children.

When I speak of children, I mean little children—the little creatures whom Christ so loved—before contact with the world has brushed the heavenly bloom from their pure hearts, before the sweet unconsciousness of infancy has been destroyed and the gates of that beautiful garden where they worship, and where they let no sorrow with them if we will, have been closed forever.

The mother who deliberately or thoughtlessly gives her little ones into the entire charge of hired servants, no matter how trust worthy, does herself and them a grievous wrong. She like knows what a priceless treasure of delightful and elevating companionship she is losing, and she is better to bestow upon indifferent and uncomprehending persons.

This close, constant, loving association with little children is one of the most potent and valuable of formative influences, and no mother can afford for her own sake to relinquish it. The loss to the child can never be estimated.

There is no study more fascinating than that of the unfolding of human character at the earliest period. The glimpses one gets into the pearly recesses of the child's soul!—Washington Star.

Two Boston Charities.

A valuable work is being carried on by women in Boston. Notices in English, French, German and Swedish are hung in the waiting rooms of the railway stations and pier sheds warning young girls against strangers and stating at what hour a matron will be on duty to go with them. The printed badge, may be found to give all needed information and advice.

In the same city, which is peculiarly the home and centre of practical charities, a second copiable scheme is that of the Young Travelers' Aid society. Under its auspices matrons meet the chief trains, both incoming and outgoing, and aid by suggestion or information the traveler who needs it. A country girl, a foreigner, a mother wrestling with an unwieldy family of slippery children, particularly if she is a stranger in a strange land—these and similar helpless and distracted wayfarers are righted, relieved and sent on their way rejoicing.—New York Times.

Shaking Up a Room.

A writer refers to the passage in Fannie Kemble's "Recollections of a Girlhood," where she tells of a habit her mother had of changing the whole living room at one end of allowing sofas and chairs to retain undisturbed possession of the places to which they had been first assigned, this process is frequently introduced new combinations and new effects.

Try it, if you are in a state of discouragement. Pull your parlor to pieces. Bring the piano out from the corner where it has been standing for a year or more. Contrive corners by the judicious use of screens and drapery. Put the little rocker and the lounge hobnobsociably. Introduce a growing plant or two if none has been there before, and if the light is favorable. Do away with the monotony. You will find a real advantage in the effort to change effects.

The High Office of Cook.

The function of the cook is a very important one. The proper preparation of food is a question of health and life itself, particularly in cities, where occupations are such as to restrict most persons to a minimum of exercise in invigorating outdoor air. Food, cooked as it should be, in proper quantities, means well being, cheerfulness and useful activity, while ill cooked, dirty, badly seasoned and badly served dishes produce dyspepsia, pessimism and doctors' bills. Too large a proportion of so called cooks are without training, careless, indifferent, unwilling to learn and ungrateful for the pains taken in instructing them.—Baltimore Sun.

Woman's Part In Civilization.

Woman has become a very important factor of modern civilization. Without her urging and enthusiastic presence half the wheels of progress would come to a standstill and the other half would probably begin to turn the wrong way. She is the inspiring impulse which keeps our various charities in motion; she has a place in the management of every hospital; she is in the front rank of our charity in all mission work. Without her our churches would be disintegrated and public worship change to public indifference.—New York Herald.

Icing For Cake.

An icing for cake that is popular among French and German cooks and that is economical because it calls for no eggs is made from a half pound of powdered sugar, a tablespoonful of boiling water, the grated yellow rind of an orange and enough orange juice to moisten it. Put the sugar in a bowl, add the rind, and the water and lastly the juice and use at once.

A Caution About Wearing Rings.

"Don't wear your rings under your gloves unless you remember to have them thoroughly examined twice a year," is the advice given by a jeweler. The constant friction wears off the tiny claw points that hold the stones in place, and unless strict attention is paid to them they become loose in a very short time.—Buffalo News.

Marie Antoinette was the originator of many fashions in ladies' dress, including the millkmaid and shepherdess costumes, of which the esthetic forms of our own day are in great measure a reproduction and development.

Workbaskets have the honor of an everlasting popularity. Just as long as there are stockings to darn and rips and tears to be sewed up the workbasket will be in demand.

His Reply.

An instance of the quick wit of General Morton was told some years ago in connection with the anecdotes of Commodore Porter, father of Rear Admiral Porter.

At the close of the year of 1823, the commodore was in the habit of spending much of his time at General Morton's hospitable mansion. The general's library was adorned with portraits of distinguished naval officers—Decatur, Bainbridge, Perry, Morris and others.

The commodore expressed his admiration of the fidelity with which these portraits were executed, but added the criticism that he considered them too large.

"You intend to add to it by portrait to your collection shortly," he said, "but it shall be done in quite a different style."

"That implies that you don't like these" remarked his host.

"Not exactly," replied the commodore. "There's entirely too much canvas."

"That's a very singular objection for you to make," said the general, directing the attention of his guest to a small picture representing the engagement of the Essex—commanded by Porter—with a British frigate and sloop-of-war in the harbor of Valparaiso, which hung in one corner of the room. "A very singular objection indeed when we have before us an evidence that it requires double the usual quantity of canvas to take you!"—South's Companion.

TOWNSHIP MEETING.

THE FIRST OF THE YEAR HELD LAST NIGHT IN SPENCER'S HALL.

The Committee Organize by Electing Mr. Voorhees Chairman and Mr. Smith Treasurer.—Mr. Martin Qualifies as Clerk.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met last evening in Spencer's hall on Somerset street. The committee organized by electing Mr. Voorhees chairman and Mr. Smith treasurer. Mr. Martin acted as clerk.

The bond of Overseer-of-the-Poor Mackey of $500, with Messrs. Coddington and Brader as sureties, was accepted and Mr. Mackey sworn in. Collector Spencer's bond for $18,000, signed by Messrs. Elias Allen and W. C. Smith, was accepted.

Mr. J. W. Van Horn was sworn in as constable. Dr. Carman was agreed upon as the township physician, at a salary of $150 a year. Mr. David R. Weaver was sworn in as Commissioner of Appeals, Mr. Coddington was sworn in as constable, Messrs. N. B. Smalley and H. J. Martin being his bondsmen.

The bills presented were laid over until the next meeting.

At this point there was a lull in the proceedings and Mr. Levi C. Kline, who was in the lobby, arose and told the chairman that he was present to be sworn in as clerk, claiming that he was duly elected to that office.

Mr. Smith said if there was any doubt about Mr. Martin being qualified to act as clerk, it would only be necessary for the committee to appoint one for the evening, and he appointed Mr. Martin.

Mr. Kline protested against his acting as clerk, whereupon Mr. Martin took a hand in the affair, and a bombshell couldn't have caused more surprise to Mr. Kline than he evidenced when Mr. Martin had spoken. "The law," Mr. Martin said, "states that a township clerk must be sworn in within six days after election before a Justice of the Peace." He then presented to the committee a Justice of the Peace's statement of his having qualified and been sworn in as clerk.

Mr. Joseph B. Humble was sworn in as Commissioner of Highways.

Mr. Smith moved to adjourn to next Wednesday evening. It was so ordered.

BREVITIES

—Next Sunday will be Palm Sunday.

—The Bee Hive offers for Easter a full line of kid gloves and Spring coats.

—Many homes in Plainfield have already been secured, by outsiders, through the Mulford real estate agency this Spring.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers Association advertise a big reduction on sugar, butter and eggs in their advertisement to-day.

—The postponed game between the Y. M. C. L. A., of Elizabeth and the C. Y. M. L. of this city will be rolled on the latter's alleys, on Tuesday, April 11th.

—The old frame house at 81 East Front street is being torn down. The new Y. M. C. building will then be the only vacant as well as the one next to it.

—The entertainment which was to have taken place in the Washingtonville Memorial Chapel, Wednesday evening, has been postponed to next Monday evening.

—Dutch Lane became so intoxicated yesterday that he was unable to take care of himself. Policeman Lynch took him to the lockup where he remained until this morning, when he was fined three dollars by Judge Coddington.

—Under the head of "Assorted Sweetmeats" the Westfield Leader says: "Chas. A. Reed is in for it, and Plainfield is to have a baseball team." But, it is understood, that Codding is not "in for it," so Westfield will not have a base ball team.

—An entertainment will be given on April 4th, at Reform Hall, for the benefit of Mrs. Wendell Easler, who is sick from. The following committee has the matter in hand: Messrs. A. Saltzman, D. W. Littell, W. Harding, A. Titsworth, J. A. Hubbard, G. Thorn, and A. D. Jennings.

—In this city and suburban districts slowly to partly cloudy weather will probably prevail, with nearly stationary followed by slowly rising temperature and brisk to fresh northeasterly winds, shifting to easterly and late to southeasterly and followed by slowly clearing, warmer weather.

The Grip Reported Here Again.

Grip is here again. It is not epidemic yet, but cases have been increasing at an alarming rate within the last week. While the health authorities were congratulating themselves that they would be spared a visitation of influenza this season, the dreaded disease already had come and was settling on the city, each day apparently giving it a firmer hold.

Jersey City doctors have been kept busy the last few weeks attending grip cases.

The grip is certainly prevalent in this city, but only in a mild form. Children seem to be the greatest sufferers. The disease is spreading, too, and while not very serious is causing much trouble.

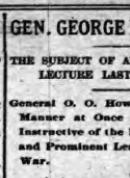
Head Pin Tournament.

The following members of the Crescent League have signed for the head pin tournament: Messrs. Vail, Wood, P. Van Alstyne, Davis, J. Doane, J. A. Sangston, Petrie, Brooks, Haynes, Keller, Vandervort and Thiers. The prize will be a first-class ball.

GEN. GEORGE H. THOMAS

THE SUBJECT OF AN INTERESTING LECTURE LAST EVENING.

General O. O. Howard Tells in a Manner at Once Interesting and Instructive of the Life on a Unique and Prominent Leader of the Late War.



FROM the time of the late war to March 28, 1866, at eight o'clock p. m., seemed as a brief interval to the old soldiers who formed part of the audience at the First Baptist church last evening, as the words of the Commander of the Atlantic Div. of the United States Army, Maj. General Oliver O. Howard, pictured before them scenes which were at one time so familiar.

General Howard is of medium height, square shouldered and gray-haired. His gray beard has a few small dark patches of hair remote from the chin—that seem to be the signal flags showing where youth is making a last stand against the encroachment of age. His face is kindly and his form robust. In speaking he has a habit, when particularly emphatic, of removing his eye-glasses, and at such times the twitching of the empty sleeve on the right side of his coat, when, having warmed up to the subject—he would like to particularly emphasize by a gesture—is touching.

His subject last evening was one dear to him, as he was telling of a man who was to him a dear friend—General George H. Thomas.

General Thomas was a Virginian. His father was a Welshman; his mother a French Huguenot. From both his father and mother he inherited bravery and tenacity, and from his mother, gentleness, piety and love of study. These traits were prominent, as all historians observed, and friends know.

General Howard in 1890 was requested to write a history of General Thomas. He thought he would like to start the account of his friend with a description of his childhood. Learning that two of the late comrade's sisters still resided in South Hampton, Va., he wrote to them. His letter was returned. On the back of it was written.

"Dear General—In reply to your letter requesting us to give you information regarding the boyhood of the late General Thomas, would say that we have nothing to tell. He was as any other boy who was well born and well-bred."

In explanation of this, General Howard said "It showed that they had not forgiven him for the side he espoused in the war."

The history of General Thomas, however, was secured from other sources, and, as told last night, was very interesting, and, to the younger and major part of the audience, instructive.

The "Taps"—a bugle call, meaning to soldiers, "time for bed, lights out" was sounded at the end of the lecture, and the audience dispersed.

The lecture was the second of the Y. M. C. A. course.

KENNY HIGH MAN.

A Low Score Game won by the C. Y. M. L.

At the Alcyone Club home, at Elizabeth, last night, the Pioneers of that place and the C. Y. M. L.'s of this city bowled a league game. The scores by both teams were low, with the exception of Mr. Kenny's, who was high man, with a score of 171. The team work of the C. Y. M. L. was not up to the usual high standard, but luck was with them and they won. Mr. Gallagher, who is generally relied upon to make a high score, last night rolled only 107.

"Gallagher is indisposed" became a byword among the team as he continued to bowl poor. The following is the score:

C. Y. M. L.		PIONEERS.

Quick Delivery.

It takes about twenty-four hours for a letter to be delivered in Plainfield or Dunellen when mailed here and as the district belonging to Dunellen extends to the Lehigh Valley railway an application will be made to place a drop box on the line, which would give us another mail departure and prove a valuable addition to the postal facilities. Why should not the free delivery system be extended to the limit of the polling district in which the Dunellen office is located.—Call.

Wallace Discharged.

As the evidence did not warrant the holding of Wallace, accused of setting fire to Murphy's blacksmith shop, at Scotch Plains, he was discharged by Justice Nash, this afternoon, on motion of Prosecutor Marsh for the State.

A VERDICT FOR $200.

MRS. MAITLAND GETS THE FULL AMOUNT SUED FOR.

The Jury Out but a Short Time when They Return with a Verdict in Her Favor.

Yesterday afternoon the suit of Mrs. John Maitland of New Market against Mr. Abner S. Coriell, administrator of the Williams' estate at that place, was tried before Justice Nash and a jury.

The suit was for $200 for services, which the plaintiff claimed she had rendered Mrs. Williams' house work and rendered other services for the deceased, who lived alone and who was very feeble. Besides doing her washing and ironing, she oftentimes cooked the old lady's meals at her house (Mrs. Maitland's) and otherwise provided for her. Several of the plaintiff's neighbors were sworn and corroborated her testimony.

The defense attempted to show that Mrs. Maitland had been given ten dollars by Mr. Coriell in payment for her services, but he could not show a receipt from the plaintiff.

The counsel on both sides occupied the most of the afternoon in cross-examinations and several times the witnesses were led to contradict themselves.

The jury retired at seven o'clock and immediately returned a verdict for $200 for the plaintiff, thefull amount sued for.

THAT SAME HARD LUCK.

Seems to Still Follow the Crescent Bowlers.

The Crescents have lost more games thrnoch hard luck than any other team in the league. Every team they bowl against makes its highest score when bowling with the Crescents. Last night they went to Roselle and the team of that place, which has not rolled a score of 1200 before this season, put up a score of 1508, defeating the Plainfielders by 87 pins. The score was as follows:

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall is now staying at Cleveland, Ohio, with Mrs. Sarah M. Perkins who is to lecture in All Souls' church, April 11th.

A donation party will be held at the home of Mr. Peter Williams, of Washington Valley, Monday night, for the pastor of the Coontown church.

The New Amusement Co.

In advance of the annual meeting of the Plainfield Amusement Co., to be held Saturday evening, April 22 as which all the stockholders will be entitled to take part and choose permanent officers, a preliminary meeting of the incorporators was held this morning and the following temporary officers were elected:

President—Charles A. Reed.

Secretary and Treasurer—James A. Demarest.

The principal office of the company will be at 5 North avenue. It has purchased all the property of the Crescent League ball team and acquired a lease of the grounds. All kinds of outdoor sports, Summer and Winter, will be provided.

The ball team will play always at home, and already a number of games with the best clubs now organized have been scheduled. Holford will captain the Plainfield team, and most of the last year's best men are signed, including Bonner, Jones and Leiby. Daly wants to come back, and Vroom of last year's Staten Island, and Murray of Somerville, have been secured. A battery good enough has not yet been found.

A GANG OF HOODLUMS.

CONGREGATE NIGHTLY IN CRESCENT PLACE.

Wednesday Night a Woman was Knocked Down and Only Saved from Further Violence by a Man's Quick Response to Her Screams.

The authorities of both Plainfield and North Plainfield should attend to a gang of toughs who nightly congregate on Crescent place, a small lane, leading from Willow avenue to Front street, near Plainfield avenue.

Wednesday evening the coachman employed on the Harberger place heard a shrill scream of "murder!" and ran out. He found the toughs had knocked down a woman who was hurrying along to catch a street car. Her screams and the man's prompt appearance saved her from further violence. She was greatly frightened and hurried off without giving her name.

The bridge at the foot of the hill on Crescent place is a dark, lonely spot, and here, the coachman says, these lawbreakers congregate and make night hideous by their ribald songs.

Women's Freaks on Trains.

A most disgraceful scene, though accompanied by very laughable results occurred yesterday on the front car of the train which leaves this city at 4.01 o'clock for New York.

A large, fleshy, well-dressed woman, with both eyes out of which were sticken was disgustingly and helplessly drunk.

She was accompanied by a well-dressed man who was also intoxicated. The woman stood on the platform for some time before entering the car. While standing there the skirt of her dress fell out. She was unable to replace it, and staggered into the cars without it. The car was well filled with passengers of both sexes. The woman took a seat well forward. Her companion took the skirt to her and urged her to put it on. She refused in a loud voice, every other word being a vile oath. The conductor and brakeman appeared and when coaxing did not prevail, several seized the woman and held her up while another put the garments on. The male passengers of the car laughed continuously throughout the proceedings, while the women gazed intently out the windows. The objectionable passenger had a ticket for Fanwood but would not get off there and paid her fare to Westfield. She had to be lifted from the car, and it was then discovered that the long train of her skirt was in front instead of the back. It became entangled about the woman's feet and she fell headlong to the platform. She was carried into the depot and righted as much as possible.

Last week a fashionably dressed woman danced a can-can in a baggage car before a large audience of men. She was hilariously intoxicated and was accompanied by her littler daughter who was obviously ill at ease at such performances. When the conductor appeared the woman rushed up to him and throwing her arms about his neck kissed him several times.

Even the Bears Won't Use those Sidewalks.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I read with pleasure the letter of "Grumbler" in a recent issue of your paper. If he, however, had been in New York, or in the mud or desolation of Netherwood, he would have looked upon Plainfield as a haven of refuge.

Now, however, that the snow has disappeared, the sidewalks (if they deserve the name) call for attention, and the following conversation, respectfully dedicated to the Committee on Roads, may perhaps hasten the deliberation of that most respectable, though somewhat tardy, body.

[Enter two small boys, Bill and Sam, Sons, Somerset street, North Plainfield.]

Sam—"Say, Bill! Are there any bears in them mountains?"

Bill—"Bears! You just bet; hundreds on 'em!"

Sam—"Well, then, why don't they come down and eat folks?"

Bill—"Well, you are a chump! Don't you see why they don't come? Them jays what runs the place puts down crushed stone on the roads and that cuts the bears feet, and then they leave the sidewalks so full of holes, that no bear would dare to walk on them, or he would be cotched, sure."

Sam—"Aint them jays cute!"

Respectfully submitted,

WINDFALL.

Scarlet Fever Among the Italians.

Scarlet fever is prevalent in the Italian colony, on the "common" at Scotch Plains. The Township Board of Health should quarantine them. They are permitted, it is said, to go to the village and mingle with the people. Providing an epidemic should break out in the village the Board would be held responsible.

Injured at Stager's.

Bullet-Proof Clothing.

BERLIN, March 24. (Special.)—The cloth cuirass, invented by a Mannheim tailor to resist the small calibre bullet, and recently approved by the War Department, has been tested in repeated trials at Mannheim. Bullets from a distance will not penetrate. Close at hand makes a dent deep enough to stun the wearer.

To make the cuirass the tailor merely applies a secret preparation to an ordinary cloth tunic. Thus prepared the tunic weighs about six pounds. The prepared cloth could not be utilized to protect the arms and legs, as it would hamper greatly the movement of the soldier.

His wagon was demolished, the horse killed, and Bangert is so badly injured that it is believed he will die.

"It is a Poor Rule that Won't Work Both Ways."

The Democratic election tickets printed at the Press office for the recent North Plainfield election were spoiled because of a blunder. After the tickets got out and before election day the blunder was discovered by the officials. The tickets had to be all printed over again. Had it been otherwise it is not likely that the Republicans would have taken advantage of the matter so long as the voters' intent was clearly shown.

The Democratic printed a circular signed by many leading citizens of the borough against the election of Mayor Saunders. The circular was full of most glaring blunders in the spelling of the names of our most prominent citizens. Voters have called to the News reporter that it caused the defeat of the Republican ticket. Did it? and, if so, was it because of the error?

The Republican election tickets were printed at THE NEWS office. There were hundreds more than were necessary, but the Democrats claim to have discovered a few on which the printing showed through on the back. If this is so it was possibly due to the tickets being used before the ink had time to become thoroughly dry. And some of the very small potato Democrats are reported trying to get the ballots thrown out because of the refusal of the majority of the people.

The Democrats tried to defeat the Republican caucus before by a similar attempt at frauds and one would suppose that lesson on that occasion would not be so soon forgotten.

Let us see, there were five kegs of beer used at Democratic headquarters to bribe voters. The Republicans could doubtless use this fact to throw out the Democratic ballots, but what is the use, the borough where it out to be, under Republican control on a fair vote.

"It is a poor rule that won't work both ways."

Held for Shooting Capt. Cross.

The coroner's inquest in the case of Capt. Joseph Davidson, who shot Noah Cross on board the barge Allentown at the Elizabethport coal docks last Thursday night, took place yesterday at police headquarters, Elizabeth. Coroner Hetfield presided. No new facts were given. The jury gave the following verdict:

That Noah Cross came by his death from a pistol shot fired by Jacob K. Davidore.

Some of the jurymen wanted to acquit the prisoner on the ground that the killing was accidental, but when informed they could not do so they agreed on the verdict. The prisoner will be committed to the county jail to-day to await the grand jury's action.

EDITORIAL NOTES

French Courtesy.

"Not being of that noble company who come abroad to lie about their native country, I have had no reason for refusing to say things which are better done in France than in America. And one thing the French do better than we do—they behave themselves better in public," writes Ida M. Tarbell in the Boston Globe.

She finds there is among the poorest laboring people of France a kindliness and courtesy that gild their rough path with sunshine and make a foreigner marvel. The French love children; they like to see everybody about them sunny and happy; therefore they take every means to make everybody happy. In the very shops the children who come on errands are treated with a tender politeness. France must be the paradise of little children.

The writer finds the French really more interested in others' welfare than the people of our nation are. Once she dropped a coin between the slats upon the floor of a Paris omnibus. She could not pick it up with her gloved hand easily. Seeing this, a French working woman sprang to the rescue instantly and fished the money up with her ungloved hand. The common people make way for one another, low to one another and treat one another constantly with all the courtesy we are accustomed in this country to see only among the best bred people in a parlor. Our fine-sounding handshaking is overdone in France. It is carried to the extent of being a nuisance. But if we could engraft upon our common, everyday manners this courtesy and kindliness without the handshaking, what a delightful country ours would be! The pretty phrases of politeness, deference and good will which most people save for social gatherings are on the lips of the French people, even of the poorest class, constantly. They have no warmer hearts than Americans, but say what you will, the expression of our friendliness and good wishes is what all people want. It makes life better worth living.

Educational Faddists.

There is war in Chicago. It is between the faddists and antifaddists in the public schools. There were members of the board of education who wanted to make elegant kid glove aesthetes out of every son and daughter of Chicago. Music, German, modeling in clay, painting and high art physical culture were to be superimposed upon the solid foundation formed by pork and beer. The faddists proposed swimmingly until the child of every man who worked in a pork packing establishment in Chicago threatened to become a greenery-yallery poet or an Oscar Wilde.

Then suddenly, as it were, Chicago rose and squealed. There was an indignation meeting of those who had no fads in their rude souls. They would not stand the high art business because it learned the young ones learned neither arithmetic, writing nor spelling. Elegant ladies, bless their souls! hissed savagely the common orators who placed the course fast before the public, but it did not fall. The kick of the antifaddists threatens culture in Chicago.

Some of the coarse facts in the case laid before the public by one speaker are reported as follows in the Chicago Tribune:

A woman from the stockyards said: "My boy can get all the mud he wants in my back yard. What he wants is to know how to figure so he can get a job in Fosdin's grocery." What good does it do a lad if he can draw a house or construct a mud castle if he can't tell what 10 pounds of liver at 4 cents a pound come to? I have at my office boxes full of drawings of pigs and other things made by children who don't know whether New Jersey is a state or a city. The teachers in your schools are longest in their complaints. All principals have to bow to these special teachers. Nothing can abate the zeal of a back action centrifugal movement faddist.

When the vessels already authorized by congress have been completed, our total reconstructed navy will consist of 42 vessels. Twenty-two of them are either finished and in commission or approaching completion. They include the following designated classes—namely: Armored cruisers, protected cruisers, monitors, battleships and gunboats, with one vessel, the Vesuvius, which is of a type peculiar to itself. It combines the functions of a harbor defense ram and a torpedo cruiser. When all the 42 vessels are completed, the United States will rank as the fifth naval power of the world. The countries that will outrank us are, in the order named, England, France, Italy, Russia. Germany will be below us. Ex-Secretary Tracy says. The building of our new navy was commenced in 1880. Previous to that we had sunk so low that even in 1886 we were only the nineteenth naval power among nations.

The sensation of a statesman suddenly out of a job must at first be rather a queer one. From having invitations to dinner, cards sent to him, railroad passes thrust upon him and deference shown him by all office boys, clerks and colored porters, he finds himself leveled in a night to the plane of a common citizen, with none to look up to him. If he is intrinsically a great man, he picks up and goes on again and regains his place whether he is in office or out of it. But if he is a little man it is only the office which makes him great, and he is nobody [illegible]

NOW COMES A STRUGGLE

Republican Senators Will Contest Reorganization.

A FIGHT TO THE FINISH PROMISED.

Four Exceptions to the President's No Reappointment Rule—Mr. Maxwell Makes Forty Men Happy In One Day—Secretary Carlisle and Future Tariff Legislation.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—After an unimportant session of the senate, during which a long list of appointments was confirmed, the Republicans went into caucus to determine their course of procedure in the question of reorganizing the executive offices of the senate. The caucus was largely attended, but was of short duration. Naturally there was a division of sentiment as to what was best to be done under the circumstances, but those in favor of contesting the proposed organization were largely in the majority. The vote taken was decisive, and it is probable that at the next executive session the nitimatum of the caucus will be given to the Democrats. An effort will then be made to settle the matter behind closed doors, and that failing, the fight will be transferred to the open session.

The Republicans claim that they are right, and when one of the leading senators was asked what it meant, he replied that it meant a fight to the finish. An amusing feature of the case is that the Republicans think the Democrats will not insist on proceeding at this time, and the Democrats think the Republicans will grow tired of the struggle in a day or two. No more caucuses on this subject will probably be held by either party.

Secretary Carlisle and the Tariff.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Secretary Carlisle, it is stated on good authority, intends to give much of his time this summer to the consideration of the tariff with a view to so thoroughly familiarizing himself with the subject as to indicate in a general way the outlines for the formation of a tariff bill by the next house. He in no sense intends to prepare a bill in detail to be submitted to the ways and means committee, but rather to be in a position to give them all the assistance and information that they may need in the preparation of a tariff bill that will carry out the spirit of the tariff plank in the Democratic platform.

That No Reappointment Rule.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The president's no reappointment rule, it is understood, does not apply to the following cases:

One—To those who have no opposition for reappointment.

Two—To those candidates for postmaserships who have opposition, but are indorsed almost unanimously by citizens of their city or town.

Three—To those who were removed by the Harrison administration without serving out their terms.

Four—To those who were nominated for office by Mr. Cleveland just prior to General Harrison's inauguration, but who failed of confirmation by the senate.

Forty Appointments In One Day.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell has begun vigorously the work of appointing fourth class postmasters. He clerks engaged at the work of preparing papers relating to such offices now exceeds 50, and an order was issued extending their hours from 4 until 8 o'clock. Forty appointments of postmasters were made during the day. All except five of these were to fill vacancies. There are 5,000 resignations awaiting him.

Monetary Conference Talk.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The resignation of all the delegates to the international monetary conference prompts the statement that Mr. Cleveland may not send another delegate. The matter will likely be discussed at today's cabinet meeting. In case the president makes this decision the minister to Belgium will probably be designated to attend the conference as the representative of the United States.

Senator Peffer Breaks a Record.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Senator Peffer has broken the record and appointed a woman clerk of his commission to examine the several branches of the civil service. The woman is his daughter.

Minor Washington Matters.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The widow of Senator Kenna is a candidate for postmistress at Charleston and has strong supporters.

James B. Enstis has qualified as United States minister to France.

The corporate existence of the First National bank of Ashburnham, Mass., has been extended to April 11, 1913.

The First National bank of Morris, N. Y., capital $50,000, was authorized to begin business.

Brigadier General Carr, who was placed on the retired list despite his protest, is making a strenuous effort for reinstatement to active duty.

Secretary Gresham received a number of foreign ministers, and the comfort and convenience of office seekers was interfered with.

Lake Traffic to Be Divided.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The trunk lines have passed resolutions to divide all east bound traffic that reaches Buffalo and Erie by the lakes in accordance with certain percentages to be determined by the commissioners. The share that each company is entitled to will be based upon the business that it has obtained during the last three years.

Rescued From Quicksand.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 24.—Abraham Worth, a plumber's assistant, had a very narrow escape from being buried alive in a bed of quicksand. After he had sunk to his armpits he was rescued with great difficulty by workmen with the assistance of a derrick.

Killed by Revolutionists.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The British steamship Hilary, from Para and Barbadoes, brought the first news of a revolution in the interior of Brazil, during which, it is said, 70 people were killed and many others injured.

Fatal Work of Masked Men.

CARROLLTON, Ga., March 24.—In New Mexico district the house of Samuel Bowen was visited by a dozen or more masked men and Bowen was taken from his house and given such a whipping that he will die.

Grip and Pneumonia In New York.

NEW YORK, March 24.—More grip deaths have been reported in the last 10 days than during all the rest of the present year. Many of the cases are complicated with pneumonia and bronchitis.

CARLYLE HARRIS AT SING SING.

His Beard and Mustache Removed and New Clothes Furnished Him.

SING SING, March 24.—Carlyle Harris was worn out on his arrival here and was allowed to sit down while answering the usual questions put to convicts. He said he was born in Glen's Falls, N. Y., and that his age at his nearest birthday was 28. His occupation he gave as a medical student and his religious faith as Protestant. In answer to the question whether or not he drank he said he took liquor moderately and at present under the advice of a physician. He said he used tobacco. His weight was recorded as 135 pounds and height as 5 feet 11 inches.

This over, everything was taken from him and his clothes changed. His valuables consisted of $2.85, three gold collar buttons and a pair of gloves. He asked that these be given to his mother. Then he was led to a bathroom, and on emerging from it was given a new change of clothing. In front of his cell door he was then was given a pair of slippers made in the prison. All the clothing was from the same shops. After his change of clothing a convict barber took off the Vandyke beard and the mustache which Harris had grown in the Tombs, and his hair was cut close.

The prison regulations having been thus complied with nothing remained but to assign Harris to his cell. The one selected by Warden Brown was No. 8, in the condemned hall, once occupied for a time by McElvaine, the Brooklyn murderer.

BEHRING SEA ARBITRATION.

The Members of the Board Welcomed by the Minister of Foreign Affairs In Paris.

PARIS, March 24.—The court of arbitration appointed to adjust the difficulties between Great Britain and the United States in relation to the seal fisheries in Behring sea met in the office of the French foreign ministry. All the members of the court of arbitration were present, together with the counsel for both countries.

M. Develle, French minister of foreign affairs, made a short speech welcoming the members of the court, the agents and the counsel. The court organized by the election of Baron de Courcelles as president. It was decided to meet at 11:30 a. m. each day, and to sit for only hours daily, the meetings to be open to members of the press to whom cards should be issued. The court then adjourned until April 4 in order to examine the documents submitted by the United States and Great Britain, which were presented. The debates will all be in the English language. A formal visit of the members was made to President Carnot.

Ann Arbor Testimony All In.

TOLEDO, March 24.—The testimony in the Ann Arbor case was completed at noon, and the arguments were to have been presented immediately, but Hon. Frank Hurd, one of the counsel for defendants, was taken suddenly ill and court adjourned until Monday. In almost every case, upon cross examination, the strikers have given substantial evidence that they left their engines after being served with Judge Ricks' famous order. The engineers now defending their liberty before Judge Ricks will no doubt be convicted. It will not end there. The decision to be rendered by the court in these cases, where men are being tried for a contempt of his own order, will be appealed to the United States supreme court. Not only are the leaders of labor organizations watching the proceedings of this trial, but railroad magnates have an eye open to its result.

Chief Arthur to the Public.

CLEVELAND, March 24.—Chief Arthur has issued a statement to the public saying that he has no power to call a strike, but that the men vote on that question. In cases where engineers and firemen have contracts with railroad companies no trouble results. The great difficulty is on small roads, where men work for small wages and get no pay for overtime. In the Ann Arbor strike notice was given of an impending strike, and all honorable means were used to settle the matter in advance.

Plans of Railroad Managers.

CHICAGO, March 24.—The management of the various roads centering in this city have issued a circular announcing that the trunkroad organization called the General Managers' association will be continued indefinitely. The intention of the general managers is to dismiss all the employees of the association and send them back to the railroad offices whence they came, subject to immediate call, in the event of a declaration of hostilities.

Mr. Gladstone's Programme.

LONDON, March 24.—Mr. Gladstone has consented to visit Epsom early for May day to discuss public business and, it is understood, he will moot the advisability of an autumn session in order to secure the passage of some popular measures and enable him to go to the country fearlessly in the event of dissolution on home rule.

Burglars at Work In New Jersey.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 24.—The Essex street and Central avenue depot of the New Jersey and New York railroad was entered by burglars. The automatic weighing machine was opened and the contents taken. Agent McConnahie's money drawer was emptied and then turned in the swamp in the rear of the depot.

Robert Alden Fales' Will.

NEWARK, N. J., March 24.—Robert Alden Fales, the boy who was convicted of the murder of Thomas Hayden and at present under sentence of death, has written his will, which shows that he is either trying to play a sharp trick or is actually crazy. In it he leaves vast sums to different persons.

Railroad Incorporated.

ALBANY, March 24.—The Coney Island and Gravesend Railroad company, capital $250,000, has been incorporated.

Signed by the Governor.

ALBANY, March 24.—Governor Flower has signed Worster's New York city civil [illegible] water shed bill.

THE WORK OF A CYCLONE

Great Destruction Reported In the Mississippi Valley.

TUNICA, MISS., NEARLY WIPED OUT.

Storms Throughout the West and Northwest Destroy Much Property—Reports Are Very Meager Because the Telegraph Wires Are Prostrated and Useless.

MEMPHIS, March 24.—Scattering reports coming to Memphis from points in west Tennessee and northern Mississippi indicate that a terrific cyclone whirled up the Mississippi valley from the southwest, crushing and sweeping away everything in its mad path. Telegraph wires in every direction were twisted into tangles and communication with the stormswept localities was exceedingly difficult and unsatisfactory. Trains from that section reaching the city brought reports of widespread destruction. Passengers on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley train told of the destruction of Tunica, Miss. The sweep of the storm as it crossed the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham road seemed to embrace a territory between Caperville and Olivebranch. Dozens of houses, huge trees and barns were razed to the ground by the violence of the storm.

The Sky Began to Darken Inkily.

The damage at Tunica, Miss., was great. In the afternoon the sky in the southwest began to darken inkily, and a low wailing sound announced a storm. Within a few minutes the wind came along with terrible velocity and with a swish and a whirl that portended danger. The first hard blow gave way to cyclonic rush and houses were crushed like eggshells.

The ruthless visitor lingered over the town scarcely two minutes, and yet in that time the lower part of the town was destroyed. The Knights of Pythias and Masonic hall is now only a mass of ruins. The roof of the building was carried away. When the storm subsided cries and screams were heard from the colored school house, where 150 children had been gathered at their lessons. The building had been blown down, and beneath the ruins was a mass of struggling children. So far as known none were killed, but there were many injured, a few fatally, some with broken arms and some with fractured skulls. The full extent of the damage is not known, but the loss to property will go into the hundreds of thousands.

Indiana Storm Swept.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 24.—A windstorm of dangerous dimensions swept this city. The damage done was very heavy. At Hoagbville, a suburb, the Brown-Ketcham iron works were unroofed, and were also the Carnaline works, where Watchman Charles Myers was dangerously hurt. The entire factory of the Indianapolis Coffin works was torn away, and the American Park hotel adjoining unroofed. Several small dwelling in various parts of the city were demolished.

A heavy storm has raged for hours down the Ohio river, and telephone reports from outlying towns in that region tell of a very severe storm. Southern Indiana seems to have suffered severely. At Alexandria a cyclonic wind blew down several houses and Lippincott's Lamp Chimney factory. John Angle, an employe, was killed. Two others are missing.

Cyclone In the Northwest.

CHICAGO, March 24.—Advices from the northwest state that one of the most furious storms known for years began in that section. At Duluth a foot and a half of snow fell. A similar state of affairs exists in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Throughout Wisconsin there was almost a cyclone, accompanied by rain, hail and sleet. Particulars from that state are difficult to obtain owing to the almost universal prostration of the telegraph wires. Milwaukee is absolutely cut off from the outside world. St. Louis was visited by the first thunderstorm of the season. The lightning was terrific and caused great delay to telegraphic business.

Kansas and Missouri Visited.

KANSAS CITY, March 24.—Dispatches from Kansas and Missouri state that a severe storm raged generally over the two states. The rainfall was very heavy. At Oklahoma City a number of buildings were blown down and several of them burned by lightning. The storm also struck Nevada, Mo. The state roof of the State Insane asylum was blown off.

Ominous Report From Bowling Green.

LOUISVILLE, March 24.—It is reported that a cyclone has devastated Bowling Green, Ky. All wires are down to that point and nothing definite can be learned.

Says the Rumor Is False.

CHICAGO, March 24.—The rumor that telegraph operators may strike during the World's fair is as false as the report that we are dropping men from our offices without explanation," said Electrical Superintendent Tubbs of the Western Union. "Our operators are in a very quiet and orderly mood and have no idea of striking."

Postoffice Employee Sentenced.

UTICA, N.Y., March 24.—Charles Knauss, who stole money from the Rome postoffice to the amount of about $5,000, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. William B. Hoffman, convicted of embezzlement from the same office, was fined $5,279.56 and given two years in the penitentiary.

Massachusetts' Legal Work Day.

BOSTON, March 24.—The bill making 10 hours a legal work day was engrossed after being rendered inoperative by an amendment giving any road the privilege of making contracts with its employees to work 24 hours a day if it chooses.

Reviving an Old Scandal.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The old scandal about undervaluations of imports of artificial flowers at this port has been revived, this time at the instance of several reputable importers of those goods.

Prairie Fires on the Strip.

GUTHRIE, O. T., March 24.—Prairie fires have been doing great damage in the Cherokee strip, destroying all pasture and much timber. Several parties of boomers have had narrow escapes.

The Mistake Was Fatal.

NEWBURG, N. Y., March 24.—Irving A. Kilmer swallowed half an ounce of pure carbolic acid and died in a few minutes. He took it by mistake for cough medicine.

Eighteen Years For a Jail Breaker.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., March 24.—James W. Lee, under indictment for shooting at a policeman and breaking jail, was sentenced to 18 years at Auburn.

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off, and then took off second joint of next finger. Then the sore broke out on my arm, and ran on my neck and face on both sides nearly destroying the sight of one eye, also on my right arm. Doctors said it was the

Worst Case of Scrofula

they ever saw. It was simply awful. Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken ten bottles, when I was entirely cured. For the past 6 years I have had no sores. I

BIG CONSPIRACY ALLEGED.

Detectives Make Serious Charges Against New York Central Employes.

BUFFALO, March 24.—Detectives in the employ of the New York Central road have discovered what they claim to be a big conspiracy between some of the passenger conductors on the road and commercial travelers and business men residing in Syracuse, Rochester and other cities by which the company is being defrauded of large sums of money. The conspiracy also extends to the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg road, it is alleged. The officers of the road have suspected for some time there was crooked work going on. About three weeks ago two conductors who were running passenger trains between Rochester and Syracuse were discharged. It was not then known that there was anything particular back of these discharges, but it is now believed that the men were discharged upon evidence gained by the detectives.

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH.

Cleveland Visited by an Awful Haulocaust.

THE BUILDING WAS A DEATH TRAP.

The Victims Were Four Women and One Child—The Fire Raged Half an Hour Before the Fire Department Was Summoned—A List of the Dead.

CLEVELAND, March 24.—A fire horror occurred shortly after noon yesterday, which four women and one child were burned to death in an apartment house on one of the leading residence streets. The fire occurred at the Morgan, a fashionable boarding place at 508 Prospect street. The building was a 3-story and basement brick structure containing 45 rooms, and it had nearly 40 inmates. Mrs. J. H. Miller, one of the boarders, discovered flames in the hall on the second floor. Escape by the stairway was cut off, and she jumped from a second story window to the ground and gave the alarm. The fire spread rapidly through the halls, and the hundreds of people who congregated on the scene at once attempted to rescue those who were in the buildings. Nobody thought, however, to turn in a fire alarm, and at least half an hour elapsed before a steamer arrived.

As soon as the engines began working, three car lines which pass the building were blocked and the crowd grew to thousands. Many of the spectators assisted the firemen in trying to rescue the persons in the burning structure, and several of them were badly burned as they were driven back by the flames.

List of the Victims.

The names of the dead are as follows:

Mrs. Mary E. Abbey, widow of Judge Abbey, aged 78.

Mrs. Emma Somers, a blind woman, aged 46.

Mrs. Jessie Hunt, wife of A. C. Hunt, aged 31, who was killing her mother, Mrs. Somers.

Percy Hunt, daughter of Mrs. Hunt, aged 1 year.

Mrs. P. C. Somers, aged 70, stepmother-in-law of Mrs. Emma Somers.

The injured are:

Mrs. E. T. Clifford and Mrs. J. H. Miller, who were badly bruised by jumping from second story windows.

It seems inconceivable that a fire at such a time and place could have been attended by any loss of life. The Morgan was, however, so constructed that the fire had a clean sweep.

The fire started in the basement, just how is not known, and it swept up through the halls, cutting off all means of escape. The women who perished ran to the windows, but before anything could be done to assist them they were driven back by the smoke and flames and perished. Those on the lower floors rushed to the street, and one woman besides Mrs. Miller jumped from a second story window, escaping without injury. The dead bodies were found on the third floor. The corpses were burned to a crisp, and were horribly blackened and disfigured. As quickly as possible the bodies were taken to the morgue.

The two upper floors of the building are gutted, and the contents of the house are ruined. The Morgan is owned by W. J. Morgan, the lithographer. It cost $50,000 and was insured.

Heroic Work of a Fireman.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., March 24.—The O'Neil block, a 4-story brick structure, was gutted by fire. While the fire was in progress it was reported that a woman had been seen in a room on the third floor, and Tillerman Hoag heroically rescued her by lowering her to the ground with a rope. She was dangerously burned. Other inmates of the building were rescued from the roof. The building, the property of George F. O'Neil, was valued at $15,000.

Gloversville's Great Fire.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., March 24.—The leather manufactory of Kennedy & Co., one of the largest in the city was burned. The loss is total and amounts to about $100,000. The reflection of the fire could be seen 13 miles.

Extravagance, but Not Dishonesty.

TORTURED BY MASKED MEN.

Dastardly Attempt of Robbers to Secure a Farmer's Money.

FINLEYVILLE, March 24.—Four masked men entered the house of J. C. McClelland, a wealthy farmer of this place, and upon the arrival of Mrs. Kerr, a married sister, to disclose the hiding place of McClelland's money the desperadoes cut off her hair and bound and gagged her. They then took her baby into another room, where they stuck pins into its feet to make it cry. The men who remained in the room with Mrs. Kerr, after her child was taken, said they killed and the only way to save its life was to tell them where the money was. Failing to force her to tell they ransacked the house, but left without securing anything.

As this is the third outrage by masked men in that locality within a few weeks the citizens have become aroused and threaten to lynch the fiends if captured.

Another Clew In the Cronse Murder.

PORT PLAIN, N. Y., March 24.—An important clew, it is said, has been discovered in the Cronse murder case by a New York detective, who has been working upon the case for several days. The inquest is being continued. Mrs. Cronse, the widow of the murdered man, is still confined to her house. Her mind wanders, and she says when talked to about the murder that all will be right later on.

Resolutions on the Money Question.

DETROIT, March 24.—The Patrons of Industry adopted resolutions declaring that the control of money should not be surrendered to any one class, but should be supplied directly to the people for services rendered or loaned as a low rate of interest.

POINTS ON DRESSES.

Something New In the Way of Empire Gowns.

Magenta is stated by all modistes to be the color of the hour, but no woman of taste would dream of arraying herself in so aggressive a hue. New York dressmakers are at the present moment endeavoring to revive the hideous fashion of lengthening the shoulder seams of bodices so prevalent in the sixties, an attempt which should be nipped in the bud and discountenanced by women of taste. Nothing is so unbecoming as this style, which begets drooping shoulders, diminishes the height of small women and gives a dowdy appearance to the prettiest figure.

It is of course difficult to invent something new for every season, and dressmakers have to rehash old fashions now and again in order to satisfy the desire for change so inherent to the soul of the fair sex. But the latter ought certainly to avoid encouraging in any way the revival of fashions which are inartistic, irrational and unbecoming.

In this category, the New York Tribune says, can be ranged the poke bonnet and the Josephine dress, with the waist worn right under the arms, two most regrettable combinations. Even when considerably modified to suit modern taste, the Josephine dress is horrible and trying to all, even to tall and exquisitely formed women. In Paris the empire dresses are made in the following fashion: There is a close fitting bodice made to accurately define the figure, over which is draped from the bust downward a veil of sheer lace or gauze "a l'empire," but through which the form of the wearer may be clearly seen.

The accompanying cut will show how this is managed. This is certainly a great improvement on the general run of empire and Josephine frocks, and on a fine figure the effect is good. For children, however, empire gowns are sometimes very pretty. In velvet, with a short bodice, an embroidered yoke and short, full sleeves, they look quite dainty and give a quaint and picturesque appearance to little girls from 4 to 12 years of age.

BOOK PLATES.

A Brief Review of "Ex-Libris," Old and New.

The book plate, "Ex-Libris," to use the jargon of the cult—a label designed specially to proclaim the owner's possession, and bearing as a rule his coat of arms or name, is of respectable antiquity. Undoubtedly ably genuine examples of fifteenth century work are extant. Mr. Percy Fitzgerald, in his "Book Fancier," refers to some dated A. D. 1279 and 1317, but it is only fair to add that specialists ignore their existence. Whatever the date of its origin there is no doubt concerning the popularity of the book plate to-day. London has an Ex-Libris society devoted to its study; so, too, has Berlin. Poulet Malassis and Henri Bouchot have devoted monographs to French Ex-Libris. Cariander has a portly treatise upon Swedish examples, and a shoal of pamphlets and magazine articles in English, French and German make up quite a literature of the subject.

The Hon. Lelcester Warren, in his guide to the study of book plates, 1880, suggested their general classification and invented the curious nomenclature, "Chippendale," "Bookpile" and the like, so puzzling to outsiders. Mr. Castle, in his recent "Handbook For Students of Ex-Libris," limits his study to English examples, while Walter Hamilton's late book has to do with French book plates. Both volumes are amusing and instructive.

As it happens that great names are oftentimes attached to less interesting designs, the average attraction is well preserved.

CHARLES DICKENS.

Those belonging to Thomas Carlyle, Charles Dickens, the Tatfield library and Tennyson have only the accidental interest conferred by their owners. On the other hand, the plates samuel Pepys mentions in his diary, July 21, 1699—"Went to my plate-makers, and there spent an hour about contriving my little plates for the books of the kings pictures"—are in themselves admirable, as the fine portrait plate superbly reproduced in Mr. Castle's book and the anchor device illustrated here prove. So, in a way, is Victor Hugo's. The plates of her majesty the queen and that of Mr. Henry Irving are designed in red and black.

The fine early examples of book plates illustrated in the volumes alluded to, as well as the designs by Sir John Millais, H. Stacy Marks, E. A. Abbey, Caldecott or Walter Crane, among many others, show that if, as Mr. Andrew Lang has said, "of all conceivable topics book plates are the most infinitesimal," nevertheless a good many artists and book collectors have found the infinitely little deserving a large expenditure of taste and ingenuity.

An Interesting Invention.

A floating rope has been invented. According to The Industrial World, the inventor claims that his floating rope of one inch thickness will stand a strain of more than 1,000 pounds. The rope consists of a core of small wire strands without throughlay of an inch long, placed end to end, around which is braided a network of cotton twine. This is surrounded by another layer of strands of wire and also braided in heavy strands, which is about a quarter of an inch thick. The rope is very soft and pliable, and even after being tied into a small knot will return to its original shape. It can be used in life lines, on light rafts and as a heaving line to tie heavy hawsers with.

Aluminium Horseshoes.

In the Russian army a number of horses were shod with one shoe of aluminium and three new iron shoes, in order to test the comparative durability of the new material. The result of the experiment, as stated by the iron monger, was that after six weeks' wear on hard and stony ground, the aluminum shoes were found to have suffered but little attrition and were still serviceable, while the hoofs to which they were fitted were in a better condition than those shod with iron. The weight of the new shoe is only one-third to one-quarter that of iron, and the material, being quite unchanged in character by use, is as valuable, weight for weight, when taken off, as when put on.

The Large Prey of a Spider.

In commenting upon the astonishing strength of some of the spiders that build their webs in trees and other places, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat mentions that one of them was seen to have in captivity in that place a wild canary. The ends of the wings, tail and feet of the bird were bound together by some sticky substance, to which were attached the threads of the spider, which was slowly but surely drawing up the bird by an ingenious pulley arrangement. The bird hung 1 ad downward, and was so securely bound with little threads that it could not struggle, and would soon have been a prey to its great ugly captor had not an onlooker rescued it.

Scientific Brevities.

Electricity is to be utilized in drying tea in Ceylon.

To write with ink on bright metal surfaces an industrial authority directs: Rub the surfaces to be marked briskly with a piece of india rubber. Silver, tin and nickel sheets may be written on by following this method.

Engraving on glass with electricity is a recent and interesting invention.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Boy Chorister.

There are some high salaried choir boys in New York city. Winfred Young is only a school boy, but he is paid $600 a year by All Angels' church. He has sung at St. James', St. John's and the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Several efforts have been made to take the boy away from All Angels', but the result has only been an addition to his income. The peculiarity of this young chorister's voice is its sympathetic quality. High and flexible he has more of the character of a woman's voice than is often to be found among choir boys. It is said by some of them in a position to know that there is something of a dearth of fine voices among choir boys. Be that as it may, never was there so much interest throughout the country in boy choirs as at the present time. There are now many girl choirs to supplement the boys' voices. Choirmaster James M. Helfenstein of All Angels' church has in that choir at present eighteen boys in addition to Winfred Young.

Three Little Dogs That Sing.

Rags, Tags and Tatters are the names of my three little skye terriers, who have been taught to sing a song which I have composed for them, which goes like this:

Rags has a stump tail,
Tags has a dumpy tail,
And Tatters has not much of any tail at all.

When I play my accompaniment on the piano and sing these words, they come tumbling in head over heels and sit up in a row on their hind legs and bark enough to make you deaf—all but Rags, who growls. When I stop singing and play between the verses, they wait just like Paul, or any one who sings, you know. Then when they have sung another verse I tell them to go to bed. They don't like this one bit, but they put their little tails between their legs and get into a basket I keep for them, and if I could not see their bright eyes I should never know which was Rags, Tags or Tatters.—Cor. New York Recorder.

A Little One's Idea of Crime.

A little one had seen that terrible sight—the chain gang—working in the street, and asked for an explanation of the striped clothes and the iron fetters. She was told that the men had been naughty and were being punished. The next time she was taken out the child escaped from her nurse, and running up to a hulking negro convict looked up into his brutal face and asked pitcously:

"Did oo steal oo's mamma's sugar?"

Alas, for those tender days when stealing mamma's sugar was the most heinous crime known to our souls!—Washington Star.

Don't Have to Wind Them Up.

A little boy was taken by his mother to a toy shop. After looking about him for a long time he met satisfying himself that he wanted any one thing more than another, the salesman, hoping to please him, brought forth a little plaster racoon. "This mouse when wound up will run all about the floor," said the salesman. Then he wound the mouse up with a key and showed just what it could do. "Huh!" ejaculated the boy. "I don't want that. We've got lots of them at home, and we don't have to wind them up to make them go either."—Montreal Star.

A Young Queen's Revenge.

The little queen of Holland has an English governess who recently set her to draw a map of Europe as a punishment for some misbehavior on her part. The little queen had been giving her English instructress by making the British isles appear on the map only about half the size of the Netherlands.—London Tit-Bits.

A Doll-astrophe.

One day Miss Doll thought she would go
And in the wild woods play.
"And if," said she, "some flowers I find I'll surely bring them home."

The naughty kitten heard her, and
He slyly wagged his head,
"And if," said he, "the goes away
I'll creep into her bed.

"For it is softer far than mine,
And there I'll sleep and snooze
And dose most comfortably
So long as I may choose."

So Dolly took her basket
And tripped off down the street,
And pussy, glad to be alone
With softly cushioned feet.

He crossed the floor and jumped upon
Poor Dolly's pretty bed.
He gently shook the pillows up
And then pulled down the spread,

And crawled beneath. He falls asleep.
How fast the minutes fly!
Wake, pussy, wake! See, on the path
Outside, Miss Doll draws nigh.

But still he sleeps. She's in the room.
Her lovely brown glass eyes
Grow round and big as she is frightened
With terror and surprise.

But superdoliish bravery
Comes quickly to her aid,
And an attempt to scare him off
Is quickly, bravely made.

She waves her basket at him
And wildly cries: "Oh, scat!
Oh, shoo! Get out of my bed,
You good for nothing cat."

The coward wakes with guilty start.
With all his might and main
He runs off. Doll, you're safe. He'll ne'er
Get on your bed again.

HOW TO FURNISH SMALL HOUSES.

What to and What Not to Buy When the Income Matches the House.

The furnishing of houses out of moderate incomes is a matter of special interest constantly to a large number of persons just beginning homemaking.

It is the greatest mistake to furnish with articles of an inferior value. Everything should be good of its kind and warranted to stand wear and tear. Study the room carefully when empty and make a mental picture of its possibilities. The aspect of some rooms is often dull and cheerless—then the brightness must radiate from the inside. For the floor nothing is more satisfactory than a good axminster carpet in warm tints of ruddy brown. A 9-foot margin should be allowed in the floor space, to be painted a shade corresponding with the lightest tint in the carpet. This wears much better than a dark stain and is easier to clean than a margin of felt.

Eschew a "setting" paper for the walls. It shows rubs too plainly, and in choosing the paper try its effect by gaslight. Some papers absorb light so freely that the room is nothing but a Rembrandt picture of deep shadows. A good salmon pink, with a well covered pattern, lights up well, and with curtains of frilled muslin in the same tone gives the appearance of brightness. For the thicker curtains a summer pair would be of cretonne, having the tints of the carpet and lined with pink, substituting heavier for winter. A floor cloth with matting and rugs in the summer will materially save the carpet and make a pleasant change.

Eschew rickety tables for china and knickknacks, run a shelf along one side of the room, cover with plush and arrange pictures on this. The first cost is little, the effect good. Have a movable lounge in preference to "a cosy corner." The latter flicks and stands well, but detains one from a sight of the fire. The lounge can be of wicker with upholstered and frilled mattress in cretonne and a supply of thistledown cushions covered in bright silks. Rest and chairs are satisfactory and can be enameled to suit any room, as can wicker chairs, such chairs with well padded mattresses being comfortable and cheap.

Provide a writing table, if but a corner one. This is so often lost sight of in a small drawing room. A folding table for use can stand against the wall and obviates the necessity for a promiscuous scattering of books and papers from the general table. In cane reseated chairs have drawers for books. Incline the lower half with doors to form a cupboard for afternoon tea sets, etc. This can be enameled to suit the furniture. A square cabinet, well made in deal, can also be enameled by clever fingers. This should have doors and will hold music in its recess, while the top offers a stand for a palm.

Never buy a new cheap piano; second-hand ones from good makers are constantly in the market and are worth treble the cost of a thing with celluloid keys and other abhorrences. If good water colors are not among the family possessions, hang up a few good etchings, in creamy frames. The effect is good on any light wall, and they can be cheap without being nasty. For the mantelpiece a good mirror in an unobtrusive frame is preferable to a badly designed overmantel; some daintily shaped brackets in poker work, hung on each side, take off the stiff look and serve to hold quaint pottery.

No room is properly habitable without plants; for these an inlaid Moorish stool here and there has a happy effect. Double width serge makes a good portiere, and inexpensive within, taking up less room than a screen. A curb fender saves labor and expense, and a dainty stand on the hearth on which tea fire from hang is preferable to the old clutter.—Woman.

Care of Bread After Baking.

Remove the bread from the pans as soon as baked and place the loaves where the air can circulate freely around them, thus allowing the gas which has formed but is no longer needed to escape. An old wire window screen, too small for modern windows, with cleats on the ends to keep them two or three inches from the table, will answer well as a cooler. Many use a stove, but that is too small and leaves the mark of the larger cross wires on the loaf. Never leave the loaves on the table to sweat and absorb the odor of the wood and do not cover them if you want the crust crisp. To give the bread that soft, tender, waferlike consistency, wrap it in several thicknesses of bread cloth.

When cold, remove the cloth, as that absorbs the moisture and gives the bread an unpleasant taste and odor. Place the loaves in a stone jar or tin box and keep the jar or box well covered and carefully cleansed from crumbs and stale bread. Small and wide strips dry every two or three days. A yard and a half square of coarse table linen will answer for a bread cloth. Keep a good supply of these in order that they may always be sweet and clean and never use them for other purposes.

Foreign Substances In a Child's Nose.

Little children not infrequently place small objects, such as peas, shoe buttons or beans, in the nose. At first they may be fairly well tolerated, but soon running at and other evidences of irritation will ensue, which will of course not subside as long as the objectionable body remains in place. If the child is old enough, direct him to take a full breath through the mouth, and then, closing the unaffected nostril, breathe forcibly out through the obstructed one. In case this is not effectual, the end of a hairpin may be bent so as to form a sort of snare, and efforts made to draw the foreign body out. A good light will be required. It may help to procure sneezing by tickling the nostrils or giving a little snuff.—H. D. Chapin, M. D., in Chicago News-Record.

The American Girl and Her Voice.

Says Miss Marsden: "I love the American girls, with their beautiful voices and well formed characters. But I always ask myself, what a crude country must that American still be, whose young ladies so uniformly come to me devoid of all artistic taste or appreciation, expecting by some unknown mysterious way in a few months to appear in this old world of culture as an artist of fame! They often go further than this and ask me, 'How much money do you think there is in my voice?' That question appalls me with its calculation and its irreverence for the exquisite beauty and tenderness of that fine art that can, more than all others to me, interpret the soul's inmost thoughts. No other girl that an American has ever asked me that question."

Inherent Tidiness.

Some women always look as if they had just stepped out of a bandbox, to use the accepted and time honored phrase. Those who possess this gift are usually of limited height. Those who do not possess it wonder how on earth it is managed. The invariable neatness and composure of bodily quarters seem to be almost miraculous. For a robin is occasionally somewhat disheveled if aspect, but these human robins never.—Exchange.

WOMEN'S WORK IN INDIA

AS MISSIONARIES AND BY THEIR MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

The Anniversary Exercises Yesterday Afternoon and Evening in the First Baptist Church of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Societies.

The anniversary exercises of the Foreign Mission Societies of the First Baptist church were held yesterday afternoon and evening. This is the closing year of their denominational centennary missions to the pagan world. All over the United States special efforts have been made by the Baptist churches to secure one hundred new missionaries and one million dollars for future work in heathen lands. A very important and influential department of this Christian service is performed by the women of these churches in America. Last year their offerings reached $104,000 and this centennial year it is expected that the amount will be doubled.

The services in connection with the anniversary exercises were very interesting and instructive. Preceding the excellent address of Mrs. Downie, one excellent address of the Telugu field at of the missionaries to the Telugu field at Nellore, were the following reports, showing the generous efforts of the society in the spiritual effort of their unfortunate sisters in heathen countries.

Mrs. R. J. Shreve read an able report as Secretary of the Woman's Society, and Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor, treasurer, presented the encouraging figures of liberal contributions.

Miss Ida Yerkes read the annual statement of the young ladies' branch which presented very gratifying results to all interested.

Mrs. Walter McGee in behalf of the Gold Dust Band (a juvenile department) submitted a cheerful account of what the little ones had done for mission work.

The exercises closed with a solo pleasingly rendered by Mrs. E. J. Waring, accompanied by her son on the violin.

The evening programme consisted of several representations of the manners and customs of the Telugus. Some fifteen persons were attired in the dress of the natives of that country, illustrating a caste woman and child; a Brahman widow, a Bible woman, a Parish girl, a Brahman Priest and a Christian preacher.

Mrs. Downie had brought with her from India all of the costumes necessary for these representations and presented to the audience a vivid scene of native heathen men and women at a public well, a Telugu mission day-school with six little children, heathen wedding, a child marriage and in contrast a Christian ceremony, the wedding among the converted natives.

The choir were interspersed with an organ solo by Mr. Mac Clymont; the reading of an appropriate poem by Miss Wilson and a pleasing vocal solo by Mrs. Chapman, which the large audience fully appreciated.

The good people of the First Bantist church seem to be possessed with a true missionary spirit and manifest it by an abundant liberality in giving, and we prove that they are "doers of the Word."

From their periodical reports it was learned that $3,557 have been given this year, ending with March, for foreign Woman's Society, $1,350; Young Ladies' Society, $350, Gold Dust Band, $110, Temple Builders, $300 and general offering of the church, $1,350.

PLAINFIELD TO CHICAGO.

A Possibility that an Excursion will Run from this City.

A possibility exists that a special excursion may be run this coming Summer directly from Plainfield to Chicago and return.

The Young Men's Christian Association is considering the feasibility and expediency of such an undertaking, and, while the question is by no means decided, the chances are that it will be attempted if the idea meets with proper encouragement.

The general arrangements would be something as follows: Leave Plainfield in the early evening, arrive at Niagara the next morning, spend nearly a whole day in sight-seeing and drives and reach Chicago the next morning. While at the Exposition, the party would be entertained at one of the best of the new hotels, where they would receive all due care and comfort, and there they would remain either one week or ten days as may hereafter be decided. All expenses would be covered by about $30 for one week or $40 for ten days stay—and these prices would secure excellent and select accomodations of all kinds. The expenditure carried out would afford a most desirable opportunity for ladies and young persons generally to visit the Exposition, as the party would be under the personal charge and supervision of trust worthy people, and every care and precaution would be exercised to promote the comfort and enjoyment of each member of the party. The Exposition could be seen under the best auspices and with congenial companions.

The Secretary of the Association or any of its officers and directors will give all information possible to any one who may desire to inquire concerning the plan.

The Glorious Gospel is the title of a new publication, issued monthly and devoted to the interests of the Park avenue Baptist church. It contains one of J. W. Richardson's most eloquent sermons, on "Impending Events or Signs of the Times." In the announcement the compiler says of its object: "A hope has long been cherished in the heart of the congregation that a monthly would come when the Park avenue Baptist church would be the home of a live church publication. The coming of the Rev. J. W. Richardson, as its pastor, possessing in so marked a degree, power, zeal and eloquence, in unfolding the word of God, has stimulated him to an effort for the crystalization of this ideal. The Glorious Gospel has seemed to be the most fitting form of 'a church publication.' These gleaming truths, so fervently preached, are now given to the world in the hope comfort and power of them may touch other lives with a message of God's goodwill." The committee on church publication is Messrs. Edwin B. Day and Dadd M. Runyon.

JOHN T. JOHNSTON DEAD

HE SUCCUMBED YESTERDAY AT HIS FIFTH AVENUE HOME.

Death Caused by Paralysis—End of a Notable Career—His Summer Residence in Plainfield—He was Ex-President of the Central Railroad.

Mr. John Taylor Johnston, whose Summer residence is on East Front street, this city, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 8 Fifth avenue, New York, surrounded by his family. Death, which which was not unexpected, was caused by creeping paralysis, from which Mr. Johnston had been suffering for nearly sixteen years.

For more than two days he had been unconscious, and passed away without recognizing those about him.

Mr. Johnston was born in Greenwich street, New York, according to the New York Herald, on April 8, 1820. His father, John Johnston, who was a member of the firm of Boorman, Johnston & Co., was born in Edinburgh, Scotland. His mother, Margaret Taylor, was also a native of Scotland. When on a visit to Edinburgh with his parents when twelve years old he was sent to the High School in that city and remained there one year and a half.

He then returned to New York and subsequently entered the University of the City of New York, being graduated in the class of 1839 when nineteen years old. He attended the Law School at Yale and studied law with G. De Forest and Charles Astor Bristed.

After being graduated he entered the law office of Daniel Lord, in New York, and was admitted to the Bar in 1843. Soon afterward he went abroad and travelled through Europe for two years and on his return resumed the practice of law.

Mr. Johnston's mind ran in another channel than that of the law, and in the Spring of 1846, when only twenty-eight years old, he was made president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, then known as the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad, which was only a few miles long and struggling for existence. For twenty-seven years he continued in that position.

It was due to his efforts that this piece of property was brought to its present state of developement, the authorite coal trade being its chief business feature. When the road came to the Hudson River under Mr. Johnston's administration it made large purchases on the Jersey water front.

He projected a vast system of wharves, basins and docks which involved the reclamation of the greater part of the Jersey flats. In 1867 the disaster which overtook several other railroads at that time in the anthracite coal trade involved the Central. The road went into the hands of a receiver, Mr. Johnston resigned the presidency and from that time forward he has entirely severed his with the company. Mr. Johnston lost heavily of his private fortune in trying to sustain the credit of the road.

In the following year Mr. Johnston was first attacked with the disease which ended his life yesterday. For nearly a year he has hardly been able to articulate. His condition has been gradually growing worse, and for two or three days his death has been almost hourly expected.

Mr. Johnston was married in 1850 to Miss Frances Colles, of New Orleans, by whom he had five children. His eldest son died in 1888. His remaining children are T. Herbert Johnston and three daughters, Mrs. Robert De Forest, Mrs. Pierre Mali and Mrs. Henry E. Coe.

His estate is valued at more than $1,000,000 and includes the residence No. 8 Fifth avenue, a handsome house in this city, and other real estate in New Jersey and in New York city.

The funeral will take place at ten o'clock next Monday morning from the old Scotch Presbyterian Church, in West Fourteenth street, of which his family were members. The burial will be at Greenwood Cemetery.

Builders Beginning to Awaken.

The bad weather has been responsible for much delay in building operations and many houses, which it was expected would be well along toward completion by this time, are hardly begun, and ground is still unbroken in perhaps a still larger number of cases. But the sunshine of the Spring has already begun to awaken the builders into life. Work of the most extensive character is under way in many parts of the city, and numbers of the mechanics who have been idle nearly all Winter.

Tournament Games.

The bowling tournament games at the C. Y. M. I. club house, last night, resulted as follows: Reville and Mack vs. Kneeland and Curran, 268 and 284. Gallagher and Gaffney vs. Kneeland and Curran, 329 and 325. Carty and Casey vs. Kneeland and Curran, 268 and 326.

—The fog was so dense last night that a street light at a block's distance looked like a lightning bug.

—The course of six afternoon lectures to be given at All Souls' church, the first on the 27th inst., upon "Helen Hunt Jackson," by Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond, including the popular orchestra, will fascinate all who seek food for thought. They include biography, philanthrophy and literature, and will give to busy listeners the garnered results of a wide range of study and observation on the part of able and learned lecturers.

FAVORS AN INTERMEDIATE PRISON.

Railway Suggested as a Site by Gov. Werts.

The bill to have the present State Arsenal used for an extension of the State prison has not been signed. Gov. Werts is still disposed to think the best thing to do is to erect an intermediate prison, on which he had something to say in his inaugural message.

He believes then the State Reform School and the State Prison would be to some extent relieved, and that there would be a better classification of evil doers, and there would be better results obtained.

He thinks that then a small appropriation could be made for a hospital in connection with the State Prison, one that would be sufficiently removed from the main building so as to prevent the spread of contagious diseases.

The Intermediate Prison that he has in mind, he would erect either at Railway or in Monmouth county, where the State has two large farms, acquired through the Sinking Fund, the one at Ramapo and the other recently added for the Intermediate Prison. He thinks it could be erected for almost what it would cost to make the improvements at the State Prison.

A Valuable Cup Offered by Mr. Saltonstall for a Perpetual Contest.

The international challenge trophy presented to the International Cycling Union by Mr. Henry L. On one arm is the head of Bacchus, on the other the head of Mercury. The acanthus leaf forms the basis for the general ornamentation.

Of Importance to Fraternal Orders.

A decision important to all fraternal benefit orders has recently been made by the Supreme court of appeal. A brother suspended from a lodge of the A. O. U. W. for the non payments of an assessment died three days afterward. The beneficiaries brought suit, claiming that it was the custom to accept payment of assessments after they were due, and to make no record of suspension. The court decided in favor of the lodge, upholding the laws of the order regarding suspensions. It also decided that no subordinate lodge or officer thereof has the power by custom, directly or indirectly, or in any other way, to dispense with the positive requirements of the laws of the order.

WOMEN'S WORK IN INDIA

AS MISSIONARIES AND BY THEIR MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

The Anniversary Exercises Yesterday Afternoon and Evening in the First Baptist Church of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Societies.

The anniversary exercises of the Foreign Mission Societies of the First Baptist church were held yesterday afternoon and evening. This is the closing year of their denominational centenary mission to the pagan world. All over the United States special efforts have been made by the Baptist churches to secure one hundred new missionaries and one million dollars for the future work in heathen lands. A very important and influential department of this Christian service is performed by the women of these churches in America. Last year their offerings reached $104,000 and this centenial year it is expected that the amount will be doubled.

The services in connection with the anniversary exercises were very interesting and instructive. Preceding the excellent address of Mrs. Downie, one of the missionaries to the Telugu field at Nellore, were the following reports showing the generous efforts of the society in the spiritual effort of their unfortunate sisters in heathen countries.

Mrs. B. J. Shreve read an able report as Secretary of the Woman's Society, and Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor, treasurer, presented the encouraging figures of liberal contributions.

Miss Ida Yerkes read the annual statement of the young ladies' branch which presented very gratifying results to all interested.

Mrs. Walter Mclees in behalf of the Gold Dust Band (a juvenile department) submitted a cheerful account of what the little ones had done for mission work.

The exercises closed with a solo pleasingly rendered by Mrs. E. J. Waring, accompanied by her son on the violin.

The evening programme consisted of faithful representations of the manners and customs of the Telugus. Some fifteen persons were attired in the dress of the natives of this country, illustrating a caste woman and child; a Brahman widow, a Bible woman, a Pariah girl, a Brahman Priest and a Christian preacher.

Mrs. Downie had brought with her from India all of the costumes necessary for these representations and presented to the audience a vivid scene of native heathen men and women at a public well, a Telugu mission day-school with six little children, heathen wedding, a child marriage and in contrast the ceremony of a wedding among the converted natives.

The services were interspersed with an organ solo by Mr. Mac Clymont; the reading of appropriate poems by Miss Wickoff; and a pleasing vocal solo by Mrs. Chapman, which the large audience fully appreciated.

The good people of the First Baptist church seem to be possessed with a true missionary spirit and manifest it by an abundant liberality in giving, and so prove that they are "doers of the Word."

From the statistical reports it was learned that $3,557 have been given this year, ending with March, for foreign Woman's Society, $1,350; Young Ladies' Society, $250; Gold Dust Band, $110; Temple Builders, $200 and general offering of the church, $1,550.

PLAINFIELD TO CHICAGO.

A Possibility that an Excursion will Run from this City.

A possibility exists that a special excursion may be run this coming Summer directly from Plainfield to Chicago and return.

The Young Men's Christian Association in connection with the hospitality and expediency of such an undertaking, and, while the question is by no means decided, the chances are that it will be attempted if the idea meets with proper encouragement.

The general arrangements would be something as follows: Leave Plainfield in the early evening, arrive at Niagara the next morning, spend nearly a whole day in sight-seeing and drive and reach Chicago the next morning. While at the Exposition, the party would be entertained at one of the best of the new hotels, where they would receive all due care and comfort, and there they would remain either one week or ten days as may hereafter decided. All expenses would be covered by about $60 for one week or $70 for ten days stay—and these prices would secure excellent and select accommodations of all kinds. The excursion if carried out would afford a most desirable opportunity for ladies and gentlemen generally to visit the Exposition, as the excursion would be under the personal charge and supervision of trust worthy people, and every care and precaution would be exercised to promote the comfort and enjoyment of each member of the party. The Exposition could be seen under the best auspices and with congenial companions.

The Secretary of the Association or any of its officers and directors will give all information possible to any one who may desire to inquire concerning the plan.

JOHN T. JOHNSTON DEAD

HE SUCCUMBED YESTERDAY AT HIS FIFTH AVENUE HOME.

Death Caused by Paralysis—End of a Notable Career—His Summer Residence in Plainfield—He was Ex-President of the Central Railroad.

Mr. John Taylor Johnston, whose Summer residence is on East Front street, this city, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 2 Fifth avenue, New York, surrounded by his family. Death, which was not unexpected, was caused by creeping paralysis, from which Mr. Johnston had been suffering for nearly sixteen years.

For more than two days he had been unconscious, and passed away without recognizing those about him.

Mr. Johnston was born in Greenwich street, New York, according to the New York Herald, on April 8, 1820. His father, John Johnston, who was a member of the firm of Boorman, Johnston & Co., was born in Edinburgh, Scotland. His mother, Margaret Taylor, was also a native of Scotland. When on a visit to Edinburgh with his parents when twelve years old he was sent to the High School in that city and remained there one year and a half.

He then returned to New York and subsequently entered the University of the City of New York, being graduated in the class of 1839 when nineteen years old. He attended the Law School at Yale and studied with Henry G. De Forest and Charles Astor Bristed.

After being graduated he entered the law office of Daniel Lord, in New York, and was admitted to the Bar in 1843. Soon afterward he went abroad and travelled through Europe for two years and on his return resumed the practice of law.

Mr. Johnston's mind ran in another channel than that of the law, and in the Spring of 1846, when only twenty-eight years old, he took the presidency of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, then known as the Elizabethtown and Somerville Railroad, which was only a few miles long and struggling for existence. For twenty-seven years he continued in this position.

It was due to his efforts that this piece of property was brought to its present state of development, the anthracite coal trade being its chief business feature. When the road came to the Hudson River under Mr. Johnston's administration it made large purchases on the Jersey water front.

He projected a vast system of wharves, docks and piers which invested the Jersey flats. In 1887 the disaster which overtook several other railroads at that time in the anthracite coal trade involved the Central. The road went into the hands of receivers Mr. Johnston resigned the presidency and from that time ceased to be actively connected with the company. Mr. Johnston lost heavily of his private fortune in trying to sustain the credit of the road.

In the following year Mr. Johnston was first attacked with the disease which ended his life yesterday. For nearly a year he has hardly been able to articulate. His condition has been gradually growing worse, and for two or three days his death has been almost hourly expected.

Mr. Johnston was married in 1850 to Miss Frances Colles, of New Orleans, by whom he had five children. His eldest son died in 1886. His remaining children are: Robert Johnston and three daughters, Mrs. Robert W. De Forest, Mrs. Pierre Mali and Mrs. Henry E. Coe.

His estate is valued at more than $1,000,000 and includes the residence No. 8 Fifth avenue, a handsome house in Bloomfield, and another real estate in New Jersey and in New York city.

The funeral will take place at ten o'clock next Monday morning from the old Scotch Presbyterian Church, in West Fourteenth street, of which his family were members. The burial will be at Greenwood Cemetery.

Builders Beginning to Awaken.

The bad weather has been responsible for much delay in building operations, but many houses, which it was expected would be well along toward completion by this time, are hardly begun, and ground is still unbroken in perhaps a still larger number of cases. But the sunshine of the Spring has already begun to awaken the builders into life. Work will be plentiful for several months for the mechanics who have been idle nearly all Winter.

Tournament Games.

The bowling tournament games at the C. Y. M. L. club house, last night, resulted as follows: Reville and Mack vs. Kneeland and Curran, 302 and 298. Gallagher and Guinee vs. Kneeland and Curran, 299 and 295. Carty and Casey vs. Kneeland and Curran, 258 and 226.

—The fog was so dense last night that a street light at a block's distance looked like a lightning bug.

—The course of six afternoon lectures to be given at All Souls' church, the first on the 27th inst., upon "Helen Hunt Jackson," by Mrs. Elizabeth Powell Bond, Dean of Swarthmore College, will furnish much food for thought. They include biography, philanthropy and literature, and will give to busy listeners the garnered results of a wide range of study and observation on the part of the several lecturers.

FAVORS AN INTERMEDIATE PRISON.

Rahway Suggested as a Site by Gov. Werts.

The bill to have the present State Arsenal site used for an extension of the State prison has not been signed. Gov. Werts is still disposed to think the best thing to do is to erect an intermediate prison, on which he had something to say in his inaugural message.

He believes then the State Reform School and the State Prison would be to some extent relieved, and that there would be a better classification of evil doers, and there would be better results obtained.

He thinks that then a small appropriation could be made for a hospital in connection with the State Prison, one that would be sufficiently removed from the main building so as to prevent the spread of contagious diseases.

The Intermediate Prison that he has in mind, he would erect either at Rahway or in Monmouth county, where the State has some land, which was acquired through the Sinking Fund, the one at Rahway being particularly adapted for the Intermediate Prison. He thinks it could be erected for almost what it would cost to make the improvements at the State Prison.

Of Importance to Fraternal Orders.

A decision important to all fraternal benefit orders has recently been made by the Kansas court of appeal. A brother suspended from a lodge of the A. O. U. W. for the non payment of an assessment died three days afterward. The beneficiaries brought suit, claiming that it was the custom to accept payment of assessments after they were due, and to make no record of suspension. The court decided in favor of the lodge, upholding the laws of the order regarding suspensions. It also decided that no subordinate lodge nor other subordinate has the power by custom, directly or indirectly, to vary in any other way, to dispense with the positive requirements of the laws of this order.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The remedy for the sickness that attacks some persons when they climb mountains is said to be to eat less. This is a good remedy for a great many ailments.

Elizabeth Hallman died at the age of 86 in Pennsylvania recently. Her death was the result of a fall in which she broke her collar bone. Up to two or three years ago Mrs. Hallman had gone west to Illinois nearly every summer to visit her brother. She was the mother of 13 children. Only for the accident that caused her death she would probably have visited the World's fair this summer and taken in all the sights with her clear, strong eyes. That is the right kind of an old age to have, the kind that the whole human race will have when it is civilized. Meantime we are glad we have such people as Mrs. Hallman to show mankind the right way of growing old. Good rest to Elizabeth Hallman!

Great Jews.

The French publication, Revue des Deux Mondes, has taken up the Jewish question and shows how much the world is indebted to the Hebrew race in the field of intellect and genius. As statesmen are mentioned Disraeli, Gambetta and Ferdinand Lassalle, the latter now glorified in Germany as the "adored redeemer of the toiling masses." Herschel, the astronomer, was a Jew, a fact not generally known.

In art the race has taken a still more prominent place. The greatest sculptor Russia has produced so far, Antonolsky, belongs to the race she is driving with such ruthless cruelty out from her borders. Of renowned musical composers the list is so long that only a few can be named—as Meyerbeer, Halevy and Mendelssohn. Pauline Lucca is a Jewess. Of that race also may be named Rubinstein, Joachim and Sir Michael Costa. It is true that Michael is rather an unusual first name for a Jew, but the blood is all right in Costa's veins. The Revue might mention among actresses two of the greatest ever known—Rachel and Sarah Bernhardt. It is quite right in declaring that of men and women of genius this race has produced probably more than any other.

In all the centuries of modern times the world's famous financiers have been almost without exception Jews. The Revue probably never heard that some authorities affirm Jay Gould himself, our greatest American money getter, to have been of Hebrew extraction, and that his name can be easily traced back to the original "Jason Gold." Another profession neglected in the article in The Revue is that of the journalist. Among prominent newspaper men in America are the Pulitzer brothers in New York, the De Youngs in San Francisco, while across the water the proprietors of the London Telegraph, among others, show how able the Jew is as a newspaper conductor. To the charge that Jews lack ideals and idealism The Revue replies beautifully:

Whatever heights to-day, through him were unclimbed for us also our souls have lived on for 2,000 years and more. The prophets of Ephraim and the apostles of Galilee were the heralds of liberation to the whole world.

How to Fight Monopolies.

The editor of a German-American newspaper calls attention to the fact that the small business man is more and more crowded to the wall and being ruined by the present system of great industrial corporations. Capitalists unite their funds and their intelligence to manufacture and sell articles more cheaply than the small maker or dealer possibly can. They put their goods on the market and ruin him.

It is the history of one industry after another until at present a large proportion of the great branches of manufacture all over the country are consolidated, each under one management. It is true that under this management the manufactured articles are of good quality and the price of them is in some cases cheaper than it was before. But the injury done to the individual tradesman or manufacturer is the serious and complex feature of the present tendency.

But there is no use fighting the current. The consolidating tendency of industry at the close of the nineteenth century is one of the most significant signs of the times. It is literally the idea of cooperation applied in the ways that are not always right or agreeable. But the small tradesmen, the small tradesmen, have the remedy in their own hands. Let them not oppose the cooperative current. They cannot do it. It is too strong for them, and they will only break themselves against it. Let them unite with it. Take 1,000 workingmen in any city. Let them contribute $10 apiece. There would be a working capital of $10,000. With this they could start a co-operative store or grocery or coal business that would be the beginning of a great success. Or let them pay $100 apiece in installments. There would be in a short time $100,000, a nucleus of capital that could be the beginning of a great manufacturing success.

Whatever the average working people of any town or city want to do in the way of trade and manufacture they can do by unition. The present bloated monopolies which are complained of were made by a few men with large capital, intelligent labor can accomplish the same results by means of many men with small capital.

SENATOR ROACH AGAIN.

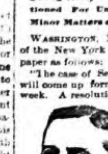
It Is Said His Case Will Come Up Next Week.

GENERAL NEWS FROM WASHINGTON

The President and His Secretary Investigating Reciprocity—E. O. Graves Mentioned For United States Treasurer. Minor Matters at the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The reporter of the New York Recorder telegraphs his paper as follows:

"The case of Senator William N. Roach will come up formally in the senate next week. A resolution will be introduced by a member of the committee on privileges and elections, calling for an investigation of the statements published hereto-fore, and the majority will be thus forced to show its hand. The North Dakota senator has had an opportunity to take the initiative himself, but he has not seen fit to do so. He was advised more than a week ago by a senator who has always held friendly personal relations with him that the wisest course for him would be to rise in his place and give his side of the case from the beginning.



SENATOR ROACH.

"He was informed that the question would come up for discussion, and that he would appear in a much better light if he should precipitate it rather than permit himself to be put in the position of attempting to escape investigation.

"In reviewing his record himself and admitting his delinquencies with his own lips it was pointed out that he might at least make a plausible plea for public sympathy, and that was the best thing he could now do. Roach said at first he believed this would be the wisest course, but a consultation with another person brought a change of heart, and he then said that he had been advised not to do so."

No Struggle Likely.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The indications at present do not point to a protracted fight in the senate over the reorganization of the elective officers. If the statements of some Democratic senators can be taken as an index to their feelings on the question they will capitulate without much of a struggle. The Republicans say they will insist upon a strict following of the precedents, and if they have the strength to stand up for that resolution it looks as if they would be able to force the Democrats to hold off until the commencement of the regular session.

A Question Apparently Settled.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Secretary Carlisle announced that Secretary Gresham would direct the American ministers to the several European countries to invite the governments to which they are accredited to send delegates to the international monetary conference beginning May 15. This would seem to put at rest the statements that the new administration would not invite the conference to reassemble.

Investigating Reciprocity.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—President Cleveland has asked Secretary Gresham to prepare a statement of the existing state of the negotiations under the reciprocity section of the McKinley tariff law with Venezuela, Hayti and Colombia. This question will be taken up, and it may be that some concession will be made to the countries named in order to recover our trade.

The Compact of Secrecy Expires.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The compact of secrecy between the United States and Great Britain governing the cases, counter cases and arguments in the Behring sea arbitration having expired by limitation, all the documents will be sent simultaneously to the senate of the United States and the parliament of Great Britain.

Politics Didn't Figure.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Assistant Secretary of State Quincy said he wished it understood that politics had nothing to do with the revocation by the department of its appointment of Dean F. Curry of Albion, N. Y., as commercial agent at Yarmouth, N. S.

For United States Treasurer.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—A rumor was current in the treasury department that the president had decided to appoint E. O. Graves United States treasurer. Mr. Graves was chief of the bureau of engraving and printing in Mr. Cleveland's first administration.

Mrs. Cleveland Wore a New Gown.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Mrs. Cleveland's reception was the largest that she has held during her present residence in the White House. She received her calls in the red room. She wore a new spring gown of tan shade.

Higher Titles Conferred.

WASHINGTON, March 25. — Sir Julian Pauncefote, at present minister to the United States, will hereafter have the rank of ambassador. President Cleveland will confer a like title on the minister to the court of St. James.

Intention of the President.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Mr. Cleveland has expressed his intention to divorce the office of pension commissioner from politics, and to select a commissioner who will conduct it purely on business principles.

Maxwell Continues His Work.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell's list shows 31 new fourth class postmasters appointed, of which four were vacancies created by removal by present incumbents.

Portraits For the Fair.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The portraits of the secretaries of state are being packed for shipment to the Chicago fair.

Minor Washington Matters.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—Mr. Turner of Indiana, one of the doorkeepers at the White House has been informed that his services will not be required after April 1.

A decision of Secretary of the Interior Smith against the Southern Pacific railway opens up many acres to settlement in southern California.

The office of the members of the cabinet will be closed on Tuesdays and Fridays, cabinet days.

Postmaster General Bissell promoted Nathan Smith, a Republican, from a clerkship to be chief of the band division of the department.

WRECKED BY STORMS.

Later Reports From the Louisville Visited by the Cyclone.

LOUISVILLE, March 25.—The heavy storm which passed over a large section of the south did great damage. The storm was in the nature of a cyclone at Bowling Green. The roofs of 15 or 20 houses were blown off, and the unfortunate occupants rushed into the street. The most serious damage was done to Louisville and Nashville roundhouse. The loss to the Louisville and Nashville railroad on the building and locomotives is $75,000 to $100,000.

Among the roofs blown off at Bowling Green was that of the Warren county courthouse, which is considered the finest public building outside of Louisville.

The town of Rowlans was almost destroyed. The postoffice building was swept entirely away, together with all the mail, some of which was found two miles off. Every house in Stanford was more or less damaged. At Murray 20 residences and 50 stables and barns were demolished.

A later report says: The havoc wrought by the cyclone in the Mississippi valley is enormous. The damage done to property will reach $2,000,000. The death loss footed up 17, while the list of injured will run up into the hundreds.

Destruction In Tennessee.

MEMPHIS, March 25.—A messenger returned from Kelly said reports that the town was swept away. Five miles after the storm came the schoolhouse was torn to pieces. Benson's store was blown down, part of the depot was torn away and the telegraph poles were blown across the tracks. Every house was swept away. East of Kelly the storm struck the Memphis and Charleston railroad and wrecked a freight train. Around Kelly 500 people are homeless and are in need. The track of the cyclone was half a mile wide.

Terrific Storm at Nashville.

NASHVILLE, March 25.—One of the most terrific wind and rainstorms in the history of Nashville swept over the city, uprooting trees and telephone poles. In all 15 houses were badly damaged or destroyed, and the loss will foot up in the thousands.

Houses and Barns Swept Away.

VINCENNES, Ind., March 25.—A terrible tornado passed through this country. Houses, barns, trees and fences were laid low for a distance of 12 miles. The path of the storm was from south to north and about two miles wide.

Victory For the Women.

CAPE MAY, March 25.—At the recent school election at Rio Grande, the women of the district nominated and voted for Charles W. Saul, the handsome station agent of the place, as trustee. The men supported Squire Harris. The women hired vehicles to carry the friends of their candidate to the polls. The men did the same for their candidate. The women, it is said, even went so far as to buy votes. Saul was elected by a majority of two.

Clothing Cutters on Strike.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The lockout of the clothing cutters belonging to the United Garment workers has begun. From 8,000 to 9,000 men have quit work. The cause of the strike is that the manufacturers refused, in employing help, to give preference to members of labor organizations.

Kentucky's Mysterious Prisoner.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 25.—A man giving the assumed name of Thomas St. Clair is under arrest here for horse stealing. He is said to be a brother of the late Jesse James of many familiar hymns, and says if his true name were revealed a great sensation would result.

County Records Destroyed.

NEWTON, Kan., March 25.—The vault in the register of deeds office was broken open, and the county's records were destroyed. The records were piled on the floor, saturated with kerosene and set on fire. The loss cannot be made good for less than $100,000.

Registry Lists Doctored.

CHICAGO, March 25.—In connection with the exciting mayoralty canvass now in progress wholesale registration frauds have been discovered. Out of the 34,500 names added to the list not less than 8,000 and possibly 8,000 are said to be fraudulent.

A FAMOUS EDITOR DEAD

Elliott F. Shepard Expires After Taking Ether.

HIS DEATH CAME UNEXPECTEDLY.

One of His Ideas Was to Daily Print a Verse From the Bible—He Was an Editor, a Lawyer and a Man of Affairs—Brief Sketch of His Career.

NEW YORK, March 25.—Colonel Elliott Fitch Shepard, editor of The Mail and Express, died suddenly at his home, 2 West Fifty-second street. His death followed the administration of ether by Dr. Charles McBurney and the family physician, Dr. J. W. McLane, who were about to make an examination to ascertain whether the colonel's suspicion that he suffered from stone in the bladder was correct. Colonel Shepard had been in good health, but nearly a month ago he noticed symptoms that led him to believe that he was afflicted with stone in the bladder. He let it go and did not consult a physician until a week ago, when he went to Dr. McLane and told him of his suspicions. The doctor confirmed them and advised him to at least submit to an exploration, and to undergo an operation should it be deemed necessary. The colonel agreed to this and an examination was decided upon.

The Oxygen Treatment Fatal.

Before the arrival of the doctor he complained of severe pains, and said he thought he would go to bed. But he first went to the telephone, called up the office of his paper and gave a number of instructions about its future conduct in case anything should happen to him. As nobody in his office knew of his illness these instructions caused considerable wonder.

Colonel Shepard then said that he was ready for the surgeons, and they, with the nurses, began the work of putting him under ether. He had inhaled the drug but two or three times when the physician detected dangerous symptoms and stopped the inhalation. Colonel Shepard sank rapidly, and it was feared that he could not be rallied. Powerful restoratives were administered. At the end of an hour's work Dr. McLane announced that the patient was unconscious, and he continued apparently to rally. Soon after, without warning and for no apparent reason, he began rapidly to sink. The oxygen treatment was resumed, but it was of no avail, and he died. He was unconscious, and his death was peaceful. The cause of the death given by the physicians was collapse of the heart.

ELLIOTT F. SHEPARD.

Brief Sketch of His Life.

Mr. Shepard was born in Jamestown, N. Y., on July 28, 1833. He graduated from the New York University in 1853 and was admitted to the bar in 1858.

In 1861 and 1862 he was aid-de-camp on the staff of Governor Morgan. In 1862 Morgan, was in command of the depot of volunteers at Elmira, N. Y., and aided in organizing, equipping and forwarding to the field nearly 30,000 troops. He was instrumental in raising the Forty-first New York regiment, which was named the Shepard rifles. He was a member of the New York State Bar association in 1876.

His father, Fitch Shepard, was the president of the National Bank Note company, so that in his boyhood days Mr. Shepard became familiar with the smell of printers' ink.

In 1888 he purchased The Mail and Express, and it was then that he came more prominently before the public. One of his ideas was to print every day at the head of the editorial page a verse from the Bible.

Long Known to Newspaper Men.

Personally Mr. Shepard was pleasant and genial. He was rather above the medium height and strongly built, and in his 60 years sat very lightly on his shoulders, being just suggested by the sprinkling of gray in his hair and beard. He was clear headed and quick in his judgments.

Mr. Shepard had long been known to newspaper men of New York as an active lawyer and man of affairs who, while not personally engaged in journalism, furnished material for column after column of "copy," a pleasant man to interview, a graceful speaker and a writer of occasional pamphlets upon current topics which showed a logical mind and literary ability of no mean order.

He married a daughter of the late Commodore Vanderbilt, being thus an uncle by marriage to the present Vanderbilts. His daughter married William Schieffelin, and the report was current at the time that her wedding presents were valued at half a million.

A Woman In the Case.

ATLANTA, March 25.—Considerable excitement was manifested here today over the arrest of Mrs. Jeannette Hammond, who is supposed to be an accomplice with Lewis Redfine, the defaulting cashier of the Gate City National bank. The officers intimate that the woman has something like $65,000 of the missing money.

Wants to Be Decreed a Lunatic.

CINCINNATI, March 25.—William Mahler, a Swede, desired to file an affidavit in lunacy against himself. He complains of being haunted by delusions that he has wronged some one. A neighbor was called, a charge was made, and the unfortunate man will be examined today.

Stormiest Debate of the Session.

LONDON, March 25.—The house of commons sat all night in committee on the army estimates. Exciting scenes accompanied the applying of the closure. The debate was one of the stormiest of the session.

Charged With Wife Poisoning.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., March 25.—Ernest Schoenrock was arrested on a warrant charging him with having caused his wife's death by administering strychnine to her.

Chicago Has Plenty of Mud.

CHICAGO, March 25.—Never did Chicago people wallow in deeper mire than can be found in the roads leading to the fair. They are literally streams of mud.

THE STRIKE AT ANN ARBOR.

Both Railroad and Engineers Making Charges Against Each Other.

TOLEDO, March 25.—Considerable excitement was occasioned here by the attempt made to wreck a passenger train of the Ann Arbor road. Mr. Ashley, manager of the Ann Arbor, says this is not the first difficulty the road has had to contend with since the commencement of the strike. Night after night at Owosso, when the Ann Arbor train is about to pull out, labor sympathizers pull the coupling pins from the cars, so that when the train gets started they are forced to return and hitch together again. The strikers disclaim any knowledge of the peculiar incidents, and say they do not favor such a course. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the perpetrators.

The strikers have sent notice to the railroad commissioner of Michigan informing him that the Ann Arbor is daily breaking the law which compels all trains to come to a dead stop before crossing at junctions. They say the mountain engineers know nothing of the law governing the point or of the rules of the company.

MANY FIRES IN MILWAUKEE.

Insurance Companies Threaten to Withdraw From That City.

MILWAUKEE, March 25.—Firebugs have terrorized this city. The entire detective force is scouring the town and vicinity for incendiaries. Insurance men are thoroughly alarmed and say that the leading companies intend to withdraw from the city until confidence is restored. Milwaukee has been scourged by fire. Since the $6,000,000 fire of last October, which swept away the greater portion of the Third ward, there has been an alarming succession of costly fires. All the fires have been in business blocks and many have been of a mysterious origin. Within the past week there have been seven big fires, and when two more started yesterday citizens generally, and insurance men particularly, went into hysterics. The police have secured strong evidence that the fires were of incendiary origin.

World's Fair Sports.

The League of American wheelmen, the Amateur Athletic association and the National Rowing association asked the directors to sanction the sports under their control and give an exposition medal, but the directors thought if they did this would bring in a flood of such applications, and so refused the request.

A MYSTERIOUS SUICIDE.

Story of Bad Treatment, Love and Death.

TOOK HER OWN LIFE DELIBERATELY

The Was a Pretty Young Woman, With Curly Hair, and Gave Her Name as Mrs. C. E. Stevens—Her Husband Said to Be a New York Herald Reporter.

NEW YORK, March 25.—There was a mysterious death at Mrs. Christian Bickel's theatrical boarding house at 314 East Thirteenth street. A pretty woman with curly red hair was found dead in her bed, and she left letters behind her which reveal a painful history of bad treatment, love and suicide.

On Monday last a young and stylishly dressed woman rang the bell of Mrs. Bickel's house. She gave her name as Mrs. C. E. Stevens, and said her husband was a reporter on the New York Herald. "We want a room," she said, and finally hired a back parlor for $6 a week. She paid $2 in *advance, with the remark that her hus*band would come on Friday and pay the remainder, and at once installed herself in the room.

In the afternoon she was seen standing on the stoop of the house, looking up and down the street with an expectant air. She soon after re-entered the house and went to her room. Later a messenger came to the house with a telegram which Mrs Bickel received. It was addressed to Mrs. C. E. Stevens, and the landlady took it to her new tenant's room. She was in bed and seemed stupid. When she had been aroused she read the message. It was as follows:

Found the Young Woman Dead.
Homesick. First chance and send. Will come tomorrow.

The message was signed with the initial C., and came from the Imperial hotel. After reading the curt message the young woman fell back on her pillow and Mrs. Bickel left the room.

Afterward Mrs. Bickel made another call at her lodger's room. She walked over to the bed and was startled to find the young woman dead. The landlady's eyes next fell on a piece of paper. On it was scribbled:

These letters which are written here are all to be delivered as addressed. I know you will read them and see what is in them. I am going by and deliberately taking my life. No one is to be accused of this except Fred A. Ahnett.

LIZZIE WILCOX.

The dead woman's body was black and blue all over with bruises as though she had been badly beaten. In a coat pocket near the door was found the charred remains of a number of letters, and underneath this burned paper were hidden three vials, six of them with the red label.

The police were notified of the death and Captain Doherty took charge of the room and the dead woman's effects. He also took immediate steps to arrest Ahnett, if such a person existed, as the address given on the envelope of one of the letters the woman had left behind her.

SIBERIAN ATROCITIES.

Two Sailors Give a Terrible Account of Cruel Treatment.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—Two sailors, Louis A. Paraiyez and one Wilson, just arrived on the steamer Siberia from China, give a terrible account of cruel treatment received at the hands of the officers aboard the sealing schooner Mary H. Thomas and went ashore on the coast of Kamchatka to fill water tanks. A hurricane drove the schooner off and the men were left ashore. They had no provisions and traveled inland to a camp of Russian soldiers. They were put in charge of a sealing spies. They were sent to Cronstock, a convict station. After enduring all manner of ill treatment they were shipped to Vladivostock, where the commander of the Unite States steamer Marion, learning of their fate, demanded their surrender, and they were given over to him. They were taken to Shanghai on the Marion and placed in a hospital. As soon as they were able to travel they were sent to Hong-Kong and from there to this city on the Gaelic.

DISGRACE TO CIVILIZATION.

The Report of a Health Officer Concerning a County Infirmary.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., March 25.—For years the county infirmary of Columbiana has been in a horrible condition. That old institution, the Secretary Probst of the state board of health conducted an investigation in person. In his report he shows that the institution is a *disgrace not only to the county, but to civ*ilization, the inmates being huddled together in the midst of surroundings that leave nothing to the imagination of the reader. The insane department is described as particularly horrible, there being no apparent effort made to secure even a pretense of cleanliness, and a proper conception of sanitation has evidently never entered the minds of the directors.

GOOD HEALTH

ACNE AND BLACKHEADS.

Measures That Tend to Alleviate If Not Cure Them.

Acne and blackheads are troubles too well known to require any special description. They usually appear between the ages of 13 and 30, though they are seen at 45. Cold winds, the use of irritating cosmetics, working with tar and insufficient washing, play a certain part in causing them, either by plugging the orifices of the skin with secretions or by irritating the glands. But far more important is the derangement of the alimentary canal, especially constipation and dyspepsia, which are present in more than half the cases. All debilitating causes predispose to acne, and hygienic rules in general assist in causing or aggravating the attack.

At the time of life when acne first comes on the skin and nervous system are coming to maturity, as it were, and if too great a burden is suddenly thrown on them, either of too close study, too much confinement or overindulgence in eating or drinking, they may show it by eruptions or nerve troubles.

The Popular Medical Monthly, which thus in substance describes the disease and its causes, says that the treatment should be both general and local. The general invigoration of the patient should be aimed at, especially the removal of digestive and other derangements: cold sponging of the whole body every morning, as much outdoor exercise as the strength admits of, at the same time protecting the face against cold winds, and regular and early hours are generally necessary. The diet should be nutritious, and where there is the least tendency to indigestion highly seasoned dishes, indigestible food generally and alcoholic drinks should be avoided altogether. Tonics, especially iron, arsenic and strychnine, will be useful.

Locally the first thing to be done is to remove the obscuring plugs by squeezing them out with the fingers or some blunt instrument, such as a watch key. Wash the parts every night and morning with very hot water, and afterward apply friction with a rough towel unless there be much inflammation about the pimples. Vapor and Turkish baths, with thorough shampooing, are also useful.

The remedy which enjoys the greatest reputation is sulphur in some form. Take of sulphur 1 dram; glycerin, 1 dram; cold cream, 1 ounce, to be applied freely every night, short of causing pain or inflammation.

The use of any remedy must be intermitted if it inflames the skin, and then begun again.

Fresh Air In Fever Treatment.

When, during the Crimean war, typhoid fever seized the troops with such violence that the hospital accommodations were wholly insufficient, many were necessarily treated in tents. It being extremely winter weather, the result was looked forward to with the gravest apprehension. Contrary to all expectation, the result was that a much larger proportion of those thus exposed than of those well housed recovered. Many other facts of a similar character have proved that not in theory only, but in practice as well, an abundance of fresh air is indispensable to the successful treatment of fever, and that even cold air is far safer than properly warmed air in an impure state.—J. J. Shaw, M. D.

Medical Proverbs.

Of the malady a man fears, he dies. Diseases are a tax upon our pleasures. He that would be healthy must wear thin winter clothes in summer. He that sits with his back to a draft sits with his face to a coffin. Sorrow consumes more than an eagle's eye, a lion's heart and a lady's hand.

ETIQUETTE

DINNER GIVING.

Sundry Ideas About a Social Function Requiring All the Tact of a Hostess.

The success or failure of a dinner must depend mainly on the hostess and on her cleverness to provide a pleasant collection of guests. We may safely divide hostesses into two classes—the safe listless and the ambitious one. In the first case we may be pretty sure of a pleasant evening. We shall have a good dinner, good wine and nice people, all more or less pleasant, and the impression remaining at the end is one of having passed a soothing and an agreeable couple of hours.

The ambitious hostess goes further afield and strives for new sensations, and in the composition of her dinner there are sure to be elements both interesting and exciting. The combination of "smart people"—literary, artistic and political—insures an entertaining evening. The cosmopolitanism of society makes it very amusing and entertaining, for it is almost impossible to go anywhere without meeting people who, by their ability and strong individuality, add distinction and interest to the company, and nowhere do these qualities show to greater advantage than at the dinner table.

One great temptation to the ambitious hostess is to crowd her table with too many distinguished guests. Lions do not like to meet lions, the ladies are jealous of each other, and a mixture of more inferior animals adds to composure and harmony of the evening. There is a story told of a dinner given by a well known woman where the 18 guests comprised a representative assemblage of all that was distinguished in politics, art, science and literature, and one member of it remarked afterward that it was the dullest he ever remembered.

On the other hand, another hostess declares that her pleasantest dinners are those to which she asks all her "bores," for no one ever discovered why they were all invited to meet each other, and none being presumably brilliant no one found his self duller than his neighbor. But there is nothing more uncertain than the success or failure of a dinner, for it depends on a variety of small things, any of which help in either way. There are one or two golden rules which no one can ever do wrong in following. The dinner should be unassuming and well served. Everything should be hot. There should not be too much to eat, and no dinner should last over an hour or an hour and ten minutes at the outside.

Very few people dine out for the sake of getting good food only, and the ordinary hostess should content herself by feeling sure that when her guests leave they carry away the conviction that they have had an evening in which no particular dish or wine or person has made a more lasting impression on them than the fact that they have passed a more than usually pleasant evening.

LEAD PENCILS.

A Brief Sketch of How These Useful Articles Are Manufactured.

The manufacture of lead pencils from graphite has become an important industry, about 250,000 pencils being used up per day by the people of the United States alone. The method of making pencils is as follows: The graphite is taken in lumps to the stamp mills, and there pulverized under water. It is then taken to the factory in the form of dust and there separated according to fineness by repeated washings. The coarsest and heaviest particles sink to the bottom of the first tub, and so on to the last, which has only the very finest powder. This is so fine and soft that it can be taken up in the hand like water, but can scarcely be retained in the hand any more than water can.

This powder is now mixed with clay—a peculiar pipe clay brought from Germany being used by the best manufacturers—in proportions varying according to the degree of hardness required. The more clay used the harder the pencil. The graphite and clay are mixed together with water to the consistency of thick cream, and the mixture is fed to the grinding mills, which consist of two flat stones about 2 feet in diameter placed horizontally, only the upper one revolving.

Between these the mass is ground like paint, for the finest pencils as many as 24 times, thus securing the most perfect strength, uniformity and freedom from grit in the leads. After grinding the mass is inclosed in stout canvas bags and the clear water forced out by hydraulic pressure until it becomes a thick dough. It then goes to the forming press. This is simply a small, vertical, iron cylinder, having a solid plunger or piston driven by a screw.

A plate is inserted in the bottom, having an opening of the size and shape of the lead desired, and the graphite is slowly forced through in the whole, exactly as water is forced from a syringe, coiling itself round and round, like a coil of wire, on a board set beneath the press. The coil is taken up by the "rover" and straightened by the hands in lengths sufficient for three leads, which are straightened out, laid in order on a board and pressed flat by putting a cover over them. They are finally hardened by placing them in a crucible and baking in a kiln.

The leads must be done expeditiously, as the leads begin drying immediately and become brittle as they dry, but on first issuing from the press they are so plastic that knots may be tied loosely in them. The leads are now ready for their wooden cases. At the sawmills the wood is cut into blocks about 7 inches long, and these are sawed into strips about 3½ inches wide and three sixteenths of an inch thick. These boards are shaped by machinery and grooved. The lead is then placed between them, and the parts are glued together.

Leaning Tower of Pisa.

This celebrated and beautiful bell tower is situated in the city of Pisa, Italy, and was built during the twelfth century by the German architect, William of Innspruck. It is cylindrical in shape, 50 feet in diameter, 180 feet high and leans about 14 feet out of the perpendicular. It is entirely of white marble and consists of seven stories divided by rows of columns. The top, which is surmounted by a flat roof and an open gallery commanding a fine view of the surrounding country, is reached by 300 steps. The tower was not originally intended to lean, but the foundation settled more on one side than on the other until it reached its present inclination, which it has maintained with scarcely perceptible increase for hundreds of years.

"Carbold" Bearings.

A form of oilless bearing is being introduced with considerable success in Great Britain, says Popular Science News. It consists of a mixture of graphite and soapstone, hydraulically compressed, baked and turned to the shape of an ordinary brass. The admixture of steatite makes it possible to mold the graphite to any desired shape, and adds considerable toughness to it and capability of withstanding shocks. Carbold bearings are useful in places where constant attention to lubrication is inconvenient, as in cable car lines, and where accidental lubrication of the lubrication is productive of dangerous results, as in machinery used in the manufacture of explosives.

Where the Ark Rested.

The mountains of Ararat referred to in the Scriptures overlook the plain of Araxes in Armenia and are divided into two peaks and a middle ridge. The latitude of the summit of the former is 17,329 feet above the level of the sea, and of the latter 13,000 feet. It is believed that the resting place of the ark was upon some lower portion of this range rather than upon the peaks, and in support of this view is the fact that at an elevation of 6,000 or 7,000 feet the climate is temperate, the harvests are quick to mature and abundant, while the peaks for more than 9,000 feet above are mountains, are continuously covered with ice and snow.

The Largest Kitchen.

An English authority for the statement that the Bon Marche in Paris possesses probably the largest kitchen in the world. It provides food for all the employees of the house, 4,000 in number. The smallest kettle holds 75 quarts, the largest 275 quarts. There are 30 frying pans, each of which is capable of cooking 300 cutlets at a time, or of frying 200 pounds of potatoes. When there are omelets for break fast, 7,800 eggs are used. The coffee machine makes 600 quarts of coffee daily. Sixty cooks and 100 kitchen boys are employed, according to the authority quoted.

The Stinging Tree.

The stinging tree of Queensland, Australia, is described in Popular Science News as a shrub growing from 2 inches to 15 feet in height. Although pleasant to the eye, it emits a disagreeable smell and causes excruciating pain even for months to any one who has the misfortune to get stung by it. There is no mark left on the part affected, but it is tender in rainy weather or when wetted. Dogs and horses have sometimes to be shot after being stung by it.

AN AFTERNOON TEA.

A YOUNG GIRL'S COMMENTS ON A POPULAR SOCIAL FUNCTION.

A Miscellaneous Gathering of Women That Spells One's Temper and Wearing Apparel—Details of the Hollow Mockery. The Entertainment.

After all, says Flashlight, what an absurdity a "tea" is! Two or three bowls of roses around in the corners, and the "spacious apartments were a mass of bloom," a violin or two and a piano made "waves of melody." Then "Miss Blank, in yellow silk, served frappe."

We are perfectly well aware that it is no compliment to be asked to a "tea." It is merely placing us in the list of those who must be "paid off," and that at as little cost as possible. We declare that we "just won't go," but still when the time comes around we generally don our best calling gowns, crimp, powder, put on tight gloves and tighter shoes, seize upon our cardcases and depart in genuine bad temper.

There are a dozen carriages, more or less, in front of the "tea" giver's door, and a flock of feminine humanity going in and out. We catch a look in the crush all the enamel is taken off the tips of the new boots. However, with faces composed into ghastly smiles of delight, we elbow in to where the hostess and some girl—who invariably looks plainer than she ever did before—are standing, with lips parted in a weary grin of welcome.

"So glad to see you, Miss Er-r-r-um. Let me introduce Miss E-e-ah," accompanied with the latest things in handshakes, be it with elbows in the enemy's face, wrist high above the head, a sudden collapse of the right side or a courtesy, and then we fight our way out to the dining room.

It is beautiful to see with what Christian fortitude the "tea-ees" are standing it all. The early martyrs were no more heroic than they. They are all hot and cross; the powder is all rubbed off or has dissolved in patches; the hair which it took half an hour to arrange is tumbling down and tickling ears and neck, while the hairpins have gone sliding down the backs. Hats are askew from frequent bumps, and gloves are buttonless and probably torn on account of the very violent fashion of handshaking. Everybody is screaming at the top of her voice, and everybody has a headache in consequence. We are overcome with joy at the sight of our "dearest foe," who has heretofore been considered a beauty and who never looked so plain as now. But then the awful idea occurs that if she looks so frightful we must look a great deal worse. Everybody does exhibit her worst points and lose her best ones at a "tea."

Of course all the world's wife and daughter are there, but the world himself is not to be seen, which is the respect in which immediately. It speaks volumes in favor of the masculine element that it positively refuses to go to these affairs. The American woman is superior to any on earth, but that the American man is superior to her is proved by his refusal to be imposed upon in this fashion. We all say: "Aw, how deyoudo? I didn't expect to see you," and look each other over from top to toe. If there is anything wrong in our attire, be sure it is observed, commented and enlarged upon. The idea of saying that women are not courageous! The very fact that they bear this fire of fault finding glances without one quiver of an eyelash proves the contrary.

Did it ever occur to you how each one says just the thing she ought not to say as a "tea?" If you have a particular hobby, be sure that it will be mercilessly criticised right to your face. We all take a fiendish delight in making a faux pas.

Now we come to the frappe bowl. The mixture in it is cold, but that is about all to be said for it. This table is not much patronized, and the damsel behind it looks weary, for is not the genus "dude" collected with joyful men about the punch bowl, and does not her rival who serves the very mild "firewater" look supremely happy? In fact, she is the only person besides the imbibing chappies who seems to enjoy herself in the least.

Out in the dining room there are tea and chocolate—both composed of more water than anything else—and one of these must be drunk. Suppose you take Russian tea. To the well rest and traveled individual that means rum, lemon, sugar and the fragrant herb. Not so to the deity who presides here. She gives just lemon and flavored hot water—not the ghost of anything stronger. As surely as you take this mixture just so surely will you be handed delicate verse. Then there are sandwiches, but not those manufactured at about the time that the invitations were sent out they lack freshness. There are lady fingers and those atrocities known as almond cakes too. May coals of fire be upon the head of whoever invented these latter! A few sticky candies lie around, but who can eat candies while dressed in full evening costume. There are people in America who have had them in their families ever since the first "tea" was perpetrated.

These little colored rolls don't look very wise, but be sure that they have presided at many a christening, wedding and wake. Looks are deceptive.

However, having gazed upon all these beauties and having sipped at the tea, we begin again the battle of life and push, jostle, elbow out to the hostess. Poor thing! She looks more weary of the world than ever, and she answers our "Good morning" with a sigh. By the way, what a farce that "Good morning" at five minutes to 5 post meridian, is! It just goes to show what a set of sheep we are, blindly following our leader. Why doesn't some one have the courage to come out boldly and say "Good afternoon?" Never! We would die first. We are pretty willing to die anyway, I think. Life doesn't seem worth living after having been to one of those hollow mockeries, an "Afternoon tea."—Washington Star.

She Wrote "Bootles' Baby."

Although nearly everybody, young and old, has laughed or cried over "Bootles' Baby," not all, I think, of the book's American admirers know that John Strange Winter is a woman. Her name before marriage was Henrietta Vaughn Palmer. She is the daughter of the Rev. Henry Palmer, an Episcopal clergyman. Mr. Palmer's ancestors were army people; hence his daughter's inherited love for all things pertaining to military life. In 1884 Miss Palmer married Mr. Arthur Stannard, and the marriage has been a most happy one.—Grace Wassell in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Neat Reply.

Many Americans are possessed of a dry, quiet humor which is very telling. One instance, of which I was a personal witness, will serve as an example. The scene was Clark's ranch, near Mariposa. The English party (myself and a few others) and the ranch party (including the President and Mrs. Hayes, and Miss Sherman, the daughter of the celebrated general) had just arrived, and were assembled in the rude kitchen, awaiting the coming meal. A certain shyness prevailed at first, not perhaps unnatural on the part of the "foreigners"—but one does not really feel "foreign" in America.

At last a master of the ceremonies and introducer appeared in the shape of a small and quaint specimen of humanity, a family pet, which trotted into the kitchen to be caressed. A lady of our party gently stroked one end, the president the other. Presently they met, almost in the middle of the animal, and the interchange of a few remarks became inevitable. So—"This is a very pretty animal, the English lady: "My end is antelope, madam," from the president. It needs scarcely be said that both ends were antelope, but a lady may be well excused for some ignorance as to the fauna of a foreign country. The reply was very neat.—C. G. Shea in Gardener Magazine.

Smith—Indeed. Have you tried to collect and failed?

Jones—Oh, no!

Smith—How, then, do you know that money is hard to collect?

POISON AND A LETTER.

WERE TO BE THE CAUSE OF DEATH, AND THE STORY OF IT.

As Arranged by Fred Wallibald for His Tragedy, which Never Occurred—Instead he Surrenders to Let Justice Take its Course

Seventeen-year-old Fred Wallibald, for whose arrest warrants were issued about two weeks ago, for robbing the Union News Company of $68, spent his first Sunday in a cell yesterday. At eight o'clock Saturday night he called at the law office of Mr. George De Mezz, who after hearing his story, advised him to give himself up. A carriage was procured and the young man was taken to Justice Nash's, who committed him to jail, in default of $200 bail.

Wallibald says since he left home he has been around the country having what he termed a "good time." He says he has been to New York, Newark, New Brunswick, and Philadelphia.

At one time he made up his mind to commit suicide. He wrote a farewell letter to his mother, addressed it and placed it in his pocket, all ready to be sent to her, when his body should be found stiff and cold in death. Laudanum was selected as the agent to do the deadly work, and he bought a small vial of the drug. But the last moment he concluded that life was too sweet to end in that manner, so he gave that idea a wide berth, and decided to see a lawyer and have his advice in the matter, which he did with the result already stated.

He was taken before Justice Nash this afternoon, where Detective Morris, in the employ of the Central Railroad Company, charged him with robbing the money drawer in the North avenue depot. He waived examination and was held under $400 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury.

MRS. PHILLIPS' NARROW ESCAPE.

A Blue Line Flyer Just Grazes her Dress.

Mrs. Howard Phillips of Netherwood had a narrow escape from death by the Blue Line express, which passed through this city at 4.45 Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Phillips was on her way to the freight house. She started to cross the tracks from the North avenue depot. A coal train was approaching and she walked across just ahead of it. As she stepped off of track No. 2 the Blue Line express whizzed by, apparently grazing her dress. She was very much frightened, but not as much, evidently, as one of the spectators, a man who was so overcome with fright that he swallowed a quid of tobacco.

"Practical Suggestions on Observation" will be the subject of a talk to be given by Mr. John Dalziel at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thursday evening of this week.

Mr. Hardy Wharton of Third place left this morning for Jacksonville, Fla. He has been in poor health of late and he hopes to be benefitted by a visit to the sunny South.

Aged Mr. Kimball, while on his way to the train, this morning, stumbled and fell to the sidewalk under the railroad bridge on Broadway. He was taken to his home in a carriage.

"Neal" Apgar of this city did some remarkably good shooting at an exhibition contest held Saturday afternoon at Berkeley Oval. He killed forty-six out of fifty live pigeons. His competitor was Captain Brower, the champion, who killed forty-nine birds. T. H. Keller of this city was the referee.

The meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday afternoon was largely attended and was addressed by Robert E. Speer of New York, formerly secretary of work in Japan, and Charles F. Powlison, secretary of the corresponding course of the Springfield Training School for General Secretaries of the Y. M. C. A.

The Grand avenue Methodist church, Kansas City, which the Rev. Charles Byrd Mitchell, formerly of this city's pastor, expects to build, in the near future, a large People's church on its present site, which will have a seating capacity of 2,500. The present edifice is far too small for the congregations. Every Sunday night for three months from 100 to 400 have been turned away after all the space in the church had been occupied. The official board ordered the purchase of a large number of folding chairs.

The Rev. Edmund A. Embury of Washington avenue died on Saturday. He was eighty-four years old. He was born in New York, and graduated from Columbia College and the General Theological Seminary. He became rector of Emanuel Episcopal Church, in Brooklyn, and after ward of St. Marks. He moved to Plainfield in 1851, and through his liberality the Church of the Holy Cross in North Plainfield was built, he becoming its rector and continuing as such until failing health compelled him to retire. His death was not unexpected. He leaves two sons and two daughters.

Mr. John Burke, an old soldier and a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, who lived at Dunellen, died at the Soldier's Home, Kearny, Friday. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, and will be in charge of Winfield Scott Post. The members will meet in their rooms at 1.30 o'clock preparatory to attending the services. A wife, son and two daughters survive him. The son lives here. Deceased was a member of the Catholic church, but the priest at Dunellen has refused to allow the remains to be interred in the Catholic burying ground, so it is probable interment will be made at Westfield in the Grand Army plot.

In Justice Nash's Court.

The following cases are returnable before Justice Nash: Goltra vs. Foster, on contract, Monday, April 3d. Burke vs. Robinson, landlord and tenant, Thursday, March 30th. Seventy-Six Members.

At the Park place chapel last evening, at the conclusion of the services, letters were read and accepted from seventy-six persons of the Methodist faith, and a church organization was effected.

HUNG IN EFFIGY.

THE WORK OF WOULD-BE WHITE CAPS AT SPRINGFIELD.

The Residents of That Usual Quiet Village Treated to a Bit of Excitement—Figures of a Man and Woman Hanging from a Wire.

The quiet village of Springfield was in a state of excitement Saturday morning, when it heard what was hanging from the telegraph pole in front of the Presbyterian church.

Hanging by the neck to the wire, back to back, were stuffed figures, one a man, the other a woman. They were constructed mainly of straw. The man had on old shoes and white duck overalls and a hat. The woman had on a white seersucker dress. The features of both were supplied with false faces.

On both their breasts were painted with black paint what passed for skulls and cross-bones. On one leg of the man's trousers was printed "Interment," and on the other "at 3 A. M."

The skull and cross-bones is understood to hint that the deed was done by White Caps, but out in the White Cap country they haul persons out of bed and beat them with wagon stakes. They have no use in those localities for effigies.

Everybody in town knew who were meant by the figures at once. People drove over from Milburn and Summit and all around to see.

One would think that the two people thus caricatured must have been guilty of awful conduct.

The young man is William Roll, son of Freeholder J. Martin Roll, a man pretty well to do, who has held office repeatedly in the town. The woman is Miss Emma Marzolf, the daughter of a well-to-do retired produce dealer in Washington Market. But young Roll went out with the young woman when he was a married man, rumor says, and this was the cause of the row.

Young Roll is about twenty-five years old. Six years ago he married Laura Smith, a young woman prominent in Presbyterian church matters. The neighbors say they had known each other all their lives and had played together as children. When they grew up they married. They lived together for a year and a half, and then separated.

Mr. Roll says of the matter, "My idea about such things ought to go with her husband even to the Far West. What do you think of a wife that won't go a little piece up the road from her father's house? No, sir, live at her father's she would. We're in the dairy business, and my boy has to go to New York sometimes, and doesn't get home till ten or eleven o'clock at night. They won't leave the door unlocked for him or have the key hanging up where he could get it, and Scott allows like to let him in. So my boy had to come and sleep in my barn not wanting to let me know of it.

"When they were first living together she used to go to prayer meetings with young Shepard fellows. Used to come home all hours, she did. She's the one that begun it. She made life a burden to him.

"Now this business of the effigies is a vexatious thing, but my son hasn't done anything to be ashamed of. He's one of our solid boys, and we don't think it amounts to anything."

"The Shepard Rifles at Gettysburg." Julian Scott's Great Painting.

Mr. Julian Scott of this city has just completed a large painting representing "The Shepard Rifles at Gettysburg." The painting is by order of the late Col. Shepard, after whom the regiment was named. Col. Shepard as a member of the staff of Gov. Morgan of New York, during the war raised by his individual efforts 40,000 troops for the government. He made a record which may well be considered unparalelled. He was very popular. The Fifty-First New York unanimously declared in favor of adopting his name, and winning a place in history for it would make him at least unashamed of his namesakes. The opportunity came at Gettysburg. The confederates had ranged themselves in force along the crest of the high bank of a stream spanned by a stone bridge. The approach to the bridge were commanded by cannon in addition to the strong force of infantry, and it seemed a hopeless task for the Union troops to attempt to capture it. Orders came that the bridge must be carried at all hazards. By a singular coincidence the New York regiment and the Pennsylvania regiment which were selected to make the assault had both the same regimental number—the 51st. The New York regiment was the Shepard Rifles. The regiments under a furious fire from the enemy crossed the bridge at double quick and side by side, the Pennsylvanians deploying to the right and the New Yorkers to the left, and continuing to close up the street built in the face of what seemed certain death. It is this critical moment that the artist has so aptly chosen. He fully sustains his great reputation as among the foremost of American painters. The treatment is superb throughout. Col. Shepard, who viewed the picture as proven by "The Shepard Rifles," which still maintains its organization, visited Mr. Scott's studio in Plainfield repeatedly during the last few months, watching the progress of the picture, so deeply interested was he in it. His last visit was made but a few days before his death, when the picture was completed. He was delighted with it. He had ordered a most beautiful frame for it in New York, and the picture was to be delivered within a few days, but, of course, in view of Col. Shepard's sudden death, there will be a change in these arrangements. Col. Shepard had intended having the picture exhibited at the World's fair, for which it is most worthy.

THE WORK OF A GOUGE.

Edward Mackey Injured while at Work this Morning.

As Edward Mackey, a carpenter, was at work on Mr. Andrews' new house, on Central avenue, this morning, he met with an accident that may cause the loss of a finger. He dropped his gouge and reached down to pick it up. He was not looking for it but was trusting to the sense of touch. The chisel had fallen with the sharp end up, and as Mackey's hand came in contact with the sharp edge, the pain caused him to close his fingers. This action may cause him the loss of a finger, for as the hand closed the instrument gouged deep into the flesh and bone.

The Late John Taylor Johnston's Career in this City.

Mr. John Taylor Johnston moved to this city from Somerville in 1861. He bought the Job Squire property at Netherwood. The ground extended to Mountain avenue and was used mostly as a resting place for unsightly tree stumps until Mr. Johnston made a beautiful park of it. The house which had been built many years before Mr. Johnston purchased it was remodelled by him.

Mr. Johnston was a very public spirited man and did much toward improving Plainfield. It was through him that the Central Railroad elevated its tracks, and had not some of the old settlers objected, he would have had the railroad build a brick sewer, six feet in diameter, along the center of the railroad embankment from this city to the Raritan river, at a cost of about $10,000 per mile, and have presented to the city. The railroad embankment was objected to because it would leave "the city down in a hollow and cut it in two" and the sewer was strongly opposed because it was claimed that it would breed pestilence.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Johnston favored the opening of a wide boulevard from the depot to the mountain, the route differing but a few feet from the present proposed North Broadway. The project failed because some more objected to the city being improved, and procured of a certiorari, new commissioners, etc., just as has been recently done.

The street is needed now more than ever. Would that there were more citizens like Mayor Taylor Johnston.

Mr. Johnston was one of the projectors of the Johnston Drive, and cheerfully paid his assessment of $6,500 for it. When the drive was being made he had some trouble over the boundary line between his land and that of a Mr. Gould, and to settle the matter paid to Mr. Gould, through his agent, Wm. C. Ayres, $1,500.

Mr. Johnston had East Front street widened to Coles Hill, paying for much necessary property and moving of fences in Dunellen. He had West Front street macadamizing the road bed of Front street along the entire front of his property, thereby saving to the city nearly all the cost of macadamizing the same distance on Mountain avenue.

For sixteen years Mr. Johnston has been helpless and always attended by a faithful valet.

Mr. William C. Ayers has been his agent in many real estate dealings and says that a more considerate, honest and strictly honest business man he never knew. Mr. Johnston advised Mr. Ayers to do everything above board and correct or not all.

Mr. Ayers speaks very highly of the late Senator as he had many excellent qualities. His wife was a very noble woman and every member of his family most cordial and hospitable. His home life was very happy.

Mr. Johnston owned much real estate at Somerville, all of which during late years, his son has taken charge.

The Originator of the "Smith Picnic" Dead.

Mr. P. Z. Smith, popularly known as the head of the famous and extensive Smith family, died Friday morning at his residence, in Bernards township, one mile east of Peapack, after a short illness. Mr. Smith was born on Dec. 28, 1808, in the place where he died, and was consequently eighty-four years, three months and twenty-six days old. It was through his instrumentality that the famous "Smith picnic" was inaugurated with the motto: "In memory of our ancestors." The picnics were begun in 1876 and were always held on the last Wednesday of August in the grove near his late residence, and were attended by between five hundred and one thousand Smiths. He was a man of superior character and intelligence and possessed of a strong family sentiment.

Bird and Mr. Robert Gorton will act as soloists, and the following anthems are in preparation for rendering on that day:

"Easter Bells are Chiming.....Loud
"Awake up, my Glory.....Barnby
"At the Sepulchre".....Steele
"There is a Green Hill".....Somerset

This Mr. Anderson did, privately informing the cashier to look out for him.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Cause of Russian Famines.

Stepniak assures us there is still famine in Russia, famine dire and terrible. In the upper Don and upper Oka region 1,000,000 people need relief again this year. In Kasma and the provinces of the middle and lower Volga 3,000,000 are in destitution. In Bessarabia last year the people had plenty and helped their fellow countrymen bravely. This year the drought ruined their crops, and they themselves stand in need of the help they so generously gave to others last year. Stepniak of course blames the Russian government for this. He says the taxes annually wrung from the peasants leave them with not enough food to tide them over even one season. The government is unable or unwilling to right their wrongs. "Freedom," says Stepniak, "is the remedy."

But a writer in the Edinburgh Review tells a different story. It will be observed even Stepniak admits that drought caused the famine in Bessarabia. The writer in the Edinburgh Review tells us what caused the drought. Both the writers agree on one point—that there is no hope of permanent relief soon for the hapless peasants of Russia. The cause of the destitution is not politics, however, according to The Review writer. It is simply and solely that for centuries Russia has been stripping her hillsides, valleys and plains of the trees that protected her rivers and streams—in a word, deforestation.

The woods were cut away from the headwaters of the streams, the streams dried up, leaving the bare fields to be sand swept in summer and snow swept in winter and desolated, until Russia is gradually becoming like the desert of central Asia. Central Asia, now the home of a few wandering savages tortured by alternate cold and heat, was once a land of magnificent fertility. So was Palestine; so was the whole region bordering on the Mediterranean. Deforestation devastated all.

The only hope for Russia is in the reforesting of her lands. How fast the process of ruin has progressed may be told from one fact. Peter the Great built and launched his first ships upon the river Woronesch. This stream is now a mere rivulet. Russia is gradually becoming overwhelmed with sand. The most Americans can draw for themselves, especially those Americans who are seeking to cut down every piece of woods in this republic.

Milk.

There is one pure food reform that is most imperative now at the approach of warm weather, and that is in connection with milk. Every year in the uncommonly healthy city of Philadelphia 5,000 babies die for want of good milk. Milk dealers adulterate the milk they sell, and dishonest dairymen confessedly care not a jot for the quality of the milk they put on the market so long as they can get the quantity. It is not enough that a state should pass laws against the mere adulteration of milk by foreign substances.

It is also necessary to provide against selling skim milk for fresh and against selling even fresh milk that does not come up to a certain standard of richness under a chemical test. Boards of health every where should take this matter into immediate consideration. Some of the states have already excellent milk laws, among them New York, and her cities could be adapted to suit other localities.

Meantime, if milk dealers and dairymen could be forced to feed their own children on the fluid they distribute without any conspunction of conscience to other people's children, it might be one way of touching their leathern sensibilities.

That live and lively state of Texas is taking the lead in heading off surplus cotton production. The Texas Acreage association meets and considers what will be the best farm products for agriculturists to go into at different times and in different parts of the state. At a late meeting in Austin a committee was formed of one member from each congressional district to draft an address to Texas farmers recommending them to raise less cotton, but not more of that other indigenous American product named by General Butler in one of his historic sallies. On the contrary, they will plant and hoe and reploat the diminished cotton acreage by varied farm products. Thus the price of cotton would be maintained, while the Texas farmer would be passing upon his own soil many of the high priced crops for which he has been accustomed to exchange his low priced cotton. If the whole south would do this, it would increase her agricultural wealth greatly.

The World's Fair Sunday closing war has assumed a new aspect. The attempt is made by those who want the exposition opened to have a bill passed in the Illinois legislature permitting the Illinois exhibit to be shown to visitors on Sunday in spite of the act of congress closing the fair on that day. Lawyers declare that if this bill is passed it will open the whole fair on Sunday, since the exposition commission is a body incorporated in Illinois. This would bring up an important state's rights question.

It is said that the price of wool will be considerably higher this spring than heretofore.

THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN.

An Extra Session of Congress Likely Next Fall.

TO ACT ON THE TARIFF AND MONEY.

What the Senate Has Before It This Week.

To Consider the Cases of Senators Appointed by Governors—A Berth Waiting For Admiral Gherardi—Capital News.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The New York Herald's correspondent telegraphs his paper as follows:

"President Cleveland has finally made up his mind to call an extra session of congress next September. He made this statement several times during last week to prominent members of both houses of congress.

"This course has been believed to be the one most likely to be pursued by the president, but the formal announcement has not heretofore been had. As a consequence the politicians are arranging all their plans with a view to coming back to Washington for a longsleep with the tariff and other perplexing problems, beginning some time in next September.

"The first work that will come before congress will be the consideration of a tariff bill and a bill to repeal the Sherman silver purchase act. Secretary Carlisle will soon be engaged in the work of drafting a tariff bill for submission to the committee on ways and means when congress convenes. Some indignation was displayed by the Democrats when it was suggested that the administration would present a tariff bill. Secretary Carlisle has subdued this discontented feeling by explaining that he would only submit the necessary data for a tariff bill.

Action For the First Step.

"Democrats are anxious to have a bill enacted as soon as possible before the next election of members of the house of representatives. It is anticipated that business men and commercial conditions will be slightly disturbed when the new bill goes into effect, and for this reason the administration and the Democrats generally are anxious to have the first step taken as soon as possible.

"Measures which Secretary Carlisle will receive from political and other organizations throughout the country will be accepted as suggestions only.

"The New York Reform club's tariff bill created considerable mirth in political and administration circles. Champions of the club in the city, among whom is Representative John DeWitt Warner, are much pained that their efforts are received in such a light and flippant way. Mr. Warner claims that the criticisms come from many Brns whose business has no legitimate profit and would not have but for tariff extortions on their neighbors. Mr. Warner says the measure suggested by the Reform club is not a party bill, and he says, moreover, Secretary Carlisle or to congress for their approval, but is presented to the American people."

Programme In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The indications are that this week the senate will undertake the discussion and perhaps the decision of the right of a governor of a state to fill a vacancy in the United States senate which occurred while the legislature was in session. The report of the two factions of the committee will be presented today, and as the disposition is to push them to conclusion as rapidly as possible it is probable that, instead of taking a three days' recess, the senate will adjourn at dark.

The unknown quantity in the calculation of the week's work is the disposition of the leaders on either side touching the matter of reorganization. It is expected that the Democrats, through Mr. Gorman, will present the caucus nominations for senatorial offices early in the week, probably in executive session, and if a serious controversy threatens to follow the matter may be brought before the public through proceedings in open session. The date of adjournment is apparently at least two weeks off.

The Matter of Sheathing Vessels.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The question of sheathing our naval vessels is one to which Secretary Herbert is said proposes to give some earnest consideration. Naval Constructor Hichborn shows that the Atlanta on her trial, trip, with a clean bottom, attained a speed of 15.5 knots an hour with 8,345 horsepower, while the Boston her exact duplicate, with a comparatively foul bottom, made but 13.8 knots on 2,78, horsepower.

Mr. Cleveland Will Go Too.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—President Cleveland will not attend the great naval rendezvous in Hampton Roads, but will lend his presence to the naval review in New York harbor. Mrs Cleveland will probably be accompanied to New York by Mrs. Cleveland and by several of the members of his cabinet.

As to Colonel Remy's Sanity.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—A writ for an inquiry into the sanity of Colonel William B. Remy, ex-judge advocate general of the navy, was signed by Judge Cox. The writ was suspended for the time being. Colonel Remy was one of the best known men in Washington.

A Berth For Admiral Gherardi.

A TEXAS TERROR CAUGHT.

Single Handed, He Held Up a Train and Terrorized a Town.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 27.—Advices have reach here of the capture of Carlos Small, one of the most desperate characters of the Texas frontier. Small recently finished a sentence of five years in Chihuahuan, Mexico, for robbing a train on the Mexican Central single handed. A few weeks ago he crossed the town of Del Rio about noon. He was on horseback and with a six-shooter in each hand proceeded to depopulate the streets in short order. He then took a shot at every man who dared to show his head, and kept the town in a state of terror until a force of citizens began taking shots at him with Winchesters. He then rode off and crossed the river into Mexico. He returned to Texas a few days ago and was taken into custody at Nures station by a deputy sheriff who got the drop on him. Small is charged with house theft.

CONTRABAND CHINAMEN CAUGHT.

An Alleged Smuggling Conspiracy Brought to Light at Portland.

PORTLAND, March 27.—One hundred and twenty-seven Chinamen arrived in port on the Haytien Republic Thursday. At night 67 of them were landed. William Dunbar of the Haytien Republic said, "We have an arrangement with the Canadian Pacific by which we get 15 for every Chinaman we bring into Portland, and if they are denied permission to land we get as much more for returning them." The remaining 59 Chinamen are still on the steamer awaiting the result of habeas corpus proceedings.

Suit Against Mr. Risley.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 27.—John M. Butler has entered the draft of a bill against John Ewing Risley, recently nominated minister to Denmark, looking to a suit for an accounting and injunction to prevent sale of property. The allegations represent that Risley failed to account for fees received in prosecuting cases before the court of commissioners on Alabama claims. Mr. Butler declines to make oath to the truth of the allegations. It is likely that the whole matter will be found to have been definitely settled.

Whitney Wants No Mission.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., March 27.—Ex-Secretary William C. Whitney when interviewed on Mr. Hanna's yacht Comanche said: "It is not true that Mr. Cleveland is holding open for me the English mission. TO BLOW UP THE PRINCE

Anarchists Will Lay In Wait For Him With Bombs.

A NEW YORK PARALLELS ALLEGATIONS.

When He Comes to Visit the World's Fair It Is Said They Will Try to Kill Him. Countess Defeated For the Presidency of the French Senate—Other Foreign News.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The Journal prints a long article in which it says anarchists have a plot on foot to assassinate the Prince of Wales on the occasion of his visit to the World's fair. That paper goes on to say:

"It is an open secret that efforts are being made to induce the Prince of Wales to visit America. It has been fully established that the prince has looked with favor upon the idea, and so well is this latter fact known that people in a position to understand the undercurrent at work toward this end say that it has been quite possible that the prince would accept an invitation extended to him by Mr. William Waldorf Astor to be his guest in a trip across the Atlantic."

The journal goes on to say that the prince will land at Boston and go through Canada to the Pacific coast, stopping there in favor of annexation. "These preparations," says that paper, "and the strong undercurrent that has been brought to bear to induce the prince to visit the United States and Canada, and have caused the making of plans to bring the steam yacht of the Prince of Wales to an end during the American tour."

Major Billings' Letter.

"These views have been already presented to Sir Julian Pauncefote, the English ambassador at Washington.

"Major Charles Fox Billings of Peterboro, Ontario, not long since wrote to him stating that he had accurate information that an extensive anarchistic plot has begun, in which the leading friends of the red flag of extermination in the United States and Canada are concerned, and which, in the event of the visit of the Prince of Wales to America, will end in his murder.

"Such a letter ordinarily would meet with scant courtesy at the hands of Sir Julian Pauncefote, who would believe it the work of a crank. But in this case the writer of the startling news is no crank.

"He is a retired English army officer of great distinction. Sir Julian Pauncefote immediately communicated the tenor of the letter to the English foreign office, and the result was widespread consternation. The death of the Prince of Wales would easily mean revolution. The queen of England is now at Nice in failing health, the weight of her 74 years bearing heavily upon her.

"Should the life and that of the Prince of Wales would place the throne of England in the hands of Prince George, duke of York, the present heir apparent, a young man said to be extremely radical."

SAM JONES DENIES IT.

He Says He Does Not Carry a Gun and Never Did.

ATLANTA, March 27.—Sam Jones telegraphs from Danville, Va.: "As to the statement that I was in any way armed or going around with a gun, it is a great big lie. I have tested my skilled for 45 years without going armed, and I propose to continue carrying it to the end without going armed. Second, that any man or thing influenced me as to whether I would or would not meet Mr. Mallette outside of the choice of my wife is another great big lie. Third, no one is more tired of that unfortunate scandal touching those anonymous letters than myself. I do more believe that my pastor, Rev. J. H. Mashburn, wrote those letters than I believe St. Paul wrote them, and so long as I believe absolutely in his innocence I will stand by him. I have never been the aggressor in this affair. After the trial of Mr. Mashburn and his acquittal I counseled peace and good feeling."

Kansas Women Will Vote.

KANSAS CITY, March 27.—Women will play an important part in the municipal elections in Kansas, April 14, and the registration of female voters has been unprecedented. There are few women candidates. SMASHING THE RECORD.

The Proud Distinction Which the New York Achieved.

SHE REACHED 20.57 KNOTS AN HOUR

When the Vessel Warmed Up to Her Work, She Seemed to Glide Through the Water as Noiselessly as a Yacht—Naval Experts Were Deeply Interested.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27. — With the proud distinction of having broken the record of all preliminary trials, and the satisfaction of being the fastest armored vessel in the world, the cruiser New York has returned to Cramp's shipyard. From the hour she steamed down the Delaware until her return, naval experts have await ed with deep interest the result of the great warship's initial performance.

Despite heavy rain squalls and a biting wind from the southeast, fully 5,000 patriotic Philadelphians were present to wish the warship godspeed as she backed out into the stream, and started down the river on her trial trip.

A wild shout arose as the four powerful engines began to vibrate and the water was churned into foam astern. The run down the river and bay was made with fires half banked and under natural draft.

Starting with 45 revolutions, a speed of 10 knots was attained and held until Greenwich point was well abaft the beam. After this the new vessel seemed to warm up to her work and 95 revolutions were reached, the speed increasing to 17.5 knots. The vessel seemed to glide through the water as noiselessly as a yacht, and there was scarcely any vibration throughout the ship.

Wednesday was cold and damp, with a fresh breeze, and the New York lay quietly at anchor. By Saturday morning the wind had hauled to the westward and the weather was clear.

The Story of the Trials.

Fires were lighted at daylight, and at 6 o'clock the New York was under way running for the 5-fathom bank lightship. The race was to be between this and the northeast end lightship, a distance of 9.88 nautical miles, the depth of water being 12 fathoms. The following table tells the story of the two trials:

Five fathom bank lightship to northeast end lightship: course, north by east; distance, 9.88 nautical miles.

Start, 8:28:15; finish, 8:55:53; difference, 29 minutes 38 seconds.

Speed, 20.03 nautical miles per hour.

Second trial:

Northeast end lightship to 5-fathom bank lightship: course, south by east; distance, 9.8 nautical miles.

Start, 9:18:56; finish, 9:42:56; difference, 29 minutes 51 seconds.

Speed, 19.67 nautical miles.

Average for the two trials, 19.86 miles.

In the afternoon the cruiser was headed to the eastward in search of deeper water. In the run of four consecutive hours she maintained a speed of 20.28 knots per hour, reaching as high as 20.57 as the watersdeepened. With these satisfactory results the New York anchored for the night and steamed up to the shipyard on Sunday morning. She will be ready for her official trial within three weeks.

Captain Redford W. Sargent was incommand of the New York during her trial, assisted by Captain George L. Chambers, an old Delaware river pilot, who has steered all of the Cramps new ships. There were $40 people on board, 30 of whom were in the wardroom mess. Two stewards, 10 cooks and 30 waiter-had charge of the commissary department. Mr. Edward Cramp, the superintending engineer of the company, was practically in charge of the trial.

MORE TALK OF STRIKING.

Pennsylvania Switchmen Hold an Important Meeting at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—A meeting of the United Brotherhood of Switchmen was held here behind closed doors. The meeting was in session for two hours. A slight general idea of the business that came before the meeting was obtained. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the question of a strike upon the Pennsylvania railroad and the roads entering Chicago during the World's fair or just prior to its opening. Delegates were present from various points along the Pennsylvania and from the local branches of the brotherhood in Chicago. A number of letters were read, the general sentiment of which was against a strike. The feelings of the switchmen at the meeting, however, were somewhat more pronounced than those of the writers of the letters, and a strong sentiment prevailed in favor of taking advantage of the coming rush of business on the railroad lines to state the men's grievances and demands, and to put pressure of some description upon the railroad companies to compel them to grant them.

A MILLIONAIRE'S HEIRS AT ODDS.

The Executors of the Estate Charged With Fraud and Conspiracy.

DETROIT, March 27.—Six of the heirs of Captain Eber B. Ward, who died in this city in 1875, have commenced suit in the Wayne circuit court for a sum directly involving $5,000,000, and with accumulated profits aggregating not far from $12,000,000. The bill and answer have been suppressed. They charge Orrin W. Potter of Chicago, as sole executor of the Ward estate, with conspiracy and fraud in the management of said estate, resulting in its wreck. It is said that Potter made himself president of the North Chicago Rolling Mill company, in which the Ward estate was a stockholder, to extent of nearly $1,000,000. The other defendants are John R. Lyon and the North Chicago Rolling Mill company of Chicago, Mrs. Catherine Cameron of Toronto, Ont., and Thomas B. Lyon of Ludington. Mr. Potter is a nephew of the dead man, Mrs. Cameron is the widow and the Lyons are her brothers.

It is predicted that quite short jackets in some of the new and rather startling color combinations will be worn this spring.

Strictly tailor made frocks have been rather crowded out by the "grandmother" styles.

Violet is a favorite odor just now in powders and liquid perfume for the bath and for sachets with which to perfume all articles of dress.

Apple Pie and Cheese.

Your flavored creams and ices
And your dainty angel food
Are mighty fine devices
To regale the dainty dude.
Your terrapin and oysters,
With wine to wash 'em down,
Are just the thing for roisters
When painting of the town.
No flippant sugared notion
Shall my appetite appease
Or bate my soul's devotion.
To apple pie and cheese.

And cheese! No allen it, sir,
That's bought across the seas
No Dutch antique nor Switzer
Nor glutinous De Brie.
There's nothing I abhor so
As shawmets of this ilk.
Give me the harmless morceau
That's made of true blue milk!
No matter what conditions
Dyspeptics come to feese,
The best of all physicians
Is apple pie and cheese!

NEW YORK WOMEN LAWYERS WHO ARE ALSO NOTARIES PUBLIC.

Many of Them Are Court Reporters and Find Their Services Are More Valuable When They Are Able to Administer Oaths—Their Duties Are Simple.

At a very important trial in the courts the other day I saw a dark eyed little woman swearing in witnesses. The sight rather astonished me. I asked the clerk who and what she was.

"A notary public and commissioner in the court of claims," he replied. "Didn't you know that women held these offices?"

I confessed ignorance.

"The history of the first appointment is quite interesting," he continued. "The applicant was Miss Jennie Turner, now Mrs. Powers.

"The first time a paper came into court with her signature it was denied admittance or recognition, and there was a hurly burly argumentative time over it. The judge doubted the right of a woman to hold the office, but the governor, after some length of time, declared that a woman could become a notary public, and the fight was over."

I hustled round to find the name of the governor who had thus made himself famous. It was Governor Cornell. Mrs. Powers, whom I called upon, told me all about it. She has a comfortable office in the Mutual Life Insurance building on Nassau street, and I was agreeably disappointed in finding her anything but a legal looking woman. She is tall, spare and wiry, with deep, dark eyes, a Scottish expression, and plenty of wit in her makeup. She is a money maker and adopted the office of notary public to further her stenographic and court reporting interests.

She has little time for gossip, is not interested in dress or the frivolous things of life and is shy of talking.

"If women really wish to become equal with men," said she, "they must work and not talk."

Mrs. Powers evidently has little hopes for her sex, because she must know that if women couldn't talk they not only wouldn't work, but they wouldn't live.

"I do not see anything extraordinary in women notaries public," Mrs. Powers said. "The office merely requires responsibility, judgment and perception, and I think any sensible, careful woman has these traits. In reality there is very little money in it, but considerable influence."

When Miss Mary F. Seymour put in her application for a notary public appointment, the governor in power said, "She was fitted to hold any public office," and at once granted her the request.

That was six years ago, and she has been reappointed several times since.

"Do you like to have men swearing before you?" I inquired of her.

"I don't mind that," she replied, "if they formulate their oaths gracefully and expeditiously."

"Do men make any objections to women notaries?

"No. I think they like the idea. When over the client comes once to the office I notice he generally returns for future business."

"What led you to think of becoming a notary?"

"Necessity. I was a stenographer and court reporter, and I realized that the office would be of value to me. Where the reporter has the power of notary public he or she can administer oaths, swear in witnesses and take testimony."

"Do you make much money out of your office?"

"Well, now, that is rather a delicate question, but I will give you the best answer I can. From just the proceeds of the fees resulting from the office of notary public I don't think any woman could exist, but by performing the duties one is thrown in the way of much legal work, as the making out of wills, the arrangement of expert testimony and—on jobs, which means money.

"Many patent lawyers have their private secretaries made notaries for convenience."

Miss Seymour is about medium height, with a fair complexion, blue eyes and an open countenance. She is a native of Illinois, and probably inherited her executive talents from her father, who was an eminent writer, lawyer and author. She commenced life as a teacher, then branched out into stenography, which greatly troubled her family, particularly her brothers, who thought that profession at that time a very unpleasant one for women.

About the period when women stenographers were first heard of Miss Seymour started a school of typewriting and shorthand and made it a success. This school is still in existence and it continues to grow in importance each year. Miss Seymour is also the editor of The American Woman's Journal, the organ of business women.

Miss Harriette M. Johnston came from the scholarly regions of Vassar college, and no doubt imbibed from childhood the independent womanly spirit which is as free as air in that country.

She studied law for two years in Poughkeepsie, but thinking that New York people were not advanced enough to accept women lawyers as just the right thing she sacrificed her legal ambitions and entered New York city as a court reporter and notary public.

She has an office in the Equitable building and says she has more work than she can do.

"The regular legal fee of a notary public," said she, "is 12½ cents, but when we go out the charge is from $5 to $10."

"What do you have to do when you administer an oath?"

"It is very simple. The witness raises his or her right hand and swears that he or she will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

"Do you have a seal?"

"Yes, or a certificate can be gotten from the clerk of the court if the parties concerned are going out of the state."

Miss Johnston states that it is quite a difficult thing for a woman to get appointed to the office of notary public. She says there is a confirmed prejudice against a woman holding any public office.

In the course of her experience she met a highly educated woman law student who desired an appointment of notary public. She filled out a paper and got 75 of the most influential citizens of Dutchess county to affix their names to the petition, yet her favor was not granted, and this case, Miss Johnston admits, is not a rare one.

Miss Emma Mills is a notary public, a bank notary and a commissioner of deeds for some of the newly admitted states. She has a spacious office on Park row and does a successful business. She handles a great deal of stock for big enterprises and has a thorough legal education, understanding all the ins and outs of the law.

Mrs. Ella Brennan has a large office on Broadway and has been a notary for some years. She is also a commissioner in the United States court of claims and a passport agent for tourists. Mrs. Brennan is what one may call a silent power. She is intense, calculating and a capital planner.—New York Herald.

A SERVICEABLE ARTICLE.

It Can Be Made at Home With Very Little Trouble.

The illustration is of a most serviceable and convenient article—a writing tablet. It can be made at home with very little trouble and at the minimum of expense. To make it, get from any carpenter a stout, smooth board 2 feet square. Cover it smoothly on both sides with pretty figured French cretonne. In the lower part of the center of the board tack diagonally across the corners of a place 8 inches wide by 12 inches long small straps of silk ribbon elastic. Under these straps slip a piece of blotting paper that is 12 inches in size. On the left of the blotter tack two straps of the elastic to hold the package of note paper and the pack of envelopes.

In the upper middle portion of the board a strap of the elastic is tacked up and down, making three places in which to stick a pen, pencil and paperknife. Just above the blotter a traveler's inkstand is firmly glued. To the right of this a small strap is tacked on, in which to slip a little book made of oil paper, in which to keep postage stamps. The right side of the board has straps so arranged as to accommodate postal cards and another package of paper and envelopes. When good taste is used in the selection of the cretonne and neatness in the tacking of it and the straps on the board, the effect is something quite artistic and pleasing. The tacks are brass headed, and very small ones are really better than one large one, and are prettier as well.

In covering the board, cover the bottom part first, leaving a small margin of the goods, which must be tacked upon the thick edge of the board with small, ordinary tacks. The upper cover of the board is cut with a margin a little wider than the board is thick. This surplus margin is turned under and the cretonne tacked very toothily with the fancy nails, which must be very close together.

Meat Loaf.

To 1 quart of chopped meat add 2 eggs well beaten, 1 cup of cracker or bread crumbs and 1 small cup of stock, sweet milk or water. Season with salt or pepper, and, if desired, sage, chopped onion or parsley. Mix well and mold into a loaf. Lay some very thin strips of bacon on top and bake an hour.

A Word to Husbands.

How many thousands and hundreds of thousands of women do all the menial tasks of a household in order "to save the cost of a girl!"

How many high minded aspiring wives and mothers are sentenced for life to the kitchen, to the close association of all the dull daily drudgery that seems to have no end, and that could be performed as well—perhaps better—by an unintelligent but honest servant?

I believe it is a mistake.

It is false economy.

If the hard of the house could realize—however hard pressed he might be financially—that the payment of a girl's wages would make his wife happier, his children tidier, his home brighter and more comfortable—as it certainly would—I believe that nine times out of ten he would squeeze out the money.

Men don't think.

If the wife submits without a protest, they are so inclined to let her do it.

And you, men, talk to her in order to save him the expenditure.

But she has to pay in the end, if not in cash, then in failing health, a furrowed face and premature old age.

I do not think that any man has a right to marry a woman and make a servant of her.

On Skirt Facings.

"Having always been obliged to walk a great deal, I found that my skirt facings and bindings required renewing every few weeks," writes a feminine correspondent, "until I conceived the idea of using demin for the facing and velveteen for the binding, long before the ready made velveteen binding came into market. I find that the demin facing usually wears as long as the dress does, or at least until it has to be made over, and besides does not wear on the shoes as canvas does. I prefer the brown demin, put on the light side out, for all dresses."

Convenient to Wear.

A handsome towel may be used or they may be made of fine linen. Have it stamped some pretty design, then work with etching silk. The cape is made longer behind than in front.

DRESSING CAPE.

A cape of this kind is exceedingly convenient to wear when one is doing up one's hair, and it always makes a useful and simple gift, easily worked and inexpensive. One may vary the shades of silk: thus, if the towel has a blue border, work with blue wash twist; if red border, use red silk, etc. These dressing capes launder easily; in fact, they improve with washing. Do not starch it too stiff. For a fair they also sell rapidly.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE FOREST TREE.

Its History From a Tiny Shoot to a Pile of Lumber.

There can be no doubt as to the destination of the large trunk of a tree shown in the accompanying cut. It is a prostrate giant of the forest. For many years it has braved storms and hurricanes, growing up from a seed dropped in the ground—first a tiny shoot, then a slender sapling and finally a tree, year by year adding a rim to its outward or exogenous growth and sending forth beautiful shoots and branches until it attains royal proportions.

GOING TO THE SAWMILL.

In the summer its leaves have rustled in the breezes and sheltered myriads of birds. Cattle have browsed around it or sought the protection of its ample shade. In winter the soft and graceful outlines of its branches and twigs interlaced together have stood out in exquisite relief against the blue sky.

At last the woodman has selected it, for timber, and down it has come after many skillful and well directed blows of the sharp ax. Its boughs and branches have been lopped off, and it is now ready, despoiled of its beauty, for the "whir, whir" of the sawmill, to be cut into boards and stacked up as lumber for use in building houses or in the manufacture of furniture.

The Wonderful Steam Hammer.

The steam hammer is rightly regarded as one of the triumphs of engineering skill. The hammer head is fastened to the end of a piston rod working in a cylinder supported between huge iron standards or pillars. It is driven by steam admitted alternately below and above the piston by the hammer driver, who controls and determines the weight of blow to be given. This he does by the action of a lever which is connected with the steam valve for the admission and release of the steam in the cylinder.

The hammer drivers, who are oftentimes boys, become so expert in the use of the driving lever that they can cause the hammer to tap an egg placed on the anvil without breaking it. The heaviest hammers weigh from 80 to 100 tons, but many a blacksmith uses them of the weight of 200 pounds, thereby not only getting his work quickly and well done, but also dispensing with the help of hammerers or "strikers." The hammer was invented in 1839 by James Nasmyth, whose name it bears, but it was not till several years afterward that its became adopted generally in consequence of the great improvements made on it.

Time to Get Up.

Cockadoodle, doodledoo!
Get up, lads and lasses too.
Pray don't waste your time in bed.
Miss and Master Sleepyhead!

I can stand such ways as these.
Do not think that I can stay
Cockadoodling all the day.

Neatness Is Girls.

Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and some one takes the trouble to remind her that "if she does not learn it when she is young she never will. It takes a great deal more neatness to make a girl look well than it does to make a boy look passable—not because a boy, to start with, is better looking than a girl, but his clothes are of a different sort—not so many colors in them—and people don't expect a boy to look so pretty as a girl. A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her fingers' ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her skirt is torn, she cannot be liked."

The Frog and the Stork.

A friendly little frog was he,
And a kindly little fellow,
And so he lived the stork to stay
And share his umbrellow.

A Pointed Inquiry.

It is well known that Thackeray had the highest admiration for many of Dickens' novels. He often expressed his opinion on the point in the strongest terms. Mrs. Ritchie, his daughter, tells a pleasant story, showing how this opinion was shared by other members of his family. She was sitting in a room in their house at Kensington talking to her father, the late Lord Tennyson being also of the company. All on a sudden her youngest sister looked up from a book in which she was deeply interested and asked in a soft, childish voice, "Papa, why do you not write books like 'Nicholas Nickleby?'"

In the Looking Glass.

The world is a looking glass,
Wherein ourselves are shown,
Kindness for kindness, cheer for cheer,
Coldness for gloom, repulse for fear.
To every soul its own.
We cannot change the world a whit,
Only ourselves which look in it.

—The decision of the trustees of the Normal College to adopt the title "Woman" Superintendent in preference to "Lady" Superintendents reflects credit upon their good sense. The woman expresses precisely the idea they mean to convey. It would be just as proper to speak of a washlady and a sewing lady, or of lady suffrage or a lady missionary society as of a lady superintendent. The title woman is simply the counterpart of the title man.

Stole Wearing Apparel.

A search warrant was issued to-day by Justice Nash, upon complaint of Elias Smith, to search for wearing apparel, that had been taken from the complainant's house of Westervelt avenue. Constable Moffett executed the search and found some of the garments at the house of Kate Duffey on Fourth street, who admitted taking the goods. She was held under $100 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. Among the articles found was a skirt belonging to Mrs. Woodruff of Westervelt avenue.

St. Joseph's Church.

The religious services of the last three days of Holy week will commence at 7.30 a. m. each day. The Wednesday and Friday evening services will be at the usual hour.

A very beautiful work of art has been placed this week in St. Joseph's church. It is a recumbent figure of the "Dead Christ" as resting in the sepulchre. The wounds of the feet, hands and sides are artistically shown, and resting on the left side of the sanctuary, it deeply impresses the devout who look upon it.

Still Hunting Curiosities.

Mr. George H. Fountain of West Front street is getting quite a collection of old curiosities. Since the finding of the buffalo bones, near the mountain some time ago, he has, at every opportunity, been in search of other relics.

Last Wednesday a friend told him that about twelve years ago while at work on an unused part of his farm he had dug up two stone Indian axes. Saturday Mr. Fountain visited the spot mentioned, and not only found the old axes but also a collection of Indian tools.

His father-in-law resided at the place referred to where the child is being taken care of. The Board of Health has a notice of warning on the door to keep people away from the place on account of the disease being contagious.

The other case is on Emily street, near Somerset. It is Mr. William A. Waldron. The house is quarantined.

Mr. Theodore Hoffman, formerly of this city and now of New York, has returned home from a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs Sering P. Hoffman of West Second street.

Mr. H. C. Squires, who has been for some time salesman in A. M. Griffen's hardware store, left Saturday night to enter the wholesale tobacco business with his uncle at Somerville.

John Taylor Johnston's Paintings.

The following letter appeared in today's Tribune, referring to the late John Taylor Johnston:

"Sir—Referring to the Tribune's obituary of John Taylor Johnston, whose father, with my own father, was a partner in the firm of Borrman, Johnston & Co., and as Mr. James Borrman was the originator and first president of the Hudson River Railroad), I wish to say in relation to the sale of his pictures in 1876 that it was common talk among those who knew the exceptional integrity of the man that the sale was made for the benefit of those, widows and others of small means, whose money was invested in the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the palmy days of its prosperity under his advice, and he reimbursed them, so far as he could, in that way. The sale being synchronous with the financial reverses of the railroad and his own, gives color to the reports then current. His brother James is still living (at Islip, L. I., I believe), who will know of the truth of the above creditable "gossip," if you choose to call it so; and if it should be true it marks a most unusual trait of moral rectitude. And he who can seduce the larger number of the famously credulous and thrive on their fatuity is the most honored among men."

Baptists Choosing Pastors.

On Sunday morning there was a business meeting held in the First Baptist church, New Market, for the purpose of voting for a pastor. Rev. Mr. Fletcher was finally decided on, and it is expected he will accept.

At a business meeting of the Seventh Day Baptist church held Sunday, March 19, it was decided to extend Rev. Mr. Hubbard, of Chicago, a call, and it is thought he will accept.

Wallibald Taken to Elizabeth.

As Fred Wallibald was unable to obtain bail he was taken to Elizabeth by Special Officer Daguel last night. He will probably be brought back here Thursday to have a hearing on the charge of robbing the Central railroad Company.

A TALE OF THE SLUMS.

BY MRS. BALLINGTON BOOTH LAST EVENING.

A Large Audience in the Crescent Avenue Church Addressed by one of the Heads of the Salvation Army —A Charming, Cultured Woman.

Seldom has the Crescent Avenue Church witnessed a larger and more interested gathering than that assembled there last evening to welcome Mrs. Ballington Booth and listen to her plea for help for the stupendous work of the organization to which she has given her time and talents for eleven years. Long before the hour of commencing the exercises of the evening the spacious church was packed, numbers being compelled to stand. Around the pulpit were lilies and many-hued flowers in profusion, which lent a happy attractiveness to the surroundings.

Ere the work of the evening had been entered into, the organist played a voluntary, after which Rev. Dr. Richards came forward and in very pleasant words welcomed Mrs. Booth and heralds, and commended the work of the Salvation Army to his flock and the people of Plainfield generally. The congregation sang the hymn, "Stand up!—Stand up for Jesus!" Scripture reading and prayer followed, at the conclusion of which Ensign Edith Marshal came forward and in a few brief and pointed remarks outlined the work of the Auxiliary League and its objects, and the manner of planting it in Plainfield.

The attraction of the evening was the refined and cultured Mrs. Booth, a daughter of a clergyman of the Church of England, whose graceful, easy and winning manner soon captured her audience and held their attention during the hour and a half in which she earnestly and eloquently descanted on the work so dear to her heart. Her address throughout was full of pathos, tenderness, apt illustrations and anecdotes which provoked merriment or sympathy. Vivid pictures were drawn of the slum work of the Army in the metropolis, and of the degradation, crime and misery encountered by the slum brigade in its labors among the people, numbers of whom are being daily reclaimed and sent out into a brighter world, hitherto clouded, and in whose sky there were no stars or rainbow of promise. The Shelter work of the Army was accomplishing good and lasting results, as both body and soul were cared for. Mrs. Booth hoped the audience would bear this fact in mind and put their hands down very deep in their pockets. She caused hearty laughter in saying that she was naturalized American citizen, by taste and preference, had two children born here, and hoped to live and die among this people. Her entire address was full of fire, earnestness, and eloquent in the extreme.

A collection was taken up, baby Booth presented to the audience, and the benediction pronounced by the pastor.

Pen Sketches from Life.

A high old fashioned buggy, with the cover raised, was going swiftly along Somerset street a few days ago. A little boy, not more than two years old, was after it, and after a desperate struggle, seated himself on the little open extension in back. He looked so comfortable to another small boy that he, too, ran after the wagon. After a long run he caught up with it, and was scrambling up when youngster No. 1 leaned over and snatched off the cap of youngster No. 2. It was done so deftly that the little fellow thought the wind had removed it and sprang to the ground to look for his head-gear. A shrill whistle from youngster No. 1 caused him to turn around and he beheld his hat softly dropping from the outstretched hand of the mischevious boy on the vehicle, who at his same time added insult to injury by putting his thumb to his nose and twiddling his fingers.

At the moment of his triumph, however, retribution overtook him. The man in the buggy, entirely unconscious of the occupant in the back, suddenly lowered the buggy top. The last seen of the little rear rider as the buggy passed out of sight were two wildly waving legs.

The Bradford Trio Concert.

The concert by the Bradford Trio for the benefit of the W. C. T. U., to night, at All Souls' church, promises to be a rare treat to music lovers. The following is what the Paterson Call says of their appearance in that city: Miss Cecelia and Charlie Bradford and Master Johnny Bradford delighted a large audience last evening with their talent. Miss Cecelia is an accomplished violinist, perhaps the finest lady violinist who ever visited this city. Her instrument is a very old one, the tone of which is brought out to perfection by its fair owner. Miss Charlotte is a very clever musician, and possesses a beautiful voice, which is shown to much advantage both in her vocal and elocution selections. Master Johnny was at once a favorite, and he produced a fine tone on his big flute.

To-day's Fire.

Some rags behind a stove in a house on West Second street, occupied by Alexander Brown, and owned by a man named Kane, caught fire, at noon to day. The blaze from the burning rags set fire to the woodwork above. An alarm was sent in from box 43, corner Front street and Plainfield avenue. The flames were extinguished with a chemical fire extinguisher.

THE NEW GAME LAW.

Only a Few Changes from that of Last Year.

The new game law, which has received the Governor's approbation, has but few changes.

The digest of the new code in as follows:

Small birds generally are protected at all times, but game commissioners may issue licenses to collect for scientific purposes. It is forbidden to capture deer or game birds by means of traps, snares or nets, except that incorporated associations may trap such animals or birds alive for the purpose of preserving them alive during the Winter, providing that they be released again in New Jersey not later than April 15 of the following Spring. Black bass or Oswego bass may be taken before May 30 and December 1, trout between March 1 and July 15. Black bass measuring less than nine inches and trout less than six inches may not be taken, excepting for stocking purposes.

Base Ball News.

"Jack" Sharrott, formerly pitcher for the New York League team, but who pitched last year for the Westfields, has signed to play in Philadelphia this season.

"Gentle Willie" Murphy, last year's left fielder for the Crescents, has received an offer from the Manchester, (N. H.) team. It is a good one, and Murphy will probably accept.

The New York League team will report to Manager Ward to-day. Concerning the Crescents' former short stop the Herald says: "William F. Keeler, the youngster, will cover third base, but if he does not pan out Davis will probably take his place."

The West End Athletic Association will put a strong baseball team in the field this year. The battery will be professionals, the rest of the team strictly amateur. John Harkins of New Brunswick will pitch, while Francis of the same place will catch. The village people were disgusted last year with the buying and selling of games, such as were seen in the Central New Jersey Baseball League, and this year demanded amateur baseball. It is not likely that Somerville and Plainfield will battle on the diamond this year, as Plainfield is again to have a professional team. Manager Lewis C. Mack of the West Ends has games scheduled with Elizabeth, Bayonne, Westfield, Rutgers College, Stevens Institute, Orange, Flemington and Washington. The season will open on May 6 with Stevens Institute.—Sun.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[Contributed.]

The Union County School of Methods met in the Presbyterian church, at Cranford, on Thursday, March 23. The county president, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson of Plainfield, presided with her usual dignity and grace, which always wins all hearts. After addresses of welcome by the president of Cranford Union, and the pastor of the church, a paper on Scientific Temperance Instruction was read. Much has been accomplished since the organization of this department but much still remains to be done, there are yet nine States without a law compelling Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools of which nine New Jersey is one, but we hope she will not be long without such a law. Our State President Mrs. Bourne, was president, and spoke encouragingly of our work throughout the State, and of the need of training workers for the different departments of work. Very instructive talks and papers were given on the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Mother's meetings and the duties of officers, and after an interesting report of the Denver National Convention from our county delegate.

An able address by Mrs. E. A. Boole, vice president, of New York, was listened to with much interest by a large audience in the evening.

—A man standing in front of another, with his coat and vest off, on Park avenue, this morning, led many to believe that a fight was imminent. The matter was settled without any bloodshed, however.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The gold that has been exported from the United States in the past six months has been mostly taken by France, Germany, Austria and Russia. Austria wanted it to enable her to change to the gold standard. The other countries named may be hoarding in view of the possible war that is always expected to explode upon Europe at any moment. At any rate they are quietly hoarding it. On the continent the price of gold is a trifle higher than in England; consequently gold from America passed by England and went to the continent. No gold worth mentioning is paid out by Germany, France or Russia. In England only it continues to circulate freely.

It will be news to many Americans that in spite of our enormous cotton crop we last year imported $3,000,000 worth of Egyptian cotton. The best cotton in the world is grown in our own sea lands around Charleston, but as this can be grown only over a limited area it is proposed to try whether the Egyptian plant will not thrive in the rest of the cotton region. The Egyptian product is next to the sea island in fineness and length of fiber. The United States agricultural department has purchased seed from Egypt and will distribute it among the experiment stations of the southern states, so that they may raise this if possible, as American-Egyptian cotton that will do away with the need of importing this staple at all in future. The history of the introduction of rice growing into the United States is a story full of romantic interest. That of the introduction of Egyptian cotton will not be so romantic, but the project may turn out quite as important in its results as rice growing has done.

Power Instead of Coal.

Present signs point to human achievements which will turn into insignificance even the great things which man has already done. In 1879 Dr. Siemens spoke of the practicability of transmitting power instead of fuel directly from coal mines to manufacturing centers where it is wanted—that is to say, instead of conveying thousands of carloads of coal from the mines over hundreds of miles the mine owners would simply burn the coal at the mines, turn it into steam which would generate electricity, and that could be sent hundreds of miles to manufacturers instead of the coal.

Mr. Thwaites, an English electrician, advocates the same plan. Conveying the coal from the fields to the cities and manufacturing plants doubles the cost of it. At the same time there is the cost of the furnaces, boilers and engines and the space they occupy, as well as the cost of the labor required to take care of them. When all this is considered, if the transmission of power electrically is practicable at all, it will be undoubtedly cheaper as well as pleasanter.

This transmission of power electrically already promises well in case of the world's great utilities the Niagara current. The next step in the progress of industrial science will be to transmit it from coal mines.

A Common Supply Kitchen.

Two experiments have been inaugurated—one in Philadelphia, the other in Cleveland—which will be watched with interest by all the fellow sufferers of those who have been driven by desperation into attempts to solve the housekeeping problem. The plan is to have a central supply kitchen, in charge of the best cooks. From this central kitchen cooked food will be furnished to families and individuals, to be eaten at home. If the plan succeeds it will combine all the best features of both housekeeping and hotel life, leaving out the unpleasant ones. Something of this kind must be done, for the servant girl problem has become so pressing that a solution must be found.

The Cleveland experiment will be made in a block of 40 connected houses. From each extents a covered passageway to a central building. In this central structure is a plant which furnishes light and heat to all the houses. Under the roof are the common laundry and kitchen, also the storehouse in which the food, fuel, etc., are kept. A telephone connects the central building with each house. By this means food can be ordered or information obtained. It is a dream of bliss, this housekeeping by wholesale, and those who are engaged in it are wished that the best of humanity rest on their experiment; therefore let them take double pains that their scheme fail not. The Philadelphia association is somewhat similar. Before it was fully organized its promoters had more applicants from those desiring to be members than they could accommodate.

There seems no greater difficulty in the way of successfully running such a co-operative household establishment than there is in conducting a first class hotel—as that is done in every city in the Union. Much will have to be learned. The co-operators will need to curb their grumbling propensities and their disposition to boss one another. They will have to learn that in every association, if it is to exist at all, each member must give up some of his individual preferences. Above all, one must not expect other people to be nearer perfect than he himself is. Reasonableness and good nature on the part of patrons, business agents and cooks—the methods on the part of the latter—will make a success of co-operative home keeping.

RUSSIAN TREATY HELD.

Even Now It May Not Be Finally Ratified.

A HUNDRED NEW POSTMASTERS

The President Interviewed by a Female Crank—The Chinese Exclusion Act to Be Delayed—Senator Call Says He Did Not Criticise the President—Minor News.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The presentation of petitions at the present extraordinary session of the senate was stopped at the suggestion of Mr. Gorman, and those petitions that may be received hereafter are to be filed with the secretary of the senate, to be presented at the next regular session. The question as to the admission of the three men appointed as senators from Montana on election by the legislature and who were admitted in the shape of majority reports from the committee on privileges and elections in favor of their right to seats—the minority reports (against that right) to be presented later. A very pert little denial was made by Mr. Call (Dem., Fla.) of a newspaper paragraph stating that he had been criticizing President Cleveland in the corridors and elevators of the Capitol in connection with appointments to office. Mr. Call also made an argument against the constitutionality of the provision in the last legislative bill for a commission to examine into the executive departments.

The Injunction Not Released.

The senate was in executive session for upward of an hour, and the greater part of that time was occupied in a discussion relative to the release of the injunction of secrecy on the treaty with Russia, that was ratified by the senate. The injunction was not removed, although the majority of the senate is in favor of it, and the proposition also meets with the approval of the state department. The existing point is just what amount of the correspondence shall be made public and the vote by which the treaty was ratified. It is understood that the state department is averse to giving out certain parts of the correspondence, and that until some agreement upon this point can be reached the text of the treaty will not be given to the public. Despite the fact that the treaty has been ratified, a great many remonstrances have been received, principally from Polish residents of this country, all of which have been referred to the committee on foreign relations. Although the ratification has taken place, it is still possible for the treaty to be kept from becoming operative through the inaction of the executive, and it is said that steps looking to this have been taken by the opponents of the agreement between the two powers.

Nominations Favorably Acted Upon.

But two nominations, apparently, were confirmed. This is not literally true, it is said upon good authority, as it is certainly that all the nominations sent in by the president for important offices up to date, exclusive of those sent in yesterday, have been favorably acted upon, including that of Mr. Risley, minister to Denmark. Under the rules, unless a motion to immediately notify the president is carried, these confirmations lie over for two consecutive executive sessions in order that a motion to reconsider may be made, if any one desires so to do. For that reason, although the senate has acted upon the nominations before it, the fact has not been made public.

Towards the close of the session, Mr. Sherman, chairman of the Republican caucus, notified the Democrats of the action taken by them on the subject of the reorganization of the election officers of the senate, which was to the effect that the Republicans would accept no compromise. Mr. Gorman replied quietly, saying that he thought the Republicans should accept the compromise that had been suggested, and before any discussion could arise, if there had been any disposition to do so, he made a motion to adjourn, and the executive session was ended.

Berths for Many Men.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate:

Denis of California, for the southern district of California; Joseph S. James of Georgia, for the northern district of Georgia; William T. Hoy of Georgia, for the southern district of Georgia. To be marshals of the United States—Frank Leverett of Georgia, for the southern district of Georgia; James Blackburn of Kentucky, for the district of Kentucky; Thomas J. Allison, of North Carolina, for the western district of North Carolina.

Interior—Samuel T. Fisher of Massachusetts to be assistant commissioner of patents; Robert E. Wilson of Mississippi to be register of the land office at Jackson, Miss.; Francisco Estudillo of California to be agent for the Indians of the Mission Tule River consolidated agency in California.

Mr. Cleveland's Right Disputed.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Mr. Cleveland's right to the presidency was disputed by Mrs. Thurston, an old lady who not only considers herself as owner of the United States, but of the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland as well. Mrs. Thurston was among those who shook hands with the president. When her turn came she grasped Mr. Cleveland's fingers in a firm grip and poured forth her tale. Mrs. Thurston said she wanted Mr. Cleveland to take charge of her possessions under a deed of trust, to be handed over when she received her annuity of several hundred thousand dollars, which will enable her to live in a style befitting her rank and possessions. Her inexperience led her private audience to arrange details were politely parried, and after keeping the line waiting for five minutes Mrs. Thurston moved on with the parting remark that she would return.

The Chinese Exclusion Act.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—May 5 is the limit specified in the law for Chinese registration, but up to the present time not more than 1,000 of the 100,000 Chinese in the United States have complied. It is likely that the law will remain in a state of innocuous desuetude for some months and perhaps a year after the date on which it is to be in effect. The Chinese have already announced an intention to contest the constitutionality of the law. It will take some time for it to go through the several courts and it is likely to be next autumn at least before it can come to the court of last resort. Besides this congress has not appropriated any money to carry the law into effect.

A Severe Blow to Patents.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—It is said at the patent office that the point on which a case was decided in the supreme court yesterday will operate to destroy Edison's three microphone patents and his quadruplex telegraph patent and will leave the Bell Telephone company, after January next, to stand wholly on the Berliner patent.

THE ANN ARBOR CASE.

The Strikers Define Their Position In Four Short Paragraphs.

TOLEDO, March 28.—The cases of the Lake Shore engineers and firemen came up for final judgment. Both Judge Hicks and Judge Taft presided.

E. D. Potter, attorney for the Lake Shore, ran through the history of the case, and cited numerous cases where he said the engineers, in exercising what they thought their own rights, were in reality trespassing upon the rights of others.

Mr. Sourd said in defense: "Our position is that we had a perfect right to quit the service of the company under the existing circumstances and as there is any legal relief for the company the only remedy is a suit for damages."

Hon Frank Hurd, Mr. Southward's associate, said: I shall maintain the following four propositions:

First—That this court has no jurisdiction to issue the order of injunction which these defendants are charged to have violated.

Second—If I had such jurisdiction the parties attached had no such notice of its issue and contents as to make them liable in contempt for breach of it.

Third—The act which they are charged to have committed is not violative of the order of the court.

Fourth—If it were it ought not to be punished as a contempt, because the law here before which the employees would be presumed to have knowledge, had always been that courts could not interfere by injunction to compel the performance of contracts for personal services. The defendants here sufficiently purged themselves of the contempt charges.

Judge Hicks has stated that it is probable that he will not deliver his opinion in the cases of the Lake Shore engineers today, as he had anticipated, and he will not undertake to fix a definite time.

BANKS AVOIDED A CRASH

Directors Took Advantage of the Sixty Day Clause.

FINANCIAL PANIC IN NASHVILLE.

Excited Crowds of Depositors Waited For the Doors to Open and Clamored For Their Money—Measures of Precaution Taken—About $3,000,000 Involved.

NASHVILLE, March 28.—The streets in the vicinity of the banking houses of this city echoed all day the vociferations of a panic stricken throng. Never before were such scenes witnessed here. The failure of the Commercial National bank on Saturday afternoon did not become generally known until after dusk. Nothing else was talked about, and it was known to half the town that a raid would be made on the money piles of the various institutions that would make some of them tremble if not topple over into financial ruin.

All day local bank people sat in consultation planning to strengthen the banks, and a conference was held between local financiers and out of town bankers.

All the county banks that could be reached were asked for assistance, even Cincinnati was called on. When the banks opened they did so to clamorous crowds. Men, women and children were in the wildly frenzied throng. Many were weeping. Black and white forgot race distinction in the mad push for the paying teller's desk.

Crowds at the Doors.

The First, Fourth, American National, Merchants, Mechanics Savings Bank and Trust company and the Union Bank and Trust company, all of College City, and the City Savings bank, the Capital City bank and the Nashville Safe Deposit Trust and Banking company, just around the corner of Cherry, on Union street, opened up their doors.

The Bank of Commerce did not open, and this excited the people. There was a rush, and in a few moments all the available space outside of the counters was packed with a surging mass of people clamoring for their money. The First National, a few steps further down the street, was also crowded with excited depositors, while a slight run was being made on all the others. It was rumored that the Mechanics had been caught in the commercial collapse. The officers soon saw that a run which they could not stand was imminent. The directors resolved to take advantage of the state banking law, which gives banks organized under it the privilege to demand a 60-day notice from depositors before they can withdraw their deposits.

From the steps of the bank the attorney assured the excited depositors that the bank was solvent, but could not stand a run. It would continue business as usual, except as to the 60-day notice. Over $3,000,000 are involved in the failure of the five banks mentioned and the list will soon a dozen small banks in adjacent towns are in temporary financial straits.

Citizens Saved the Day.

The run on the Commercial began to end at noon, as the ready payment of all checks and heavy deposits by substantial citizens resulted in reassuring small depositors.

The Bank of Commerce failed early in the day, assigning to N. Y. Lillieit. It owes depositors $50,000, and $17,000 of this fund is charged to have violated.

The officers say that the failure is due to the failure of debtors of the bank to meet their obligations. One of these, T. Batter, assigned his property, worth $60,000, to certain directors of the collapsed bank. If the bank can collect one-half its debt depositors will be paid on the full. Other banks passed through today with practically no trouble. Nearly every bank in the city reports deposits in excess of checks, and the worst is believed to be over.

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, as my druggist recommended it. In about two weeks the Sarsaparilla began to have effect. The sores commenced to heal up; the flesh began to look more natural and healthy. Then the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles he was entirely free from sores, having only the scars to show where they had been. AN APPEAL TO MONARCHISTS

The Count of Paris Says That the Time Is Ripe for a Change Has Come.

PARIS, March 28.—The count of Paris has sent out a circular letter to the monarchist committees throughout France. It reads, in part:

"The present moment is most critical. The chamber has completely lost credit throughout the country. The government has no courage to act against the socialists. It is powerless at home and devoid of authority abroad. The time has come for all right-minded men to unite in a supreme effort to restore the honor of France. The monarchists must not repudiate any political alliance required by the interest of the nation and for the defense of religious liberty, but at the same time they must let France understand that the monarchy alone can give to her a strong and stable government, whose sole object will be the public welfare. My son seconds me in trying to realize this object. We shall spare no effort to place France upon firmer foundations."

Gladstone's Government Sustained.

LONDON, March 28.—The house of commons was jammed at the great debate on Mr. Balfour's motion of censure. That gentleman's attack was trenchant, but the result of the vote did not show any material change in the relative strength of the parties. The motion was defeated by a majority of 47. Mr. Gladstone was present with cheers when he appeared in reply to Mr. Balfour. He ridiculed the idea that a vote of censure should be passed because of turbulent disturbances in Ireland.

HUNTING A MATRICIDE.

Latimer, the Escaped Convict, Armed and Desperate.

HE WAS A MUCH FAVORED PRISONER

Poisoned the Guards and Let Himself Out With Their Keys—Perhaps He Was a Patriotic Too—A Whole Neighborhood Alarmed.

JACKSON, Mich., March 28.—This section of the state has been up in arms for many hours looking for R Irving Latimer, the prisoner who escaped from prison by poisoning the guards. When Latimer made his escape he had a rifle and plenty of ammunition. He was known to be desperate, too, but hundreds of men and boys turned out to hunt for him. George W Haight, who was killed by the poison given him by Latimer, had charge of one of the gates.

Captain Maurice T. Gill, the night-keeper, was arrested on a charge of being the indirect means of the escape of Latimer. About 11:30 o'clock he and Latimer took lunch together in the hallmaster's office. It was against the rules for Gill to take a convict out of his cell.

Latimer, it seems, has been telling Gill that there was $2,800 buried on an island in the state of Rhode Island, where Latimer's father lived when living was 12 years old. Gill was taken with this story, and had Latimer out to lunch every night to give him details. Gill expected to leave the prison in three weeks.

Poison In the Glass.

Latimer had been in the habit of taking up a cup of chocolate nearly every night to Gatekeeper Haight, passing it through a slide in the grating, which Haight took with his midnight lunch.

There is no doubt that Latimer had planned to poison both Haight and Gill, and the chocolate at night was only to gain confidence until he could get some poison. At lunch last night Latimer carried up a glass of lemonade to Haight instead of chocolate, and Haight died in 20 minutes after drinking it. Gill also drank of the lemonade and was attacked with spasms almost instantly.

Latimer then took Gill's keys and escaped. The prison authorities have offered a reward for Latimer, dead or alive, and officers are scouring the country.

Latimer is one of the shrewdest convicts known to the prison officials. He had engaged in several plots for an uprising of the prisoners, and once succeeded in introducing a quantity of dynamite into the prison. It was intended to blow down the walls and free all the convicts. The plot was discovered, and Latimer, although the leading spirit in it, was only temporarily deprived of his privileges as a favorite prisoner.

The latest report was that Latimer had been surrounded in a piece of woods near Concord by a posse.

Latimer murdered his mother in Jackson four years ago, and there was a suspicion that he poisoned his father. He was serving a life sentence.

FASHIONS

The Bride's Family Must Settle.

One question is forever in the air, Cannot a bridegroom, when he has more of this world's goods than the bride, bear some part in the wedding expenses? Propriety shakes its head and reiterates, "No part, whatever" but counsel the minister." Grooms frequently do provide the carriages, the cards, the flowers or even the caterer. In so doing they trample upon one of the most sacred laws of etiquette, which decrees that they must have nothing to do with the legitimate expenses, though they can be as lavish as they like in present giving. But the wedding is supposed to be the last money offering of the bride's family to her, and they must bear the costs throughout. Poverty furnishes no excuse for deviation from this custom, as the marriage ceremony is quite as binding without elaborate accessories as with them.

For a Girl of Fourteen.

So many "anxious mothers" are asking "how to dress a girl of about 14." It is therefore with pleasure that a charming gown for a girl of this age is here presented. Different combinations of colors may of course be formed, but the original of the cut was in two shades of green. The lighter shade has a suspicion of color and is shown in a soft delaine, which forms the body of the dress. The velvet is a brilliant apple green, and the two shades are united by bands of iridescent passementerie.

FOR ANXIOUS MOTHERS.

The bodice is particularly adapted to a girlish figure. The lines give an artificial fullness which is increased by the soft yoke of delaine.

The prevalence of satin as a material for the gowns of older people cannot fail to produce some exquisite creations for the little folks. The child's dress is of pale blue satin, so stiff that absolute simplicity is the only necessary rule in its use. It is trimmed with wide Irish point lace, and the combination is very effective.

THE HOUSEHOLD

AMATEUR FURNISHING.

A Woman Tells How She Made a Cabinet of Very Workmanlike Aspect.

If there is one thing more than another that a housekeeper is afraid to, it is a cupboard. She is positively greedy about cupboards, and probably the woman does not exist who would admit she has too many. In fact, in the average house these useful receptacles are "like angels' visits," few and far between.

Now, of course, cabinets do not go far in the way of providing storage room, but they are better than nothing and are admissible in rooms where anything more capacious would be out of the question.

The cabinet here illustrated consisted in embryo of a cheese packing box, which, when placed upright, measured 27 inches high by 19 inches wide and 14 inches deep, the lid being used as a door. Behind the box were nailed boards to form a back, 45 inches wide and 54 inches high in the center, but dropping to 36 inches at each side. This back was strengthened behind with battens top and bottom. The next additions were the little upright pieces rising from the sides of the box. Their position will be understood from the sketch. They do not come forward quite to the edge in front, space being left for the pillars and for the small "quadrant" pieces which fit into the angles at the foot of these. Between the uprights a shelf was placed, and the triangular shelves were next fixed at each side. This finished the skeleton of the cabinet.

Before adding the spindles the back was faced with Japanese paper, and at this stage two little shelves were introduced into the cupboard, the interior and door of which were lined with maroon cloth. The door was provided with ornamental brass hinges, and the front was paneled with fincrusta, the same material decorating the higher portion of the back. The spindles were somewhat of a problem, but were finally obtained, as were the other little addends which complete the cabinet.

The enameling is a very critical affair. The color should be carefully chosen to harmonize with the surroundings of the cabinet. Oak, ebony or mahogany is generally safe to look well. This cabinet was ebonized.

Management of the Furnace.

cooling and heating. There is more economy in filling the fire pot full of coal than in putting in only a small amount, because that burns away more rapidly. Do not use your poker on the top of the fire. It is bad management in the use of hard coal. The grate will remove the ashes and clinkers, thus allowing free passage for air through the fire.

In filling the furnace with coal the smoke pipe damper should be opened and the ash pit door and slide closed. Otherwise the smoke or gas will be forced out of the feed door. In the morning open all drafts, put in a small quantity of coal, let it burn thoroughly, then add fuel until full. Let it burn a short time for the gas to be consumed before closing the dampers. When your rooms are heated and there is a good fire in the furnace, shut it up as close as possible.

If your furnace heats quick and strong from a good start, so that in warm weather you complain of too much heat, don't shake the grate, but allow it to clog with ashes, not under but on top of the grate. Ashes then lessen combustion. Never shut off all the registers at once. If you wish to close the registers, close those on the upper floors, as when the lower rooms and hall are heated the air finds its way to the upper rooms.

Turnip and Tomato Soup.

Chop up an onion and cook it in a covered pan for 10 minutes with 2 ounces or 3 ounces of butter, or clarified dripings. Then pour on to it a quart of boiling water or week stock; add 4 or 5 medium turnips, a potato and 3 tomatoes, or their equivalent of canned tomatoes, all chopped up small. Season to taste with pepper and salt, and let them all simmer gently together till quite tender, when they must be all rubbed through a sieve together, put back into the pot with a little bit of butter, just to boil up, and served very hot. If the tomatoes are of a good color, this puree will be very pretty.

Revamping a Marble Case.

A little shine on an old thing often helps amazingly. The repairer is occasionally called on to expend his ingenuity on a marble clock case, and the gifts of a handsome polish in the following manner, according to The Horological Review: Take ordinary yellow beeswax and dissolve it into a paste with turpentine; then take a soft and fine rag, place in the middle of it a round lump of wadding, fold the rag over it and tie it together right above the wadding. Upon this take a little of the wax paste and polish with it. Finally rub the case down with a soft chamois.

Vaseline Stains.

Vaseline, which is largely used not only as a toilet article, but also as a foundation for various kinds of ointments, often leaves a brown stain on white goods. If caused by the vaseline alone, there should be no difficulty in removing such a stain by a thorough washing with good soap rubbed on the spot and hot water, followed by the usual boiling. This applies to old and obstinate spots. If they are dipped in ammonia mixed with a little hot water, and then washed in very hot water, they will also usually disappear.

Almond Cake.

Three cupfuls of flour, 1 cup of white sugar, 1 cup of butter, creamed; the whites of 8 eggs, 1 teaspoonful of cream of tartar, half a teaspoonful of soda. Season with a teaspoonful of almond extract and add a cupful of blanched sweet almonds sliced very fine.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Tournament of Roses.

Southern California might well claim to be the land of flowers, as during all the months that are winter months in the east a brilliant display of flowers can be made at Pasadena. The "tournament of roses" is given every year. It might be called a floral thanksgiving, as the idea which suggested the festival was the coming of the winter flowers and the ripening of the oranges. It is essentially a children's day, and the young folks are encouraged to take part in it. For weeks beforehand the tournament is talked of, and the fortunate owners of pony carriages and carts are vying with one another in the elaboration of designs to compete for the prizes offered to the vehicles showing the most beautiful and artistic floral decoration. Prizes are given also for the various races of ponies, horses and burros, one prize being for the last burro to arrive in a slow race.

Finally the day—the first of the new year—arrives. Early in the morning the procession forms. The boys and girls on horseback, their steeds garlanded with flowers, join the master of ceremonies. The band plays gayly, and they wend their way to the park, where the tournament is to be held. The grand stand is already packed with men, women and children, and in front is a heaping pile of oranges and flowers free to all.—St. Nicholas.

What a Boy Did With His Camera.

So many boys and girls take pictures nowadays that plain, everyday photography is not as interesting as it was when pocket cameras first became known. Yet to take a photograph well is a real accomplishment, and for those who have acquired it many very nice gifts are within easy reach. Here is something which a New York boy did for Christmas, and which all amateur photographers may repeat for birthday presents.

This very enterprising young photographer procured a quantity of what is known as "sensitivized" or "sensitized" linen, and upon this linen he took pictures of all the pretty pieces of furniture and cozy corners in his home. When the pictures were all nicely photographed upon the linen, and you may be sure it was no quick or easy task, the amateur photographer enlisted his sister in the work and persuaded her to stitch the pictures upon tiny napkins and doilies for his mother's table. There were 10 of the pictures, and when the work was done it was, as the boy's mamma said, "too pretty for anything."

But the funny part of it all was this. The doilies were far too fine for table use, so the boy's mamma said, and instead of putting them under the finger bowls or the glasses she has spread them upon a little table in the parlor. And there they are now.—New York Ledger.

Schoolboys Who Never Play.

Broadly speaking, German schoolboys never play. They have no time to do so. They attend day schools forlorn of play hours, and are so inordinately overweighted with lessons that all their spare energy and vitality is used up in the endeavor to get through the work diurnally allotted to them. They really have no opportunity of the commencement of the school term to its close for running or jumping, playing at ball or marbles, paper chases, or any of the other amusements to which English schoolboys, as a rule, devote themselves with an eager assiduity seldom displayed in the dry and thorny pursuit of knowledge. When a German boy exhibits symptoms of exhaustion and debility, caused by overwork, his parents enter him at a gymnastic institution and compel him to attend one or two evening courses of "aesthetic calisthenics," very possibly at the expense of his position in his class at school. "Turnevel," however, is considered to do him in the light of play, but downright hard physical work, which may be productive of development to his muscle and benefit to his general health without affording him any keen sense of recreation.—London Society.

A Simple Experiment.

A neat little experiment in electricity is to soak half a sheet of stout foolscap paper in water, drying it rapidly before a fire, spreading it while warm on a varnished table or dry wooden cloth and then rubbing the surface sharply with a piece of india rubber. The paper becomes so electrified that it will stick to a smooth wall or looking glass, or attract bits of tissue paper like a magnet, and on being laid upon a japanned tea-tray which is stood upon three thoroughly dry goblets, will cause the tray to give out sparks at a touch of the finger.—New York Telegram.

Draw a little loop on top,
And a satchel will be found
Such as ladies carry round.

III.
Then you may, my pretty dears,
Add a pair of little ears,
And, if art is not in fault,
There's a little bag of salt.

IV.
Pause, and in rapture fine,
Contemplate the great design—
Add a flowing tail, and that Makes a perfect tabby cat.

V.
Thus a loaf evolves a kitten
Waiting Thomas for to mitten,
And you get into your head
How a pussy may be bred.

A Sweet Comparison.

Little Harriet went the other day with mamma to see Nurse Charlotte's black baby. When they arrived, the fat little pickaninny was in his bath, and only his woolly head and his fat shoulders were visible above the white suds. The contrast was startling and seemed to strike Harriet so, for when she came home and we asked what she thought of the baby she said, with a doubtful look, "He looked like a 'little chocolate drop with the cream on the outside.'" When Nurse Charlotte heard it, no one laughed more than she.—New York Advertiser.

Why Some Girls Have No Sweethearts.

Why don't some girls get sweethearts? Why, indeed? There is the girl who never tries to be agreeable unless she may have all her own way. This type of girl is never successful in her love affairs. Be a man ever so smitten with a girl he is but human and will not give way in every little thing. As the old lady said, "Keep a man in hot water a little while and he boils soft, but let him remain in hot water and eventually he hardens." Yes, and then he asks himself a serious question. He considers that a girl who is so contrary during courtship will be no better as a wife, and so, for his own sake and for hers, he rides away. Then the girl with the haughty manner and cold stare. No man dares to make love, because there is nothing whatever to love in her, and as Bridget has it, "One cannot make nothin out of nothin."

Imagine a man wooing an ice maiden or an Egyptian sphinx! Another girl without a lover is the exceedingly shy maiden. She likes to admire men at a distance, but the moment they draw near she drives them back with her embarrassment. They retire simply out of pity, seeing her distress and awkward bashfulness.

Finally the girl who does not want a lover—the home girl, who finds a joy in domestic employment and is blissfully happy in following her round of duties. There are many such—perhaps the dream of an ideal lover, but he is so far away or so out of reach that she is content to dream of him as an unattainable hero.—Exchange.

Amusing Children at a Party.

Those who have studied the philosophy of children's parties say that children find greater entertainment in games than in dancing. Dancing usually requires too much intervention of grownup people, while the more children appear to depend on themselves and to amuse themselves at a party the more successful it is. A mother who has the happiness of her children at heart, when she gives her children a party, permits them to write their invitations and address the envelopes, which they do with the largest sense of importance and which proves to be the most successful of their lessons in penmanship. It is a mistake to make too great preparations for the entertainment of the children. Elaborate preparations attract the attention of grownups, and with small folks, as great, these are difficult to realize.

It is equally a mistake to provide a friendly or a lively entertainer. Magic lantern slides are a pleasant relief after games, but children feel more quickly tired sitting still than when in motion, and even for a short time the magic lantern needs a lively spokesman. The prestidigitator and Punch and Judy are most popularly in demand, but neither of these is as satisfactory as the little importance which every child feels in helping to make fun. A mother says that two young fellows who don't mind making themselves ridiculous are better than any ventriloquist or master of legerdemain.—New York Sun.

Light In the Home.

Though the importance of the use of sunlight as a sanitary measure in the house cannot be overestimated, our message is not of the sun. And though, so long as lovers love and poets sing, the sweet silvery light of the moon, as a subject, cannot be dispensed with, our message is not in praise of Luna. It is the idea of the attractiveness and moral influence of artificial light, as a factor among the safeguards of home, that is impressing itself upon the mind. Considered from a purely economic standpoint, little light might answer human purposes, but in no walk in life does man stop at absolute necessity where he has the ability or power to remain out to indulgence. Robinson Crusoe was thankful no doubt for his clay dish of goat's fat and his piece of hemp for a wick, but he would have preferred and been more thankful for an electric plant if such a thing had then been at hand.

It is not always the limit of bare expediency that satisfies or that is really best in results. Indulgences beyond necessity are continually full of laudable pleasure and the source of much true happiness. There is a universal consent given to the attractiveness of artificial light. In the use of it every artifice is used to augment its glitter and shimmer and glare until the power of its influence is felt by every creature blessed with vision. This power, like many other forces, can be used for either good or evil. —Margaret Lemon in Godey's.

Women In Politics.

It has often occurred to me that the woman who has method and prudence enough to successfully and wisely manage her household might exert for good or for evil an almost incalculable influence in politics. Women were not meant to be either the unthinking drudge or merely a pretty ornament to occupy man's leisure. She exists for herself as well as others, and the serious and responsible duties she is called upon to perform require the cultivated mind as well as the sympathizing heart.

It is no necessary for a woman to vote, nor to defend political parties, nor to urge the support of this or that candidate, but she can cry out with all her strength for pure politicians and insist upon the nomination and election of good men. In this way she can do much to hurry the time when men of brains and heart shall rule the country instead of men of money. It is public sentiment that controls politics, and the home is one of the most efficient makers of sentiment that this country possesses. It is a woman's duty to develop the spirit of patriotism, which is directly essential to the success of the nation and indirectly to the prosperity of the people. If women were properly schooled in political science, they would in time exert a powerful influence upon the morals, patriotism and politics of the country.—Home Magazine.

Danger In Flirtation.

Says a popular writer: "A flirtation today is a ripple merely, but tomorrow it will be a breaker, and after that comes hopeless loss of character. Girls, I have seen you gather up your roses from their vases at night and fold them away in damp paper to protect their loveliness for another day. I have seen you pluck the jewels like sun sparkles from your fingers and your ears and lay them in velvet caskets which you locked for safe keeping.

"You do all this for flowers which a thousand suns shall duplicate in beauty and for jewels for which a handful of dollars can reimburse your loss, but you are infinitely careless with the delicate rose of maidenliness, which once faded no summer shining can ever woo back to freshness, and with the unsullied jewel of personal reputation which all the wealth of kings can never buy again, once lost. See to it that you preserve that modesty and womanliness without which the prettiest girl in the world is no better than a bit of scentless lawn in a millliner's window, as compared to the white rose in the garden, around which the honey bees gather. See to it that you lock up the unsullied splendor of the jewel of your reputation as carefully as you do your diamonds and carry the key within your heart of hearts."

Where He Erred.

There was a terrific noise going on inside the house, but the small boy on the steps outside sat still in serene and unalterable composure.

"What's that row going on in there?" asked a policeman, running up excitedly.

"Nothin much," responded the boy, coolly. "It was an extra heavy crash shook the windows.

"Get out, you little rascal!" exclaimed the officer. "I'll get in and see for myself."

"You better hadn't," said the boy, warningly.

The officer hesitated. At that moment the door opened, and a woman poked her head out.

"Go for the doctor, Johnnie," she said to the boy and disappeared.

The boy grinned.

"What is it?" asked the puzzled officer.

"Nothin much, I told you once," said the youngster, getting up to obey the woman's order, "on'y ge come home about fifteen minutes ago and told ma he could lick anything in the block. That was ma sendin for the doctor."

Then the boy hurried away, and the officer, shaking his head thoughtfully, walked down to the corner and waited for further developments.—Detroit Free Press.

Yesterday Lynch came across as he was begging at Councilman Fisk's house on West Seventh street.

STRUCK HIM IN THE LEG.

SWITCHMAN GOULD'S HAIRBREADTH ESCAPE.

A Train Passes so Close to Him that he is Knocked Down by the Cross Beams on the Engine—Escaped Without Serious Injury.

Michael Gould was struck by locomotive No. 328 at the Church street crossing about three o'clock this morning. The cross beams of the engine struck him in the leg, knocking him down, but fortunately he fell along side of the track, instead of under the wheels of the train.

It was thought at first that Gould's leg was broken, but examination proved that he was only slightly injured. He went home on the five o'clock train.

Gould is a switchman and he was at work as usual attending his duties when he met with the accident. He had just turned a switch and was returning to the flag shanty on the north side of the track. A train bound east was passing and Gould did not hear the approach of the west-bound train until a shrill blast from the engine's whistle brought him to a standstill. Another step and he would have been hurled into eternity.

The moment he stopped the train whizzed by, and he was knocked down as stated above.

He admitted putting the black on the boy's face and pleaded guilty to the charge of assault also. In default of $200 bail he will be taken to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury, which meets the first Tuesday in May.

Chief Grant took Holmes to Elizabeth this afternoon.

Fertilizer Upsets a Wagon.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Nathan Randolph and son of Park avenue were loading fertilizer from a freight car, near the freight house upon a box wagon. The body of the wagon was not fastened to the running gears. They piled about 800 pounds of the fertilizer in the rear end of the wagon, causing it to turn a complete somersault landing the contents on the railroad bank. Both Mr. Randolph and his son were in the car at the time of the mishap, and so escaped injury.

THE BRADFORD TRIO.

THEY DELIGHT AND ENRAPTURE THEIR HEARERS.

The Concert at All Souls' Church for the Benefit of the W. C. T. U. Last Evening, a Successful Affair.—Well Attended.

The concert last evening in All Souls' church, Park avenue, by the Bradford Trio, proved a success, and was largely attended. It was given for the benefit of the W. C. T. U., and the Union certainly showed good taste in their selection of the three talented musicians to entertain a Plainfield audience, which they did admirably. Every number on the programme was exceedingly well rendered and fully appreciated by those present, as they repeatedly compelled the young artists to respond to encores.

The musical reading, "Last Hymn," by Miss Charolette Bradford, accompanied by the violin, was rendered with a delicacy and depth of feeling which shows her to be an elocutionist of rare talent. She is an artist possessed of that true power of making her hearers feel the scene and time of her readings.

Miss Cecelia Bradford's selections on the violin were delightful, and were rendered in a manner showing the young violinist to possess much skill and talent. She came in for her share of the applause.

The flute solo "Alpine Scenes," by Master Johnny Bradford greatly pleased his hearers, and Master John had to respond to an encore to satisfy them.

The programme was as follows:

Violin duett—"Symphony Concertant"..... Dancia
Misses Cecelia and Charlotte Bradford.

THE "WIZARD" WINS HIS SUIT.

It Has been Pending for Months and Involves Millions of Dollars.

Judge Green, of the United States Court, yesterday gave a decision in the big patent suit brought by Thomas A. Edison against Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co. The suit involved millions of dollars and has been pending for several months. The decision was announced in open court, but the opinion will not be filed for some days. It is in Edison's favor and declares that the Westinghouse people are infringing on the patents of Edison.

Upon the decision of this suit depended the status of many electric companies throughout the United States. The suit was brought against the Westinghouse company for infringing upon a patent of Edison for the distribution of electricity over wires in long circuits for lighting purposes. In 1882 Edison devised the patent known as the distributing system. Under this plan he divided a city into small districts and used two wires, one known as the consumption wire, to which the lamps were attached, and the other the feed wire to supply the consumption wire.

Previous to this patent electric lighting was not very profitable, but since its advent it has been adopted all over the United States. When the case was being argued in court here the court-room was turned into a miniature dynamo room for the purpose of illustrating the workings of Edison's patents.

Obsequies of the Late Rev. Edmund A. Embury.

At half past four o'clock yesterday afternoon occurred the funeral services over all that was mortal of the late Rev. Edmund A Embury at the Church of the Holy Cross, in the presence of many who revered him in life and now mourned his departure from among them. A short service was held at the house for the members of the family just previous to the service in the church.

After the tolling of the bell had ceased the casket was borne by the pall-bearers into the church, followed by the family of the deceased minister, and was met at the entrance by the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Rev. J. F. Taylor, Rev. S. P. Simpson, and the vested choir of men and boys, the Rev. Mr. Murphy reading aloud the opening sentences of the burial service, "I am the resurrection and the life," and proceeded up the main aisle to the chancel, where the casket was deposited in front of the altar and the impressive ritual of the church began, in which the four clergymen took part. No eulogy was pronounced over the dead. After the last sad rites were over, the choir sang "Fast fall the shades of eventide."

The procession of choristers and clergy then moved down the aisle as they had come, singing the hymn "O paradise! O paradise!" followed by the pall-bearers, and the remains of him who had in life ministered within those sacred walls and whose munificence had reared them, were borne from hence forever.

"The ashes of the just Should sleep as in a mansion in the dust."

To-day the remains were taken to Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, for interment.

THEIR FINAL GAME.

THE CRESCENTS WIN THE LAST CONTEST.

Sixth Place is the Best they can do in the Journal Bowling League—The C. Y. M. L. One Better.—Good Words for Capt. Davis.

The Crescents played their final game in the Journal League series last night, their opponents being the Pioneers of Elizabeth. The Crescents won and they now hold sixth place.

Both Plainfield teams have kept about even through the entire series, as soon as one team would break the tie the other would even up by also winning. It has been nip and tuck for fifth place for the last few games, but the Young Men have now clinched their hold on it.

Last night's game was close and exciting, the Crescents finally coming out ahead by 3 pins. Both teams were tie in the third frame. The next frame the visitors led by three pins. They fell back in the fourth and the home team held the lead to the end.

The total scores is the score:

CRESCENTS.		PIONEERS.

Concerning Capt. Davis, the Journal says: "While Captain J. W. Davis, of the Plainfield Crescents, has not been a member of the Executive Committee of the Journal League, he has done considerable for the league by his untiring efforts in its behalf. When the Crescents were in a state of uncertainty as to whether or not they would disband, Captain Davis, who is one of the oldest members in the Crescent League's backbone, managed, in the face of almost utter disregard of the individual members as to the club's welfare, to keep a bowling team together that met every scheduled game in the Journal League. And the men were not poor bowlers either, but have kept their team the third in pin average for several months. All of this reflects great credit on their captain, whose enthusiasm for the popular Winter sport led him with the others to form the first bowling team Plainfield ever had—the Plainfield Bowling Club. Later this club was merged into the present Crescent League, and Captain Davis was the man who led the Crescents bowlers. He is now serving his second term. It is unnecessary to tell of the manner of good fellowship which Captain Davis always has, as he is known to every bowler in the county for his jolly, joking disposition."

PERKINS GETS SIX MONTHS.

Sentenced this Morning by Judge McCormack.

Benjamin Perkins, colored, aged 17, who was arrested for breaking into W. E. Johnston's place on East Front street, was sentenced to-day, by Judge McCormack, at Elizabeth, to six months in the county jail.

The property stolen was valued at $250, which he agreed to pay on condition that he was released. He has been in jail three months, which the court took into consideration.

Johnson says that if the accused had made good the amount stolen he would probably have got off with thirty days imprisonment.

Accident on the Central.

When the 5.15 train from Jersey City to Dunellen, on the Central Railroad, reached East Forty-ninth street, a station about two miles from Jersey City last night, a boiler flue of the engine blew out.

The train consisted of the engine (No. 879) and six coaches, in charge of Conductor E. J. Reuter. The engineer was Frank Wynkoop, of Dunellen. The fireman, Louis Bildenbrandt, had his hands, eyebrows, and hair burned off, but the engineer escaped uninjured. The train stopped very suddenly, and the noise made by escaping steam almost caused a panic among the passengers. They were obliged to wait for over a half hour until another train came along.

Cycling News.

The Race Committee of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs has commenced work on the Millburn road race to be run on Memorial day. The entrance fee has been increased from $1 to $2, and the committee expects to have $5,000 worth of prizes to offer to the many experienced racing men. It is now understood that the Race Committee is consulting with A. S. Barkman, the originator of the race, on all important details, and that his advice is taken on all of these points. This insures the success of what will in time come to be known as the Memorial Day Cycling Derby.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Twentieth Century Farmer.

Hon. Jeremiah Rusk has dropped into prophecy in The North American Review. He pictures American farming as it will be in 1993. Our population then will probably be 300,000,000, and all our agricultural products will be needed at home to feed our own people.

In Mr. Rusk's judgment every acre of land in the country that can be cultivated will then be under tillage, including the millions of rich acres that will be added to agriculture through irrigation. The chief change that will take place in farming methods will be in differentiation and increased production. There will be the small truck and vegetable gardener on the large cities. "Glass houses will obliterate the seasons, and strawberries and lettuce in midwinter will no longer occasion surprise."

On somewhat larger allotments of ground a little farther out will be the dairy farmers who produce the milk and butter used by the urban population. After these will come the great farms tilled by machinery, and the management of which will tax all the mental resources of an educated man capable of being a successful merchant or lawyer. We can tell Uncle Jerry Rusk right here that already in 1893 it takes a man with even more brains than a lawyer or a merchant to make any money at farming. So that will be nothing new.

The education required for the successful farmer will be extensive and thoroughly scientific, as much as that now required in the professions. All who cannot fill these high requirements will sink into mere farm laborers, working for the farmer with brains. These poor fellows who have not the capacity to make scientific and successful farmers will become what Mr. Rusk calls "a thrifty peasantry, owning their own homes, with perhaps a few acres of land." In 1993 success in farming will depend on grit and brains, just as success in that and everything else does in 1893.

There will not be so many large farms as there are now, but a very great number of small ones devoted to special farming. Electric motors will do the heavy hauling along every country road, the telephone will be in every farmhouse, where there will also be a daily mail delivery. There will be lovely roads shaded by beautiful trees throughout the country in 1993. All is well and rosable except the fate of the "thrifty peasantry."

The wealthy citizens of Buda-Pesth in Hungary have anticipated by a little the rest of the world in the matter of getting the daily news. A telephone connects the residence of each one with the office of the leading newspaper of the city. An excellent reader has been placed in charge of the telephone at the newspaper office. Whenever a bit of important news comes to the office, it is immediately told off in a sweet voice to the w. c. at home. The w. c. places the tubes to his ears when the bell rings and learns all about the latest fire, scandal or government bill. The citizen can have his news in any language he wishes. He can even lie in bed in the morning and listen to that soft voice telling him the latest news from all over the world. Solomon, Sardanapalus or Nero never enjoyed luxury like this. And it costs the Buda-Pesthian only about $9 a year.

It is gradually becoming recognized that even consumption may often be cured. But the best way to treat it is in the special hospitals now provided for it in the progress of medical science it has become recognized, too, that consumption is a contagious disease, communicable through germs in the air and in food. In the special hospitals for consumptives repeated cures and apparently permanent ones have been made. When it is remembered that more people are carried out of life by this disease than by any other, the fact that those on whom it fastens are now frequently cured sheds a ray of brightness upon the dark cloud of hopelessness which usually attends this ailment to the end.

The Christian Union reminds the American people that under an extradition treaty Russia's conscience would easily permit her to get possession of a runaway subject for one offense and as soon as he was on Muscovite soil try him for another offense. The Union says: "This is a trick Russia has performed before. She should not be allowed to perform it twice in dealing with America."

The South African diamond fields were opened in 1867. A London statistician says that the diamonds mined from these fields since then, if put together, would weigh more than 10 tons. Their value is something like $250,000,000. If it is true that most of these stones have been purchased in the United States, then there must be a good many diamonds lying around in this country.

If weight of brain was everything, then Benjamin Butler would have been a greater man than Daniel Webster. Webster's brain was one of the heaviest on record. That of Baron Cuvier, the naturalist, exceeded it in weight somewhat. Butler's thinking apparatus, however, is about four ounces more than either. We have great heads in America.

IS JAPAN AFTER HAWAII?

We May Yet Lose the Key to the Pacific.

Opponents of Annexation Organizing and Holding Secret Meetings—Commissioner Wilder Returned Confident — Possible Candidates For President of the Islands.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—The steamer Alliance brought important news from Hawaii. It is believed that Japan has designs upon the islands owing to the employment of a large number of her subjects on the sugar plantations. Chief Justice Judd, in speaking about the matter, intimated first that the captain of the Japanese [illegible] called upon the provisional government and said that if the United States abandoned its protectorate, the Japanese would consider that no government existed on the island and would raise their flag. The Japanese government officials are said to be plotting through the remonstrances of their subjects, and another thousand of them have left Japan for Hawaii.

British Minister Wodehouse is on friendly terms with the Japanese commissioner, and it has even been charged that Wodehouse has advised the commissioner as to his policy.

Colonel Volney Ashford, who was obliged to leave for the States for advocating what the provisional government is now seeking on the islands, as far as the question of annexation to the United States is concerned, is having a depressing effect here, not only on the general trade, but on the morals of the people, and a feeling of unrest has arisen which will require more than empty conjectures to still. The inauguration of a new party—the Hawaiian Patriotic league—last week, having for its object the avowed purpose of maintaining, as far as possible, the autonomy of the country, shows how the opposition to the annexation grows with delay.

The officers and many of the members of the league were not at first strongly against the prospect of government from Washington, but the dispatches in American newspapers here telling of apparent doubt existing in the minds of some of the people of the United States as to the justice of accepting this proposal of the provisional government, is having its effect on the minds of the native Hawaiians, who are naturally prone to enlarge. Even royalists openly state that the public sentiment in the United States is changing in their favor through the representations of Neumann and Prince David, and they give it out that the queen confidently expects information by the steamer Australia, arriving here on the 23d inst., that her throne will be restored to her, though possibly with the conditions attached that the United States will declare a protectorate.

Meetings of the Civil Rights or the Black Flag league, as it is popularly termed, and of the Patriotic league and of the Native Sons of Hawaii are being conducted. At meetings of those dissatisfied with the course pursued by the provisional government in taking its appointment. Almost all of these meetings have been held in secret, such open meetings as have been held relating more to the matter of organization than to the object to be pursued. The Patriotic league has sent a delegation to the other islands to organize branches there after the fashion of the Civil Rights league, from which it originally sprung, but separated on account of distrust some of the members f toward C. N. Ashford, brother to Colonel Volney Ashford of the Civil Rights party. The Patriotic league is proposing to admit to working membership in the order all Hawaiian women over 21 years of age. The women of the islands are a factor in local politics and are pronounced royalists.

A disaffected militiamen under the leadership of certain prominent officers would like to see, if not assist, in securing a change in the ministry, and the proposal of the liberal newspaper, Kuokoa, of Joseph Nagulie or Judge Frank Pahia of Koolon. Ex-Marshal Charles Wilson might also receive a number of votes, as well as Hon. John Bush, who is expected to return here from San Francisco on the steamer Australia.

Whites who would strive for the honor of the presidency are beyond enumeration, and the election would awaken an interest probably never exceeded in the history of Hawaiian politics.

In justice to the moderation and patience of the provisional government party it must be said, however, that they are quietly awaiting the action of the United States.

The steamer Mariposa, arriving from San Francisco March 10, brought among her passengers W. C. Wilder, one of the Hawaiian commissioners; C. H. Cooke, who accompanied the commissioners on their errand, and Colonel Volney Ashford, the refugee.

Mr. Wilder in conversation with a reporter said: "I believe there need be no doubt whatever that a treaty will be ratified in the extra session of the senate. It will be either ratified or nothing. Talk of a protectorate is nonsense."

There is a movement on foot to form a political organization in Honolulu among all the friends of annexation.

An Appointment Prophesy.

NEW YORK, March 29.—A report was circulated among the banks that Conrad N. Jordan, formerly president of the Western National bank, would be appointed subtreasurer at New York Monday.

DEATH OF E. KIRBY SMITH.

The Last Genuine Kentucky Colonel Passes Away Down In Swanee.

NASHVILLE, March 28.—General E. Kirby Smith died at 3:30 p. m. at his home, Swanee, Tenn. He had just returned from a southern tour, visiting New Orleans, where he had numerous relatives and friends. The news of his death was a shock to his friends here, only a few knowing that he had been ill. His sickness was only of a few days duration and up to yesterday noon no serious fears were entertained as to the result. The malady was stomach trouble, which had caused more or less pain for months.

E. KIRBY SMITH.

This veteran warrior and teacher is the last of the genuine Kentucky colonels of the confederacy.

General E. Kirby Smith was born in St. Augustine, Fla., May 26, 1824. He graduated at the United States Military academy in 1845 and received the rank of brevet second lieutenant and at once entered the Mexican war. At the close of the war with Mexico he went to West Point as professor of mathematics, receiving a captain's commission and went to the frontier in 1855. In 1861 he was promoted to major, when Florida seceded from the Union was appointed lieutenant of the cavalry in the Confederate army.

His record during the civil war was a brilliant one, his exploits at Bull Run and the campaigns in Kentucky, Tennessee and on the sea coast being some of the most famous deeds of daring and magnificent generalship in the history of the great struggle. In 1864 he was promoted to the rank of full general.

He was the junior of seven generals of the Confederate army and the last to receive that promotion, which closes a life of honor and glory. Arrangements have been made for a special train to carry a large delegation of Confederate soldiers to the mountain to pay their last respects to their dead commander.

SENATE WOULD NOT ADJOURN.

They Refused to Join In the Rush of the Assemblymen.

ALBANY, March 29.—A joint resolution to adjourn sine die on April 8 was rushed through the assembly, and the senate refused to concur because they say the work cannot be finished in two weeks.

Mr. Depew's bill for the creation of a new state department to supervise the savings and building loan societies is faring badly in the assembly at the hands of the "national" backers.

The following business was transacted in the senate:

Senator McClelland's bill, providing that coroners shall investigate the origin of fires; Assemblyman Farquhar's, for the establishment of an epileptic colony, and Assemblyman Sandford's, allowing New York city auctioneers to sell horses and live stock in the night time, were passed.

Assemblyman Cantor's bill to prevent bill allowing New York city to appropriate money for additional common schools in New York city and Mr. Adams' bill providing for the grading of anthracite coal.

Treasures From Spain.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Spanish exhibit at the World's fair was discharged from the Ceballos steamer Mexico at Pier 8, East River. One painting alone in the shipment is valued at $50,000, being of Murillo. There are besides about 40 cases of paintings, all old masters or the choicest examples of modern schools. A notable feature of the exhibit will be the native wines of Spain, of which there are over 400 cases. Some of this wine goes back several centuries in age. Then there are 15 cases of artillery and other arms, representing the earliest stages of the modern art of war. Another notable feature is the china and earthenware exhibit, of which 40 immense cases have arrived. All the treasures of Spanish art and history have been drawn upon and are supplemented by exhibits of the great natural wealth of the Spain of today.

He Feared the Farmers.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Commissioner of Public Works Daly started out from this city today on his tour of inspection of the sanitary condition of the towns and villages of Long Island. He will endeavor to have removed whatever nuisances he may find under the authority of the recently enacted Webster bill. Mr. Daly had at first intended to take a force of men with him to summarily remove whatever causes of pollution he might find, but changed his mind and took counsel with him and Colonel Chief Engineer Birdsall. The chief engineer, Mr. Daly said, would help him to find the nuisances and he would employ men in the neighborhood to remove them. The chance of trouble is said to be due to fear that trouble might be caused by the appearance of a large force from the department of public works.

A Partial Annexation.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—The correspondent of an evening paper writing from Honolulu under date of March 15 says: "Not the least interesting bit of gossip here is the formal announcement of the engagement of Commander Whitney of the U. S. man of war Alliance to Miss Etta Ah Fong, daughter of Ah Fong, a Chinese merchant of Honolulu. The father of the prospective bride is very wealthy and entertains here in princely and Oriental style. The bride is a beautiful and accomplished girl of 17, while the prospective groom, Captain Whitney, has already passed the meridian of life.

In Frozen Maine.

ROCKLAND, Me., March 29.—Sargentville, Me., on Eggemoggin beach, has been frozen in for three months. So long as snow was on the ground supplies could be drawn there over country roads, but now the mud makes them impassable and the inhabitants were getting short of provisions, when the United States revenue steamer Woodbury was telegraphed. After two unsuccessful attempts to cut through the 8-inch ice she finally reached Sargeantville.

Exempting Soldiers From Taxes.

HARTFORD, March 29.—The house passed a bill exempting from town taxation property to the amount of $1,000 of all soldiers who were honorably discharged, so much of the property of the wife of a soldier to the amount of $1,000 as he has a life interest in, and the same amount of the property of every widow or widowed mother of any soldier who served honorably or who died in service.

An Old Home In New Shape.

ELIZABETH, N. J., March 29.—Two prosperous bachelors, Samuel Howard Haven, lease, a fruit dealer, out of $250 by exchanging for it a round package about 14 inches long, which they claimed contained about $200 in $10 gold pieces.

SENATOR ROACH'S CASE.

It Is Introduced Into the Senate by Senator Hoar.

SHUTTING OUT OFFICE SEEKERS.

Stump of Maryland Gets a Place—Ex-President Harrison's Brother Calls on President Cleveland With a Request—A Sea Green Navy Talked Of.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The senate was in session just 25 minutes. Senator Gorman offered resolutions requiring the senate to proceed to the election of its secretary, sergeant-at-arms and chaplain; these officers to enter on their duties June 20 next. The resolutions proposed William R. Cox of North Carolina, Richard R. Bright of Indiana and the Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind chaplain of the house, for the offices named. At Senator Gorman's suggestion the resolutions were read and laid on the table.

Senator Hoar offered a resolution directing the committee on privileges and elections to investigate the allegations charging Senator Roach of North Dakota with criminal embezzlement and to report what is the duty of the senate in relation thereto.

At Senator Gorman's request the resolution went over a day.

Presented and Then Resigned.

The resignation of ex-Senator Pierce of Minnesota as United States minister to Portugal has been received by Secretary Gresham. Mr. Pierce was appointed Jan. 4 last to fill a vacancy, left this country a month later and will go to Lisbon by route at Lisbon after President Cleveland's inauguration. It is understood that his first official act after presentation at court was to resign.

Office Seekers Barred Out.

Tuesday was the first day the new presidential order that no visitors shall be received by cabinet officers on Tuesdays and Fridays was put in force. The order was rigidly observed and no callers were received. The effect was to keep away nearly all the congressmen and office seekers who have been haunting the department.

A Sea Green Navy Perhaps.

The navy department has under consideration the question of painting all armored war ships some other color than white. The experience with the latter color is that it is very expensive, and it has been almost impossible to keep the ships bright and clean.

Besides ships painted white are too conspicuous for the fire of the enemy when obscurity is desired as long as possible. A light gray color, assimilating to an atmospheric haze, finds much favor with naval officers as offering less objection than any other color suggested. An experiment in color is being tried with the torpedo boat Cushing, which has been painted in a sea green color.

Cabinet Sessions Very Secret.

The members of President Cleveland's cabinet are, as a rule, very close mouthed in regard to what occurs at cabinet meetings, and some of them have made it a rule to say nothing concerning them. Little can, therefore, be learned of the doings in the council chambers. The cabinet meets twice a week—on Tuesdays and Fridays. The last session, it is said, was devoted to the consideration of pending appointments.

The Ex-President's Brother Calls.

John Scott Harrison of Kansas City, a brother of ex-President Harrison but a staunch Democrat, and Mr. C. Tichnor of Kansas City, also a strong Republican, called on President Cleveland. The former, it is said, would like to be surveyor of customs at Kansas city.

Patrick Collins of Massachusetts called to thank the president for his appointment as consul general at London and announced that he would sail in two weeks. Senator Dolph called and presented to President Cleveland Miss E. M. Day of Portland, Or., who is traveling in the opposite direction to that of the president. Mrs. Duvall of Chicago, who is making a trip of the western states and Mexico without touching her foot on the ground before she returns to her place of departure. Miss Day spent a few hours in the city and then resumed her journey.

Two Nominations.

The following nominations were sent to the senate: George D Dillard of Mississipi, to be consul general at Guyaquil, and Eben W. Tripp, United States attorney for the district of South Dakota. Dillard is a lawyer and graduate of the University of Mississippi. He has been a member of the state senate and of constitutional conventions and helped to frame the present Mississippi code.

Stump Commissioner of Immigration.

Ex-Representative Stump of Maryland has been selected for commissioner of immigration in the treasury department to succeed Commissioner Owen of Indiana. The nomination goes to the senate today.

Minor Washington Matters.

The senate is receiving quite a number of protests against the Russian extradition treaty.

There are no less than 672 applications on file for appointment to the vacancy of paymaster in the army with the rank of major.

It is expected that the nominations to be sent to the senate the present week will include a dozen or more collectors of customs at the various ports of the United States.

The treasury department is advised that 450 immigrants from Hamburg have arrived at Halifax destined for points in the United States. This is the first arrival of immigrants from Hamburg by way of Canada since the suspension of immigration last July.

Mrs. Cleveland's last reception was twice as large as heretofore. She received, as usual, in the Blue room, the visitors being admitted in groups as they arrived.

Funeral services were held over the body of Baron de Andrada, the Brazilian special envoy, who died Saturday night from a paralytic stroke.

Minister R. B. Mahany, from his post of duty in Ecuador, transmits a copy of the official journal of Quito of Feb. 20, directing that the flags of the distant republic be placed at half mast in honor of the late Mr. Blaine.

Canada's Troubled Police Officials.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 29.—The police commissioners have ordered Lieutenant's Lee and Foster to appear for trial Thursday on charges of insubordination preferred by Chief Davis. The chief was ordered to arrest the deposed officers if they appeared on the street in uniform.

To Investigate Gas Companies.

"I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel toward Hood's Sarsaparilla, for under God, I feel and know that to this medicine, I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bloat, followed by nausea at the stomach, and later with severe pains of the bladder, accompanied by severe pain. This gradually grew worse until three years ago. Physicians told me the trouble was

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly emaciated, had frequent hemorrhages, and was satisfied the doctors were right in saying my life was nearly over. One day a friend brought me a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla; I did so, and for 2 or 3 days I was sicker than ever, but I kept on and gradually began to feel better.

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the sallow hue left my skin, the bloating subsided, and I felt better all over. For the past two years my health has been quite good, and I have been able all the time to do the housework for my family. After what it has done for me I never hesitate to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. OGDEN SNYDER, No. 10 Arbutus Street, Albany, N. Y.

BLOODY INDIAN BATTLE.

An Old Feud Breaks Out In the Choctaw Tribe.

TWENTY-TWO REPORTED KILLED.

The Indian Militia Surrounded the House of a Leader and Riddled It With Bullets—United States Troops Ordered to the Scene of Conflict.

FORT SMITH, Ark., March 29.—A fight took place at Antlers, Choctaw Nation, and the Jackson faction. Twenty men are reported killed and 12 wounded.

Antlers is 125 miles south of here. The trouble is the outgrowth of the election last August for chief. In September, before the council met, four Jones men were assassinated by Jackson men. When the council met, the United States military were there to preserve order. Jones was declared chief. Twenty-two men were arrested, charged with the murders in September and are now in custody.

Dick Lock, a prominent merchant of Antlers, was charged with inciting these murders, but was not arrested. The militia was sent out to arrest him and others when their friends rallied to their support, and the result was the battle.

Few particulars can be learned here. A late dispatch says the militia has been arrested by the United States authorities and Governor Jones has been telegraphed to go to Paris at once. All kinds of rumors are afloat here and nothing wholly reliable can be had. Telegrams just received say the militia attacked the Lock party at his private residence, which was riddled with bullets, every window being shot out. Three of Lock's men were badly wounded. Fifteen militiamen are also wounded and five are reported killed. Nineteen of the militia arrested by United States officers and taken to Paris, Tex. Lock had no objections to being tried, but refused to allow himself to be arrested by the Jones militia and hence he resisted. He stands high and has many friends.

The Battle In the Town.

The militia suddenly debouched from the woods and charged down upon the house of Dick Lock, the leader of the national party, and opened fire on it. Lock saw them coming, and hurriedly got into his house when the fusilade began. Lock with five men returned the fire from the upper story. Fully 1,500 shots were fired. Every window was shot out and the sides of the house were perforated like a sieve. Stray bullets flew far and wide, and terror and consternation prevailed throughout the little town. No one was safe with four score of half drunken Indians armed to the teeth and mad from the smell of blood.

The attack was a surprise to every one. At daylight the militia, under command of Captain Key Durant, went to Lock's home and insisted on searching it. He was not at home, but in the mountains about three miles from town. After remaining in town awhile they returned to camp. Word was conveyed to Lock, and in company with his son and seven others he went home to see what had been done. United States Commissioner Kirkpatrick Lee, a leading Jones man, went to the militia encampment south of Antlers and had a long consultation with Captain Durant. After much dickering Lee was told they had a process for Willis Jones, who had been indicted for complicity in the killing of the five Jones men at Wilburton last fall.

The party was accompanied by an American Press correspondent. Everybody seemed at ease and no one suspected an outbreak.

Lock asked the militia to allow his wife and children and the women and children in the Methodist parsonage to get out of the way. The sharp report of a Winchester ended the parley and a furious battle was on. Mrs. Lock went out of her house into the street and denounced Duke and his followers as cowardly, brutal murderers and crossed to the parsonage to assure Mrs. Hall and her husband that Mr. Lock would not fire upon their house, which like all attacking party had taken refuge behind.

Meanwhile Captain Thompson had come and begged the militia to stop firing. After a parley the militia withdrew.

Mrs. Lock went to town and sent physicians to her house. Marshal Lee telegraphed to Marshal Dick Cook at Paris to send a strong force, as they had warrants for the militia.

Another Outbreak Likely.

Late in the afternoon John Gibbons and Judge Durant went to the militia camp and arrested Judge Duke and others. Many of the militiamen refused to participate in the attack. They said they did not understand it to be their duty to war against women and children. Great uneasiness prevails at Antlers. Fears are entertained that the town will be burned.

It is expected that Lock and the entire force will break camp and return to Antlers. If so, they may attack the militia. This opinion is strongly entertained by many. Should they do so it will more seriously complicate matters.

ON LATIMER'S TRAIL.

He Had Studied a Book on Poisons While In His Cell.

JACKSON, Mich., March 29.—Probably the first authentic clew to the direction taken by Irving Latimer after his escape from prison Sunday night has developed. Mr. Soule, a farmer living near Horton, about 12 miles from here, is sure that Latimer was at his house Monday morning.

The man he saw had on a gray pair of pants and vest, such as they wear in Jackson prison. His coat was a long one and it was much too large for him and looked rusty. His hat was a worn out slouch and he had a pair of old felt boots on his feet. Soule asked him into breakfast and he ate a hearty meal. When he left he went across the fields instead of taking the road down to Horton. Soule says that since seeing Latimer's picture he is sure he is the man who ate breakfast with him.

Night Guard Heighsbird from the effects of prussic acid. That fact is settled. When Dr. Novi was given the bottles he at once said that they both contained prussic acid. The result of the analysis of the stomach will soon be completed. From a book found in Latimer's cell and passages marked in it, it is certain that he has been reading up on poisons and their action.

It was found where Latimer purchased the prussic acid that killed Night Guard Haight. The second vial of the drug was obtained last Saturday from Wahl's drug store, having been ordered from New York some time before. The first vial was purchased some months ago.

It was rumored in Detroit that Latimer had crossed the Detroit river to a point near Sandwich, Ont. Officers followed up the clew.

Later.—Between 8:30 and 9 o'clock p. m. R. Irving Latimer, the escaped convict, who murdered his keeper, was captured at Jerome, a little town in Hillsdale county, about 20 miles from here. He went into a store to purchase a pair of shoes. The people in the store recognized Latimer, who became frightened and fled down the railroad, followed by a crowd. After a long chase the murderer was captured, and the whole party started toward Jackson.

Spoiled a Monopoly.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The agents of the Thingvalla Steamship line are considerably wrought up over the action of the Hamburg-American Packett company in establishing a new passenger service to this city from the ports at which the former company has had a monopoly for many years.

Must Have Husband or Money.

BROOKLYN, March 29.—Mrs. Kittie Levy sued her father-in-law to make him return her husband, Sylvon Levy, 23 years old. The father-in-law said he knew not where his son was. She lost. Then Mrs. Levy said she would sue for alienation of affections and ask $25,000.

That's What She Did.

The fair young Chicagoan's hand had been sought and to some extent found by a distinguished European nobleman.

That she was rich it is hardly necessary to state.

That he was poor, but titled, is equally unnecessary of statement.

The girl's father was a simon pure American. He had sized up the nobleman.

At the same time he was fond of his joke.

"Daddy," she said to him in her airy-fairy-Lillian-lake-front manner, "the count has popped the question."

"Has he?" inquired the father with interest. "Well, my dear, we don't want any foreign poppers around here, so you just stop it and let him slide."

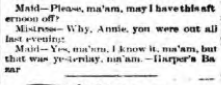
And the nobly patriotic girl let him slide —Detroit Free Press.

Hadn't Been Out All Day.

Maid—Please, ma'am, may I have this afternoon off?

Mistress—Why, Annie, you were out all last evening.

Maid—Yes, ma'am, I know it, ma'am, but that was yesterday, ma'am.—Harper's Bazar.



Sleeve Buttons and Watches.

This is to be a season of sleeve buttons. The linked buttons of the same size prevail. Here again is enamel in all colors surrounded with a fine edge of gold or silver. The silver buttons were never more tasteful and artistic. Elsie Bee says in The Jewelers' Circular that the display of watches with chatelaines is as pretty as anything shown in a long time. There is a preference, above all, for enamel. The enamelled watches with portraits and figures prevail. The brilliant enamels in solid color are set with stones. The blue enamel is superb. Other watches have covers made of lace work, the edge of gold or silver. The chatelaines are made to correspond. The bow knot prevails, but there are enameled swords, long loops caught at the lower end with a stone, still newer, three enameled forms like sleeve buttons, each with some heraldic device, and pendent loops in which the watch swings. Sometimes a flower-de-luce is on all three.

New Haircrossing.

A stylish arrangement is of loops and bows of hair placed quite on the top of the head, after the style of the 1830 period. These bows start from a twist of hair at the back of the head and are intermixed with diamonds and other ornaments. Everything that savors of the empire is now for the moment a la mode, and the Recamier coiffure is among the newest.

It is the fashion now to wear a little bunch of flowers or feathers and velvet for full dress as well as morning. Little sprays of violets or roses or any other bloom are worn. Frequently these are intermixed with shaded velvet, standing up in two points like donkeys' ears in the immediate front.

Rows of pearls, with pearls and silver flowers in the front, are intended to be placed round the coiffure at the back, and a white satin bow, with a humming bird in the center, is quite a new idea.

Makes an every-day convenience of an old-time luxury. Pure and wholesome. Prepared with scrupulous care. Highest award at all Pure Food Expositions. Each package makes two large pies. Avoid imitations—and insist on having the NONE SUCH brand.

THE HOUSEHOLD

MARKETING FOR FISH.

Nutritive Properties of Red and of White Sorts—Sauces and Seasonings.

At this time of the year, even among people who do not observe Lent, fish is used more than in winter. Such excellent culinary authority as Miss Maria Parloa gives, in Good Housekeeping, a number of suggestions that will be useful in marketing for it. She names as among the most prized kinds at this season, sand, Spanish mackerel, Columbia river salmon and red snapper, and says:

Halibut, haddock, cod, perch, etc., are to be found in seaboard markets at all seasons of the year, and in the regions of the great lakes the delicious white fish are generally plentiful and cheap.

Fish that possess the stimulating and nutritious properties that butchers' meat does. It spoils quickly, and is at its best when just killed. Fish may be divided into two classes—the white and the red. There is but little fat distributed through the flesh of the white fish, nearly all the oily substances being accumulated in the liver. In the red fish a large proportion of the fatty matter is incorporated with the flesh, making it richer and more stimulating than the white fish, but less easy to digestion.

If a fish be too old, it will be tough. A fish of medium size is always the safest to take. The richer the fish, the less will be required for each person. For example, where three pounds of halibut would be necessary a pound and a half of salmon would answer. The red fish requires very little sauce, whereas the white kinds depend upon sauces or some fatty substance to make them savory.

In selecting fish be sure that it is fresh and sweet. After some experience one can tell a good deal by the smell, but to the novice the peculiar odor that belongs to the fish is often mistaken for an indication of staleness. Firmness and a pleasant odor are two things that the housekeeper should look for in buying fresh fish. Full, bright eyes and bright scales indicate freshness. Never take a fish whose eyes are dull and sunken.

In the case of large fish, such as halibut and salmon, that are sold by the piece the color of the flesh and its odor and firmness must guide the purchaser. Halibut should be a pearly white, of firm texture and pleasant odor Salmon should have a bright color and a pleasing smell.

The sauces and seasoning for fish should be light and delicate, the effect being to bring out the flavor, not disguise it. A little lemon juice is a great addition to nearly all kinds of fish.

Wool Petticoat in Crochet Work.

This petticoat is worked in wool with a medium bon crochet hook. Make a chain the desired length (about 32 inches is a good deal) and work back and forward until wide enough, when you join it together at the back. The part which fits over the hips is done in Russian crochet—i. e., D. C. worked into the back of each chain or loop in preceding row.

First row—Work D. C. for the band. This can be as deep as you please—we will say 14 stitches. Then begin the pattern: Two chain, 3 treble into the same loop that the last D. C. was worked into, miss 2, work 1 single into the next, 2 chain and 3 treble into the same hole that the single was worked into, repeat the entire length. Second row—1 chain with 3 chain, work 3 treble into first loop, miss the next clump of treble and work a single into the single of preceding row, *, then 2 chain, 3 treble into the same hole as the single was worked into, miss the next clump, 1 single into the single of preceding row, repeat from *.

Every row is alike. When wide enough, join the ends together and add the border: Four treble, 1 chain, 4 treble, all into the same hole, 1 single repeat. Second round—Eight treble into the middle of the scallop, D. C. into the single of preceding round, 1 chain, 8 treble into next scallop, and so on. Third round—One D. C. into every hole, with 1 chain at beginning and end of every scallop. Make holes for ribbon strings at the top of the Russian band, 1 chain, 1 treble. Second round—Three chain, 1 single into the first to make a very narrow, pointed edging. Work a finish of double crochet all round the plackets holes. This is a very thick, warm pattern.

CROCHET PETTICOAT.

Lemon Biscuit For Afternoon Tea.

Take some shallow open tin molds of a small biscuit size. Those with straight sides are the best, but if not at hand tartlet tins will do. Butter the inside smoothly, then dredge fine sugar over the butter and coat it evenly. Break 2 eggs, put the whites in one bowl and the yulks in another. Beat the yolks and put with them a little salt, 2 ounces of sugar and the grated rind of a lemon. Whisk the whites till firm, mix them with the yolks, then add 2½ ounces of fine sifted flour. Mix thoroughly, fill the molds two parts of each and sprinkle white sugar on the top. Wait two or three minutes, and when the sugar begins to look shiny set the molds on baking sheets, leaving a little space between them and bake in a quick oven.

Velvet Cream.

Put one and a quarter pints of milk, a quarter of a pound of powdered sugar and a little stick cinnamon into a basin and place this in the saucepan of hot water. When the milk is thoroughly hot, but not boiling, add about four beaten eggs and one tablespoonful of corn flour mixed previously with a little milk. Stir until thick, remove the basin from the saucepan and plunge into cold water to prevent curdling. Place some sponge cakes or macaroons in a glass dish, pour over them some port wine or sherry; over this pour the custard and let it stand about four hours.

The Largest Pear.

We have no record of the largest pear raised in our country, but English papers report a fruit of the Pittmaston Duchess which weighed 1¾ pounds, and this is regarded as possibly the largest ever known in the old world. Thomas Meehan thinks that California ought to be able to beat this weight.

THE WORK OF WOMEN

TEDIOUS LABOR AT HOME AFTER A DAY'S EFFORT OUTSIDE.

If a Woman Works In a Factory, She Often Has to Spend the Greater Part of the Night in Sewing or Cooking For Herself or Others Dependent on Her.

The awful accident at a Philadelphia factory, caused by the falling down stairs of a woman who had become considerable of a day's work before factory hours began, calls attention to one side of the labor question. A man usually, while day laborer, mechanic or clerk, does not have to get his breakfast or mend his clothes before he starts out to work. How much is on the side cards for many a working woman is shower by this story from the soap works. The woman, who was either so exhausted or so dizzy that she could not safely see her way down stairs, had risen at 2 o'clock that morning and had done the family wash before 7 o'clock. Her old mother, whom she supported, was an invalid, so presumably this woman had other small things to do about the house every day before going to work. Now, a business woman may put in just as good work as a man does, but she must have considerable more consideration than most men have to do the day's work and not leave the other "duties" undone.

And women are the ones to whom stress of immediate need, to drive upon a sort of reserve energy they have, their enthusiasm or nervous energy making them able for a short time to do enormous tasks, but of course the pace cannot go on continually. The poor woman at the soap works was witness to that. Since many women must work for their living and must support families dependent on them alone, they should not draw too much on their grand facility as women for doing several things at once or for working over time and insecantly. A traveler from Altruria, Mr. Howells' newly discovered romance country, would say: "It would have been better for that poor creature on Monday, staggering under the double load of millwork and housework, if she had done that family wash the previous morning and so taken her rest before dawn Monday." The duty of that daughter to her old mother and to herself compelled certainly the saving of her hard labors by dividing them as much as possible. Her duty to herself was probably the one thing she never thought of.

In this connection it is interesting to quote a speaker at the meeting of the national American convention of women held in this connection. She said: "A government clerk, a gentleman in the same division and doing no different class of work than the ladies, once hazarded the remark that 'a woman in office ought to be ashamed if she did not make every article of her own wearing apparel except her boots.' The reason for this exception has been a problem. It is easier to make a pair of boots than a dress, and we have the respectable precedent of 'Hannah binding shoes.' He was asked if he made his own trousers and said 'of course not,' and at once grew so fractious as to discourage argument."

The world seems still to expect it of women in any out of the house employment to keep up as much as possible all the incidental work that the stay at home women have. Thanks to the cheapening of ready made clothing—not always cheapened at the expense of the professional sewing women, but by steam driven sewing machines—thanks to the cheapened supply of clothes, the business woman does not have to set up until 4 o'clock in the morning making the dress she is to wear at her work. It is enough, and often more than enough, tax upon her if she mends it and trims her own hat.

If she spends much time over the sewing machine or the ironing table, she does not come into the labor market fresh enough either to do her own work well or to compete with men in the same business for even her lower wages. Yet there are very few employers who will venture to say that a woman does less of the same kind of work or does it less well than the man to whom he must pay more. He gives her the work generally because he pays her less for doing it as well. The difference is not to him, it is to herself. It is taken out of her own estate, the double work which she does and which frequently ends in an unexpected breakdown.

It is an excellent thing in woman, therefore, when she can make her family life, as the wage earner, to include one capable stay at home, one other woman, who can share the profits and help to make them larger by attending to just those matters which it is scarcely right for the wage earner should do. In The Forum a lively article by a practical woman points out that the housekeeper of the present time solves many problems by a sort of co-operation among little parties of women themselves, two or three friends, all of whom work, and who divide the kinds of housework each should do. Clubbing together on either large or small scale seems to be the answer to many problems.

All of these plans must recognize, how ever, that house duties in such good little home circles are just as much to be paid for as type writing, bookkeeping or any—and not merely by board and lodging. The wife of the workingman, who usually keeps his wages, is recognized in the old arrangement. They are to be saved for her to save for the general good, and what she saves should be her profit or be divided justly. The unmarried woman, as the case of the soap factory hand shows, is the head of the family very often. It is among the duties of thoughtful persons in what is left of this nineteenth century to show her how she may do daughter's duty, housekeeper's duty and milliand's duty without necessarily killing herself in the double and treble task.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Value of the Mother's Milk.

Be sure not to let your nurse or some well meaning friend persuade you that you have not milk enough or are not strong enough to nurse the baby and had better "bring him up on the bottle." If you have not all the milk that is requires, your diet may be changed or added to, so that more will be secreted. If you are not strong, you should be so built up by food and tonics as to be able to give your baby the necessary care. In any case it is far better to supplement your milk by some suitable infant food, given at every other feeding or given during the day, while the breast milk is reserved for the evening and night, than to deprive him of his natural food entirely.

How do these things work practically? I know a little girl brought up in this way who had not any sickness, not even an attack of colic, during her first two years. She allowed her mother to sleep well every night, waking only once to nurse her between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m. Her parents were not unusually vigorous people. Her mother was certainly 35 years old at the time of her birth, and she began life as a tiny, puny girl, not at all promising to become the strong, fine child she has developed. Her care was simply wisely and regularly managed.—Mother's Nursery Guide.

HER LIFE PROBLEM.

How to Write a Novel, or Every Man His Own Novelist.

The following from "The Handbook of Plots; or, Every Man His Own Novelist," offers an excellent opportunity for a display of originality in treatment and style. Of course the young novelist can fill out to suit himself:

I.

The beautiful girl was engaged to the wealthy bachelor, but was in love with the young man.

II.

The young man urged the beautiful girl to break the engagement and marry him, but she said: "Alas, too late! The wedding day is fixed."

III.

The wealthy bachelor, fearful that he might lose the beautiful girl, took out a marriage license as a matter of precaution and waved it tantalizingly in the face of the beautiful girl.

IV.

The beautiful girl grew desperate, and listened more attentively to the pleadings of the young man. "Would that I could, George," she said, "but he already has the license." She really didn't say "Would that I could," but it is customary to put it that way in novels. It reads better.

V.

"Let not that trouble you," is the way a novelist would have put what the young man said, and he hurried to the clerk and stole the marriage license out of the wealthy bachelor's overcoat pocket.

VI.

"You are mine!" cried the young man as he rushed breathlessly into the beautiful girl's presence. "But we must be quick. We must get a move on ourselves—find a clergyman who does not know us, or all will be lost."

VII.

The beautiful girl held that such devotion, courage and integrity should be rewarded, especially as she was anxious to reward it in the usual novelistic way, and after crying, "Oh, dear, this is so unexpected!" she put on her wraps and went with him.

VIII.

"Mr. Mann," said the young man, with a smile of triumph, a few hours later, "permit me to introduce my wife."

"Oh, no," said the wealthy bachelor pleasantly, "she is to be my wife next Tuesday. I have the license."

"I think not," returned the young man complacently. "While your friends were congratulating you at the club I stole that license, and we were married under it half an hour ago. All's fair in love"——

"Then she's my wife now," interrupted the wealthy bachelor.

"But I was married to her," protested the young man.

"But in records of the city and the parish show that I was," asserted the bachelor. "You had to use the name on the license. You can't go behind the returns. Come to your husband, dearest."

IX.

The beautiful girl struggled with the problem a moment and then fell in a swoon, while the rich bachelor and the young man glared at each other and swore they would go to law about it.

Note—One of the beauties of these stories is that the reader or some young author can be left to struggle with the final problem. If the young woman doesn't know whose wife she is, it can be expected that the author of this outline would be so presumptuous as to attempt to decide the matter for her.—Chicago Tribune.

SOME DEFINITIONS.

Unconscious Wit and Humor In Small Boys' Examination Papers.

I began to collect from examination papers and answers in class whatever would throw new light on old subjects. I have been some years at it now and have pleasure in sending you the subjoined 12 extracts from my "gems," says Miss A. C. Graham in The University Correspondent. They are all bona fide answers, the spelling and punctuation being unchanged. In most cases I have still the original documents from which they are taken.

Esau was a man who wrote fables, and who sold the copyright to a publisher for a bottle of pottage. Titus was a Roman emperor, supposed to have written the "Epistle of the Hebrews." His other name was Oates.

Oliver Cromwell was a man who was put into prison for his interference in Ireland. When he was in prison he wrote "The Pilgrim's Progress" and married a lady called Miss. O'Shea.

Wolsey was a famous general who fought in the Crimean war, and who, after being promoted several times, said to Cromwell, "Ah, if I had only served you as you have served me, I would not have been deserted in my old age."

Wesley was the founder of the Wesleyan chapel, who was afterward called Lord Wellington. A monument was erected to him in Hyde park, but it has been taken down lately.

Hamlet was weakminded. Fond of study. But was too weak to fulfill his duty which the ghost had told him. He was very good to his mother. He profanes madness, he really only puts it on, but some people say he was mad. One day when he was fighting, the King asked him if he would have something to drink and he had put poison in it and Hamlet said he would wait the queen, took it and then she falls down dead, Hamlet immediately stabs his father and drinks the poison and dies.

"Well, I suppose you might call it that?"

"Then, of course, for treating imaginary ills with imaginary pills, you send in imaginary bills?"

"Oh, my dear sir, nothing of the kind. There's nothing imaginary about the bills. I have to draw the line somewhere."—New York Sun.

Said James Whitcomb Riley the other day to a group of reporters: "I wish you newspaper men wouldn't be quite so careless in your remarks about my looks. I was served with a notice several years ago that I wasn't very handsome, but the reporters take a kind of delight in reminding me of it. It seems to me that you might at least be as considerate as the old auntie who went to the menagerie and saw the hippopotamus. IT WAS OWNED BY MR. HYDE AND USED BY MR. RANDOLPH.

The Building and Its Contents Completely Destroyed—The Fire Supposed to be of Incendiary Origin—Contents Insured, but not the Building.

The old mill, in the rear of Mr. J. L. Ludlum's property, on East Front street, owned by Mr. Charles Hyde and used by Mr. Charles Randolph as a grist mill was burned to the ground this morning. An ice house and a small frame house near by, belonging to Mr. Ludlum, were also partly destroyed.

The fire started in the mill, and as there was no one left burning in the store in the building nights, it must have been the work of an incendiary.

It was first discovered by Mr. Ludlum's gardener, who lived in the house which afterwards caught fire from the mill. The mill, Peters' home, the ice house and Mr. Ludlum's barn were all in close proximity to each other.

Peters was awakened a few minutes before four o'clock, by the reflection from the fire. Hastily dressing he hurried down, and, after taking his employer's two cows and horse from the barn, ran down Front street yelling "fire!" Policeman Mattox in the meantime turned in an alarm from box 16, located at the corner of Front and Richmond streets. Hearing the gong blow Peters went back to the house. By that time the ice house as well as his own place were on fire.

In response to the alarm Gazelle's engine, No. two's hose wagon and the hook and ladder truck were quickly on hand, although it was a long run.

When the firemen arrived the mill was a blazing mass, and it could be plainly seen that it was too far gone to be saved. A stream of water was turned on the mill and another on the house. The house, no doubt, could have been saved but for the unfortunate bursting of a length of hose in each line. The delay allowed the flames to gain such headway that the building was gutted. Others managed to save the most of his household goods, with the exception of some furniture that had been stored in the attic.

At 4.30 o'clock Warren Engine Company, having been called out by their gong, arrived on the scene.

As the fire was in their district Plainfield's appartus was recalled at 5.30 o'clock, when it was certain that the flames were under control. The North Plainfielders remained until eight o'clock.

The ice house was filled with hay. The ventilator at the top being open, sparks must have fallen in, setting fire to it.

Mr. Hyde had no insurance on the mill and he estimates his loss at $4,000. The loss on the contents is placed at $2,000 by Mr. Randolph, insurance $1,500.

The damage to Mr. Ludlum's buildings is fully covered by insurance.

This morning Fire Police Chief Foreman Fairchild of Warren Engine Company how many men he had present. On being told, Mr. Hyde generously gave him money to buy them all breakfast. The firemen requested that their thanks be extended to Mr. Hyde, through the EVENING NEWS.

The mill was an old building. It was formerly owned by Mr. Hotchkiss and used as a saw mill for a number of years. It was afterwards made into a pin factory. Twenty-two years ago Mr. Hyde bought it and rented it to Mr. Thorn, who manufactured wagon hubs there.

About nine years ago Mr. Hyde purchased the machinery from the Randolph grist mill, which was located near the First Baptist church, and had been burned down. This he removed to his property, and Mr. Randolph rented it as a grist mill, and had been doing business there since.

"GRACE M. E. CHURCH."

The New Name of the Park Place Chapel.

Presiding Elder Ryman was at the Park place chapel last night to preside at the first quarterly conference of the new church organization which was formed Sunday night.

After a short service a business meeting was held and the following gentlemen elected as stewards: John Valliant, A. A. Taft, J. S. Lunger, E. P. Stevens, W. H. Griffin, L. A. Hummer, Jacob Voehl, J. W. Van Horne, T. W. Powell, E. A. Vermeule, Henry DeMott, Ezra Loomis and W. H. Lunger.

The name was changed to the "Grace Methodist Episcopal Church." The meeting for the election of trustees will take place Saturday, April 8th.

Col. Shepard's Will.

Col. Elliott F. Shepard left a will which will probably be offered for probate in a few days.

By one of its provisions, it is said, the executors—one of whom is likely to be his brother, Augustus D. Shepard, of this city—are authorized to sell the Mail and Express, if they deem such a course wise. A sale is understood not to be favored by the persons interested.

Assaulted with a Spade.

A warrant was issued to-day for the arrest of "Betty" Brown, on complaint of Carrie Fisher. Both are colored. The complainant states that yesterday afternoon she was assaulted by the former, who hit her several times with a spade.

TWO ACCIDENTS.

CAUSED BY CARELESS DRIVERS YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Mrs Waldrod's Bicycle Ran Over by a Wagon—She Escaped by Springing to the Sidewalk—Another Lady Thrown from her Wheel.

The lives of two lady cyclists were jeopardized by reckless drivers yesterday.

Mrs. Clarinda P. Walrod, matron at the Muhlenberg Hospital, was riding her wheel along West Second street yesterday afternoon. She was riding close to the curb, to this fact she no doubt owes her escape from injury. As she passed the Elkwood building the Chicago Beef Company's wagon, which was being driven in the same direction, suddenly turned to the right to enter Exchange alley. Seeing that a collision was inevitable, as she was directly in the path of the wagon and the driver was making no attempt to avoid it, Mrs. Walrod jumped from her bicycle and sprang upon the sidewalk. Her wheel was run over by the wagon and demolished.

Mrs. Walrod has secured legal advice in the matter and the company will be compelled to make good her loss.

The other accident happened on East Front street, a lady cyclist whose name could not be ascertained, was run into by a wagon driven by a man named Walker. She was thrown from her bicycle and although receiving a severe shaking up she was able to re mount after a few moments.

BREVITIES.

—Several streets have already been scraped with the new scraper. Its work so far has been very satisfactory.

—The culvert at the corner of Front street and Sandford avenue was taken up to-day. It will probably be replaced by a new one.

—To morrow being Good Friday, there will be a service and sermon at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue at eight o'clock p. m. Seats free.

—German Lutheran St. Peter's congregation will hold services on Good Friday, at 10.30 a. m. The themes will be: "Die sieben Worte am Kreuz." Rev. Ed. Klonka, pastor.

—Two Front street merchants nearly came to blows over the location of a sign this morning. A policeman acted as peacemaker. A law suit will probably be the final result.

—The second anniversary of the Washingtonville Y. P. S. C. E. will take place this evening, at eight o'clock. A stage will leave from in front of Trinity church at 7.15 to convey all who may desire to go from Plainfield.

—Each purchaser of a pair of kid gloves at White's is presented with a dainty picture as a souvenir. In his advertisement to day Mr. Edward White has something interesting to say to the ladies in regard to Easter wants and fixings. He is offering special inducements in kid gloves.

—Prior to the lecture to be given by Sergeant Sprague on Tuesday evening, April 4th, there will be singing of patriotic songs, in which the audience will be asked to join in the chorus. It is understood that Mr. David E. Titsworth, with a quartette, will render some fine music. Those who desire to purchase tickets should secure them before the lecture, as none will be sold at the door of the First Baptist church, where the lecture will be given.

—At Mr. Venino's concert, April 13th, Mr. Venino says the audience will have a novelty in the way of a quintette by Gounod. He also says that it will be given for the first time in America and that on account of the unusual combination of instruments, viz.: violin, viola, cello, (Italian double base) and piano, will require an additional man. He says he has secured a very skillful musician, being desirous of giving his audience a new and beautiful composition.

—When Starter Flynn resigned his position at Gloucester to go to Trenton he was presented by the horse owners, bookmakers and jockeys with a $500 diamond pin, and in accepting the present he pledged himself that before he returned he intended to do such work as would make their business in the future respectable, so that they would not be ashamed to acknowledge they were engaged in it. Has not Mr. Flynn redeemed his pledges?

—"The MacKaye Spectatorium" at Chicago is to be equipped with the largest elevator plant in the world. The contract for supplying these elevators, fifteen in number, was signed last week by the Columbian Celebration Company and the Standard Elevator Company of Chicago. This contract calls for the construction of elevators capable of carrying 10,000 people per hour. These elevators will be placed in three groups of five each and will, in themselves, form a most interesting exhibit. They will be more speedy in operation than any elevators yet constructed and will be subjected to the most crucial tests for safety before they are thrown open to the public. They are to be used to carry people to the galleries and to roof gardens and to restaurants.

RARITAN'S "WHYO" GANG

THE CITIZENS IN THAT COMMUNITY TERRORIZED BY THEM.

Notorious Dominick Fitzpatrick said to be their Leader—A Butcher Shop, Store, Mill and Even a Church Robbed.

The citizens of Raritan are indignant over the doings of a gang of toughs, who, for the past two weeks, have been terrorizing the community.

Two weeks ago the people grew tired of paying taxes to support a police force, and suspended the department.

With the suspension of the police force the "Whyos" who had been keeping very quiet during the last eighteen months, since their leaders have been sent to prison, resumed their old tricks.

Two nights after the police went off duty the gang began by robbing a store in North Branch of about $500 worth of merchandise.

The night after that Adair's mill, in the heart of the village, was entered, but as nothing valuable could be found they contented themselves with breaking open desks and strewing the contents of several bags of flour over the floor.

A week ago last Saturday night the gang lay in wait for young William Feeney, who in some way had incurred their ill will. They caught him and beat him so that he has been confined to his house ever since.

The next day the gang remained quiet, but on Monday night they stole a quarter of beef from Smith's butcher shop, broke into the Catholic church on the Main street and made off with the contents of the poor box. Then going over to the Central Railroad station they confined a nickel-in-the-slot machine down the track, smashed it, and divided the nickels among themselves.

They wound up on Saturday night by going into a saloon on Anderson street and cleaning out the place. Two young men named Duffy, who were friends of the gang, tried to quiet them, but were set upon by five of the rowdies and severely beaten.

Warrants were sworn out yesterday against the members of the gang, but no officer could be found who was willing to serve them, and the gang is still at liberty.

Since their return to Raritan, two weeks ago, the gang has made its headquarters in a little wooden hut just above the town, near a deep cut on the Central Railroad. The lumber for this they obtained by jumping on the freight trains two or three miles above here and throwing off what they wanted.

Here the gang, which numbers about twenty, sleeps during the day.

Dominick Fitzpatrick, an ex-prize fighter of Elizabethport, is said to be the leader of the gang. He was arrested about a year and a half ago for robbing a store and was sentenced to three years and six months at hard labor in the State prison.

He served one year of his time and was then pardoned by Gov. Abbett.

Jack Hall, another of the "Whyos," while in prison once for assault sent a letter to Fitzpatrick urging him to come to his rescue, telling him where he could get a ladder to cut the bars of the windows, and saying that the job was easy, as the jailer was old and his daughter would be made to surrender the keys. This letter fell into the hands of the police.

PERSONAL.

Mr. C. H. Farlee has moved with his family from Manning avenue to 116 Jackson avenue.

Miss Jennie Wyckoff, who has been ill at her home on West Eighth street, is convalescent.

Miss Minnie Smith of West Front street has been confined to her home for several days with la grippe.

Mr. Brooks Brown, the manager of the dress goods department in O. White's, is able to attend to business again, after a period of sickness.

Mr. Matthew Whalen, one of the C. Y. M. L.'s bowlers, is about to leave Plainfield for Connecticut, where he has obtained a more lucrative position.

Mr. Dalziel will give an exhibition of free hand drawing, in connection with his talk on "Observation", to be given at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening. The admission will be free.

It is announced that the marriage of Mr. William G. Hoffman of this city to Miss Carrie E. Apgar of Califon, N. J., will take place on Wednesday, April 19th, at the residence of Mr. J. M. Johnston of that place.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh is in Jersey City to-day to argue in favor of his appeal, before the Court of Errors and Appeals, from the decision of Judge McCormick in the case of the Duckworth children vs. their aunt.

Mrs. Julia Becker, a widow lady, who boards at Mrs. Neighbour's, on East Front street, was run into and knocked down yesterday afternoon, on Broadway, by a bicycle ridden by a boy named Rafferty. Mrs. Becker is an invalid and as she walked along she held her muff up to her face to shield it from the March wind. As she fell the muff protected her head from the hard pavement, otherwise her face would have been badly scratched. Her left wrist was sprained and her shoulder injured. She has been confined to the bed to-day, suffering from nervousness.

CONCERNING THE STATE PRISON.

A Report and some Interesting Statistics.

The report of the New Jersey State prison for the year 1892, which includes the reports of the joint committee, inspectors, supervisor, keeper, clerk, physicians and moral instructors, contains some interesting statistics.

The report of the joint committee contains the following figures: Amount paid into the State treasury for the fiscal year from convict labor, $75,008 04, an increase over last year of $1,822.54; total amount received from convict labor and other sources for fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1893, $76,058.98, an increase of earnings this year over last of $1,686.45; cost of maintenance, salaries, repairs on buildings and amount paid convicts on their discharge, $139,666.48, the total cost to the State over receipts being $63,637.55, against a total cost last year of $89,111.08, a saving to the State this year, as compared with last, of $5,473.60.

The report recommends an increase in shop room and the immediate expenditure of the sum appropriated by the legislature of 1890 for the erection of a new wing thereby, affording the authorities relief from their continued overcrowded condition, there being on October 31 947 convicts confined in 700 cells.

The inspector's report contains the following figures: Amount of bills audited for the fiscal year, $111,301.98, which with the salaries and amounts paid to discharged convicts makes a total of $161,796.45; net cost of maintenance, $74,017.67; not cost of repairs, $30,002.76; net earnings of convicts, $76,058.95, an increase of $1,687.45; total number of prisoners, 947; a decrease of 62 as compared with the preceding year.

The supervisor's report shows convicts' earnings amounting to $75,008.04, and expenses amounting to $159, 696.48.

The keeper's report shows the following figures in reference to the population of the prison: Transferred to insane asylum, five males; deaths, 11 males and one female. Number of prisoners in State prison at the time of this report, 918 males and 29 females; average number of prisoners during the year, 956. The largest number of convicts confined at any time, 1,047. During the year one prisoner escaped and was returned to prison in a few days' time. The necessity for repairs is urged in the report.

The clerk's report contains the classification of prisoners and crimes. Hudson county sends the largest number of convictions, 205, and Essex comes next with 157, and Mercer, Bergen and Monmouth lowest, with one each. New Jersey contributes 398 prisoners and New York 137. Burglaries and assaults are the most prevalent cases.

John M. Rogers, the moral instructor, suggests the desirability of setting apart a portion of the proceeds of convict labor to constitute a fund, out of which something might be allowed to the dependent family of the prisoner, or which would furnish a start in life for himself when discharged.

Father Voigt, the Catholic chaplain, recommends the changing of the hospital into a chapel.

The Two Johns.

The mirth-provoking comedy of "The Two Johns," presented by J. C. Stewart's company of comedians, is the attraction for the current week at any rate at Opera house, and judging from the reception tendered by the audience at both performances yesterday, full houses will be the rule every evening. The cousins, Peter and Philip, are represented by John Hart and Frank Rush, and are ably supported by Dan Hart, M. W. Times, Wily Williams, Harry Allen, Kate Montrose, Louise Montrose, Arcadia Stewart and Marjorie Fair. A number of interesting specialties and impersonations in the second act by members of the company, added largely to the enjoyment, and were warmly commended by the audience. "The Two Johns" will be on hand every afternoon and evening during "the week.—Boston Globe. The "Two Johns" will be at Music Hall, Wednesday, April 5th.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Capacity For Civilization.

Wherever man has attempted to break in the wild natives of a new country to civilized ways he has met at first an almost insurmountable difficulty. It has been the impossibility of making them work steadily. They were like wild animals or tramps in a civilized country. That was the main impediment in making the Indian assume citizenship. It is what has made it out of the question thus far to dispose of the gypsies. The building of the Congo railway has been hampered from this cause. It hinders the development of Mexico and Central America. Like an animal, as soon as the wild man gets enough material for his dinner, he will not work till he is hungry again.

It has taken several centuries to produce even an approach to habits of persistent industry in the Indian. How many ages it has taken in the case of the white man who conquers the savage races we have no means of knowing. This much is certain, however: Capacity for steady effort marks the capacity for civilization. In proportion as the first is powerful the other is high.

The people who can work the most unstiringly at physical labor are at present undoubtedly the Chinese. On the plane of manual labor the civilizable capacity first unfolds and strengthens itself. Then as it grows it reacts on the brain and mind, and in the course of generations the new found power rises to the intellectual plane.

The great masters of industry and intellectual achievement have one and all possessed remarkable capacity for long continued mental effort. The race to which the people of Europe and the whites of America belong passed through their manual labor training ages ago; therefore as a people they are now superior to the rest of mankind and able to conquer them. The power for quick, bold and powerful mental conception is what the Caucasian has achieved through ages of struggle. Armed with this power the white man has to some extent gradually released himself from the slavery of physical toil. Perhaps in future ages the Chinese may be the ruling race.

At any rate, capacity for persistent effort on the plane, whether physical or mental, that is at the time natural, marks the capacity of both a race and an individual to take the next step up.

Edward Everett Hale.

Few people who read about the "Hoosier Man Club" in The Cosmopolitan would believe unless they knew it to be a fact that that man is a minister. Edward Everett Hale, is 71 years old the 3d day of April. He is as lively as the best youngster and far happier and better tempered than most boys, for he has learned how to be. This is the lesson of life—to preserve the health and sprytness of youth and gain besides the sweet temper and calm of the sage, who knows that even the worst ills cannot last forever.

Dr. Hale is saying today because he has lived one of the purest and noblest lives man can compass. From the time he left college a young Unitarian minister he has always been working for others. Now he organized a reading club, now he inaugurates a plan to interest good citizens in municipal government, again he thinks long and carefully on the labor question and sees that intelligent co-operation among working people themselves will do away with their greatest troubles. Wherever he has been settled in the course of his life he has always left a neighborhood cleaner, better and wiser than he found it. His latest idea, as expressed in The Cosmopolitan, is the story of a club that is supposed to be formed among the street arabs and bad boys of a certain locality to keep them from loafing and destructive mischief of evenings.

No wonder this blessed man keeps young. He is always trying to find wise ways of helping other people that he never has time to have any illness or grievance of his own.

The English agricultural college gives thorough training to young women in fruit, vegetable and flower culture. The mind gets more and more worth bookkeeping, chemistry, botany and something about the laws of matter. Another part of the instruction is the canning, preserving and evaporating of fruits and the making of fruit juices. The girls must also attain perfection in making that jam without which a British could not exist. Besides outdoor culture they must understand the cultivation of greenhouse and conservatory plants. At the end of the course a certificate of proficiency is given to them. So excellent is the training that applications for women as head gardeners have several times been received at the college. They are thorough, these old country instructors.

Sir Hector Hay, an eminent British financier, says that if England, France and the United States would join together in fixing a ratio between silver and gold and then adhere to it they could settle all the world's gold and silver troubles.

Georgia is one of the southern states that have settled the question of pensions for Confederate soldiers. Any pay a regular sum to one of her citizens who were wounded in the Confederate service. There are 3,500 names on this state roll.

ASKS AN INVESTIGATION

Power Wants the Senate to Investigate the Charges.

WHY NOT INVESTIGATE EACH ONE?

Senator Morgan Proposes to Do It by Wholesale—Postmasters' Heads are Falling Rapidly—Work of Cabinet Officers Interfered With by Too Many Visitors.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The feature of the session of the senate came at the close when Senator Power of Montana demanded an investigation of the insinuations which have been made against his character prior to his election to the senate. The Republicans have determined to press the investigation into the life of Senator Power. North Dakota, who has been accused of embezzlement, while a bank officer in this city 13 years ago, and there was published statements that it was the intention of the Democratic senators, if this investigation were gone into, to open wide the doors and have a general investigation of senators' character. In this connection there was published statements regarding Senator Power and also the remarks denunciatory of him made by Senator Turpie of Indiana at the time of the contest over the seat held by Mr. Power. No action was taken on the demand of the Montana senator Mr. Gorman asking that it go over.

There was evidently a nervous feeling on the part of the senators during the time the matter was up, and it was apparent that they were relieved when the matter was permitted to drop for the time being.

Finally Senator Power arose again to a question of personal privilege and called attention to aspersions which he said had been made on him in a morning paper. Heretofore he had not answered such attacks, but in view of their repetition he demanded a full investigation of all the charges and in that investigation he wanted the committee to go into all the matters contained in the speech of Senator Turpie when he had made statements concerning him (Powers) unbecoming a senator unless they could be sustained by proofs.

Senator Vest said that if the senate was going to investigate every charge in the public press the senate might as well abandon all other business and go into investigations of character. He was not a senator who had not been libeled. As the senator from Ohio (Sherman) had once said on a similar occasion, the courts were open and a senator was like any private citizen.

Senator Gray asking when the remarks of Senator Turpie, which were alluded to were made, Senator Power replied at the time of his contest three years ago.

Senator Chandler offered a resolution providing that the request of the senator of Montana be referred to the committee on privileges and elections. On motion of Senator Morgan the resolution went over for the day, the senator stating that the senate matter go into the investigations deliberately if at all.

A prominent Democratic senator is authority for the statement that there would be no investigations of senators as proposed.

He intimated that the Democrats would vote down a resolution of that purposing an investigation of Senator Roach.

He has a big force of clerks at work, and is energetically getting matters into shape, so that his record may be such as to make him a worthy successor in the eyes of politicians to Adlai E. Stevenson as an appointing power. One hundred and seventy-seven fourth class postmasters will be announced it is said.

Choctaws Need No Aid.

The advices received by the Indian Agent Bennett at Union agency, Indian Territory, indicate that the Choctaws are able to take care of the troubles in their country without assistance from the United States authorities.

Too Many Visitors.

The treasury, state, war and navy departments were thronged with visitors. The secretaries had scarcely a minute for themselves, being practically unable to attend to departmental business. The question has risen as to the expediency of amending the president's order prohibiting visits of receptions of visitors at the departments on cabinet days, so as to include one or two more days of the week.

GOVERNOR McKINLEY'S SPEECH.

Delivered at a Big Protection Tariff Banquet.

CANTON, O., March 30.—Representative Republicans from many sections of Ohio participated in a protective tariff banquet, with the Republican club of Canton as the hosts of the occasion, and which, sending greetings to the Republicans of the nation, incidentally declared that the protective tariff must be kept well in the front as one of the cardinal principles of the party.

Over the main balcony was the sentiment in letters a foot high, "American wages for American workmen, American market for American people and protection for American homes."

The chair was occupied by Hon. Thomas Turner of this city, with Judge J. P. Fawcett as toastmaster, while to their right and left were seated Governor McKinley, Hon. Manlon Chance of New York, Judge John J. Wickham of Beaver, Pa.; James A. Garfield, son of the late president; State Treasurer Cope, Auditor Poe, Secretary of State Taylor, Attorney General Richards and several members of the state senate and representatives from Cleveland, Cincinnati, Akron, Toledo, Columbus and other cities.

The 400 guests sat down at 7 o'clock. Two hours later the discussion of the menu had been concluded. As a preface letters were read from several invited guest s who had been prevented at the last moment from participating in the speech making. Among these were ex President Harrison, ex-Speaker Reed and ex-Governor Foraker, who simply expressed their regrets in formal terms. Senator Manderson of Nebraska wrote: "Do not let the occasion degenerate into anything in the nature of a postmortem examination. The great principles for which the Republican party has fought in the past still exist, and every man who is true to those principles will stand by his colors and see that he does his full share to the party success that is bound to come with the future."

Rescuers Disappear In the Burning Shaft and May Be Lost.

Charles Yates, Daniel Stormer and Charlie Stormer were rendered unconscious while fighting fire at the mouth of the shaft and may not recover. Trimble is located in the lower part of the Hocking valley, and news is hard to get.

Gate City Bank Investigation Stopped.

ATLANTA, March 30.—The sensational story was printed here: "The investigation of the Gate City bank defalcation by the United States grand jury has been suddenly and sensationally stopped. Day and night for some time past United States District Attorney Darnell and Captain Henry Jackson have done herculean service in pushing the investigation. They have literally gone to the bottom of things. Mr Darnell announced in court that very important matters would be laid before the grand jury. A number of Atlanta citizens were to be charged with violating the law in connection with the failure of the Gate City bank. They were arrested, Oliver wired from Washington to suspend action until further notice. The question now is, why did Attorney General Olney, at this most interesting and important juncture, put a stop to the Gate City bank investigation?"

The result has been that about 300 converts have been made.

BIG WHEAT MANEUVER.

How Chicago Plungers Brought About a Crash.

PANDEMONIUM REIGNED IN THE PIT

Record Operations Unequaled by the Million Bushels and Then Bought Them Back—Sensational Scenes at the Board of Trade—Results May Be Disastrous.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Not since the famous Kershaw deal, the collapse of which threw a score of firms into bankruptcy, has there been such a sensational scene on the Chicago board of trade. The price of wheat for May delivery broke 7½c. in that many minutes, causing a craze of excitement in the trading pit. The talleys, if not the principals, in perhaps the biggest corner ever attempted in Chicago, were cruelly dumped, the outcome of the affair creating an uncertainty which may affect for some time the course of the grain markets the world over.

The confusion and panic was so great as to make it almost impossible to trade. Brokers tumbled over one another in their eagerness to execute orders, fought their way into the crowded pit as if eternal salvation depended on their getting there, who simply expired into their seats, and after pushing, pulling and almost suffocating in the crowd that filled it to its utmost capacity, emerged five minutes afterward physical wrecks apparently, their clothes awry, buttons off, hats smashed and bearing in every liniament indications of the terrific mental strain they had been through.

The suddenness of the break was the most alarming feature. Wheat opened about 81 this morning, when the market fell off, but rallied and recovered as strong as Sampson. It advanced steadily after the opening to 83¾, when some of the big shorts like Arthur Orr, Captain Phillips and Ed Partridge concluded to cover a portion of their line.

At the high price of the day Cudahy, who is regarded by many as the kingpin of the clique, dealed out 1,000,000 to Orr, another 1,000,000 to Phillips and about 2,000,000 to Partridge, giving it to the hungry shorts in lots of from 500,000 to 1,000,000 bushels.

The offerings came so rapidly and in such unusual quantity that with the big shorts all off, but rested and seasoned

There is a strong belief that the town will be burned.

The militia men arrested were discharged. They bought new guns and after filling up with whiskey, left, swearing they would stop at Antlers. Locke was warned, and had fifty men there to receive them. Telegraph communication with Antlers is cut off and it is impossible to get any news from there.

A BLOW AT BOYCOTTS.

Clothing Manufacturers Ask For an Injunction.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Clothing Manufacturers' association who locked out 1,000 cutters on Saturday, and have kept them out ever since, made a new move. They asked the supreme court for an injunction to restrain their locked out employees from issuing circulars requesting dealers to boycott members of the Clothing Manufacturers' association.

After hearing the argument, Judge Lawrence said he would adjourn his final decision on the subject, provided that the unions would stipulate through their counsel that they would not issue any more circulars. Lawyer Fromme gave the necessary stipulation. Judge Lawrence said that upon any breach of faith on the part of the garment workers he would issue the injunction immediately. NARONIC'S FATE KNOWN

She Was Struck by an Iceberg and Sunk In a Storm.

MESSAGE CAME ASHORE IN A BOTTLE

Written by One of the Cattlemen When the Fated Ship Was About to Sink—The Lifeboats Could Not Live—A Sea Mystery Cleared Up.

NEW YORK, March 30).—A special to The Sun from Norfolk, Va., says:

"William Johnson, the winter watchman at Ocean View, Va., a summer resort near the mouth of Chesapeake bay, picked up on the beach at that place a champagne bottle with several corks tied about its neck and with a letter inclosed, giving this information from one of the crew of the sinking of the White Star line steamship Naronic. The letter was:

THE NARONIC.

"3:10 a. m., Feb. 19, S. S. Naronic, White Star line, at sea.

TO WHO PICKS THIS UP—Report when you find this to our agents, if not heard of before, that our ship is fast sinking beneath the waves, and it's such a storm that we can never live in the small boats. One boat has already gone with human cargo—below. God let all of us live through this. We were struck by an iceberg in a blinding snowstorm and rented two hours. Now it's 3:30 a. m. by my watch and the great ship is deck level with the sea. Report to the agents at Broadway, New York. M. Kersey & Co. Goodby all. JOHN GLAZE.

Cattleman.

"There is a probability that the message in the bottle may have come from the Naronic. It is on record, however, that nearly all corked information purporting to come from vessels about to founder has turned out to be of the nature of a hoax. In the list of returning cattlemen that Eastman & Co. had on the Naronic, the name signed to the message does not appear. It may be that he was one of the several other cattlemen on the missing freighter whose names are not known by the agents of the White Star line.

"The Naronic was, if she were not crippled, within about five or six days of this port. This conjecture allows her several days more than her usual time for the turbulent weather encountered by nearly all steamships throughout February. The question is, could the Labrador current bring the bottle down from the north of the Grand Banks, about 1,100 miles, in 38 days. Icebergs have been sighted several times in February in the tracks of freighters from northern Europe, but none of the steamships of the regular lines, that take safe tracks, observed any bergs, although some field ice was passed."

AN INDUSTRIOUS FORGER.

Alleged Wholesale Hypothecation of Whisky Receipts Worked Unnoticed.

LOUISVILLE, March 30.—The alleged forgery of whisky warehouse receipts by A. B. Sutton has been the talk of Main street. Late developments show that the forgery was the most bungiesome on record and it is now wondered how the banks were "taken in."

If reciprs were forged for about 150,000 barrels of whisky and it is estimated that Sutton has obtained from $150,000 to $200,000 from the banks on his worthless paper in the last three years. It is believed that the forgeries were committed in Sutton's office, and so careless was the work done that receipts forged on whisky which has been forced out of bond one year ago, and even the names of guagers and storekeepers who have been out of office for four years, were forged. Sutton has not been arrested and is walking about town under the surveillance of two detectives. He still makes a general denial and says he has property to meet all his liabilities, but the banks have been unable to find anything to attach except 2,000 barrels of whisky, which they quickly pounced down upon

The prosecuting attorney requested him to explain the circumstances of his escape and the administration of the poison, which he did at length.

A Fashionable Fabric.

Crepon, in all kinds of thicknesses, of almost every variety of width and in the most beautiful colors to be imagined, promises to be the fabric of 1893. But the height of beauty will be the shot crepon, durable and yet soft. Some of the best Parisian houses are using a mixture of moreen and eminence, of peacock and blue, of green and gold, of red and blue, black and pink, black and gold and pink and green. These dresses will be made up with capelike trimmings and zouave jackets, which will render mantles unnecessary. Very beautiful are some of the white crepons, and these, as well as many others, sometimes show small embroidered motifs, while some display tartans of mixed colorings.

The Revival of Double Skirts.

A novelty which will attract attention from those who like something peculiar and unlike the ordinary run of the fashions is the double skirt. It consists of a skirt of ordinary length but of extraordinary fullness, and a shorter one reaching to the knees. A good example is now recently made of black satin veiled with canvas grenadine and trimmed with jet. It had a waist bodice and looked as if it had been evolved from the Russian blouse. The fluted skirt is another novelty which is a matter of experiment.

During the winter the double effect was standing by a hair's breadth of being half way up the skirt, but the veritable double skirt is now coming in again.

No More Hustling.

It occurred to the frail man with a preoccupied air and round shoulders that his wife had something to tell him the moment he crossed the threshold of his humble home. There was an earnest look in her face, betokening momentous thoughts.

The frail man was not mistaken.

"John," observed his wife solemnly, "come here and sit down."

He did as she bade him, after the custom of men with preoccupied airs and round shoulders.

"John"

She was softly caressing his brown hair, through which shone with its ruthless spade had cut several swaths.

——"you need not struggle so hard for a living any more."

For the first time since the frail man's marriage hope gleamed in his eye.

"Hannah," he gasped, "do you mean that some one has died and left us some money?"

She beamed upon him brightly.

"No, John," she rejoined, "but I have resolved not to do my own washing any longer."

With an exclamation of gratitude to heaven he clasped her to his bosom and wept for joy.—Detroit Tribune.

EASTER.

Rules Governing This Old and Movable Festival.

The festival of the resurrection of Christ probably derives its Teutonic name from the festival of the Goddess Ostara—in Anglo-Saxon, Easter—which the Saxons of old were wont to celebrate about the same season at which the Christian festival of Easter occurs. In the second century a dispute arose as to the proper time for celebrating Easter between the eastern and western churches. The great mass of eastern Christians celebrated Easter on the 14th day of the first month or moon, considering it to be equivalent to the Jewish passover, when Christ was crucified. The western Christians celebrated it on the Sunday after the 14th, holding that it was the commemoration of the resurrection of Jesus. The council of Nice, A. D. 325, decided in favor of the western usage.

At the time of the introduction of the Gregorian calendar it was debated whether Easter should continue a movable feast or whether a fixed Sunday after the 21st of March should not be adopted. In deference to the ancient custom the ecclesiastical authorities decided to adhere to the method of determining the day by the moon. It must be understood, however, that it is not the actual moon in the heavens, nor even the mean moon of the astronomers that regulates the time of Easter, but an altogether imaginary moon, whose periods are so contrived that the new (calendary) moon always follows the real new moon—sometimes by two or even three days. The effect of this is that the fourteenth of the calendar moon—which had from the time of Moses been considered full moon for ecclesiastical purposes—falls generally on the fifteenth or sixteenth of the real moon, and thus after the real full moon, which is generally on the fourteenth or fifteenth day. With this explanation, then, of what is meant by "full moon"—viz., that it is the fourteenth day of the calendar moon—the rule is that Easter day is always the first Sunday after the paschal full moon—i. e., the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st of March, and if the full moon happens on a Sunday, Easter day is the Sunday after

Oh, hurries and flurries and worries!
Oh, weddings and sulkings and smears!
Oh, jumblings and tumblings and grumblings!
Oh, tempers and tantrums and tears!
Would you cheat them or meet them and beat them,
As merry as linnets at prime?
Then grasp, I implore you, the duties before you
One, one at a time.

"One sack at a time," says the porter,
"I'll carry each one to the stack;
Though all in a heap might seem shorter,
Alack for the crack in my back!"
"Now, one at a time," says the wrestler,
"To shrink were a shame and a crime,
Make ready and nerve you; I'm ready to serve you—
But one at a time."

Then gaze not far out on the distance,
Look down at the land where you stand,
Begin with a worthy endeavor
The duty that's next to your hand.
One stone at a time rose the steeple
That adds to the landlubber's charms,
And tasks are surmounted and conquests are counted
One, one at a time.

Origin of the Name "Cur."

Here is an ingenious if not a strictly historical story of how the name "cur" originated: A cur is a dog of low degree and mean extraction, such a cheap animal as the villeins in feudal England could afford to keep, very different from the blooded dogs of the gentry. But when the gentry went hunting with their hounds, etc., the villeins went along with their dogs to do the dirty work, and in the chase the dogs mixed in democratic fashion. The bloods wanted their quality dogs to have the credit of bagging the game, but at a distance the dogs could not be distinguished. So the gentry ordered the villeins to cut off the tails of their dogs, and they were called "cur-tails." This was too long a word, and, in talk, they cut across lots and said "curs." That is, the men dropped the word tails, and the dogs also dropped their tails.

Uncle Sam.

The practice of calling the United States government "Uncle Sam" is believed to have originated in the following manner: During the Revolutionary war a man named Samuel Wilson read a beef inspector at Troy, N. Y., and was very popular with the men in his employ, who always called him Uncle Sam. After the inspection of the beef it was stamped by him to a contractor named Elbert Anderson, and was always marked "E. A. U. S." A joking workman, being asked what those letters were the abbreviation of, replied that he did not know unless they were for Elbert Anderson and "Uncle Sam." The joke was kept up and spread, until it became common to refer to all packages marked "U. S." as belonging to "Uncle Sam."

The Poor Man's Belt.

Few geographers mention the district in the south known as the "Poor Man's Belt." It is a tract of country generally very sandy and producing little timber save the long leafed pine. It begins not far south of Richmond and extends along the Atlantic and gulf coasts into Texas. Its length is not far from 1,800 miles, while it is from 50 to 100 miles in width. The soil is poor, but the forests produce not only lumber in abundance, but also large quantities of pitch, tar and turpentine. It was a fortune during slavery days because no cotton was raised in it, but since the south is beginning to look elsewhere than to the cotton field for its wealth the "Poor Man's Belt" is looking up a little.

Beryls in New Hampshire.

Several varieties of precious stones are found in New Hampshire, but the ones attracting the most attention are the beryls found at Acworth. Acworth, says The Jewelers' Circular, has become famous on account of the many large and valuable specimens which have been sold to go into cabinets in all parts of the world. There is one 8 inches in diameter in the royal cabinet in Vienna, represented as coming from Acworth, and its description tallies with the one reported to have been sold in New York for $15,000.

Origin of the Word Gramercy.

The word Gramercy, used to designate the locality Gramercy park in New York city, is, according to Walsh, derived from "der Kromvee See," which is the name given to that district on an old map. The word became famous in American politics through the sobriquet Gramercy Sage, or Sage of Gramercy Park, applied by his admirers to Samuel J. Tilden, who lived in that neighborhood.

WOMAN'S GIFT OF WIT

FEMININE WRITERS ARE USUALLY DEFICIENT IN HUMOR.

A Few of the Well Known Authoresses Whose Pages Sparkle With Droll and Sometimes Funny Sayings and Situations—The Old Time Novel.

It is safe to assert that the average woman is quite as capable as the average man of perceiving the point of a joke, though the nature of the joke that appeals to each may be different. A certain English writer said derisively that when women are laughing together it is usually about a skirt or a body. It ought to be owned that they have a knack of relating their own small adventures amusingly, and however it may be with the British maid and matron the American woman prides herself upon being cheery and companionable.

To be fairly representative of her sex a woman must be feminine in temperament, with sensibilities to match, and therefore she is not likely to take pleasure in coarseness, flat foonery or horse play. Her self respect is somehow wounded by anything that belittles human nature, and she feels herself implicated in its degradation. Articles signed by women appear from time to time in the comic papers, but whatever development the future may bring one can scarcely imagine at the present day a feminine Mark Twain or Bill Nye.

In the old days it would doubtless have been considered bold and vulgar for "an elegant female" to have infused any droll wit into her works of fiction. One cannot fancy the author of "The Mausoleum of Julia" aiming so low as toward the provocation of mirth. The languishing, long ringleted Malvinas and Augustas and Amandas who figured in such novels were wiser in the lore of love than of joy. From long persecution, I doubt, they had lost the habit of cheerfulness. Their agonizing bursts of tears" were frequent, but they rarely did more than "smile sadly" at some well meant though abortive attempt to divert their minds from the contemplation of their many sorrows. A hearty peal of laughter would have shattered completely their fragile frames, like so much Venice glass roughly handled—if indeed they could ever have been guilty of anything so coarse. It is not to be supposed, however, that even the leading lady; that would have been beneath her dignity.

In one of these old fashioned novels humor is represented by an aged gardener who speaks persistently of "ecstotics" instead of exotics. But he was only a poor relation, quite guiltless of malicious intention, and, moreover, it is not recorded that the heroine even so much as smiled sadly at his blunder. She was too much occupied in yearning for her beloved Wilfred, from whose fond arms she had been torn by tyrannical relatives and in warding off the advances of the wicked Sir Harley Egerton. It was from such tearful traditions as these that feminine writers were obliged to free themselves in the course of time, and even at this late day there are some not completely emancipated.

It cannot be said that the women who have shown real humor in literature are numerous. Dr. Johnson did not weary of laughing at Mr. Smith and the Brangtons, but it is possible Miss Burney's sentimental Evelina's friends considered that "Evelina" would have been much more genteel without those episodes. Certain it is that "Cecilia" and "Camilla" are quite "unedified by wit." Any one who remembers, or will take the trouble to examine, Miss Edgeworth's old fashioned novels will find some cheerful touches of pleasantry therein. Jane Austen is usually cited—and with justice—whenever any question of feminine humor is brought up. Her personages are not striking or important; indeed they seem often like flies imbedded in the clear amber of her wit—but the joyful "scorn" with which she notes the absurdities of human nature is very stimulating. Her portrayals of character, though piquant, are not mean or spiteful, and we are not left with the impression that she has been sticking pins into her acquaintances.

Mrs. Gaskell's "Cranford" offers an excellent example of distinctively womanly humor, such a book as a man could not write without laying himself open to the charge of effeminacy. Deftly the author sketches that narrow society where "le gast economy" was the rule, and a fixed—and consoling—belief prevailed that liberal spending was vulgar and ostentatious. In such a community it is easy to comprehend the sarcasm of Miss Pole, widow of Captain Brown, the retired officer, who spoke openly of being poor—"not in a whisper to an intimate friend, the doors and windows being previously closed, but in the public streets in a loud military voice."

George Eliot "saw life whole," and there are few of her novels that do not contain humorous touches. Yet this gift of hers, which was richer and of ampler scope than is common with women writers, seemed to decrease somewhat with years. There is less humor in "Daniel Deronda" than in "The Mill on the Floss," and it is curious to note how absent is this element from her letters and recorded conversation. Mrs. Carlyle, whose epistles to her friends may now be fairly ranked as contributions to literature, was undeniably clever and amusing, but we recognize in her a dissipouted, discontented woman, who looked at life with a sour smile.

There is not a happy laugh anywhere in the Bronte novels, and therefore they must be accounted incomplete books, despite the fervor that glows in them. We feel the same lack in Mrs. Humphrey Ward as a leading writer, though she has too well trained a mind to be guilty of such overstrained passages so as are to be found in "Jane Eyre," "The Tenant of Wildfell Hall" and "Wuthering Heights." Lang once mentioned Rhoda Broughton as one of the few "lady authors" possessing humor—but at her best she had only a boyishish sort of jocosity, which has since loosened in degree and coarsened in quality.

The humor of the New England school of women writers, though genuine, is apt to be a little grim, whereas that of their southern sisters is more jovial, in an easy going sort of way that moves the reader to lazy laughter. Saintsbury says that Fielding applied "the humor cure to sensibility." There is a good deal of our modern feminine fiction that would be the better for the same cure, though its ailment is not sensibility—that is, as the term was understood in the old days.

While men in their daily lives are wrestling with stubborn facts, women are living in the realm of feelings; hence their books are more often novels of the emotions than of action.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Teaching Girls to Do Mending.

In Strasburg, since 1884, girls have been taught at the public expense to mend the clothes of their families. Materials are furnished by the city when necessary. The instruction is given by teachers of the elementary schools on the weekly holiday. The number of pupils is limited from 20 to about 1,000, and the annual expense is now about $150. In one year 9,000 garments were mended by 600 girls.—London Tit-Bits.

A COLUMBIAN PAGODA.

To Be Made of Cereals and Grasses Grown in Missouri.

Missouri was allotted the largest space of any state in the Agricultural building at the Chicago World's fair—to wit, 3,240 square feet—as was appropriate for the great central state of the Mississippi valley. Her agents have responded to this favor with such energy that the state's display will be, as claimed, the finest ever made in the line of farm products. There will be 184 varieties of wheat and 100 of grasses in the exhibit. Many of the state's products will be wrought into beautiful figures, among which will be a life size equestrian statue of George Washington and a Columbian pagoda.

THE PAGODA.

COLORADO BUILDING.

The base of this pagoda is to be composed of a wooden framework arranged in circular form and surmounted by a triangular structure. In the sides of this triangle will be worked in grains and grasses the Missouri coat of arms, and the seal of the United States and a Columbian medallion. From this will arise a shaft of grain, which in turn is to be surmounted by a silken globe with a map of the world, on which the state of Missouri is conspicuously exaggerated. The pagoda will contain a miniature lake, in which will be the native fish of Missouri.

Colorado's World's Fair Building.

Colorado doesn't relish the idea of being considered an exclusively mining region, and she proposes to show the visitors to the World's fair that she is also a great agricultural state. This determination will make Colorado's exhibit one of the most unique in that vast aggregation of novelties. The building is in the style of Spanish renaissance. It is two stories high and has a roof of ungilazed red Spanish tiles. It has hanging balconies on both sides and a grand balcony in front. The building will cost $30,000. It will cover a square of 125 feet. The agricultural portion of the Colorado exhibit will be under a pavilion 80 feet long, 40 feet wide and 23 feet high, every foot of its interior surface covered with grain. The columns will be wrapped with cereals in the straw, the arches will be covered with grasses, and the frieze will be composed of a series of pictures wrought in colored grains. On one table a pyramid of glass boxes will show the comparative amount of grain grown each year since 1874. There will be 400 varieties of wheat, 125 of native grasses, 100 of oats and 35 each of barley and rye. There will be timothy heads 10 inches long, bunches of clover 2 feet high and many other surprising growths rendered possible by irrigation. Of course the mining exhibit of Colorado will be a notable affair and will excite wonder among eastern and foreign visitors.

A Ghastly Exhibit.

In the line of ethnology the earth has been searched over for relics to exhibit at the World's fair, and some 400 skulls will be there to illustrate the progress of man from the lowest savagery to the highest civilization. Almost every race of every age will be represented, and there are 18 specimens from New Guinea. The natives there are cannibals, and after they have satisfied their appetites the skulls of their victims are kept as trophies of the victory and feast. After being hardened by exposure to the air the foreheads are carved with symbols commemorative of the battle or of the prowess of the conquerors. Sometimes upon the skulls of women histories of the domestic relations are carved. When finished off in this savage style, the skulls are hung up in the tents as trophies or mementos. The collection proves that while there has been a slight increase in cranial capacity the difference in skulls is much less than one might expect.

DECORATED SKULLS FROM NEW GUINEA.

Germany's World's Fair Exhibits.

The list of Germany's exhibitors at the World's fair contains 5,977 names. Represented in it are 230 cities and towns of the empire, and of these 40 cities send more than 10 exhibits each. Berlin leads with 283 exhibitors, Munich follows with 167, Leipsic with 149, Frankfort 55, Hamburg 97, and Chemnitz 41.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," FRIDAY, MARCH 31, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

A BUILDING COLLAPSES.

NO. 78 ENGINE HOUSE A WRECK.

The Rear Half of the Building Fell in this Afternoon while being Removed—The Loss will Probably Reach $2,000.

At 3.45 this afternoon the rear half of No. 2 Engine building, a brick structure, collapsed with a terrible crash, while being removed from West Front street to a rear lot.

No one was injured, but the loss to Mr. George H. Babcock who recently purchased it, will probably reach $2,000.

Mr. Babcock intended to use it as a power house, for heating and furnishing motive power for his new building.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Angel Afanador and son of Plainfield spent Tuesday with friends at Bound Brook.

The marriage of Mr. William Newman to Miss Annie Sweeney will take place next Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rasbmore, nee Ackerman of this city, will move to Plainfield from Brooklyn next month.

"A Modern Good Friday" will be the subject of the meeting to be conducted by Mr. Charles F. Powlison at the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday at 4.15 p. m.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, will preach in the Second Reformed church, Somerville, next Sunday morning.

Mr. William Crawford, together with his mother and sister, have returned to Plainfield, after about a year's residence in Newark. They now reside on Park avenue, near Fourth street.

The Rev. Dr. Goodrich, a Yale divinity student, and a brother of the Rev. C. L. Goodrich of this city, who preached some time since in the Congregational church, Bound Brook, was so well liked that a meeting is to be held to consider the advisibility of extending him a call.

The Plainfield Ladies' Euchre Club met at the home of Miss Maude Benton, Dunellen, Wednesday afternoon. Many attended and were delightfully entertained by the hostess. The first prize was won by Miss Phebe Mills of Broadway and the second by Miss May Stelle.

Mr. E. W. Titsworth has unearthed an old relic of a "note book" (the old name for a memo book) which he had in use 60 years ago. The information led Mr. W. C. Ayers to look up an old "note book," which he had used seventy-three years ago, when ten years old. It has all the "old book-wheat notes," and was printed in 1798. It is quite a curiosity, and ought to be at the art gallery.

Miss Helen Sumtatoff, a young Russian pianiste, has lately returned to New York from abroad and will be heard at Mr. Hulett's opening next Tuesday and Wednesday. Miss Sumtatoff is a Russian young lady of good social position. She has has been studying abroad, and also with Mrs. Clara E. Thoms, of New York, the distinguished Chopin pianiste. She has played in several concerts in New York with great success, also at the Worcester Musical Teachers' Association, where she was congratulated upon her marvelous technic and brilliant touch. Faderowski pronounces her the coming female Rubenstein.

Mrs. Margaret A. Brittin of Evona was stricken with paralysis yesterday, while visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Haberle of Harmony street, North Plainfield. She is 79 years old. Her family physician, Dr. Cooper of Westfield, was summoned, and by his aid the old lady was taken to her home in the afternoon. The doctor says he thinks that a blood vessel in her head was ruptured also. Her life is despaired of. Mrs. Brittin never entirely recovered from the nervous shock she received at the time her barn was burned at Scotch Plains, last July, when her coachman was badly injured. Wednesday was the first since that time that she has been able to go out doors.

Farmer Titus in a "Round Up."

Mahlon Titus, a farmer living near the mountains back of Bound Brook, was on a "round up" in the borough yesterday. He broke a window in Frank Linke's saloon on Somerset street, and otherwise created a disturbance. Special Marshal Henry Pangborn arrested him and attempted to take him to the lock-up, but the "villier of the soil" didn't relish the idea of giving up his liberty, became stubborn and refused to be taken. Aid was summoned and Titus was compelled to ride to the lockup in a coal wagon. After a night in a cell he was very penitent and promised to keep clear of the lager in the future if released. Justice Crossley suspended sentence.

Morecraft in the Toils at Last.

For more than two weeks John Morecraft has been wanted by the police for assaulting young McClymont by smearing his face with black grease. He was arrested on Bergen Point to-day. Police-man Lynch went after him and brought him back to-day. As he was arrested on a State warrant he will probably be committed without a hearing.

Hackman Flynn Caught.

Officer Corss at the North avenue depot received a despatch at noon to-day stating that Hackman Flynn of this city had been arrested at Elizabethport. Constable Moffett left this afternoon to bring Flynn to Plainfield. He is charged with robbing "Somkesack Jack."

THE CITIZENS' LEAGUE.

A PLAINFIELD BRANCH ORGANIZED LAST NIGHT.

Twenty-Four Members Present,—Mason W. Tyler Elected President, Rev. Dr. Richards, Vice-President, C. P. Bull Treasurer and O. B. Leonard Secretary.

The following gentlemen met last night in the Council Chamber, on Park avenue, and formed a branch organization of the Union County Citizens' League:

Rev. Dr. Schenck, Capt. Holmes, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Capt. Ostrom, E. L. Walz, C. T. Kissam, S. A. Cahsone, H. B. Newhall, J. L. Miller, J. T. Closson, L. W. Serrell, Rowland Cox, G. W. F. Randolph, H. M. Maxson, A. W. Rushmore, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, A. J. Garrett, Rev. Dr. J. Yerkes, S. R. Strutters, W. J. Clarke, S. H. Fatterson, T. T. Vail, H. O. Newman.

The Rev. Dr. Richards was made temporary president and Corporation Counsel Clark A. Marsh secretary. The president appointed Messrs. C. A. Marsh, Rowland Cox, and E. L. Walz a nominating committee.

The committee made the following report: For President, Mason W. Tyler; Vice-Presidents, Dr. Richards; Treasurer, Charles P. Bull; Secretary, Oliver B. Leonard. They were nominated and declared elected by acclamation. As the newly-elected president was not present, Vice President Richards kept the chair.

Mr. Marsh moved that a committee be appointed to draft a constitution for the branch in connection with the constitution governing the county league, under which the local branch was organized. The motion was seconded, and opened for remarks.

Mr. Cox said he thought it would be necessary to adopt a constitution before officers could be elected, as there was no organization in existence until the constitution was adopted. Mr. Marsh explained that under the by laws of the county league, of which this was to be a branch, a president, vice president, treasurer and secretary could be elected, as they were working under the county league's laws from the beginning. His idea in forming a committee appointed, was to add to the constitution if they deemed it advisable. Mr. Marsh's motion was carried and Messrs. Marsh, Cox and Walz were appointed as such committee.

Mr. Cox moved "that we do hereby resolve ourselves a branch of the Union County Citizens' League." The motion was carried unanimously.

On motion the president was authorized to procure a suitable meeting place for the society, and also to attend to other matters in conjunction therewith.

The names of the gentlemen present were enrolled upon the minutes and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the president.

REMOVED A QUARANTINE NOTICE

Catherine Baird Tears Down the Health Board's Warning.

Catherine Baird may be the cause of an epidemic of scarlet fever breaking out in this city by her carelessness. Last Sunday scarlet fever broke out in the family of Frank Shattle, on Second street. The house was quarantined and Catherine Baird placed in charge of the patients.

Wednesday Catherine took down the Board of Health's card of warning from the house and burned it. She then went out into the street, mingling with the passersby and finally wound up by getting intoxicated. The matter was reported to the Board of Health and yesterday the woman was arrested, while drunk.

On the charge of being drunk and disorderly she was sentenced this morning to 60 days in the county jail. She will be tried on the other charge later, as the City Judge wanted time to look up the law covering the matter. It is a serious offense walking around spreading contagion.

Stealing Papers from Porches.

Complaints are being daily received from customers that THE NEWS left on their porches, unless brought in at once, is stolen. A coachman employed on West Seventh street entered the house of his employer the other evening and said the paper was on the stoop. When someone went to get it, a few moments afterward, it had been stolen. The next evening the paper was brought in as soon as the carrier had left it and an old paper, similarly folded, left in its place. Within half-an-hour it was missing.

Last year this annoying paper stealing was stopped by the police in short order. Prompt attention should be given the matter by the authorities and an example made of the thief.

Bowden's Goods Attached.

Four attachments were levied on the goods of David Bowden, by Constable Moffett to-day. They were issued by Justice Nash on complaint of R. V. Saums, Thos. Burke, Fred Westphal and Geo. Eddy, to whom Bowden owes money. The goods were loaded on a car ready to be sent to New York State when the levy was made.

"Zep" Dead.

"Zep," the pet dog of the hook and ladder company was found dead yesterday on Third street. It was an intelligent animal and had been taught many tricks by the members of the company. "Zep" was not vicious, and for that reason the firemen are at a loss to account for his being killed. They say he was poisoned.

OUR OLD BUILDINGS.

THE OLDEST THREE-STORY STRUCTURE NOW A SALOON.

Formerly a Cabinet Maker's Shop, a Hat-Making Establishment and a Masonic Lodge Room.—Correcting Erroneous Statements.

The first three story frame building erected in this city is the one located just west of Somerset street on the North side of Front. It was built in 1826 by E. S. Thwaits. W. C. Ayers, of West Second street was boss carpenter. The building was occupied by A. D. Farnsworth as a general dry goods and grocery store. In the same year the brick building three stories high where the Courier now stands was erected. —Courier.

Our cotemporary is decidedly off in its statements above. The first three story building erected in this city was what is now known as Smith's saloon, corner of Front and Somerset streets. The third story of the building was occupied as far back as 1832 as a Masonic Lodge room, Capt. John Allen, who then resided on the James Martine farm, being the Grand Master. Dr. Elias Runyon of New Market was one of the officers, and among the other members were Jonathan R. Dunham and Joel Dunn of Dunellen, Elias O. Brown and James Leonard of Plainfield, the father of ex-City Clerk O. B. Leonard, and of the previous possessor of the Courier property, Rev. Cornelius Williams. Leonard. Mr Richard Manning of North Plainfield was also an officer.

This was in 1822 and Mr. W. C. Ayers, from whom our information is obtained, remembers that the building was even then an old one. The first story was used as a cabinet maker's shop by Oliver Dunn. An extension in the rear was used by John Clarkson to manufacture hats. The building is probably at least fifty years older than the building named by our cotemporary as the oldest three story building in Plainfield.

Our cotemporary is in error also respecting the building it itself occupies, as the writer of the above extract might easily have seen by reading the inscription on the large stone tablet placed so conspicuously on the building that one can read it fifty feet away. It states that the building was erected in 1855, seven years before the time stated by our esteemed cotemporary.

We are inclined to think that the tablet is correct, especially as Mr. W. C. Ayers says so. He had the contract for the carpenter work and says it was all completed in 1852.

TALK BY MR. DALZIEL.

TO AN INTERESTED AUDIENCE AT THE Y. M. C. A.

On the Subject of "Observation."—Several Anecdotes Help to make the Talk Clearer—Full of Good Advice to Young Men.

"I want to speak to you-young men-with [illegible] of seeing things correctly, and making correct observation of [illegible] that comes under your notice. [illegible] to a just conclusion upon any subject it is necessary that we should [illegible] act knowledge of that subject, [illegible] only by his reasoning that man can [illegible] to right conclusions upon any [illegible] and he has to be very careful in [illegible] servation or his reasoning will lead [illegible] astray. There are many ways of [illegible] observations. In a certain notice [illegible] sire was felt for a treatise on the [illegible] A prize was offered to the one who gave the best composition. An Englishman, a German, and a Frenchman competed. The Englishman traveled and wrote up his story as he thought. The Frenchman went to a menagerie where camels were kept and in turn wrote his description from facts gleaned there. The German after a time shut himself up in his room and living on a camel's hump wrote a camel according to some of the common ideas of his time. The German got the prize. He had been better understood because he had not brought anything new into his treatise. It is often very difficult to make people understand the things that we are trying to describe to them, as by becoming used to are deficient in their education on that subject.

There is a subject that political economists are putting themselves about. It is the employment of ladies in business houses. When a young man goes to find work in a business house he is met with the statement that a young lady can be obtained for less wages. This is what appears on the face of it. The real truth of the matter is that the young lady has better habits and is more reliable. She is more clear headed. The young men must look out because the young ladies have been ahead of them for some time and are getting ahead of them still. The reason is that the young men have bad habits, one of which is smoking. They cannot be clear headed when they smoke. A man cannot smoke and still be self-respecting. The best men you know that smokers will go along the street and blow the smoke in the face of every one they may happen to meet. Would he do this if he were self respecting? I used to smoke, but I did not think it did me any harm. One day when working it occurred to me that the men along side of me did not like the smell of it. I took my pipe and put it in the bottom of my trunk. It cost me a great struggle to break off the habit. After three years, however, I began to feel like quite a different individual, but it was ten years before I felt the full benefit of giving up the use of tobacco. My eyesight was restored although I had been told that my memory was wonderful when I was a boy. When smoking I found that my memory was declining. At the end of ten years I found that my memory was getting clearer, my health and strength and vigor of young man I found myself twenty years younger than I was ten years before. I feel that I am twenty-two years younger than I was two years ago.

Now this tobacco question and the women question are things for all men to give consideration to. If you want to get ahead of women you have got to let this tobacco business go right out of your system. A young man is to look out for his own good and also for the good of the community in which he is."

ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES.

A Delightful Evening Enjoyed by the Christian Endeavorers.

The second anniversary of the Washingtonville Christian Endeavor Society was observed in the church on Grant street last evening. About twenty members of the Warren Mission and Trinity church societies were present. The report of the officers show the society to be in good standing and growing rapidly.

The anniversary exercises consisted of a song service of 15 minutes duration, scripture reading, prayer by the Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in this city; solo, by Miss Blair; the reading of the yearly report by the secretary, John S. Bicknell; remarks, by the Sunday-school superintendent, Mr. Bicknell; a recitation; remarks by Mr. Andrew Wilson; solo and chorus, "Only Remember," the soloist being Miss Blair; address, by the Rev. Chas. E. Herring; solo, "Drifting Away," by Miss Beesching. The ringing of a familiar hymn in which all joined heartily, brought the exceedingly interesting exercises to a close.

After a brief social time, in which all were given a chance to get acquainted with each other, refreshments in abundance were served by Mr. Wm. Demler, Mr. Bullmus, Miss Rose Bartell, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson, Mr. Theodore Bartell, and Misses. George Mobus, Ephraim Compton and George Winans.

Gwynett's Furniture Still Held.

The household goods of the Gwynetts of Netherwood are still held in storage under several attachments against Mrs. Gwynett. The trial as right to the property having been decided in Mrs. Gwynett's favor, the attachments against Mr. Gwynett have been vacated. There are still claims amounting to over $300 and Landlord's detainer for $850 awaiting suits.

Wallibald Held at Elizabeth.

Fred. Wallibald, who was arrested on the charge of robbing the Union News Company and the Central Railroad Company, and who was to have been brought here yesterday for a hearing on the latter charge, was held at Elizabeth by Prosecutor Barrett on a charge that he had been already committed on the charge.

Plumbers and the County Roads

All the plumbers in the county have not taken heed of the new regulations in reference to opening the county roads for gas, water and sewer connections. Plumbers must secure a license and permits from the County Road Inspector. The new rules have been recently printed in THE NEWS.

Mr. Thomas Resigns.

Mr. T. L. Thomas, the remaining member of the old Dunellen school board, the other two being elected last week as told in THE NEWS, handed in his resignation as school trustee after the meeting of the board last week. His resignation was accepted by County Superintendent Willis who will appoint a trustee to fill Mr. Thomas' unexpired term.

The Two Johns.

The "Two Johns" had its first production at the Grand Opera house yesterday, and the muddled affairs of the fat men made the welkin ring with laughter. The specialties introduced were of no mean order, and, judging by the enthusiasm of the audience at both performances, farce-comedy has many admirers among the clientele at this house. —Philadelphia Record, October 25. They will appear at Music Hall next Wednesday night.

"Warm Wave" for Easter.

From present indications March will "go out as a lamb." A "warm wave" has been forming in the interior of the country. This wave of vernal weather will drift eastward in time to give most of the Atlantic States the benefit of some of its fervor by Easter Sunday.

After the long and severe winter the arrival of this first instalment of Spring will be most welcome.

Went After Fish and Caught an Opossum.

Last night Frank Hedden and Theodore Brown went to Evona to spear fish in Green brook. They were not very successful though they managed to get a few. On the way they captured a large opossum.

EDITORIAL NOTES

And now the men must have Easter hats too.

London's electric 8-wheeled cab can run a mile in three minutes, it is said. We don't believe it.

Let not enthusiastic Democrats forget that April 2, 1893, is the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

"Rain does not stop them," writes a correspondent of the pilgrimage of office seekers that sets toward the White House. Did you think they would mind a little thing like a blizzard or an earthquake?

It is agreeable to know that relations of perfect harmony have been established between the national and local quarantine authorities. At their conference in Washington they agreed on mutual regulations with unanimity. These regulations will soon be published. In view of the possible coming of cholera the greatest disgrace and calamity that could befall the country would be bickering and squabbling among health officers.

It is a fine thing to be president, with applications for postoffices coming in at the rate of 1,000 a day, there is not be much fun in it at first. Fortunately, however, it will only require little over two months to change a postmaster in the United States. I with the coming in of the very hot weather the administration will have leisure to rest a little and congratulate itself that one of the high aims of a great American political parties has been accomplished.

Chinamen Can Give Us Points.

If there is one thing the American Chinaman hates more than another, it is to have his picture taken as prescribed by the Chinese registry law. He will lie, threaten, resign, weep or plead, but he will not face the camera. If caught and forcibly placed before it, he howls like a hyena and doubles up in a collapse, so that no mortal can recognize him. He is not vain of his beauty and does not care a rap about contemplating it in a photograph. The reason is not altogether simply personal meigsety perhaps. It is said the Celestial believes that one of the many demons of the theology—whether she-ed devil she blue devil or the particolored devil we know not, but one of them anyhow—resides in that camera, and if his picture passes under its notice it will recognize him ever after and have him at any ...fair advantage, being able thereby to track him and do him an ill turn at any time.

We could almost wish—well, on second thoughts we won't say it. But if something could be started that would scare a good many people off from having their photographs taken, what a gain to the cause of art and human progress it would be! It is a psychological theory that the contemplation of beautiful pictures makes the countenance of the beholder to grow unconsciously like them in the course of years. If the opposite is also true, what must be the effect of long gazing at the average photograph?

The Ann Arbor Railroad Trouble.

After the great strike of the engineers of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad in 1888, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers adopted a new rule. It was that the officer it should be a violation of obligations for any member to handle the property of any road against which the brotherhood or any of its members had a grievance. The Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan railway is a small nonunion road. The rule alluded to required that the engineers of the brotherhood should decline to take freight cars from that road. To head off this boycott strike, Judges Taft of the United States circuit court and Ricks of the United States district court issued an order requiring P. M. Arthur, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, to publish a circular among the men of the roads connecting with the Ann Arbor road to the effect that any regulation demanding they should refuse to handle the freight of that road was not in force. This was a temporary order until the question could be legally settled.

Judge Taft's order seems to have been issued under a clause of the interstate commerce law which declares it to be illegal for any common carrier in any way to hinder the continuous passage of freight. As agents of the common carrier railway its engineers or other employees must help the law against hindering the continuous passage of freight. In a supplementary mandate Chief Arthur was ordered by Judge Ricks to produce in court the secret regulation requiring the boycott of roads with which there was an issue. Both of the orders were obeyed by Chief Arthur.

Five engineers and three firemen of the Lake Shore road quit work rather than obey the order to handle Ann Arbor freight. They were thereupon arrested by order of Judge Ricks of the United States district court, to be tried for violation and contempt of the law. The questions raised are whether labor has any right to boycott and whether employees have a right to quit work suddenly at a time when great injury will be inflicted on private or private interests.

THE BIGGEST PLUM GONE

Bayard Not Surprised to Be Made an Embassador.

SOMETHING ABOUT NEW CONSULS.

Mr. Springer Says There Will Surely Be an Extra Session Next Autumn—Mr. Chandler's New Resolution—Breezy Washington Gossip About National Affairs.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The president sent an important batch of nominations to the senate, of which the chief was to fill the post of embassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the United States to Great Britain. The appointee to this place is Thomas F. Bayard of Delaware, Mr. Cleveland's secretary of state eight years ago. Mr. Bayard will thus have the honor of being the first American embassador to the court of St. James. He succeeds Robert T. Lincoln, the present minister, whose resignation was accepted, by Secretary Gresham.

A dispatch from Wilmington reads: "Mr. Thomas F. Bayard, who returned from Boston last night, says that his appointment as embassador to Great Britain was not unexpected, and that he will probably accept the honor."

Other nominations were as follows: To be envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary—James D. Porter of Tennessee to Chili; James A. McKenzie of Kentucky to Peru; Lewis Baker of Minnesota to Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Salvador; Pierce M. B. Young of Georgia to Guatemala and Honduras; Edwin Dunn of Ohio (now secretary of legation at Japan) to Japan.

To be consuls—L. M. Bristow of West Virginia to Stratford, Ont.; H. W. Williams of Missouri to Vera Cruz; M. P. Pendleton of Maine to Picton; Thos. M. Stephan of Illinois to Amoy; Wm. T. Town of Virginia to Rio De Janeiro; C. F. Meeker of Ohio to Bradford. Newton B. Bastis of Louisiana to be second secretary of the legation of the United States at Paris; John M. Reynolds of Peoria, assistant secretary of the interior, vice Bussey, resigned. Henry J. Hathaway collector of customs for Aroostook, Me.; Walter Goodard collector of customs for Fairfield, Conn. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., of Ohio, solicitor general. A. Hall of Georgia to be assistant attorney general.

There are at least three editors and also three office holders under the former Cleveland administration in this list. Secretary Bayard's career as a senator and as secretary of state is too well known to need description. The senate did him the honor it usually conferred on former members of its body nominated to office, by confirming his nomination today in legislative session without the formality of referring it to a committee.

Governor Porter of Tennessee, who succeeds Patrick Egan at the Chilian capital, was assistant secretary of state under Cleveland during the first part of his administration. He was at one time governor of his state, and is regarded as a skillful diplomat and an accomplished gentleman.

James A. McKenzie, who goes to Peru, has the reputation of being one of the wittiest speakers and best story tellers in the state of Kentucky. He is an ex-member of congress, twice in national conventions, made speeches seconding Mr. Cleveland's nomination to the presidency and is popular and able.

Lewis Baker, who gets the mission to Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Salvador, is editor of the St. Paul Globe and a leader in Democratic politics in the Gopher state. He formerly published a paper in Wheeling.

Pierce M. B. Young, who goes to Guatemala and Honduras as minister, was a brilliant Confederate cavalry commander during the war and also served in congress.

Edwin Dunn, the new Japanese minister, is at present secretary of legation there, having been appointed by President Cleveland, and he proved so efficient that he was retained by President Harrison. London, O., is his home and he is young in years.

An Extra Session In the Fall.

The Democratic party in congress and the administration have settled upon an extra session, and congress will be called together in special session in the early autumn, when a tariff reform bill will be passed through both houses and signed by the president before Jan. 1, 1894, if it be possible to do so.

To an American Press reporter Mr. Springer said: "There will be an extra session some time in the fall. The exact date has not been determined on."

Capitol Happenings In Brief.

The senate spent no time in considering a request of Mr. Chandler to substitute a more carefully framed resolution for his resolution proposing an investigation of the charges made against Senator Power of Montana.

The state department has been officially advised of the nomination of Domingo Gana as Chilian minister to the United States.

Captain F. W. Dickens by request of the state department has been detailed by the secretary of the navy as a special aid to assist in receiving and entertaining the descendants of Columbus, who are expected to arrive in New York about the 15th of April.

The interior department has received an intimation from President Cleveland that he desires to open the Cherokee strip as soon as possible.

The original manuscripts of the Declaration of Independence and of the constitution of the United States will not be sent to Chicago after all. The announced intention to send these manuscripts on to Chicago caused the receipt of a large number of protests from historical societies and from other bodies and persons.

Bob Ingersoll Ill.

THE CLOTHING CUTTERS' STRIKE.

Powderly Leaves the Scene of Action, but Gompers Stays in the City.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The members of Local union No. 36 of the United Garment Workers of America, which is composed of 1,000 overcoat and sackcoat makers, adopted resolutions condemning the action of the Clothing Manufacturers' association and pledging their moral and financial support to the locked out cutters. A. J. Feiz of Boston addressed the meeting, and explained how the lockout came about. Joseph Barondess of the Cloakmakers' union; Charles Raskel of Baltimore and others addressed the meeting in Hebrew.

General Master Workman Terrence V. Powderly of the Knights of Labor left the city and returned home. Mr. Powderly did not meet President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, neither did he have a conference with President Horstadt of the Clothing Manufacturers' association concerning the present lockout of clothing cutters in this city, as it was expected that he would before his departure.

ON THE CHEROKEE STRIP.

Trouble Over the Treaty and the King of Intruders.

TALEQUEQUAH, I. T., March 31.—The lookout for break in the council over the strip question has come. The council has split wide open over the portion of its chief's message recommending the appointment of commissioners to go to Washington to close the deal. The Browning party is in power in all branches of the government.

The news received here this morning that William Watts, known as the King of the Intruders, has been appointed postmaster at Muldrew, caused consternation among the friends of the strip speaking. The Cherokees bitterly hate Watts, and Congressman Peel wired to Washington that if Watts or any other postmaster no confirmation of the treaty need be looked for. In response secretary of the interior wired that Watts' appointment for the place had been revoked.

THE NEBRASKA SCANDAL

Impeachment of State Officials Soon to Be Begun.

SECRETARY OF STATE IMPLICATED.

The Attorney General, Commissioner of Public Lands and Others to Be Investigated—Impeachment Resolutions Passed by the House.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 31.—Impeachment proceedings against three state officials and two ex-officials are at last in full blast and the most sensational trial ever known in Nebraska history, since the impeachment of Governor Butler, will soon be in progress. The long delayed blow fell shortly before noon, when the advisory commission on impeachment reported to the house that all the evidence had been read and it was the unanimous opinion of the three eminent lawyers that impeachment proceedings would lie against every member of the state board of public lands and buildings, and that in justice to the state such proceedings should at once be instituted. The report was adopted by the house, and the senate at once on being notified entered the joint convention at 4 o'clock to prepare articles of impeachment.

The only point on which the lawyers differed in making their report to the legislators was with reference to the condition of affairs at the Lincoln Insane asylum. Judge Pond held that there was nothing to show that in that case the board had received any notice of the corruption that was going on and could not be prestimed to be guilty in the absence of such evidence. The other members of the commission held, however, that the board could not have been ignorant, and if not in collusion, had been grossly negligent and derelict in their duty and were therefore culpable.

Impeachment Recommended.

Judge Doane, Democrat, and W. L. Greene, Populist, in their report said: "We have heard read all the testimony taken by said committee which has been admitted to us and have carefully considered the same, and in our opinion there is sufficient testimony taken and reported by said committee to warrant the institution of impeachment proceedings against J. C. Allen, secretary of state; A. R. Humphrey, commissioner of public lands and buildings; G. H. Hastings, attorney general, and J. T. Hill, ex-treasurer of the state.

"The testimony shows a systematic and continuous plundering of the state by one of the contractors for furnishing supplies to the hospital for the insane, and in the accounts rendered to the board of public lands and buildings for material furnished and labor applied in the construction of an addition to the penitentiary known as the 'New Cell House,' and we recommend that suits be commenced at once against such of the fraudulent contractors as are amenable to the jurisdiction of the courts for the amount which they have so fraudently obtained from the state. Also, that suits be commenced against such of the parties as gave testimony which we implicate in the frauds as aiders and abettors thereof, while in the service of the state and the securities upon their bonds in cases where bonds were given."

The clerk of the house transmitted a written notice to the senate notifying that body of impeachment proceedings were pending in the house, and also notifying the senate to appear in the house within three days, as required by the constitution, to meet with the house of representatives in joint convention to take such action in the matter.

When the notice of the house was served on the senate that body sent back notice that it would meet the lower house in joint convention at 4 o'clock.

Following the report of the law commission the following resolution was presented and recommended for passage:

Resolved, That articles of impeachment be prepared and presented to the supreme court of this state for malfeasance in office against the following persons, to wit—John C. Allen, secretary of state; George H. Hastings, attorney general; A. R. Humphrey, commissioner of public lands and buildings, and J. T. Hill, ex-state treasurer.

A resolution was also adopted instructing the committee to continue the taking of evidence against other officials and ex-officials, whose names do not appear in the recommendations of impeachment. A message was sent to the senate informing that body that impeachment proceedings were pending in the house and requesting the members to name a time for a joint session to consider the matter. Nothing was done further than to agree upon 4 o'clock today for another meeting. Public opinion is nearly unanimous in the belief that the senate will concur in the house resolution, that impeachment proceedings be instituted.

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

Another Ministry Sends In Its Unanimous Resignation.

DILEMMA OF PRESIDENT CARNOT.

He Knows Not Where to Turn For New Cabinet Officers—The Outbreak Was Not Due to the Panama Affair, but to Disputed Financial Legislation.

PARIS, March 31.—At 9:15 o'clock the deputies reassembled. All the outward signs of a cabinet crisis were apparent in the crowded galleries and among the animated groups on the floor of the chamber. When M. Casimir-Perier took the chair all the ministerial places were vacant, but a moment later M. Tirard, minister of finance, entered alone. He announced in a few words that the cabinet had resigned, but had been charged by President Carnot to carry on the affairs of state for a short period. He would therefore ask the chamber for a vote on account to cover the next two months. The chamber referred his request to the budget committee and then adjourned.

The immediate cause of the crisis was a division of opinion between senators and deputies as to the respective prerogatives of the two chambers in matters of financial legislation. The liquor law amendment bill was originally a part of the budget and was sent as such by the deputies to the senators. The senators decided that the bill ought to be separated from the budget and was supported in this decision by the government.

The decision was unpalatable to the deputies, as was shown by the budget committee's resolution, passed despite the earnest protests of Premier Ribot and Finance Minister Tirard, that the deputies assert their rights in financial matters and return the budget to the senate without considering the amendments of the senate thereto.

After a somewhat lengthy consultation in a committee room the ministers proceeded to the Elysee and tendered their resignation to President Carnot. The president had a long interview with the members of the cabinet and urged them to reconsider their determination. His arguments were in vain however, and the ministers insisted that their resignations must be accepted. It is rumored that M. Develle, minister of foreign affairs in the Ribot cabinet, will be asked by President Carnot to form a ministry.

Only Served Eleven Weeks.

The ministry that has resigned had held office for only about 11 weeks. Upon the overthrow of the Loubet cabinet several attempts were made to form a new ministry, but they were unsuccessful until M. Ribot, who was minister of foreign affairs in the Loubet cabinet, was selected for the task. On Jan. 10 it was announced that M. Ribot had formed a ministry made up as follows:

M. Ribot, prime minister and minister of the interior; M. Develle, minister of foreign affairs; M. Tirard, minister of finance; M. Rouvenir, minister of justice; General Loizillon, minister of war; Admiral Riemier, minister of marine and minister of the colonies; M. Dupuy, minister of public instruction; M. Viger, minister of agriculture; M. Siegfried, minister of commerce; M. Viotti, minister of public works.

Ever since this ministry came into power the opponents of the Panama canal have sought an opportunity to overthrow them. The Panama scandal, it was thought, would afford the opposition the desired opportunity.

Death Rather Than the Court.

BOSTON, March 31.—Mrs. Carrie E. Welch's strange attempt to commit suicide by poisoning was made, she alleges, to avoid testifying in a divorce suit between her father and mother. Her own married life has been an unhappy one, she and her husband having separated some time since. She has been living with her mother.

Reynolds' Romantic Life.

NEW YORK, March 31.—An interesting incident in connection with Reynolds' murder is that in 1871 Reynolds was imprisoned in Paris by the German army. He was in the French capital as representative of the Remington Arms company, with Gambetta he managed to escape from the beleaguered town in a balloon.

Funeral of a Giant.

RAHWAY, N. J., March 31.—At the funeral of Joseph Tavernor, the Stafford shire (England) giant showmaker, eight strong men acted as pallbearers, and the superintendent of the cemetery erected a derrick to lower the body into the grave. The casket measured 6 feet 10 inches in length.

BOSTON, March 31.—Governor Russell has appointed Captain Robert E. Clark police commissioner.

ANOTHER BATTLE SURE.

Chestaws Are Gathering at Antlers to Settle Their Feud With Moore Bloodshed.

PARIS, Tex., March 31.—There has been no more fighting at or near Antlers. A battle is expected, however, for both sides have laid in fresh stocks of arms and ammunition. A number of surgeons have started from this city to take care of the wounded. Telegraphic communication is interrupted, probably by design.

Both factions of Chestaws are massing their forces and a battle seems to be only a question of a few hours. At 8 o'clock 100 militiamen gathered at Goodland and were getting everything in readiness to attack Locke. Governor Jones is en route and will reach Paris, Tex., at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Locke is in a strongly fortified camp three miles northeast of here, beyond the Flamaza river.

Delaware Settling Up.

MEADVILLE, March 31.—The assignees of Delamater & Co. began paying creditors of Delamater & Co. their pro rata dues. They number nearly 1,800 creditors, and there is $109,797.73 in all for distribution. The general creditors will get but 2 5-10 cents on the dollar. The judgment creditors of G. W. Delamater get 1% mills on the dollar. The unsecured creditors of G. B. Delamater get 14 7-10 mills on the dollar, and those of T. A. Delamater 2 8-10 mills on the dollar. Crawford county gets $4,507.02 on its claim of $65,000 and the state $7,382.80 on its deposit of $104,000. This latter sum, however, goes to the bondsmen of the ex state treasurer, who made good the loss to the state when it occurred.

WOMAN AND HOME.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN TRYING TO WIN A MAN'S AFFECTIONS.

The Sovereignty of Love—England's Probable Future Queen—The First Lady of France—Some Women Grow Rich—Teasing Young Children.

Why is matrimony such an interesting topic? There has been more said upon it perhaps than on any other since the world began, and every body has a word of advice to offer upon the mooted question. It is certainly a great art to get married. In the first place, you must select the one to marry—that is, if you are a man. Should you be a woman, the stern necessity is imposed of waiting until some one selects you. It is to aid you in this gentle art of being selected by a worthy man that these reflections are intended.

Now, it is not so easy to be selected as some women suppose. Man is a deep animal, for all his thinker. His eyes may sometimes be attracted by a pretty face or vivacious manner and thereby cause patronage to flow toward the waiting ice cream magnate in summer or to the keeper of sleighs in snowy weather, but these attributes will not always tempt him to marry. Reflect for a moment. Does a man when his courting days are over desire a doll—some one to preside simply in the parlor or on festive occasions? The answer is emphatically in the negative. The perfect kind of a man wishes a woman who in an emergency is capable of officiating in every part of the house, although she may never be called upon to do so. The reserve power should be on hand.

Three rules ought to be observed in the procurement of man's affection. Your chances of matrimony are greatly enhanced if you are. 1 Neat. 2 Amiable. 3. Affectionate. Neatness is a prime requisite, and it applies in many particulars. A soiled dress, teeth that show neglect and hair betokening lack of attention are not at all agreeable to the average masculine being. He notices these things. He finds out if you bite your finger nails, only dress well when he comes to see you, can't cook properly or don't look as attractive to your brother as you appear to him. He is lucky if he discovers these failings before marriage, but a miserable mortal, worthy of unlimited commiseration, if the discovery be postponed until after the honeymoon is over.

In the second place, amiability is a very important faculty to possess. You can do more with a man by being amiable than by having an unbending will. Never lose your temper, and he won't lose his. Suppose you are in an ice cream saloon (forestalling thought) and a careless waiter happens to upset the second course upon your dress. Here is an opportunity if your face flush fire and your tongue the unfortunate wretch of a waiter to wish he was on board the fastest trotter car in existence, beware of your companion. He doesn't like it. On the other hand, should you suppress your annoyance, smile and apologize for the erring attendant, your chances of becoming somebody's wife are increased at least 35¾ per cent.

Thirdly be affectionate. Be loving to your relatives. If you don't love your father and powerful little brother, how in the name of reason are you going to love a husband? He is of the same tribe as they. He has about the same cranky reactionary traits as they possess. The genius hopes is pretty nearly identical the world over. Now, don't misinterpret this advice and be sofi. Man hates that. But there is a gentle manner of betraying your affection for your lover which cannot be defined, but which nevertheless is capable of being attained by every woman.—Philadelphia Times.

The Sovereignty of Love.

To be ruled by love is man's highest destiny, and the woman who undertakes to rule him in any other way will not only find herself disappointed, but, upon her hands, she will lower his standard of morals as well as her own by just the difference in spiritual altitude between the two.

To rule by love! How is it to be done? Whatever woman can answer that question has solved the riddle of her destiny and has the key of ultimate conquest in her hands. When the typical woman thus enters into her sovereignty, the golden days of universal order and harmony will be near at hand. It is toward this epoch all nature strives. What is most necessary to woman's sovereignty in the house is a profound and philosophic understanding of the real nature and intent of love, of her own commanding position in regard to its high purpose, and a true and adequate respect for its fickleness and fluctuations.

She must have a deep and pervading sense that to preserve this love in her home and make that home the outward and visible expression of its wide reaching and beneficent scope is her very highest and most indispensable mission in life, that if, having once undertaken such an obligation, she fails in the achievement of it, her life is a failure, not only so far as the judgment of God and the world are concerned, but in regard to her own simple selfish happiness, since an unhappy marriage, like a worm at the root of a plant, brings death to every fiber of the being, while to succeed in her mission of ruling her home by love places her at once not only upon an equality with man, but upon that spiritual pinnacle above him in which his movements of clearest insight he has always conceded to her. Accord to him only his right to be ruler in material things, and he will never dispute the woman's spiritual ascendancy.—New York Commercial Advertiser

England's Probable Future Queen.

Princess May's sunny room is a charming little apartment, furnished most daintily and full of souvenirs of all kinds. The one large, wide window looks out across a field of scarlet geraniums onto a lawn like green velvet, shadowed by great trees heavy with years. Within all is fresh and bright. The walls are in soft pink, the woodwork of white enamel, the chairs, couches, tables and pretty writing desk, which stands with in the window, of the same tint.

In one corner is a small upright piano, scattered over with all the latest musical novelties and draped with soft white silk, painted in a design of American autumn leaves, maple and beech follage, the work of an American lady. The same design is repeated in the decoration of the overman tel and in the panels of the doors. A tall cabinet holds the tea service used by the queen and Prince Albert at White Lodge in their early married days.

It is of the finest white china, as trans parent almost as glass and delicately painted in a design of pink heather. If you are an especially favored guest, Princess May treats you to tea in one of these historic cups.

Books abound everywhere, and photographs of every possible royal connection, to say nothing of celebrities past and present. The writing table in the window is a model of neatness and gives evidence of the princess' orderly habits. One drawer, on being opened, showed her different account books, another held her letters, and the third her case of jewelry. Two inviting armchairs make a very cozy corner on one side of the open fireplace, and small tables fill up intervening spaces, upon which books, sketches and bibelots make a pleasing litter.—London Cor Vogue.

The First Lady In France.

Mme. Carnot is a brunette, with dark blue eyes, a pale complexion, delicately molded features and hair as black and glossy as black satin. Outside her official duties, which are many, Mme. Carnot leads a very domestic life. She rises at 8 o'clock, and her first breakfast is served to her in her dressing room. Until 10 o'clock she occupies herself with her private correspondence, which always includes a letter to one or the other of her children, only her youngest son, Francois, who is at school in Paris, being at home. At 10 o'clock she joins the president in his library and aids him in examining the voluminous mass of letters which arrives daily at the Elysee. Her thorough knowledge of modern languages makes her intelligent and unfailing good sense make of her a valuable assistant.

The second breakfast or lunch is served at 1 o'clock in the breakfast room of the palace and is usually a very simple repast. Guests are very seldom invited to luncheon at the Elysee, as both the president and his wife prefer enjoying their friendship at dinner. Lunch once concluded, Mme. Carnot, on the days of state dinner parties or balls, give audience to her chief cook. Then she drives out. The ordering and superintending of her toilets absorbs a good deal of time and is really one of her official duties, the dress of the wife of the ruler of the state exercising a widespread influence over the commercial interests of France. Then she is interested in a number of charities and devotes a good deal of time to see how her proteges are progressing.—Lucy H. Hooper in Ladies' Home Journal.

Some Women Grow Rich.

Here and there a woman so thrives in the management of her property that she becomes rich. As a rule women of this type are very much headed, and many indeed by their gentler sisters may be called hard hearted. Yet their methods may be well worth notice and perhaps imitating. They know whom to choose as an adviser, usually a banker or a lawyer of experience, whose judgment success has approved. They look at the evidences of his character and capacity rather than to accidents of his social position or manner.

They make bargains clearly and definitely, so as to avoid if possible the chance of a misunderstanding. Yet should misunderstandings arise they try to adjust them without temper or appeal to the courts. They keep friendship and affection distinct from business, and never without security trust friend, nephew or son with more than they can afford to lose. If they are so fortunate as to be able to share their incomes with relatives, they keep to that and never divert themselves of part of their principal. They never on any consideration become surety or indorse for others. They make their wills when in health and strength of mind, changing them at discretion and never disclosing particulars. They observe minor points of business routine, keep accurate books and preserve receipts and copies of business letters.—Philadelphia Inquirer

Teasing Young Children.

It is so much easier to be pleasant than to be cross. Of course I do not refer to dyspeptics or to sporty old men I am talking to girls! It is far more natural for a girl to be pleasant than it is for her to be sour of temper and crusty of speech. Nature never intended the young to be cranky and cross any more than she intended a robin to be a cat, or a bluebird to be a pestle in the first place parents have much to do with launching disagreeable children into life. They thwart and tease and pester the sweet disposition out of a baby, and then wonder why it whines and cries. The unnecessary depriving of a little child of a cherished plaything for no reason only to suit its mother's whim is a cruel thing and works a lasting injury

Have you never seen a mite of a young ster, after great difficulty and severe pains taking, get an empty spool or a harmless bit of bright colored fabric into its tiny hands, only to have it snatched away by an unthinking mother for no known reason other than to antagonize the baby's will? Not one of your treasures are dearer to you than its paltry toy was to it. Teasing and plaguing a child insures across disposition. If I had my way I would make "bedoring" a statute offense.—Amber in Chicago Herald.

Queens at Work.

Many of our queens and princesses, like Solomon's daughters, were good and fair and worked willingly with their hands." Katharine of Aragon introduced the stitching of black silk upon linen, called Spanish work; Queen Elizabeth made a smock for her brother Edward's christening when she was only 6 years old, and Mary, queen of Scots, tried to propitiate her majesty of England with divers pieces of headdresses and nightcaps wrought by her own delicate handiwork.

Though the extravagance and luxury of women's dress is a favorite theme just now, they have ceased to wear red velvet gloves with gauntlets of white satin worked in silk and gold thread and spangles, or even of perfumed leather enriched with seed pearls and gold thread, as in the days of Henry VIII and his daughter. The time of strippers is gone by, but many of the old stitches have come into fashion again. We find "Russian cross stitch," chain stitch, tent stitch and various forms of applique on German, English and Italian work of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries.—London Spectator.

Playing Tricks With Vegetables.

There very pleasant surprises for children may be obtained by getting fruits to grow inside of one another. A small cucumber of the cucumber family, can be inserted into the narrow mouths of bottles while young. The bottle attached to the bench, and after full growth it will be a mystery how these fruits got inside the bottles or jars. Besides the pleasant surprises many a useful lesson on plant growth can be furnished by these tests.

It is stated that King George III of England, in the earlier stages of the insanity which subsequently overtook him, used to express his surprise to those who were dining with him as to how the apple got inside of the dumpling, but with these fruits in glass jars the surprises to even sane people are quite as interesting to intelligent people as the apple dumpling was to the unfortunate monarch.—Meehan's Monthly.

"Mother" and "Wife."

No more queenly title exists than "mother;" no sweeter sound will ever reach the ears than the lisping utterance of that name by childish voices. The flattery and adulation of the world soon pass away—another favorite treads the boards, a younger and more vigorous takes up the pen, and the one time idol is thought of no more, but in the home, the passing years, the loss of beauty, the lack of showy qualities have no power to change the love of those who find in "wife and mother" the truest embodiment of all that is best and sweetest in womanhood.

Think of this when days are dark and toil is irksome; think of this when your feminine ambition bids you enter other fields and turn from the glittering vista spread out in imagination to the more substantial and worthier appreciation of your own home circle.—St. Louis Republic.

Why Girls Hate Housework.

The great reason why housework is repugnant to self respecting Americans is not so much on account of the work itself, for other kinds of labor are hard and monotonous, but on account of the conditions under which it is performed. The single domestic lacks society; she is isolated from the family life, and she can never call any time her own. Girls will work all day amid the steam of a laundry, the fumes of a factory, the foul air of a sewing room, because there they have companionship, their hours are defined, and they are their own mistresses when the day's work is done. It is impossible to have these conditions in domestic service except in very wealthy families, and there the workers must be branded as servants. As there is every probability that home wages will go higher rather than lower, and as the girls will not come to the houses, the houses must go to the girls.—Miss Frances M. Abbott in Forum.

Great Men's Love For Their Wives.

"My wife," said Lord Tennyson, "is the most wonderful woman in the world." She attended to his correspondence and helped him in all his work. The late ex-President Hayes said of Mrs. Hayes: "She was, I believe, one of the most wonderful women the world has known. She could do more things than any woman I have ever met, and she did them all well. She had a most beautiful soul, and she was the personification of love. She was thoroughly in sympathy with the world, and she was always doing some kindness for those about her. To her General Hayes owed much of his success. And so it goes. Behind all greatness and all worthy success is the love of a devoted woman.—Chicago Tribune.

Encouragement of a Great Singer.

Grassini, the great Italian singer, was very much interested in the young girls among her relatives and always ready to encourage any talent she could find in any of them. One day a novice was brought to her with the unpromising words, "She is a spoiled contralto and will never do anything on the stage." But the singer listened while the young girl began her frightened trills, when suddenly Grassini caught her in her arms with delight. "Why, you are not a contralto," she said, "but the finest soprano in the world. Your voice is far stronger than mine. Study well. You want none of my help, there is a rich bank in your throat." The singer was none none other than Giulia Grisi.—New York Sun.

A Practical Miss.

Would it not be a good idea for every mother to see to it that a primary course of sewing is included in the curriculum of her son's studies? The number of men who suffer great inconvenience from lack of knowledge in this direction is large. As a rule, sooner or later, every boy leaves the paternal roof tree in favor of the companionship of a wife. Unfortunately the college, the boarding house or a hotel, where he is, of course, practically out of reach of friendly manipulation of needle and thread in his behalf.—Motherhood.

A Hint to Home Dressmakers.

A little mother, whose home duties are numerous and onerous as well, saves herself much time by a practical bit of forethought which all mothers with growing daughters are sure to appreciate. In making her little girl's dresses she takes a large piece in the under side of the hem, and when the small gown is crawling up to the knees, instead of ripping out the hem and going to all the trouble of putting it in again, she has only to cut the stitches in the tuck and the little frock is lengthened.—Buffalo News.

Amusement In a Box of Sand.

Nobody knows until he has observed it what a lasting fund of joy and entertainment there is in a box of sand, a tin cup and a funnel. The funnel can be fastened to the side of the box by a wire bent in the form of a ring, in which the funnel rests. With the tin cup on a baby will pour the sand through the funnel in an endless stream, and under this stream little wheels can be made to turn. The sand is harmless and safe and never loses its charm.—Cor New York Recorder.

The Spirit of Scolding.

Scolding is always an expression of a bad spirit and a loss of temper. This is as truly the case when a lovely mother scolds her child for breaking, like playing willfully or for soiling his third dress in one afternoon as when one apple woman yells out her abuse of another apple woman in a street corner quarrel. The words themselves may be very different in the two cases, but the spirit and method are very much alike in both.—Dr. H. Clay Trumbull.

Eggs Poached In Milk.

Eggs poached in milk are an appetizing and nutritious dish for an invalid. The milk should come to the scalding point, when the egg is dropped in and cooked as if in water. A little of the hot milk is poured over the toast to soften it before the egg is slipped on.

Lady Gordon in her search through English libraries for books written by women has discovered a pamphlet on rights of women published in 1696 by Mary Assell Its title is "Advice to Ladies."

If the grate has to be taken out of an oven to insert a covered roaster, potatoes or any kind of gems that allow of heating the gem irons first can be baked on the top of the roasting pan.

The English Woman's Year Book, in its review of woman's work, states that the demand for woman lecturers on almost all questions of practical value is steadily increasing.

Mrs. John Gardner of Boston possesses a celebrated painting of the Madonna, before which an astral light is kept constantly burning during the penitential season.

She is only half mother who does not see her own child in every child, her own child's grief in every pain which makes another child weep.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

The enormous panniers, like a bushel basket on each side under the skirt, were originated in England and adopted in France about 1710.

If washcuffs are inverted on the cellar bottom and a quart or two of water poured over the bottom, they will not shrink or dry out.
